"At one of our Confederate reunions years ago three of us of our battery happened to meet up with an old fellow and it developed that he was from the banks at Haw River. We mentioned the circumstances and he told us that one of the mules from that wagon was not killed by the fall, but was broken loose and swept downstream and caught by his family, and that that mule made his crop and saved him family from starvation that summer."—Southern News Bulletin.

—We were pleased yesterday to have a call from Dr. C. E. Wilbur, formerly editor of our Sunday school publications. He had been wintering in Florida and was returning to his home in Pittsburgh, Pa. Mrs. Wilbur remained to attend the Executive Board meeting of the W. F. M. S., in session this week in High Point, N. C. Dr. Wilbur also visited Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, his former pastor.

—We learn that Brother Jesse Causey is available for county commissioner in Guilford. There are few citizens in the county as well qualified. He has honesty, intelligence, and courage. We hope he will be elected.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point.—At the morning service on Sunday Dr. S. K. Spahr delivered a very comforting message on "The Ministry of Suffering," basing his remarks from the two texts in Psalms 119:50, "This is my comfort in my affliction; for thy word hath quickened me," and Hebrews 2:10, "To make the captain of their salvation perfect through suffering." Dr. Spahr said in part that nowhere has he found a promise that men shall not weep, but God himself shall wipe away all tears from their eyes. Some people seem to think that God should in some way exempt them from suffering and sorrow, but it is a part of His great plan. It is an extremity of God to make us beautiful and by sharing in the sorrows of earth we shall become like Him, "the man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." Jesus sympathizes with us in the burdens and sorrows of life. As a blacksmith uses fire and a hammer, so God lays upon us the fire of trial and suffering to make us love Him. Happy are we if we can say, "Not my will but thine be done."

The message at the evening service was given by Prof. Paul S. Kennett.

Commencement exercises at High Point College will be held May 26-28, with the baccalaureate sermon by Rev. C. D. Sinkinson, of Atlantic City, N. J., in First Methodist Protestant church on Sunday, May 27th, at 11 a. m. On Sunday evening at 8 o'clock Dr. R. M. Andrews will deliver his farewell address to the senior class in the college auditorium. On Monday, May 28th, the senior class of 44 members will receive their degrees and the commencement address will be deliverd by Hon. Max Gardner, of Shelby, N. C., who will doubtless be our next Governor. A program in detail of these interesting exercises, closing the first four years of the college's work, will be published at an early date.—(Received too late for last week's issue.—Ed.)

Fairview.—We are still at work, praying and trying to find ways to carry on the Master's work. We have been having a very large attendance for the past few Sundays.

On May 13 an all day service will be held at Fairview. We will have a dedication service, a Mother's Day program and a Centennial service. Every one that has ever been a member at Fairview is asked to be present at the dedication service. A record will be kept of all present that Sunday for Sunday school. After the dedication service, Mother's Day program will begin. Dinner will be on the grounds. In the afternoon the Mother's Day program will continue. Then the Centennial service will begin.

We wish to have a large number present. Come and help us make this a great day for the Master. REPORTER.

Liberty-Siler City.—On Thursday evening, May 3, we held a consecration service in the new parsonage in Liberty. Lots of people came, the pastor of the M. E. Church, Rev. D. T. Rowe, spoke a brief message of congratulations, Mr. L. L. Wrenn led in prayer, we sang several selections, and the pastor made a brief address and led in the prayer of consecration.

We had a good time together, and the people were justly proud of the home they have built for their pastor. It was a very happy occasion.

Since the Siler City people did not get here on the evening we were pounded by the Liberty people, they came to the consecration service with their pounds. They came well laden, so our pantry is well supplied with lots of good things to eat. We found in the lot two bags of flour, lots of canned fruit, pickles, preserves, jellies, peas, beans, tomatoes, sausage, tea, coffee, sugar, honey, salmon, cream, raisins, brains, beets, soap, mushrooms, a towel, a pair of socks, and a porch swing. We thank the people so much for their presence, and for their gifts. May God bless and direct them and us.

We plan to leave for Baltimore on Wednesday morning, May 9th, to attend both the Young People's Convention and the General Conference. This will take us away from each church for one Sunday. Rev. W. M. Pike has our thanks for his promise to preach for us in Liberty May 13, and Rev. J. W. Braxton, of High Point College, also has our thanks for his promise to preach in Siler City on Sunday, May 20th. We hope to be home for the fourth Sunday in May.

Let all whose minds turn toward Baltimore May 10 to 25 pray that God will lead and abundantly bless in the Young People's Convention and in the General Conference.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our pastor has filled all his appointments since coming to this work. His sermons are good and helpful. We have learned to love him very much and look forward to his coming on each fourth and second Sunday. Next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock we are planning to have a Mother's Day program; will have some special music flowers and Brother Curry will give a sermon suitable for the occasion.

It is a little late to report about Easter, but better late than never. On Easter Monday we had the corner-stone laying for our new church. A large crowd was present and the service was very impressive. There were six preachers present, all taking a part, the main speakers being Brother Reed, our former pastor, Brother Taylor, the president of the Conference, and Brother A. G. Dixon, one of our own boys. Brother Curry read the history of the church, which was very interesting.

On Easter Monday night we had our Easter program. The children did well. Much credit is due to Mrs. John Bartee and Mrs. R. P. Butler. Our school teachers also helped in this work.

The Children's Day program is now being prepared and we hope to have it in the near future.

Our new church is almost finished, and we will have an all-day opening service in the new church the fourth Sunday in this month; come, everybody, and see how happy we are in this beautiful new structure, and let us have a good day of worship together.

Our Sunday school is growing in number and interest. We had a good crowd yesterday and had some good music given by a quartet of four young men.

Brethren, pray for us in our work.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Davidson Charge.—It was a treat to us to have Brother Taylor with us on this charge. He preached four times while on the charge. His sermons were instructive and inspiring. We were glad to have him hold our second quarterly conference. Brother F. M. Cook, of Alleghany, and Brother J. P. Elliott, of Lineberry, are the nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference.

Our annual circuit rally will be held at Chapel Hill Camp Ground on the third Sunday in May, beginning at 10 o'clock. The morning program will be made up of speeches and songs from the local churches and we are expecting the children from our M. P. Children's Home at High Point to come down for the occasion and render a program in the afternoon. We are pleased to make this announcement. We extend to all a hearty welcome to come and spend the day. Don't forget to bring well filled baskets.

C. E. RIDGE, Pastor.

Union Grove, Orange Circuit.—Rev. B. M. Williams, our pastor, filled his appointment Sunday, and as usual gave us such a good gospel sermon.

Our S. S. has started up and we are planning to have Children's Day the first Sunday in June and hoping and expecting Rev. J. F. Minnis, returning from India, to be with us.

Union Grove was represented at Centennial service at Chestnut Ridge the fifth Sunday, but the heavy rain Friday p. m. kept several away, afraid of the roads. It was a splendid service and those who were not there missed a great deal. Mr. J. Norman Wills gave such good food for thought in the morning. The good old songs were inspiring. The history of the different churches by Messrs. Kennett McAdams, of Hebron, G. F. Crutchfield, of Efland, C. H. Jones, of Chestnut Ridge, and W. A. Davies, of Union Grove, were interesting. Our church history is worth preserving and we trust more interest will be given to that. Rev. L. W. Gerringer gave a good sermon in the afternoon. It was good to be there. We regret more were not there to enjoy it and are ashamed that Orange Circuit did not raise the amount asked for as our Gratitude Gift. The majority of our people surely did not realize what it was. Orange circuit has six ministers in the Conference and we wonder if some think that enough for us.

Union Grove is about 88 years old. Revs. Cooley, Stockard, and Thompson preached there each during the summer and fall of 1849. We got this from an old textbook of a good woman who lived in this community, but do not know their names.

Our meeting is to start the first Sunday in August with Rev. J. C. Auman as help. We ask prayer for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit on our church and community.

N. B. L.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Interest is very good in Sunday school. Brother Hunter has faithfully filled every appointment.

We held an Easter service the fourth Sunday night in April, three weeks after Easter: delay due to sickness.

Last Sunday night Brother Neese helped Brother Hunter conduct a service for the Centennial Gratitude Gift.

Last Monday members met and gave a general spring cleaning inside church, in cemetery and grounds.

The women have reorganized the H. M. S.

Wednesday night, May 9, there is to be a trustees' meeting.

Next Sunday immediately after Sunday school the women will organize a Ladies' Aid Society.

We are planning for a good time for the third Sunday in June: that is memorial day at Mount Zion; an all-day service with dinner on the grounds. At night the same day we will give a Children's Day program. You are invited.

Brother S. T. Lane continues on the sick list.

Mr. Clifton Barber and Miss Ruby Waller were quietly married at the home of O. W. Barber. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Barber and the bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Waller.

A word to Pinnacle and Mt. Zion charge regarding the Centennial Gratitude service at Baltimore: Our present pastor, Brother A. L. Hunter, is serving this charge for his 19th year. Think of it! Almost one-fifth of the centennial, and almost one-half of his entire ministerial life has been spent with us. I am sure there isn't a single member who will deny that he hasn't done more for this charge than any one minister that has served us. Therefore, why not send him up to Baltimore, expenses prepaid, to attend this great meeting. Pinnacle, Shoals, Pilot, Mt. Zion, let's do this. Talk it over next Sunday and get busy and do this little part and hand him purse enough the third Sunday in May to take care of his expenses there and back.

Lincolnton.—A fine Easter program was rendered by our young people, trained by Miss Dailey Hartman and Miss Hester Johnson. Many thanks to these girls for putting over such a fine program.

We are all greatly delighted with the way the church has moved on in spite of the epidemics that we have had to contend with. Our C. E. Society has grown in numbers and interest since the first of the year. I suppose we have up near 75 on roll. Had 50 in meeting May 6.

One thing we are sad over is so many of our people are leaving town since the mills have lagged so much. This is the reason we are behind with our budgets. But the backbone of the church is here to stay.

We had a fine meeting in Caroleen with Rev. L. S. Helms and people. We had 56 conversions in ten days; had 15 at altar last night and eight professions.

We will start an evangelistic tent meeting at Goodsonville, N. C., May 13. Rev. J. J. Waldrop will be choir director. Pray for this campaign.

We are getting on fine considering our backsets and down-sets. W. L. CARSON.

Enfield.—The last regular meeting of the Enfield Ladies' Aid Society was held on April 23 at the home of Mrs. Hight, Miss Myrtle Clark and Mrs. J. P. Neville being joint hostesses. As this was the annual meeting of the society, many interesting reports were made of the year's work. The treasurer, Mrs. J. M. Person, in giving an itemized report of receipts and disbursements, made a very gratifying statement of work done and of the present financial condition of the society. The visiting committee and the flower committee made reports, and there was also a very good report from the committee having charge of the sale of "Skidoo Cleaner."

Election of officers for the coming year was then held and resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Ralph Rives; first vice-president, Mrs. J. P. Neville; second vice-president, Mrs. Hubert Whitaker; secretary, Mrs. P. S. Bellamy; treasurer, Mrs. Sam Pierson; reporter, Mrs. Eli Bellamy.

Mrs. Cecil Matthews and Mrs. Exum Bellamy sang several selections, which were greatly enjoyed. At the conclusion of the business a delicious salad course with coffee and salted nuts was served by the hostesses. This was a glaelyrSHRDLUPSTRDLUetaoiUNsh was a largely attended and most enjoyable meeting. REPORTER.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—The first prayer meeting of the month, May 2, was held in a different manner. As has been decided, the first prayer meeting was a supper. The ladies of the church gave a delightful supper. Around the tables after the meal, prayer meeting was held. Several songs were sung, and Mr. Tamblyn gave a pleasing talk on the "Parable of the Vineyard." Afterwards, Mr. E. S. Wills called the session of the Grace Church Workers to order. The attendance was checked and several committees reported almost all present. The publicity committee had all present. Fine reports were heard from all the committee chairmen. It seemed that the recreation committee had the best report. Every committee was urged to have a written report at the next meeting. Much progress has been made in this body, since it is doing much for the church. Everybody is a "worker."

The Sutton Philathea Class had a most interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. D. S. Coletrane on Friday evening. In addition to their budget of $200 they pledged $50 for the Centennial Gratitude Gift. After the reports of the various committees, they were entertained by a delightful social hour.

Th Home Missionary Society met Tuesday evening with Mrs. O. R. Stout and Miss Zelian Hunter as hostesses at the home of Mrs. Stout. Dr. S. K. Spahr was in charge of the devotionals. Miss Ruth Huffman, of the church choir, gave several splendid vocal selections. The three circles reported $50 raised on this year's budget. This is a most encouraging report for the first month of the year.

Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Wilbur are visiting Rev. and Mrs. Tamblyn this week. They are en route from Florida to their home in Pittsburg. While on their way home they will attend the General Conference at Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Baxter Terrell and family have returned from their winter home in Florida.

REPORTER.

Caroleen.—The revival meeting began Sunday night, April 22, and closed Wednesday night, May 2. There were many souls born into the kingdom and members revived. There were 54 conversions; only six added to the church membership so far. Our pastor, Rev. L. S. Helms, was greatly blessed in being able to secure the help of Rev. W. L. Carson, of Lincolnton, N. C. He delivered splendid messages each evening. The people from the other churches were good to attend these services.

We were glad to have with us last Saturday night Rev. J. T. Sisk. He led the singing for the preaching service; his daughter played the piano. Rev. Mr. Sisk and his daughter also sang a special song. We understand that Rev. Sisk has moved to Forest City, N. C.

FANNIE McKINNEY.

Friendship, North Davidson Circuit.—Our work is still moving along nicely. We had a large congregation Sunday, May 6th, at which time our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, gave us a splendid sermon on "Service."

Prayer services were held at the church on Sunday night, April 20, but there was no service last Sunday night due to such unfavorable weather, but we hope these services will be continued on through the summer months.

On next Sunday night, May 13th, at 7:30 a Mother's Day program will be rendered at our church under the supervision of Mrs. A. L. Hartley and Miss Maie Shoaf. We are looking forward to a splendid service and everybody is cordially invited to attend.

REPORTER.

Henderson—Due to sickness in the family of the reporter we have been unable to write of all the meetings and progress made in our different departments. However, our pastor was kind enough to write last week of the splendid work we are doing in our church as a whole.

Our Sunday school attendance is very gratifying and the interest is good in all classes. Some classes have a perfect attendance each Sunday. A few changes have been made in the primary department which enables the entire S. S. to hold their classes on the main floor.

The Missionary Societies held their monthly meeting April 16 with Mrs. O. O. Young. A splendid spirit for the new year was shown and the election of officers was had. The same officers were re-elected, the society feeling that they were all capable and well suited. Plans were made for the work in general and the program carried out in full. At the close of the meeting the hostess served refreshments.

The Philathea Class held a most interesting meeting Tuesday night, May 2, in the classroom. The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. A. B. Young. Over 40 members answered to roll call and a number of visitors were in attendance. During the business period many matters of importance were discussed. The class voted to give $10 toward buying sheets for the Children's Home; also $10 to be given on the Centennial Gratitude Gift. A committee was appointed to investigate prices for having the chairs of the primary department painted. Other committee reports were given and two delegates were appointed to attend the annual Baraca-Philathea meeting to be held in Durham, May 16-18. The program committee gave an interesting report in a speech made by Mr. J. B. Hicks, S. S. superintendent, on "Co-operation;" also a reading by Mrs. C. E. Ellis was much enjoyed. The meeting was dismissed by prayer offered by Mr. S. R. Harris. A picnic supper was then served and every one seemed to have a splendid time.

Sunday morning, May 6, our pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter, preached the baccalaureate sermon at Aycock school and Rev. M. P. Chambliss filled our pulpit here. He preached a splendid sermon and in spite of the sudden change in weather a goodly crowd was present.

Our pastor and Mr. J. B. Hicks, representatives elected for the General Conference, will leave some time this week for Baltimore. God's blessing we pray upon them and the General Conference as a whole.

We gladly report Mr. Geo. B. Harris' return hom from Watts Hospital and hope for his speedy recovery.

Mrs. Ruby Dickerson, of High Point Children's Home, worshipped with us yesterday. We are always glad to have visitors.

MRS. CLYDE L. FINCH, Reporter.

First Church, Burlington.—Speaking of red letter days, whatever that means, I think First church of Burlington had that yesterday. Yesterday was "Home Coming Day" with us. Special music was one of the features of all the services, beginning with the Sunday school. There were 455 present for the Sunday school and a large congregation for the 11 o'clock service. We were delighted to have former members, out-of-town members and friends with us.

It was a great day for us. The thing of greatest interest, of course, was the vote of the membership for a new church site. When the ballots were in it was found that not a vote was cast against purchasing a new site and building a new church. We are all sure all our friends will rejoice with us. The plan is to purchase the site this year and then begin as early next year as possible on the new building. The new site is a corner lot, corner of East Davis and Cameron streets, owned at present by Mr. L. I. Young.

Our C. G. G. Fund treasurer informs me that our allotment is secure.

Another item of interest is the fact that Miss Maxine Taylor, of Enfield, now teaching in Henderson, has been employed for the summer weeks to direct the young people's activities and to assist the pastor in the work. The church here has long felt the need of such a worker. We are hoping that this arrangement will be so satisfactory that the church will want to employ someone for whole time service. Miss Taylor is highly recommended by a number of our pastors and their wives who know her. Miss Taylor will take up her work here June 8.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Asheboro.—Our revival meeting, which began on April 22, closed on May 2. Rev. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, came on Monday of the first week and did all the preaching until the close of the meeting. His sermons were greatly appreciated by our people and all were delighted with his work. We had a service at 8 o'clock in the morning for the young people, then for several days we had meetings during the noon hour in some of the mills, and then at 8 in the evening at the church. The church people of the town attended the meeting very satisfactorily, though as is the case in most of places these days, the non-church people did not attend in any large numbers. Yesterday morning we received five new members, four on profession of faith, and one by letter. Those joining on profession of faith were Clendon Lowdermilk, Thomas Bulla, Mildred Lamb and Eldon Cox, while Mrs. Clendon Lowdermilk joined by letter from the M. E. Church, South. We are expecting several more to join next Sunday. There were about 20 decisions for Christ in the Sunday school and it is reasonable to expect that the larger part of them will join the church.

On Wednesday morning of this week, Miss Nan Lowdermilk, Miss Callie Way, Mrs. M. W. Ridge and Mrs. Pritchard will leave here for the Young People's Convention in Baltimore. The writer will leave on Monday of next week for Baltimore to attend a meeting of the Board of Education on Tuesday and the General Conference, beginning on Wednesday. Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mr. W. L. Ward will also attend the General Conference.

Next Sunday night we will give the Centennial story of the Methodist Protestant church. The pastor will be assisted by Misses Enolia and Bertha Pressnell, Kate Bulla and Annie Gilbert Ross.

Next Sunday morning we expect to observe Mother's Day with appropriate services.

Mr. J. S. Lewis, who has been right sick for several days, seems to be somewhat improved.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Enfield.—Sunday morning at 11 o'clock we were favored with a real treat in having in our midst and hearing a message from Miss Hempstead, of New York. Miss Hempstead is a returned missionary from Japan. She did kindergarten work while in Japan. She worked in the same city in which our pastor worked. She is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Auman for a few days.

Our pastor gave us a very worth while sermon the fifth Sunday night. The fifth Sunday morning he attended the rally at Whitakers Chapel. He was also at that church, both morning and evening, of last Sunday.

We are glad to have Miss Myrtis Johnson back with us. All of us missed her while she was in High Point.

Robert Earle Parker led the Intermediate C. E. last Sunday evening. He made a good leader. The Intermediates are doing splendid work in their society. The Seniors also have a live C. E.

Several of our people are expecting to attend the Conference in Baltimore. Mrs. R. C. Rives was elected to represent our C. E. Best wishes to all those attending the Conference and may they get so much inspiration that on their return they may have much to share with those of us who are not attending.

REPORTER.

Enfield.—Last Sunday we were fortunate in having to speak at two of the churches, Enfield and Whitakers, our friend and fellow worker on the mission field, Miss Ethel Hempstead. Miss Hempstead is on her way to attend the Board meeting of the W. F. M. S. in High Point this week. It is a great joy to have her stop over with us for a few days. These few days it has been a real pleasure to recall anew the experiences which were common to all of us. Miss Hempstead plans to return to Japan in August.

Although last Sunday was not my regular appointment and although the pastor could not be present at the service given over to Miss Hempstead at the Enfield church, yet one of our efficient laymen by the name of E. I. Bellamy took charge of the service and conducted it in a very creditable manner, I have been told.

The services at Whitakers and Roseneath were well attended.

The Rally at the Whitakers Chapel church the fifth Sunday was considered a great success and it would have been considered more so if the people had attended a little better.

Last week the writer was called upon to conduct the funeral of Mr. Edwin McCutchin's little six weeks old baby boy. Our heart goes out in great sympathy to this young couple in their sorrow. They took the separation in a very beautiful spirit.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit.—Brother Andrews delivered a good sermon yesterday.

Our Sunday school keeps growing in number; it certainly is encouraging to see so many of the parents coming. Mr. Ernest Johnson is now superintendent.

Prof. J. B. Swaim is teaching a singing school and will teach again next Saturday.

Miss Lema Tise doesn't improve much. She has been sick a long time and suffers greatly, but is still interested in others. She remembers all her friends, especially the children. The writer visited her a few days ago and her bright face and kind words have a lasting effect. We trust her health will soon be restored.

Mr. G. E. Glascoe is improving after being sick for the past three months. He has been greatly missed at church. We hope they will soon worship with us again.

REPORTER.

State Street.—Mr. and Mrs. Bethea returned Saturday from Halifax County where they had spent a week. Mr. Bethea preached the commencement sermon for the Aurelian Spring High School and attended all the closing exercises. His son, Louis, graduated with honor from this school and will probably enter college next fall.

The services Sunday were all good and all well attended.

There will be no service next Sunday except Sunday school; our pastor will leave Thursday for Baltimore to attend the General Conference. On the third Sunday Brother C. B. Way will preach for us.

The first Sunday in June our special revival service begins. We are hoping to have a great meeting and ask your prayers to this end.

REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Rev. E. A. Bingham and lovely wife and children, accompanied by Miss Willis, a sister of Mrs. Bingham, and Miss Chandler, of Denton, filled his appointment at Cid Sunday, and delivered a most excellent sermon about Jonah. In my belief we have a lot of Jonahs today. We are liking our minister fine. We are holding our prayer services at the church, as the measles has been around right much. The epidemic is about over, and we are hoping to get back normal again with our congregation.

We have kept our Sunday school going, although the attendance has been small.

There was a large attendance at Denton commencement. There were 23 graduates and over 40 students in the seventh grade that received certificates of promotion to the eighth grade. The ten boys and girls that spoke in the contest did excellently. The writer had the pleasure of seeing quite a number of our faithful M. P.'s. Rev. Harris Hill and wife, of Porter, attended the exercises.

Mr. Thomas Harris died at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. A. Morgan, on the third instant, and was buried at Old Union on May 5. He was a member of this church. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Parker. Mr. Harris leaves three brothers and one sister to mourn their loss and many friends. Floral designs were numerous and lovely. He was nearly 64 years old. He had expressed his willingness to go when the Master called him. A large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends attended the funeral. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved relatives.

Mrs. Sadie Kindley Hughes is real sick and has been for several weeks. She may go to the hospital if her condition doesn't change for the better. She has our sympathy. Mr. Ed Kindley is our class leader and a worker in the vineyard. MRS. N. W. LANIER.

Siler City.—Dr. Dixon is still filling his regular appointments with splendid messages. He brought to us last Sunday morning a very interesting message, but the preaching service was called off Sunday evening because of a revival at the sister M. E. church.

Nearly two months ago the ladies of our church challenged the men in an attendance contest. The purpose was to see which of the two could get the most new Sunday school members. The ladies were successful and will probably be entertained. The men were given a week to decide how and where they will entertain, and, therefore, will let their decision be known next Sunday morning. The attendance contest is one of the most successful contests we have had this year. Some 30 or 35 new members have been added to our Sunday school, and the old members seem to have become more interested. Our average attendance now is near 100. Messrs. O. E. Stone and George Siler have received their S. S. attendance certificates.

Those attending the Baltimore Conference from Siler City are: Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Mrs. Emma B. Siler and Mr. Los Wrenn, who is a delegate. Because of her health, Miss Sallie Smith will be unable to attend as she had planned. During Dr. and Mrs. Dixon's stay in Baltimore the Junior and Senior Christian Endeavorers will take charge of the prayer services, assisted by other members of the church.

Last Saturday afternoon the Senior Christian Endeavor Society sold pies, cakes and candy in a building down town. The net proceeds were $12.00.

Mr. E. D. Woody, our Sunday school superintendent, has been confined to his room a number of weeks because of an attack of influenza. However, we are glad to say he is improving. REPORTER.

Haw River	5.00

We are listing one new charge this week—Kannapolis, Rev. E. G. Cowan, pastor. It is gratifying to be able to add this field to our growing list. We now have SIXTEEN charges that still have no credits on any budget. Reidsville takes her place this week on the honor roll of charges paying the college assessment in full. Thank you, Reidsville. We are anxious for this roll to grow. Join us, brethren, in saying the college assessment MUST BE RAISED. If you will do this, we will raise it. Winston has the largest contribution on G. C. B. this week, and we surmise it is an Easter offering,—$80.00. Fine for Winston!

Two things are necessary in raising these budgets—PUSH and PRAYER. Pleasing results always follow this program.

With full sympathy toward al pastors, all charges, and all conference interests, I am,

Fraternally,
S. W. TAYLOR.

May 8, 1928.

P. S.—South Winston and Porter should have been noted last week as paying College assessment in full. Calvary has the distinction of being the only charge to date paying the G. C. B. in full. What charge will be the first to join Calvary? S. W. T.

Recently he was promoted to the rank of major-general, which is the highest rank except that of general, which belongs to war time.

THE MAN YOU MIGHT HAVE BEEN

The man you might have been
You surely still can be;
The way is straight and clear
If you will only see.

The man you might have been
You can be, it is true;
But claim the good as yours
And yours will come to you.

The man you might have been
You yet can be, you must;
Resolve to do your best,
Be strong today and trust.

The man you might have been
You ought to be, you will;
Be brave, have faith, go on,
Success is o'er the hill!

—Grenville Kleiser.

—If you're easily tired, losing weight, have indigestion, a cough that hangs on, don't hesitate, go to a good physician at once. When you have gone to him insist upon a thorough physical examination, including your chest. If the doctor tells you that you have tuberculosis obey whatever instructions for the cure of your disease that he gives you. In that way you will cheat the tuberculosis death rate of one more victim, and save your own life.—N. C. Sanatorium.

They have a blind pianist and violinist to accompany them in their singing. At a recent County Union rally these blind Christian Endeavorers presented a very fine musical program. They contribute liberally to the county work, both in money and in co-operation.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Tribute of Love and Respect

In the passing of David Harrison Hunter, the members of Tabernacle church have been called upon to bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, in the removal of one of our oldest and best members. We therefore offer this love and respect.

Resolved, That we as members of this church express our deep sense of loss in his going from us.

That we express our gratitude to the Giver of all for his exemplary life, his loyalty and faithfulness to his church and his Christ.

That we may ever remember his faithful service and that his life, his example and his influence may be an inspiration to our church and community. In the passing of Mr. Hunter his loved ones and friends have suffered irreparable loss, a devoted and consecrated worker who was every ready and willing to do his part toward furthering God's kingdom, and may we when the last call comes hear the words which so aptly fit the life of our deceased member, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Resolved, That we express our sympathy to the grandsons and the other members of the family, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the grandsons and the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Respectfully submitted,
J. E. HANNER,

Britt

On the morning of Wednesday, April 4, 1928, at 7:40 o'clock, the death angel came and took Mrs. Elizabeth Wood Britt to her eternal home at the ripe old age of 81 years and 16 days. When about 20 years of age she married Mr. Solomon G. Britt. To this union were born eight children, four of whom preceded her to the glory world several years ago. Twenty years ago her husband died and left her all alone, all the children having married and left the home years before. After his death she lived with her children. Her health began to fail several years ago and for the past three or four years her mind had been so impaired that she did not know one person from another. She was confined to her bed for only three days prior to her death. All that medical aid and loving hands could do was done but we could not stay the hand of death. She passed away peacefully in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Josephine Bellamy, on Wednesday morning and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Eden church Thursday afternoon, the funeral services being conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, assisted by Rev. J. Clyde Auman, of Enfield.

Early in life she joined the Eden M. P. church and lived a devoted Christian life until her death. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. N. Keeter, Mrs. Josephine Bellamy, and Mrs. W. T. Neville, all of Enfield, and one son, Mr. Lewis J. Britt, of Chattanooga, Tenn; one brother, Mr. J. B. Wood, of High Point, and one sister, Mrs. Nick Brown, of Durham; also 34 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

A precious one from us has gone
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
But since she could no longer stay,
To cheer us with her love,
We hope to meet with her again
In yon bright world above.

HER GRANDDAUGHTER.

Moore

On April 4, 1928, death claimed Robert Lambeth, baby of Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Moore. Although Robert had been with us only three weeks and two days, we had learned to love him with an undying love. How sad it is to think we shall see him no more in this life. There are so many little things we see that belonged to him and we miss him as the days go by. We can't understand why we had to give him up, but feel that God saw it was best, for we know He never makes a mistake.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. G. L. Curry at the home on April 6. Interment was in Greenview cemetery at Reidsville.

Besides father and mother he is survived by one brother, J. S., Jr., and a host of other relatives and friends. We cannot call Robert back, but by living close to Jesus we can go to him.

GRANDMOTHER D.

Mikles

Mrs. Malinda Mikles, better known as "Granny Mikles," died February 24, 1928, aged 98 years, 5 months and 19 days.

She was married to Jessie F. Mikles and to this union were born 10 children, seven boys and three girls. All have preceded her excepting three boys. She leaves with these 65 grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn her departure; but we should not mourn as those who have no hope. She professed faith in Christ in early womanhood and lived a consistent member of the church for more than 75 years, when she was called from this to the church triumphant.

We visited her many times during her last years after she was unable to attend church and for some time confined to her room, and always found her cheerful considering her condition, and would always express herself as being only waiting till the good Lord thought best to take her home, seeming perfectly resigned to His will, even if it was for her to suffer longer. She was so appreciative of the kindnesses of those who daily ministered to her wants and would often say to us who visited her: "They are just as good to me as they can be, but why am I left here just to suffer and be waited on?" and none of us could understand, but He who knoweth all things does understand, and never makes a mistake, and no doubt those who so willingly waited on her, day and night, will some day reap a rich reward. Her life should be an inspiration to all her relatives and friends, remembering that she has fought the battles of such a long life, and at last won the victory, and is now at the beautiful gate waiting to welcome them one by one, as their tasks on earth are done.

She had made her home with Brother J. D. Mikles for several years.

Our sympathy goes out for them and all the bereaved ones.

Burial services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Brother Corum, of the Baptist church, after which the remains were laid to rest in Mount Zion cemetery.

Dorothy Elkins

A child once asked his father, "Papa, where do I go when I go to sleep?" The father could not answer and so asked the child where he thought he went. The little one promptly replied, "I think I go into the arms of Jesus."

When I learned yesterday that my little friend had gone into the arms of Jesus, the first Scripture which came to mind was: "My beloved has gone down into his garden to gather lilies." What thought could be more appropriate at this time when we have just a week ago been looking with sweet reverence upon the Easter lilies, and when as spring comes on apace we shall soon be gathering for ourselves great handfuls of the other varieties. There comes to my memory a day such as this when as a child of five I went down into a lovely meadow and plucked an armful of the most exquisite lilies to give to my mother.

And I think if this imagery was ever justified it is in this case. For I never knew a child of a sweeter disposition, never saw a purer lily than Dorothy. I knew her well before the hand of affliction laid its finger upon her. I visited her often in the early days of her illness, as she lay in the little bed, always smiling, and I never heard from her lips one word of complaint. And as the years have gone by I have seen her many a time bravely trudging along with her playmates, always with the same bright smile, and never calling to them if she fell slightly behind.

And so I think that the Master has added a choice lily to His bouquet.

"He gazed at the flowers with tearful eyes,
He kissed their drooping leaves—
It was was the Lord of Paradise
He bound them into sheaves.
My Lord hath need of the flowers gay,
The reaper said, and smiled:
Dear tokens of the earth are they,
Where He was once a child.

"They all shall bloom in fields of light,
Transplanted by my care;
And saints upon their garments white
These sacred blossoms wear.
And the mother gave in tears and pain
The flowers she most did love;
She knew she would find them all again,
In fields of light above."

And in those fields of light I am sure that Dorothy is today racing with her playmates free from all the limitations of the body. For while the Bible teaches a resurrection it does not teach a resurrection of the body as we possess it here. In fact, it states plainly that the opposite is true.

"For that which thou sowest, thou sowest not the body that shall be but bare grain, it may chance of wheat or of some other grain; but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him. There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."

And so we come this afternoon to lay the body to rest, but the spirit is now at peace.

"We gazed with chastened feeling on the spoiler's work;
'Twas but the casket there;
For well we knew the precious gem had gone
To deck the Savior's sparkling diadem."

We would like to keep our lilies—we would like to preserve their beauty and charm, but if they stay here in this sordid world it is by no means sure that the purity will remain. Some years ago I witnessed a play in which a girl of perhaps fourteen was dressed as a woman and played the role of a woman. I was intrigued by her beauty and charm and wondered why I did not know a mature woman so lovely. Later as this same child grew older I wondered again what had gone with her fair purity, but as I have become older I have learned than even the noblest of mature people do not have the innocence of childhood. And I have also found that sometimes our flowers fade and sometimes they become soiled. In this case, however, we have no fear.

"You have lost a child? No, she is not lost to you who are found in Christ; she is not sent away, but only sent before. Like a star, which, when going out of sight, does not die or vanish, but only shines in another hemisphere, she shines in heaven and may light you thitherward."

"A fisherman's child, who had been in the habit of placing a light in the window at night to guide her father home, lay dying. Turning to her father, she said: "Papa, I will place a light in the window of heaven for you."

For many of us, cherub hands have placed a light in heaven's window. May we follow its gleam.

Johnson

Mrs. Margaret Johnson passed away at the age of about 93 years. Mrs. Johnson was at one time a member of Mount Pleasant M. P. church, Fallston circuit, in Cleveland County, N. C. Several years ago she moved to Chase City, Va., with her son, Mr. J. E. Johnson, where she was living when death claimed her. When Friendship M. P. church, near Chase City, was built she moved her membership to this church, and it was the writer's happy lot to become her pastor. She was a fine Christian woman; one of the old-time type. Shouting and praising God did not run out of date with her. No doubt the pastors who served Fallston circuit, as well as the older members of Mount Pleasant church, can recall times when in revival meetings she would become very happy.

She died April 19th and was buried April 20 near Chase City, Va.

We are not informed just how many relatives she leaves, but she had some in both Virginia and North Carolina, and many friends in both states who will remember her for her good and kind disposition. We believe that she is enjoying richer and better things than this world can give, and our loss is her eternal gain.

The bereaved family has the sympathy of the church and community.

MOTHER

I have praised many loved ones in my song,
And yet I stand
Before her shrine, to whom all things belong,
With empty hand.
Perhaps the ripening future holds a time
For things unsaid;
Not now; men do not celebrate in rhyme
Their daily bread.

—Theresa Helburn.

—Mrs. Isabel Teague died last Sunday night and was buried at Tabernacle on Tuesday after an elaborate funeral service in the church. Three ministers took part in the service, one of whom was Rev. H. C. Carmichael, a near neighbor of Mr. Gallimore at whose house Mrs. Teague died, Mrs. Gallimore being one of her daughters. Other daughters are Mrs. Mary Teague, of Siler City, and Mrs. Crouse, of Greensboro. Five sons are living: John, Bryson, Caswell, Clyde, and Julian. Mrs. Teague was a member of church at Bethlehem, the pastor of which church also took part in the service. The leader of the service was the pastor of the Holiness church in Greensboro. The husband of the deceased, Franklin Teague, died over two years ago. Both were beyond eighty years old. Both left strong testimonies to their faith in Christ. We believe great is their reward in Heaven.

—Miss Vista, daughter of Rev. A. G. Dixon, has been selected to present to the General Conference North Carolina's contribution to the Gratitude Gift of one hundred thousand dollars.

—The new church at Concord will present a striking and pleasing appearance when completed according to plan.

"The Great Pyramid—Its Mystery Solved"

This is the name of a little book sent us by Beauchamp Publishing Company, of Boston, for review. We have read it with interest. We think the title a misnomer. Instead of solving a mystery, it invests with mystery a subject that was not mysterious before. The great pyramid is one of scores of pyramids built in Egypt. It happens to be the largest of all, but that is explained by the supposition that its builder was richer and more powerful and perhaps longer-lived than the other builders. And we may add that he was perhaps more vainly ambitious than the others.

It was formerly mysterious how workmen could handle such heavy stones as are found in these structures, but that is no longer mysterious. Their modus operandi has been explained.

As to the purpose of the pyramid builders, it has long been known that they were preparing for themselves what they hoped would be safe places of burial. Near the center of the great pile of stones was a chamber to receive the body of the dead king. A passage large enough to slide a coffin through led to this chamber. The entrance to this channel was concealed. It was also elevated above the ground about fifty feet. The channel slanted downward and led to a deep pit under the base of the pyramid. It is possible that this pit was meant for drainage, but it is also conceivable that the monarch was preparing to practice a grim joke on the man having the temerity to invade this sacred place. Following this passage, instead of being led to the death chamber of the king, he would find himself fallen hopelessly into this deep pit. For another channel was provided to lead upward from the channel already referred to, but the entrance to which was closed by huge granite blocks. Explorers have found this channel and tunneled into it and followed it to the death chamber or vault prepared for the king's body. From this chamber two ventilating flues lead upward obliquely to the surface, insuring that the dead king would have fresh air.

It matters not whether the king who built this pyramid was buried in it or elsewhere. There can be no reasonable doubt that he built it for his own tomb. It was centuries after his death probably before this tomb was rifled in search of treasures. Long enough for all that was perishable to perish. Even if no mummy has ever been found in this tomb, the presence of the "coffer," or huge stone coffin, indicates the purpose. In addition to this chamber, called "The King's Chamber," there is a smaller room called "The Queen's Chamber."

This great pyramid conforms to the same general plan as other pyramids known to have been built for the tombs of kings. Its greater size is about all that distinguishes it.

But imagination has busied itself and woven about this structure a marvelous fabric. It has made God the architect

Pray for the General Conference

Very few of our readers can attend the General Conference in Baltimore, but all can help the Conference by praying for it. Some of the problems to be handled are difficult and delicate. Pray that committees and the Conference as a whole may have divine guidance and inspiration. Pray that our General Conference and the whole denomination may take the proper attitude toward the great evils of the day. Pray that we may not turn aside either to the right or to the left from the straight way of truth and righteousness. Pray that our eyes may be open to the opportunities for service that God gives to us. Pray that our faith may be increased and our devotion to our mission strengthened. Pray that no mistakes be made in the reorganization for the work of the quadrennium. Pray that there be no unseemly strife. Pray that brotherly love pervail throughout. Pray that the program adopted may involve just the things Christ would have us do.

Church Business Meetings

We wish to raise the question whether our churches have enough meetings to attend to church business. We have a feeling that they do not. We believe that in many cases matters concerning the church are neglected because there is no suitable opportunity for the church to act upon them. Some matters are provided for by the quarterly conference, but not all. In some cases the quarterly conference has its attention called to certain matters, but it fails to take action because it is not clear what should be done or what is the will of the church. It seems that there ought to be held statedly meetings of the members of the church to attend to church business not handled by the quarterly conference. Our Discipline provides for "monthly meetings" in all stations which might answer the purpose of business meetings, but these monthly meetings are not generally held. Ought they not to be held? If so, when?

We believe every church should meet and adopt a program and then work to it. We believe every church would work better to a program that itself had adopted.

—Rev. C. W. Bates as General Conference statistician has prepared three charts showing the growth of the church in the one hundred years of its existence, the variation in the budget receipts, and the advance in the value of church property. These charts show that in recent years there has been a gratifying increase in numbers and in the value of church property. The showing for the budget is not quite so flattering. Other churches have in recent years experienced a falling off in budget receipts. It is not clear just what caused this. We suspect it is one of the results of the war. We are having to pay in exorbitant taxes the cost of the war, and we have not so much money for missionaries, or think we have not.

EPISCOPACY IN THE M. E. CHURCH

(With the approach of the meeting of the General Conference of the M. E. church, to be held in Kansas City in May, several questions are receiving discussion. "Shall we have term episcopacy?" is one of the most important. The Rev. Ray Allen, of the Genesee Conference, has an able article on this subject in a recent number of the New York Christian Advocate. He answers the question in the affirmative. I am summarizing his ten points for the benefit of HERALD readers. —L. K. L.)

1. A life tenure episcopacy is an offense to our founder. John Wesley founded Methodism, both in England and in America; but he never founded life tenure episcopacy anywhere. He never wanted it. He repudiated it. He wanted superintendents, and said not a word as to how long they should serve. He selected a certain assistant, or superintendent, for America, and when that superintendent assumed the title of bishop, without warrant or authority, Mr. Wesley wrote him a most scathing letter, usually omitted by official Methodist historians. It closed with these words: "How can you, how dare you, suffer yourself to be called a bishop? I shudder, I start at the very thought! Men may call me a knave or a fool, a rascal, a scoundrel, and I am content. But they shall never, by my consent, call me a bishop."

2. A life tenure episcopacy is without legal sanction. We began with superintendents with never a word said as to length of term. Even after the superintendent assumed the title of bishop, cautiously asserting that the two words had the same meaning, no action was taken by any General Conference, or by any other Methodist organization under heaven, which sanctioned, or so much as mentioned, life tenure. The incumbent simply assumed life tenure as he had the title, and his successors have followed in his train.

3. A life tenure episcopacy is exceptional in Methodism. Most branches of Methodism do not have it. This autocracy is not known in Methodism anywhere, except in certain branches having their base in this democratic country. But even in this land of the free some branches of Methodism have deliberately rejected it. Monarchial Canada never accepted it, and it is not known in monarchial England, in Ireland, in Australia, in New Zealand, or in Japan. Unfortunately it does still exist in the United States and in Denmark.

4. A life tenure episcopacy is alien to American thought. A century ago our American pioneers were at the same time pioneers in thought also. While the world was yet under autocracy, they boldly blazed a better way, believing all men were created free and equal. Since that day nearly the whole world has followed where they nobly led. Strangely, in this first and greatest of all true republics, there still remains this imported anacronism of a life tenure episcopacy.

5. A life tenure episcopacy is contrary to accepted principles. In this democracy we elect by universal suffrage, presidents, governors, senators, congressmen, and a thousand other officers, all for short terms, re-electing if we choose, although we do not choose to elect presidents for a third term because of recognized dangers. No public official in all the broad land, holding an executive position, is elected for life. It would be contrary to our whole theory of popular government. And in our beloved church, every editor of every one of our Advocates, and every head of every one of our great boards, is elected for a quadrennium only, and by this method we succeed in getting men equal to those in the episcopacy. In our episcopal elections, and there only, do we repudiate our principles.

6. A life tenure episcopacy is a relic of a bygone age. The time was when a king was a king because he had killed many people, or because he was the son of his father, and in either case it was assumed that he ruled by divine right, and the king could do no wrong. The time was when it was assumed that the right kind of hands, placed on a man's head for a few seconds, so transformed him that thereafter until death interfered he could rule with regal right. Our church got started down that road shortly after Louis XIV was asserting that he was the state. Men had to believe Louis then; they do not now. That age has gone—forever!

7. A life tenure episcopacy is a needless temptation to the holder. Strong men can stand temptation, if not too subtle or too long continued. But when we elect any man to this exalted position, sought or unsought, and whether he be strong or weak, humble or haughty, we subject him thereby to a needless temptation as long as life endures. The race of courtiers is not yet extinct, and they will forever flatter, defer to, and cajole. This is sweetly pleasing to most recipients, and he is tempted to think of himself and his opinions more highly than he ought to think; meanwhile rewarding the courtier and slighting those who are truer friends. We have no right to elect any man to be so subtly tempted; and in so far as he yields, we share his responsibility.

8. A life tenure episcopacy is an obstacle to church union. Church union is on every tongue, even though as yet mostly talk. We fraternize with every church that will fraternize with us. Thus far, however, we have made no effort to unite with any except our Southern brethren. But here in our midst are the Presbyterians, for instance, that noble people, and no difference of creed or spirit separates us. Our only difference is in government. They would never accept our life tenure episcopacy, and we know better than to ask it. But they do need more superintendency than they have, and we need less. If our superintendents were not elected for life, we could begin negotiations at once, with good prospect of success.

9. A life tenure episcopacy is occasion of serious loss. The autocracy necessarily inherent in life tenure episcopacy has been, directly and indirectly, the main reason for the great defections which have marred our history and prevented our being a larger and more Christian church. First, in 1793, under James O'Kelley, thousands, including William McKendree, left the infant church. Both O'Kelley and McKendree were able and worthy men. One returned, and was made a bishop. The other never came back, and has received scant courtesy from official Methodist historians. In 1830, after heated argument and many expulsions, there came a larger withdrawal, which resulted in the organization of the Methodist Protestant church. Later, in 1843, came the third great farewell, resuling in the Wesleyan Methodist church. But, more important than these three great defections combined, it must not be overlooked that there has been a continuous loss of ministers and members, totaling an unknown but appalling number. The overshadowing reason for these great losses has been none other than the autocracy inherent in life tenure episcopacy.

10. A life tenure episcopacy is incompatible with present demands. Since the great war there has been throughout the world such a rising tide of democracy as was never before known. Autocracy has toppled from its throne, and the few remaining kings have no authority. Our church has shared this advancing thought, and has had a spontaneous growth in democratic sentiment unprecedented. A recent poll of 5,000 pastors brought 3,090 replies, of which more than 96 per cent favored an episcopal eight-year term. For long, to speak was so dangerous that few took the risk, but now those who recognize this serious defect in our government have become so numerous that numbers give courage, and memorials and resolutions are multiplying at an astounding rate. To ignore this demand would be not only foolish, but futile. It is not belligerent, but it is earnest. It will not be tolerant of evasion, or subterfuge, or refuge in legal quibbling. The demand must be met with frankness, fairness, and in friendship. The church of our love should grant, without further delay, this reasonable demand of her intelligent and devoted constituents. She will then be better fitted to do unhampered the work which God has committed to her hands.

TEACHERS MUST COME CLEAN ON TOBACCO QUESTION

Will H. Brown

The sentiment against employing teachers in our public schools who use tobacco is almost reaching the proportions of a tidal wave. In several states teachers who use tobacco are turned down, regardless of how capable they may be.

Lorraine E. Wooster, state superintendent of schools in Kansas, has issued a drastic order, in part as follows: "No recommendations for school positions will be made for teachers, instructors or superintendents who use tobacco in any form. No state certificates or institute certifificates will be issued tobacco users. Schools and colleges which permit the use of tobacco by administrative heads, instructors or pupils, cannot remain on the accredited list. Credits sent to the state department from normal schools, colleges and universities where the heads of these institutions, faculty members or students use tobacco in any form, will not be accepted for certification."

The Board of Education of the state normal schools of Nebraska has adopted a resolution that hereafter instructors in any of the normal schools of the state will be refused leaves of absence to study or attend the Universities of Columbia, Chicago, and Northwestern, "because cigarette smoking is common among women in these institutions." A member of the board says of the action: "The tobacco evil is so great that it should be utterly discountenanced by every institution that trains teachers."

The Michigan State Normal School recently dismissed four women students for smoking, not even permitting them to graduate.

ONE DAY AT A TIME

God reveals Himself just as we need Him. He never gives us what we shall want tomorrow; He gives us richly what we need today. Just as water, poured into twenty goblets, will take the different shape of every goblet, so the grace of God poured into twenty days will fill the different need of every day. And that is why Christ, who knows the Father's heart, bids us never be anxious for the morrow—"Give us this day our daily bread." When we need the ladder, we shall have the ladder. When we require the army, we shall get it. We shall have grace to live by when we are called to live. We shall have grace to die by when we are called to die.—G. H. Morrison.

THE GREAT GUEST COMES

While the cobbler mused there passed his pane
A beggar drenched by the living rain,
He called him in from the stony street,
And gave him shoes for his bruised feet.
The beggar went and there came a crone,
Her face with wrinkles of sorrow sown.
A bundle of faggots bowed her back,
And she was spent with the wrench and rack.
He gave her his loaf and steadied her load
As she took her way on the weary road.
Then to his door came a little child,
Lost and afraid in the world so wild,
In the big, dark world. Catching it up,
He gave it the milk in the waiting cup,
And let it home to its mother's arms,
Out of the reach of the world's alarms.

The day went down in the crimson west
And with it the hope of the blessed Guest.
And Conrad sighed as the world turned gray:
"Why it is, Lord, that your feet delay?
Did you forget that this was the day?"
Then soft in the silence a Voice he heard:
"Lift up your heart, for I kept my word.
Three times I came to your friendly door;
Three times my shadow was on your floor.
I was the beggar with bruised feet;
I was the woman you gave to eat;
I was the child on the homeless street."

as He was the architect of the arc of the covenant and the tabernacle made for the Israelites. The purpose of God in this great pyramid, according to this view, is prophetic. The passageway leading to the Pit by one branch and to the King's Chamber by the other represents the march of the human race. It is claimed that marks along this way indicate great events in the history of the world. The beginning of human history, the Flood, the birth of Jesus, the resurrection of Jesus, the World War of 1914-1918, and other important events are all indicated. Very near at hand (May 29, 1928) is the beginning of "chaos" "which many think will usher in another devastating war, Armageddon."

The book asserts that these events are indicated in the stone of the pyramid, but does not tell how they are indicated.

The quality of mind possessed by those responsible for this marvelous fancy may be indicated by this token: The statement is made that the pyramid lacks only a small fraction of being placed with the points of the compass. This deviation is explained not by supposing that the builders had made an error but by supposing that the land on which it stands has somehow received a wrench! If they are going to make God responsible for this pyramid, why do they not invest Him with power either to foresee or prevent this distortion of the land on which this prophetic pyramid was located?

The book has some interest as a curiosity and as a revelation of the vagaries of the unrestrained human mind, but no one need expect to find in it a chart of future events.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Chinese Christian Fortitude

Many examples of Chinese Christian fortitude, at the present time and in the face of the militant struggle through which China is passing, might be given. I just want to give you a few as gleaned from the last issue of The Missionary Review of the World:

The wife of one of the Chenchow (Hunan) preachers was told by the chairman of the labor union, who had been a preacher, that they would better leave as it might not be possible to get away later. Mrs. Chiang answered: "Why should I leave? I have done nothing to be ashamed of. If I have to die I might as well die here." Her courage has been richly rewarded. The work has not been interrupted.

An evangelist in a Hengchow (Hunan) country field, disregarding the orders of the local merchants' guild, boldly preached Christ in the chapel. He was arrested, his hands were tied behind his back, and he was made to wear a high hat—a symbol of humiliation. The courage and grace with which he bore this trial brought his persecutors to shame, and since then services in the chapel have been well attended and no further obstructions have been offered. Elder Wu, of the Lei Yang church, was killed because he was rich and a Christian.

At Wei Ts'un, just behind the battle line, homes were filled with soldiers. Hardly had the smoke of battle cleared away when a delegation from this village came in to express their appreciation of what the preacher had done. These callers were the village head of police, the school teacher, and gentry. "No one could have equalled Mr. Chao," they said. "He stood at the door of the chapel, which was full of 500 women and children, and kept out the soldiers when every one else ran. Twice they pointed their guns at him and once fired over his head. 'If you intend to harm these women,' he said, 'you must kill me first.' The whole village is going to present him with a large wooden tablet of appreciation."

The dark cloud which settled over Nanking has a radiant lining. In a most remarkable and heartening manner students, servants, Christians and even some non-Christians stood by their threatened foreign friends, at times willingly risking their own property and lives. This loyalty was not the experience of a few only, but of all. One Nanking missionary remarked that the loyal friendship manifested throughout the unanticipated tragedy almost made the experience worth while. One building contractor responded to the request of a missionary friend for a loan with which the threats of the looters might be averted only to have his own house looted; he was also forced to go into hiding. At a moment when another missionary was ringed about with rifles and facing the demand, "Your money or your life," two Chinese young men appeared and pleaded for his life. One of them opened his coat and exposed his own defenseless body as a pledge for his foreign friend. For some the ricksha man's humble hut provided shelter.

Since the warmer weather has come, the war is being waged with new vigor and the war zone is drawing very near to Kalgan, our mission station. Rev. C. G. Soderbom, now on furlough in the United States, says that if General Yen Hsi Shan makes the proposed drive on Peking, Kalgan will be on the line of march and it is possible that there may be fighting there. He requests that an appeal be made through our church papers to pray for God's protecting care over our workers, our school girls and our mission. This is a very critical time for our mission there and we need to offer up much prayer. Especially should we remember Horace Williams and Mrs. F. A. Larson, our two missionaries there at the present time.

The orders for Children's Day supplies continue to come in. It will not be long now until the time for giving the programs will be at hand. If you have not yet ordered your Children's Day supplies, won't you sign the card today and forward it at once so that these supplies may reach you in time for your Children's Day service?

FORTY-FIFTH COMMENCEMENT OF THE WESTMINSTER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

The forty-fifth commencement of the Westminster Theological Seminary began on Sunday morning, May 6th, with the baccalaureate sermon which was preached by President Hugh Latimer Elderdice in the Methodist Protestant Church, Westminster, Maryland. The subject of the sermon was "The Home of the Soul," based on the first verse of the 90th Psalm. President Elderdice spoke of the historical search for home and rest, and the conviction of saints in all ages that God is the dwelling place and refuge of the soul. The closing words of the sermon were addressed to the members of the graduating class in the form of a challenge to find in God the rest, poise and strength to enable them to perform a good ministry to the present age.

The annual alumni sermon was preached on Sunday night in the Methodist Protestant Church by Rev. B. F. Ruley, of the class of 1899, now pastor of the South Baltimore Methodist Protestant Church. The text was a part of Isaiah 61:6, "Men shall call you the ministers of God." The sermon was a very thoughtful and comprehensive discourse on the inspirations and functions of the ministry. Special music at the Sunday services was well rendered by the seminary octet, with a duet also by Mrs. Gibbons and Mr. Paschall.

On Monday evening, May 7th, in the seminary chapel, the pageant "Abraham and Isaac," dramatized from Genesis and the Psalms by Miss Dorothy Elderdice, was presented by seminary students under the direction of Vera S. Gibbons. This play was produced in connection with the course in "Drama in Religious Service," which was conducted by Miss Elderdice in the seminary through the past year. Much praise is due the members of the cast and the production staff for their excellent work. The characters in the pageant were as follows: Shepherd's Chorus, F. W. Paschall, W. A. Roberts, A. A. Pierce, G. A. Brown; the Scribe, Harold M. McAdow; Abraham, Ralph R. Richards; the Voice of Jehovah, Frank L. Shaffer; Isaac, Maurice Katz; the Angel, Vera S. Gibbons.

Miss Elderdice, the writer of the pageant, supervised the stage setting and costumes but had to give up the actual direction in the latter stages because of illness. However, her genius was evident throughout the pageant and she deserves all of the compliments and praises that were expressed by those who saw this excellent piece of religious dramatics.

The Board of Governors of the seminary met on Tuesday morning at the home of President Elderdice. The annual report of the president of the seminary showed a prosperous year and hopeful outlook for the future of the institution.

The graduating exercises were held in the Methodist Protestant Church, Westminster, Tuesday evening, May 8th. Special music was rendered by the seminary octet. The address to the graduating class was delivered by Rev. Vernon N. Ridgely, superintendent of the West Baltimore District of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His theme was the changing, the partial and the complete emphases of the gospel. He traced the history of the church through ritualism, the emphasis on vital experience as seen in Luther and Wesley, the emphasis on ethical conduct, social service, and religious education, concluding that in the preaching of the whole gospel, and not merely of one phase of it, will the Kingdom of God be established. A large audience, the best of years, was present to hear this fine address.

On the recommendation of the faculty and by order of the Board of Governors the following diplomas and degrees were awarded:

The Diploma of the Seminary: Geore Amberson Brown, Taneytown, Md.; Walter Ray Kuhn, Silver Lake, Ind.; Alwyan Herschel Lynch, Birmingham, Ala.; Kelvin Layton McCray, Cleveland, W. Va.; Ralph Russell Richards, Clarksburg, W. Va.

The Diploma of the Seminary with degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology: Frederick Nelson Bowers, Lewiston, Md.; Ira Moler Dinkle, Bolivar, W. Va.; Ferry Lee Gibbs, Burlington, N. C.; Andrew Gladys Lynch, Birmingham, Ala.; James Edward Reamy, Crisfield, Md.; Charles Edward Subock, Unionville, Md.

The Diploma of the Seminary with degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology: Charles Martin Elderdice, Westminster, Md.; John Nicholas Link, Baltimore, Md.

"KINDLY AFFECTIONED"

"Yes, Osborn is going," said one of my brother lawyers to me, speaking of the farm-manager, a man who had worked for me at one time and had given satisfaction in the best sense of the term. "I can't for the life of me think why. I offered to raise his wages, but he just said quietly, "I've made up my mind to go, so the money doesn't count." And when I saw his expression—absolutely final—I knew it didn't. It's queer, though, for he had an excellent living, and I know he likes farm work. And I've never had a word with him, not one word, in four years!"

Had my friend but known it, his last sentence offered complete explanation of Osborn's departure. But he was in blissful ignorance of that fact, and I did not realize it until I heard it from Osborn's lips on the following day.

He walked into my office and asked quietly: "Can you give me work, Mr. Tracy? Town or farm, I don't care which, as long as I'm busy; but I want to work for you again."

"I haven't anything of my own to offer," I answered, "but I believe I can get you the management of the Brook Lawn farm. I'll have to understand why you are leaving Mr. Johnson, however. It's the first question I'll be asked when I mention you for a tenant."

Osborn's face changed, and he spoke with evident difficulty and emotion.

"I'll tell you, sir. And it's not much to tell, or to hear, some folks would say, but I can't stand it any longer. I've worked for him four years, and he's always done just as he agreed—and so have I. But he's never spoken one word to me in that time except about the work! Not one word! Of course I didn't think I was engaged for company, but I did feel that once in a while he might say the work was done right, or that it was a fine day—or something.

"I kept telling myself that it was just his way, but, last February my little boy died. I suppose my wife and I felt as bad as any parents could, and that's bad enough, God knows. The day after the funeral, Mr. Johnson drove into the yard. 'I want to speak to you, Osborn,' he said. And I thought he was going to offer sympathy.

" 'Yes, sir,' I said, putting down a tool.

" 'You'd better drive over to Kinney's this afternoon and make arrangements about seeds. Looks like an early spring.'

"Then he drove off. And I kept thinking. My wife came out after a little. She was lonely and—you know how women feel.

" 'Did he say anything, Andrew?' she asked.

" 'About the garden it was,' I answered.

"She just sighed and said, 'Oh! Well, dinner's ready.'

"But I knew then we had to go, for I couldn't stand it. It seemed to me, Mr. Tracy, as if he didn't feel that I was human!"

And in my ears with his concluding words rang two sentences. One was "Not one word in four years!" and the other, "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love."—The Living Church.

OUR STORY PAGE

BOB, BETTY AND THE "COW PLATE"

J. L. Glover.

"You go to church, mother, and I will stay at home and look after the children. I have a little cold and don't feel up to going out today," said Grandfather.

Grandmother looked at him doubtfully. The children, Bob and Betty, were just getting over whooping cough and were not allowed to go out yet, although they were quite well enough to play. They were staying with Grandmother when they caught it, and as the baby had never had it, they stayed on there. On this bright Sunday morning they might have gone to Sunday school but for the fear of giving it to other children; so Grandfather proposed staying with them, that Grandmother might go to church. But Grandmother was not so sure about that.

"I don't know about leaving them," she began. "Suppose they give you any trouble, father?"

"Nonsense! I'll tell them to behave; and if they don't—"

Grandfather's face expressed a fierceness which might have struck terror to the children's hearts, but did not in the least, for Grandmother smiled at them at the same moment. "If they will promise—" she began.

"We'll be good," Betty promised for both of them. "Please go, Gran."

So finally, after some indecision, Grandmother consented to go, and went away to get ready. She gave Grandfather his Sunday paper, and the children their Sunday school lessons to learn while she was gone; and went away at last with a tolerably easy mind.

All went well for a time. Grandfather, after seeing that the children were well employed, read his paper until he fell asleep behind its shelter. The children studied the lesson and heard each other their hymns and catechism; and then, having nothing to do, began to look about for occupation. There was nothing interesting to be seen from the window. All the church-going people had passed; the street was quiet and deserted.

Presently Bob, in his journey round the room in quest of something to do, drew near the whatnot in the corner, on which were kept Grandmother's choicest treasures of old china—delicate gilt cups, old-fashioned china candlesticks with a shepherd and shepherdess perpetually smiling at each other; slender vases that looked as if they were made of eggshells; and most precious of all, an old plate of Chinese workmanship, which told a wonderful story with quaint Chinese men and women and a remarkable looking cow, which was so much the most prominent object in the perspective landscape that the plate was always known as the Cow plate. It was the last of a set which had belonged to Grandmother's great-grandmother, and she would not have taken a thousand dollars for it, she said.

Bob stood and gazed at it silently, and Betty came and stood beside him and gazed too.

"I always did want to look at the Cow Plate close," whispered Betty. "Do you think we might, Bobby? Maybe Grandfather would let us, if we promised to be just as careful. Do you think he would?"

"He's asleep," said Bob, looking around cautiously, "and Grandmother wouldn't like us to wake him. I'm going to take it down, awful careful, and we'll sit on the floor and look at it. Then it'll be safe. Move, now, Betty, and let me push the chair up, easy."

Very carefully, with great consideration for Grandfather's slumbers, they pushed a chair close to the whatnot. Bob climbed up and lifted the Cow Plate from its easel with careful hands.

"Hold it till I get down," he whispered, and Betty took it from him, standing close beside the chair. All would have been well if just as he moved to get down a spasm of coughing had not seized Bob. This of course set Betty off too, and there they were, both nearly strangling themselves in their efforts to suppress the ill-timed explosion before the inevitable whoop should wake Grandfather.

In her terror and distress Betty threw up both hands, forgetting all about the plate, and the next instant it lay in three pieces on the floor. Of course the crash and the coughing awoke Grandfather, and he started up in consternation.

"What is the matter, children? Did something fall?" he asked; but both children were coughing and crying too much to answer him. Jumping up to come to their rescue, he spied the broken pieces on the floor. The cow's head had been broken just across the neck, and her head with its spreading horns lay gazing at him pathetically.

There was no time to ask questions until the paroxysm of coughing was over, and Betty lay in Grandfather's arms, quite limp and white with exhaustion, while Bob stood at the window as if he never meant to look around the room again. At last, however, Grandfather said, "Come here, Bob, if you feel better, and pick up the pieces, and try to tell me all about it. What were you doing with the Cow Plate?"

Silently Bob came and picked up the fragments of beautiful transparent china, and tried sorrowfully to fit them together again.

"If we could," he said, "maybe Grandmother wouldn't notice it." But he did not look at Grandfather as he spoke.

"Tell me about it," Grandfather repeated; but just as Bob was about to speak, the door opened quietly and Grandmother came in. The coughing and crying had taken so long that none of them had noticed that it was time for service to be over, and they had not heard her come back.

She saw at once that something was wrong, and she stood looking from one to the other. "What is the matter, father?" she asked.

"The children have something to tell you," said Grandfather. "Bob was just going to tell me when you came in, so he will tell us both."

Then Grandmother's eyes fell on the pieces in Bob's hands. She said nothing, but her eyes asked a question, and Bob answered it.

"Yes, Grandmother; we took down the Cow Plate. We meant to be awful careful, but I started to cough, and that made Betty, and—and—it fell and broke. And we're awful sorry. It was my fault."

"No, it wasn't, Gran. I asked him to take it down—'least, I put it in his head. And I was holding it when it dropped. Please don't punish Bobby." Betty began to cry again. Then Grandfather spoke.

"It was a little my fault, too, mother, for I promised to look after them, and I went to sleep instead. So you must blame me, too, for the misfortune. I would not have had it happen for a good deal."

Grandmother looked at the three culprits, all so penitent, and then at her beautiful, priceless plate, in fragments; and if she had not just come from church she might have been tempted to speak severely. But she was silent for a little. Then she spoke quietly.

"I am sorry," she said, "and I know you are, too. You have punished yourselves, so I shall not punish you any more. But it need not have happened if my little boy and girl had obeyed. You knew, did you not, that you are never allowed to handle that plate—or anything else on that whatnot? And now you see the reason why."

"Please forgive us, Gran, and we'll save up our money and buy you the prettiest plate we can find, to make up," promised Bob.

"It would not 'make up,' my boy, for that was the last plate of its kind. It was more than two hundred years old, and there are no more like it. But if you learn the great lesson, that it is easy to do wrong, but impossible to undo it, the loss of my plate will be worth it," said Grandmother gently.

Betty was in her arms, crying bitterly on her kind shoulder, and Bob's arms were round her neck. Grandmother kissed them both.

"There, don't cry any more," she said.

That was a very unhappy Sunday, even though Grandmother was so kind and forgiving; for the vacant place on the whatnot made Betty cry every time she looked at it, until Grandfather changed things a little and put the shepherd and shepherdess candlesticks in the place.

The next morning he went out very quietly on an errand of his own. When he came back he shut himself up in the library for a while. Then he returned to the sitting-room, and presently he called the children to look. They could scarcely believe their eyes, for there stood the Cow Plate on its easel again, apparently as sound as ever. It was only on close inspection that one could see three long cracks crossing and marring the fair landscape.

"Oh, grandfather, how good you are! You did mend it," cried Betty.

"Yes; but it will always show the cracks, spoiling its perfection, and reminding us that a thing, once broken, can never be made quite perfect again," said Grandfather gravely and kindly, a hand on each small shoulder.—Selected.

THE CHILDREN GO SHOPPING

The Sloan children hopped out of bed eagerly that first morning after they had come to their new home to live. Everything looked strange and unfamiliar when they arrived the evening before, and there was a little feeling of homesickness in their hearts for the well-paved streets and the tidy row of brick houses where they had lived in the big city.

The sun was shining brightly, and they were eager to explore the big lawn and the rolling stretch of country round this piece of property which their father had just bought.

It was their mother who named it "The Friendly Lodge," and the children agreed that this was a very nice name indeed. Friendly Lodge was on the edge of the little city of Waynesville, where their father proposed to build a shoe factory.

It was early in the spring and only the evergreens were ready for summer.

"Oh, see the pussy-willows!" cried Judith joyfully, as she looked out of the bedroom window. "There's a whole clump of them right down by the fence."

"And look at the little hills where we can slide in the winter!" burst out Neva, the younger one.

At last they were ready for breakfast, and Judith was much pleased when her mother asked her if she thought she could find a store and buy a few things for her which she needed very much.

Judith loved to do things like a grown-up lady, and she always felt very important to be sent shopping. And Neva didn't like to be left behind, so she teased to go too.

"Follow the walk down to the corner," directed their mother, "and that will bring you to Main Street. Then turn to the right and walk until you come to the stores. They are not very far away. I'm sure you will have no trouble."

They started out as soon as their mother had time to get them ready, and Judith carried the money and the list of things she needed in the little red pocketbook which matched her red hat. She kept Neva firmly by the hand, and they had no trouble finding Main Street.

They enjoyed gazing into the store windows greatly. Many people looked at the children and smiled, for with their bright eyes, clear pink and white complexions, and stylish little hats and coats, they made a pleasing picture.

They found a store where they could get the small things which their mother wanted, and they liked the sales girl very much who waited on them, for she smiled and said:

"Little ladies, why don't you go down and see the birds in the basement? The canaries are wonderful singers!"

Neva was quite excited.

"I want to go an' see the birds," she pleaded. "Let's go, Judy."

Judith hesitated a minute or two and then she couldn't see any harm in going down the broad stairway which the pretty sales girl pointed out. So Judith, still holding Neva's hand, went downstairs, and sure enough, there were dozens of lovely birds in beautiful cages, and many of them singing as though their little throats would burst.

There was a big, green parrot that clung to the wires of its cage with its feet, and when the children stopped and Judy said, "Polly wants a cracker!" the parrot screamed angrily back at them, "Go home! Go home! Go home!"

Judith started a bit guiltily. Her mother was waiting for the little parcels in her pockets. They really must go at once.

It was a little bewildering to Judith that the broad staircase was right in front of them, for she had expected to turn around and go back and find it. And when the children reached the top of the stairs, it looked different. But there was a door and the street outside, and neither of them realized for a minute that they had gone through the store and up a different staircase from the one they went down, and were now out upon another street entirely than Main Street.

They turned to the left when they should have turned to the right, and the farther they went, the more confused they became. They were on the point of tears and asked several to tell them the way to "The Friendly Lodge," but all of the people shook their heads and said they had never heard of it.

They met an old gentleman with a kind face and very white hair who was walking slowly, but he had never heard of "The Friendly Lodge" either.

"What's your father's name?" inquired the old gentleman.

"His name is Sloan," said Judith.

"Muvver calls him Daddy and so do we," informed Neva.

The old gentleman frowned.

"I'm afraid I don't know him," he said. "What does he do for a living?"

"He makes shoes," cried Neva, "lots and lots of 'em. They go in big boxes on the train, and people buy them."

"Ah, I know now," smiled the nice old man. "Come with me and I'll take you over to the shoe factory. It isn't far from here, and we'll find out from Mr. Austin what department your father is in."

The children didn't quite understand all this, but they were sure their troubles were over.

The nice old gentleman turned right around and led the way. He didn't do any more talking except once in a while to say, "This way, girls—we're nearly there."

He took them in a small elevator up to the office of a man he called Mr. Austin, who listened to the nice old gentleman.

"No," exclaimed Mr. Austin, "Sloan isn't here. He's the new man who has just come to town and is going to build a factory of his own, I am told, and for my part, I don't like the idea of it. Why, it's all I can do to get business enough to keep going. The man must be crazy!"

"My daddy isn't crazy, and I don't like anybody who says he is!" exploded Neva.

"And I don't either," challenged Judith. "He's a nice daddy, and you'd like him if you saw him."

"There, there," soothed the old gentleman. "We'll see if we can find him.

"I rather think," said the old gentleman, turning to Mr. Austin, "that he is up at the bank. I just came from there and saw a strange man talking to the president, and I overheard a little of the conversation. It had a good deal about shoes in it.

Sure enough, Mr. Sloan was at the bank, and came at once in answer to the telephone call to claim his two strayed children. And, of course, Mr. Sloan thanked the old gentleman for being so nice to his two little daughters, and the old gentleman introduced him to Mr. Austin and Mr. Austin told him that he had a great champion in Neva.

It was plain that he had taken a liking to Neva, for he patted her on the head and told her always to stand up for her own family and friends.

Then the old gentleman proposed that Mr. Sloan sit down and talk over the shoe situation. And that was only the beginning of it, for in a few days it was all decided that in place of building a new factory, that Mr. Austin and Mr. Sloan would go in together, and have one good-sized factory which would be known as the "Austin & Sloan Shoe Concern."

And Mr. Austin, who had no wife and family of his own, often came out to "Friendly Lodge" to dinner, and liked nothing better than to tell the story with a twinkle in his eye, of the day when the children were lost.

And that's how it came about that two of the finest shoe designs made by the new company were called "The Neva" and "The Judith"—shoes which proved very popular, although the people who bought and wore them didn't know the story back of them, and how they came to be named that way.—Selected.

WHERE BURDENS ARE LIGHTEST

"Scientists tell us that there is a place up in space above the earth where a stone weighing a ton would weigh nothing. The attraction from other bodies at that height would overcome the attraction of the earth, and you could hold this immense stone on your finger. There is a place high up in the spiritual realm where our burdens become light. The closer we are to God, the lighter our sorrows are; the closer we are to earth, the heavier they rest upon us."—Selected.

CONSECRATED BACKBONE

It is not easy to stand alone against the crowd. One of Satan's choice arguments to lure the Christian into letting down on a strict separation from the world is, "Every one is doing it; why should you not?" Satan is a liar here as well as elsewhere, for every one is not doing things he would have us do, though a large number may be. But this knowledge does not make it any easier to stand against the majority.

A speaker recently characterized "consecrated backbone" as one of the greatest needs of the day. We are so fearful that we may give offense if we dare to stand firm for our convictions. Yielding a minor point, Satan tells us, would make it so much pleasanter for every one concerned. Or we are fearful of being very much alone and missing some worthwhile things if we hew to the line too closely. So we slump down, not necessarily into gross sin, but into that which takes the fine edge off our spiritual life and deadens our sensitiveness to the voice of the Holy Spirit.

God's Word, however, is uncompromising in its call to the Christian to exercise a "consecrated backbone" and to stand unmovable in the faith (I Cor. 16:13); in the liberty and separation from the word wherewith Christ has made us free (Gal. 5:1); in one Spirit (Phil. 1:27); in the Lord (Phil. 4:1); perfect and complete in all the will of God (Col. 4:12).

The Word also tells us how we are to accomplish such inflexible standing; "for by faith ye stand" (II Cor. 1:24), and by putting on the whole armor of God (Eph. 6:10-18). With all the winsome and lovable qualities of heart and character, the ability to say "No," when God asks for that, is also a vital part of our Christian development. Eight characteristics of the nine-fold fruit of the Spirit are lovable, winsome ones, but there is one that may not always be so agreeable to our self-indulgent friends. It is "temperance," or self-control. Shall we not ask God to perfect in us that strength that shall enable us to stand?—The War Cry.

THE GROWING DISRESPECT AMONG THE AMERICAN YOUTH

Few people today who pretend to be observers of social conditions will deny that one of the most alarming problems of the hour is the lack of respect for parents and elders that is everywhere manifested among American youth.

Modern ideas of home training have much to do with this situation. Parental authority is not asserted as it was in the average home of fifty years ago. Many a modern mother is trying to imitate her flapper daughter, and her chief interests are outside of the home. She is a woman of many social engagements. We heard recently of a home where the husband, in order to get money to satisfy creditors, sold the kitchen stove, and his wife did not even discover it for a week.

Nor can all the blame be laid at mother's door. The Word of God makes father the head of the home. His duty is to keep the fires of the family altar burning, and to see that his children are brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. The saying that the child, like a canoe, behaves better when paddled from the rear, has long since been forgotten.

A newspaper writer said recently: "The problem as to what is to be done with parents who disobey their children will soon become one for serious consideration." Sons and daughters are given all the rope they want in these days, and it is no wonder they soon hang themselves with it.

The modernistic teachings in day schools and even churches, without a doubt, foster this spirit of anarchy among young folks. When the fear of God is taken away, it is not surprising that immature minds should become deaf, not only to parental warnings, but to the laws of the land. When the very speech of American youth savors of rebellion against Christian parents, when they openly ridicule father and mother as moss-backs, it is not strange that the same disrespect should be shown toward others. Where the hoary head is not held in honor, you need not expect to find the laws of the state and country regarded.

President Coolidge, some months ago, in commenting on these conditions among youth, said, with his usual keen insight: "The present-day need of American youth is more home control through parental action. There are too many indications that the functions of parenthood are breaking down."

With the Bible teachings barred from the schools, and with mere perfumed oratory coming from many a pulpit, ever. What can counteract these pernicious influences unless the need for real Christian homes is more imperative than there is raised up a great host of Christian fathers and mothers who know and do their duty as taught by the Bible?

With joy the parent loves to trace
Resemblance in the children's face,
And as he forms their docile youth,
To walk the steady paths of truth,
Observes them shooting into men,
And lives in them life o'er again.

OUR BEST

Hear ye the Master's call, "Give me the best!"
For, be it great or small, that is His test.
Do then the best you can, not for reward,
Not for the praise of man, but for the Lord.

Every work of Jesus will be blest,
But He asks from every one his best.
Our talents may be few, these may be small,
But unto Him is due our best, our all.

Wait not for men to laud, heed not their slight;
Winning the smile of God brings its delight!
Aiding the good and true ne'er goes unblest,
All that we think or do, be it for the best.

Night soon comes on apace, day hastens by;
Workman and work must face testing on high.
Oh, may we in that day find rest, sweet rest,
Which God has promised those who do their best.

KEEPING THE SABBATH

There are enough holidays for most of us. Sunday differs from other holidays in the fact that there are 52 of them every year. Therefore, on Sundays, go to church.

Yes, I know all the excuses. I know that one can worship the Creator in a grove of trees, or by a running brook, or in a man's own house just as well as in church. But I also know as a matter of cold facts the average man does not thus worship or thus dedicate himself! If he stays away from the church he does not spend his time in good works or in lofty meditation.—Theodore Roosevelt.

STRIKINGLY INCONSISTENT

Human nature is full of inconsistencies. It is not uncommon to see men assume an attitude with reference to something which is in irreconcilable conflict with their bearing toward something else. For instance, we sometimes hear a person proudly affirm that he cannot accept religious teachings which he cannot understand, while in all nature about him he is accepting mysteries which are insolvable and working in harmony with them. He ridicules the doctrine of the Incarnation because it is beyond his comprehension, but he sows his grain in the spring and gathers it in the autumn, though the secret of life in vegetation is one which the grandest human intellects have never been able to peer into to the slightest extent. He decries a religion that conditions its benefits upon faith, but fails to see that all his labors and achievements are predicated upon faith in his fellowmen and his belief in the constancy of the laws of the universe. Indeed, people are, as a rule, remarkably credulous about everything except the existence and regnancy of God and the wonderful disclosures of the great written revelation that He has given the world. Even the life of the average Christian is largely made up of struggles with doubt, and is, to a considerable extent, impoverished and dwarfed by a lack of trust in the teachings and promises of the Heavenly Father. Truthfully does the poet sing:

"It is strange that we trust each other,
And only doubt our Lord;
We take the word of mortals,
And yet distrust His Word.
But, oh, what light and glory
Would shine o'er all our days
If we always would remember,
God means just what He says."

THE CHARM OF GENEROUS GIVING

What was the charm of our Lord in the widow's mite? It seems to me it must have been that her love saw only the recipient. Not her gift, so small that many would have been ashamed to offer it, not even herself and her own need: only her Lord, the author of her being, her tender shepherd, her Lord who daily loaded her with benefits, the God of her fathers. Her gift was the glowing tribute of a selfless love. She knew no limit but the end of her resources. And, "He who was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through His poverty be rich," looking into the woman's heart, saw the love and the joy and the faith and casting them into the scales with her gift, pronounced hers the greatest gift of all. —Selected.

EMOTION LEGITIMATE AND PROPER

We note every now and then a statement declaring that a revival held somewhere was free from emotion. We have little faith in such reports. There may be unemotional meetings, but not unemotional revivals. Where there is deep conviction for sin, followed by genuine, heartfelt conversions, there must be agitation and joy. It was so on the Day of Pentecost; it was so in the early years of the Christian church; it was so under the marvelous ministries of Wesley, Whitefield, Finney, and Jonathan Edwards, and it is so under the preaching of every truly effective revivalist of this age. No form of life, either physical or spiritual, can be regenerated in a refrigerator.—Selected.

THE LARGER PRAYER

"At first I prayed for Light.
Could I but see the way,
How gladly, swiftly would I walk
To everlasting day.

"And next I prayed for Strength,
That I might tread the road
With firm, unfaltering feet and win
The heaven's serene abode.

"And then I asked for Faith.
Could I but trust my God,
I'd live enfolded in His peace,
Though foes were all abroad.

"But now I pray for Love:
Deep love to God and man,
A living love that will not fail,
However dark His plan.

"And Light and Strength and Faith
Are opening everywhere;
God only waited for me, till
I prayed the larger prayer."

—Mrs. E. D. Cheney, in The Congregationalist.

THE BIBLE'S SOLE REMEDY FOR SIN

The only remedy for sin that the Bible declares, and hence that the church knows, is the Son of God, who was sent into the world at a definite point of time in its history, by the Father, in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin; who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin; who offered Himself without spot to God as an atonement for the sin of the world in one sacrifice forever; who was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father and is now alive forevermore at His right hand in heaven; and who communicates the power of His own endless life to all those who, in response to His claim, yield to Him the government and guidance of their being, and thus "saves to the uttermost them that come unto God by him." This is a brief conspectus of the essential outline of the Christian gospel which is our entrustment, that God in Christ has done something adequate to reconcile the revolters against His will to that against which they revolted, to redeem them from the consequences to themselves of their alienation, and to re-create their lives around a new center under the imperative of a new and constant motive.—J. Stuart Holden, in The Biblical Review.

TWO KINDS OF CHURCH MEMBERS

Dr. A. C. Dixon once said, "Every church is divided into two classes that may be called trees and posts. Plant a tree, and it begins to grow. Stick out a post, and it begins to rot. The difference between a tree and a post is simply a matter of life. The tree is alive, while the post is dead. A pastor enjoys the living trees of his church, watching them grow and bear fruit, while he is often perplexed to know what to do with the posts that show no signs of life. It takes much of his time and strength to paint and prop up the posts, and finally have them carried off when they have fallen down."

But it is blessedly true that even the posts may be transformed into living trees and begin to grow, if they will but receive the life from above.—Selected.

THE BOOK DIVINE

Holy Bible, Book Divine,
Precious treasure, thou art mine;
Mine to tell me whence I came,
Mine to teach me what I am;
Mine to chide me when I rove;
Mine to show a Savior's love;
Mine art thou to guide my feet;
Mine to judge, condemn, acquit;
Mine to comfort in distress;
Mine to lead to promises;
Mine to warn of sinners' doom;
Mine to say at the Cross there's room;
Mine to show the living faith;
Mine to triumph over death;
Mine to tell of joys to come;
Mine to show my heavenly home;
Mine to point me out the road;
Mine to lead my soul to God.
Oh, thou holy Book Divine,
Precious treasure, thou art mine!

LOST—A BOY!

Not kidnaped by bandits and hidden in a cave to weep and starve and raise a nation to frenzied searching. Were that the case, one hundred thousand men would rise to the rescue if need be. Unfortunately the losing of this lad is without dramatic excitement, though very sad and very real. The fact is, his father lost him. Being too busy to sit with him at the fireside and answer his trivial questions during the years when fathers are the only great heroes of the boys, he let go his hold.

Yes, his mother lost him. Being much engrossed in her teas, dinners and club programs, she let the maid hear the boy say his prayers and thus her grip slipped and the boy was lost to his home.

Aye, the church lost him. Being so much occupied with sermons for the wise and elderly who pay the bills, and having good care for dignity, the minister and elders were unmindful of the human feelings of the boy in the pew and made no provision in sermon or song or manly sport for his boyishness. And so the church and many sad-hearted parents are now looking earnestly for the lost boy.—The School Index.

FIRST THINGS FIRST

"The mission of the church is to save the souls of men. That is its true mission. It is the only mission of the church. That should be its only thought. The minute that any church admits a singer that does not sing to save souls; the moment a church calls a pastor who does not preach to save souls; the moment a church elects a deacon who does not work to save souls; the moment the church gives a supper or an entertainment of any kind not for the purpose of saving souls, it ceases in so much to be a church and to fulfill the magnificent mission God gave it. Every concert, every choir service, every preaching service, every Lord's Supper, every agency that is used in the church must have the great mission plainly before its eye. We are here to save souls of dying sinners. We are here for no other purpose, and the mission of the church being so clear, that is the only test of a real church."

GOLDEN JUBILEE GOALS

The Executive Board of the W. F. M. S. of the M. P. Church that met in High Point, N. C., May 9-13, adopted the following goals for the Golden Jubilee:

$50,000 Missionary Retirement Fund.

50 per cent increase in membership.

50 per cent increase in Record subscribers.

50 per cent increase in children's and young people's work.

50 per cent increase in Tithers and Intercessors.

Will not each of you put forth every effort that we in North Carolina may reach the goal? Each auxiliary, please elect your Jubilee Secretary and have her to present the Jubilee at each meeting. You can find very interesting helps on this in the last few issues of the Missionary Record.

To reach the financial goal we will have any profit made from the sale of the missionary pin, which is a lovely pin with a safety catch and sells for $1.00; the birthday offerings, which we are asking each auxiliary to raise by the members of each society making offerings on their birthdays, a penny for each year of age, or a larger offering if they wish.

Presidents of the auxiliaries, when you have elected or appointed your Jubilee Secretary, please notify me, giving her name and address.

A SOJOURN IN FLORIDA

Recently I spent four months in the land of the palm and the long-leaf pine. Out of summer in Florida, back to winter again in North Carolina—yet I love "home, sweet home" the best. But Jack Frost and wintry winds blast and wither gardens, citrus orchards and celery fields, etc., sometimes there, as during the past winter.

I feel rejuvenated to some extent, but I found not Ponce de Leon's "Fountain of Youth." So often I wished for my friends to see with me the many interesting places, surrounded on every hand by a setting of tropical scenery: golden citrus fruits in their luscious perfection, scraggy water oaks and stubborn palmetto; birds in endless confusion of song, trees, shrubs, vines, blossoms and perfume; orchards of blazing shumack; gorgeous sunsets spilling floods of gold and crusts of silver across the bosom of the shimmering waters of sea and lakes which here abound. Notable of these is Sarasota Bay, which carries an ancient legend, in part, thus:

Once upon a time, very remote, there sailed a young and gallant warrior who came seeking to woo DeSoto's beautiful daughter, who was supposed to live in these virgin wilds. One day she fell ill. . . . As the story goes, they buried her beneath the waves of this sun-kissed bay. She was soon followed by her lover, who met her in their "happy hunting ground."

Sixty miles to the northeast lies Tampa, and here ply ships from the Bahamas, laden with cocoanuts, bananas, and other fruits and vegetables from the tropics.

From Tampa leads out the celebrated "Tamiami Trail", 200 miles to the south and surrounds the proud city of Miami on the east Atlantic coast. Across country to the west about 15 miles one comes upon a panorama view of the aristocratic "Venice," whose name recalls her ancient sister. She claims herself the "only city on the Gulf."

I call your attention especially to Ringling's "Art Museum." The structure itself is very imposing, magnificent architecture and statuary, interesting and instructive in every appointment, graced by extensive gardens with everything modern in artistic landscape. I know you will want to spend a whole day there when visiting Sarasota. Mr. Ringling is a unique character. Here is his winter playground for his circus. At the recent "De Soto pageant," his circus animals helped to form the parade, said to be three miles long. Among the many magnanimous things he does is remembering the children of the schools in a monthly donation of hundreds of dollars that no under-nourished child shall be found. I can't pass up the opportunity to tell you of his million-dollar bridge with which he spans the Gulf to "Ringling Isles," made as a gift to the town. By some mechanical process he blew the sand from the adjacent waters, forming the foundation for these isles—at first a barren waste, but transformed in a miraculously short time into vast boulevards stretching away in every direction with evergreen Spanish pine and filled with myriads of beautiful flowers; statuary in life size of sculptors, painters, warriors, and Biblical characters, which no doubt many would recognize.

Each winter he calls bands of Czecho-Slovakians from their little country across the seas to furnish music in their peculiar accent for beaches and hotels, and broadcasting stations at their twilight musicales. They come wearing their national costumes in intricate and lustrous embroidery, for which the Czechs are famous.

Last, but not least, the Floridians do not all forget God, and you would be highly gratified to note the kindred spirit permeating vast audiences in worhip, strangers and friends alike, from many states and countries.

Yes, we M. P.'s have work, as many know, in Jacksonville, but I did not have the opportunity to stop over.

I will have to say good-bye to beautiful, wonderful Florida.

TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY

North Carolina is just rounding out 20 years of prohibition history. On Saturday, May 26, 1908, the men of North Carolina, in a solemn referendum at the ballot box, voted by a majority of over 44,000 "against the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors." A request has gone to every pastor in the state that he spend at least four minutes on Sunday, May 20, in reminding the people of this anniversary. It seems that this is a great opportunity to tell the young people what it cost us to outlaw the liquor business. In every pulpit in the state the benefits of prohibition should be stressed. Above all else our people should be urged to stand true to their principles.

All sorts of efforts are being made to muzzle the preachers of the state or to destroy their influence in this matter. Shrewdly laid schemes are being worked to deceive our people into returning "the dog to his vomit and the sow to her wallowing in the mire." Party bosses, disregarding the prayers and tears and suffering of true prohibitionists, would have us forget the depths from which we have come and surrender our convictions under the pretext of party loyalty.

If preachers, Bible class teachers, consecrated women and other moral, social and religious leaders are faithful now, we shall win. "We ought to obey God rather than men."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point.—The Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church met in its 49th annual session in the First church on Wednesday afternoon, May 9th, with the president, Mrs. Henry Hupfield, of Catonsville, Md., in the chair. The sessions were continued through the week, three daily, until Saturday evening. There were about 40 members of the Board in attendance, with the following returned missionaries: Miss Ethel Hempstead, Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Soderbom, Rev. and Mrs. J. Clyde Auman, Miss Annie L. Forrest, and Miss Mildred Miskimen. These were all entertained in the homes of our people with lodging and breakfast, dinner and supper being served at the church. On Friday the entire body was taken to the new high school cafeteria for lunch, and Friday evening at 6:30 a splendid banquet especially for the young people was served. On Saturday afternoon the members of the Board motored to Greensboro for a tea at Crace church, and en route to High Point stopped at the Children's Home for a tour of inspection, and at High Point College, where dinner was served them at 6 o'clock.

The sessions were harmonious, many interesting addresses were given, and a number of pictures of scenes in China, Japan and India were shown by Mrs. W. M. Sturgeon on Tuesday evening.

This was a body of fine-looking, earnest women, and High Point people were happy to welcome them to our city. Many remained over Sunday, when at 11 o'clock Dr. S. K. Spahr delivered a special missionary sermon, after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated, and special music was rendered.

On Sunday morn, which was Mother's Day, the pulpit was beautifully decorated with baskets of lovely flowers in memory of the late Mrs. W. D. Burgess by her sons and daughters, a fitting memorial to a faithful Christian mother.

The sympathy of many friends is extended to Mr. J. W. Hinkle in the death of his mother, Mrs. Mary A. Hinkle, of Louisburg, West Va., which occurred two weeks ago. Mr. Hinkle attended the funeral services.

The following members of our congregation have gone to Baltimore to attend the Young People's Conference, and several will remain for General Conference: Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard, Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe, Dr. R. M. Andrews, Misses Vista Dixon and Helen Hayes, of the college, Messrs. Geo. T. Penny, H. A. Moffitt, V. W. Idol, and others. Next Wednesday evening Miss Vista Dixon, only daughter of Dr. A. G. Dixon, will present the Gratitude Gift from North Carolina.

The Ladies' Aid Society is holding its usual monthly meeting at the church this (Monday) afternoon.

Funeral services for ex-Chief of Police Roy Gibson, who died suddenly Sunday morning, are being conducted in the First church this (Monday) afternoon by his pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, of English Street church, Rev. T. E. Pierce, of Welch Memorial, and Rev. Harrison Hill, of Albemarle. Mr. Gibson was a member of English Street Church and much sympathy is expressed for his estimable wife and children, Theodore and Marvin Gibson and Miss Mary Gibson. His aged mother also survives him.

Congratulations are being extended by a large circle of relatives and friends to Mr. Oscar Horney Ellison and Miss Allene Tomlinson, who were quietly married Tuesday, May 9th. The groom is a son of the late Mr. A. L. Ellison and Mrs. Octavia Horney Ellison, while his bride is the attractive and estimable daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Tomlinson.

Last night in Baltimore President Andrews, of the College, addressed the Young People's Convention in session there, his subject being "The Christian College and Citizenship." Dean P. E. Lindley will also make an address to this convention.

Shiloh, North Davidson Charge.—The weather being ideal, Shiloh had a great day in Sunday school yesterday, May 13. The enrollment reached 325 with 254 present. Our school is growing in interest as well as number. As the spring lengthens toward the summer we hope to have the best record the church has ever made in Sunday school work.

The young ladies' class had charge of the opening exercise Sunday. It being Mother's Day, they put on a special program which consisted of songs, poems, and a story for mother.

The Woman's Missionary Society had a call meeting at the church yesterday. They will meet with Brother R. B. Sink the second Sunday in June.

Our church and Sunday school will observe next Sunday, May 20th, as "Home-Coming" day. Plans are well under way to make this a banner day. We are expecting 400 or more present for Sunday school. The Lexington chorus and the Palmer sisters will be with us. Come, all ye lovers of music. I will assure you you will enjoy the program.

We rejoice that our church went over the top in the Centennial Gratitude Gift.

REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—At the 11 o'clock service yesterday Rev. N. M. Harrison, of Brinkleyville, occupied the pulpit for our pastor. He preached a good, plain sermon on "The Foundation of the Church." The subject was well handled and he brought out many good points. Everybody enjoyed the sermon.

Pastor Crutchfield expects to leave Wednesday for Baltimore to attend the Young People's Conference.

The second quarterly conference was held at Littleton on April 28. M. J. Morris and R. Hockaday were the delegates elected to attend the Annual Conference. Mrs. B. F. Morris was elected secretary to fill the vacancy of Miss Fannie Barnes.

On Easter Monday the Sunday school gave an egg hunt and all enjoyed it. Edith Carter won the prize for finding the most eggs.

Memorial services will be held some time in this month. The date has not been decided yet. So we must get busy and clean up the cemetery and church yard.

Mrs. H. A. Insco and daughters, Virginia and Hazel, who have made their home with Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Morris for the past eight months, have gone to her mother's to spend the summer.

REPORTER.

Friendship Station.—We felt like all the readers of our paper, especially our former pastors, would like to hear of "our great day" on last Sunday. The day began with a fine Sunday school spirit. The collection was much better than usual, and the lesson review given by Mrs. Hill was a regular feast to the soul. Some of the most tender and touching points were brought out. Rev. Hill had charge of the morning service at Salem M. E. church. He preached one of the most soul-stirring sermons we have ever heard him preach; his subject being "The Seven Downward Steps of Peter.' He founded his entire sermon on the Bible, and backed up each "downward step" by a scripture reference. It was indeed a wonderful message. His choir also had charge of the singing. Many old-time songs were sung. The evening service at Friendship was in charge of Rev. Greene, of the Salem charge. He brought us a grand message. His subject was, "Why I Believe Jesus Is Soon Coming to Earth Again." His discourse too was founded wholly upon the Bible. The Salem choir rendered fine music for this service. Help us pray that this sweet spirit of co-operation may grow and grow, till we become one band of Christians working for the same Heavenly Fatther, working for the same place, Heaven, and working for the same cause—pointing sinners to Jesus.

MRS. D. W. SIDES.

Winston.—The special meeting began on Monday night after the fifth Sunday in April and continued until Monday night after the first Sunday in May. Dr. J. D. Williams did the preaching. His sermons were greatly enjoyed by all who heard them.

We had a splendid revival among the church people; several conversions. It seems at the present day not many sinners attend revival services. However, we feel that lasting good was accomplished.

We feel indebted to the choir and leader for the valuable service they rendered during the meeting.

The number in Sunday school was greatly encouraging the past Sunday. It was the largest it has been for some time.

We ask the prayers of all who pray that the work may go forward.

J. H. MOTON.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Brother Isley filled his appointment here Sunday and brought us a beautiful Mother's Day message. His theme was: "Our Greatest Treasure—Mother."

We were pleased to have a number of visitors with us. Mrs. J. Clyde Auman, a returned missionary who is now living at Enfield, N. C., was in the congregation. She was visiting her sister, Mrs. Dr. Johnson.

Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely now, and we hope, since the epidemic of measles is about over, that we may have a record-breaking attendance.

It was decided to hold our Children's Day and memorial service the second Sunday in June. A committee was appointed to arrange a children's program for the morning service and our pastor will secure a speaker for the afternoon. There will be dinner on the grounds.

Our Ladies' Auxiliary work is coming along very nicely now.

The second quarterly meeting for this charge was held at Piney Grove church Saturday, May 12. Our church reported our college assessment and Centennial Gratitude Gift paid up in full. Mr. Wade Ward and Mr. R. R. Brewer are nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

We are glad to report that Mr. J. G. Hanner, who has been quite sick for several weeks, is somewhat improved. REPORTER.

State Street, Lexington.—The time generally devoted to the opening exercises of Sunday school was given over to Mrs. Lanier's Sunday school class Sunday morning, at which time they gave a fine Mother's Day program. Mrs. Lanier teaches the Intermediate girls, a very bright and interesting group of girls in their early "teens." The program rendered Sunday morning reflected credit on the girls and their teacher. There was no preaching, as our pastor is attending General Conference.

Many of our folks attended other churches, in all of which Mother's Day programs were given.

Sunday night a union service was held in the Chautauqua tent in the interest of the Near East Relief.

Mr. H. H. Koontz, of the First Reformed Church, taught Dr. Brannock's class of men Sunday. Many expressions of appreciation were heard for the efficient manner in which Mr. Koonts presented the lesson.

REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—The Sunday school at our place is progressing nicely. We hope the summer days will make a still larger increase.

Brother Ridge filled his appointment at our church Sunday at 11 o'clock and also Sunday night. His sermons are always inspiring.

We are planning to organize a young people's Christian Endeavor Society. We hope all the young men and women will assist us.

We are also planning for a junior choir. We want all to take part in our church work and make it a station of service for God. Pray for us that we may do greater things for God.

REPORTER.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Sunday was a fine day for us. Sunday school was well attended and the Mother's Day program was very impressive. The songs were all in memory of mother. A Mr. Lambeth from Friendship gave us a beautiful solo, accompanied at the piano by Miss Curry. We also had a male quartet and a mixed quartet. We were glad to have two of our pastor's daughters play for us.

Brother Curry preached a Mother's sermon, his text being, "Behold thy mother." A large crowd was present for this service.

At our Christian Endeavor Sunday night we had William Stadler with us, who gave us a good talk on "Mother, Home and Heaven." This was all good and we thank all who helped to make the day successful.

Our church is almost complete, and we are expecting another big day the fourth Sunday.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The Halifax County Sunday School Convention was held in our church on Saturday and Sunday, May 12 and 13. Miss Flora Davis and Miss Ione Alverson were the speakers. They brought to us some inspiring messages on different methods of Sunday school work. I am sure if the Sunday schools will adopt these methods and carry them out, there will be better Sunday school throughout the county.

We were very glad to have with us the Aurelian Springs male quartet. They sang several beautiful selections. Our next convention will be held in the Central Cross M. E. church near Enfield.

Our revival meeting is to begin the fourth Sunday in August with Rev. B. M. Williams, of Orange Circuit, as help.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies meet with Miss Kathleen Shearin tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon.

REPORTER.

Saxapahaw Charge.—We are glad to report our work coming on very well. Our attendance is increasing considerably since spring weather has commenced, both at Sunday school and preaching services. A spirit of progress seems to exist in the hearts of our members, and there is a growing desire on our charge for more purity and cleaner living on the part of the members of the various churches.

I am glad to report a pounding from Concord church the first Sunday which has supplied our pantry with many good things to eat. Because of the giving and pounding spirit of the Saxapahaw people our grocery bill has been very small since we moved to the parsonage. Many thanks for such generous people. O. C. LOY, JR., Pastor.

Pleasant Grove.—Our second quarterly conference has been held and was very largely attended. The business was transacted very harmoniously and interest manifested in all department of our church work. Brother B. E. Kennedy and Mrs. R. J. Kennedy are the nominees for delegate to our Annual Conference.

The Ladies' Aid met last week in the home of Mrs. J. E. Cecil on English street in High Point. As usual, the attendance was good. At the close of the business session all were invited into Mrs. Cecil's large dining room where delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. Cecil and her daughter, Mrs. Darr, gave evidences of knowing how to entertain in a way that makes the ladies of the society wish for a speedy return of their time to entertain again.

Some time ago Superintendent Teague made a proposal to the Ladies' Aid that if they would buy the doors and other material, he would pay for the work and we would have the three primary Sunday school rooms connected by folding doors so that the teachers could have all the children together for their opening service each Sunday morning. Of course the ladies accepted his proposal and now we have a much better arrangement for our primary department.

Last Sunday at 11 a. m., Mother's Day was observed. Three young ladies assisted the pastor in the service, and the choir furnished appropriate music. Besides the music from the choir and congregation, the young ladies sang a quartet, and Brother J. Maynard Kennedy and daughter, Miss Vertie Lee, sang a duet. All these songs were much enjoyed by the large congregation present. After this, the long table in the grove was spread with an abundance of good things to eat. Only those who have previously enjoyed the hospitality of the good cooks at the Grove can fully know what an all-day service means to those who enjoy eating as well as this pastor—and some of his members.

The Memorial Association met in the afternoon. The chairman, Z. B. Morris, asked I. W. Burton to preside, and he did so in a very satisfactory manner. After reports from officers and committees, the association proceeded to elect officers for the new year. Short speeches were made by quite a number of the brethren, including some visitors.

The association then adjourned with benediction by the pastor.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

Rockingham.—The second quarterly conference of our church met Saturday night, May 12th. The reports from all officials were good. Mr. J. H. Collins and Miss Nettie McLean were nominated as delegates to the Annual Conference.

The Sunday school is on the rise; attendance and collections good. Hope to see it continue to grow.

Our good pastor has filled his appointments for the past two Sundays, bringing to us very inspiring sermons.

We held a Mother's Day service on Sunday, May 13. The pastor delivered a sermon very suited to the occasion. A large number of mothers were present.

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, and a group of the members visited the county home and convict camp on the first Sunday afternoon. On the second Sunday afternoon a visit was paid to the prisoners in jail.

With best regards to the Herald and its readers. (MISS) BIRDIE CONNELL,

Reporter.

Burlington, First Church.—Our attendance for the past two Sundays has been excellent. Sunday, May 6th, attendance was 455, and May 13th, 459; offering today, $26.21.

Rev. C. B. Way (one of the young men going from the First church into the pastorate) preached for us at 11 o'clock today, delivering a very interesting and helpful sermon on "A Christian." We are always glad to have Brother Way come back home. This service was well attended.

Brother B. M. Williams preached for us at the evening hour, bringing a forceful and appropriate message. We had a very good congregation at this service also. We were glad to have Brother Williams, too, and invite him to come again.

We should have mentioned in the beginning that our pastor, Brother Gerringer, is attending the General Conference of our church which is in session at Baltimore, Md.

One of our number, Brother U. S. McAdams, is recovering from an operation in the Rainey Hospital here and we hope he will soon be out again.

We have secured the services of Miss Maxine Taylor, of Henderson, N. C., as young people's worker. Miss Taylor comes to us highly recommended and will begin her duties about June 1. This will supply a long felt need in our local Sunday school and church and it affords us much pleasure to be able to make this announcement.

We trust that most of you saw Brother Gerringer's report in regard to the unanimous vote cast at our church recently in favor of purchasing a new site for a new church building. We are hoping and praying that it will not be over two years before we will have this new church. Of course we will have to do some work and contribute as much as possible to complete this task. So let us all cooperate in every way and it will be realized before so long.

The mid-week service May 9th was conducted by Mr. J. G. Rogers. The subject of the evening was: "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us," and the leader gave a helpful and splendid message on this Scripture. The prayer meeting this week will be in charge of Prof. H. C. Stout. Brother Stout is an excellent teacher and instructor and we promise that this service will be helpful and inspiring to all who attend.

Dr. T. C. Amick, of Elon College, will speak at the 11 o'clock service next Sunday. Brother Amick is a very able speaker and we are looking forward with delight to his coming next Sunday.

We will have a Boy Scout meeting at the evening service with a visiting speaker.

Yours in the Master's work,
L. A. Braxton, Ass't Reporter.

Mount Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—We wish to announce that we have changed the date of Memorial service at Mount Zion from third Sunday in June to third Sunday in May (next Sunday). This change is being made in order not to conflict with other Memorial services in the community and in order that Brother Hunter may give us a whole day. Again we want to extend an insistent invitation to every one to come to Mount Zion for this service.

Sunday school attendance picked up decidedly today; 22 new pupils and most of the old ones were present.

The women organized a Ladies' Aid Society after Sunday school.

Brother Hunter leaves tomorrow morning for Baltimore to attend General Conference.

C. W. ALLEN.

Piney Grove, Chatham Circuit.—There will be Children's Day and memorial services at this church the fourthe Sunday in this month, May 27th, all-day services.

Our Sunday school seems to have taken on new life. We have a good school; it is not so large in attendance, but is growing every Sunday.

Our pastor is doing good work.

Our special meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in August. REPORTER.

Spring Church.—Yesterday, the second Sunday in May, a special song by Miss Elsie Crew and a splendid sermon by the pastor were enjoyed at our church service.

Our Sunday school is gradually growing as the spring lengthens towards the summer and we hope many others will come and study these great lessons with us.

Mrs. H. E. Vassar, Miss Lucile Kee, and Mrs. T. J. Kee left Friday to attend the Conference in Baltimore.

We are sorry to report our church organist, Mrs. R. M. Robinson, who has had measles, is still unable to be in her place at church on account of the sickness of one of her children.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Pleasant Hill church on Tuesday afternoon, May 29. VIRGINIA MASSEY.

Greer's Chapel.—We are all glad indeed to say that our church is completed. Our task now is to work together to build a kingdom for God. All of us have good hopes, and are striving to reach the highest goal.

On April 29 we had "Home Coming Day," or an opening day of our new church. Rev. R. S. Troxler delivered a splendid sermon that day. There were talks made by several others. The Lexington male quartet and several other quartets were there. They sang many beautiful songs. People assembled from far and near, bringing their baskets with them. Dinner was spread on the ground. Everybody enjoyed the day.

We organized a prayer meeting at the church and have had good crowds to come out each time. The prayer service was wonderful Wednesday night, May 9th.

Our Sunday school is increasing each Sunday and is getting much better.

We are all looking forward to building a better church. May God help us.

LOUISE COATES, Reporter.

Enfield.—Our pastor is attending the Conference in Baltimore. On Sunday he was fortunate to secure Mr. C. J. Edwards to fill the pulpit both morning and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Smith and daughters, Mavis and Audrey Mae, and Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Bellamy attended the County Sunday School Convention at Hollister Sunday. We would have larger and better Sunday schools if more of our people would attend these meetings, which are very educational in Sunday school work.

Sunday evening the Intermediate C. E. gave a fine program on "Honor Thy Mother—How?" Gladys Neal led the program in a very pleasing manner. Each member was asked to bring some flowers instead of offering. These were taken to sick people in town after the meeting.

Vann Clay, a member of our Sunday school prior to his confinement, is still very ill. We hope a number of our people will remember him. He is now in the home of Mr. Matt Hux. Vann is very appreciative of visits. Let's not forget the sick in our midst.

REPORTER.

Bessemer City.—We had extra good services here Sunday, May 13. We have a fine Sunday school. The Baraca and Philathea classes are the largest, there being 51 present in the Baraca class with 27 absent, and 53 present in the Philathea class. We had a total of 191 and hope to gain the goal of 200 next Sunday. We are proud of our school, as this church has indeed been put to an acid test.

We are proud of our pastor; he is such a willing worker in the church. We feel that he is one of the best. He delivered a very interesting and touching sermon Sunday morning, Mother's Day being observed.

So far this year 21 members have been received into the church. Five united with us Sunday morning.

We had a fine number present at C. E. Society Sunday evening. Our society is growing in interest and number and is a great help to the church. Prayer meeting each Wednesday evening with good attendance. We are planning to begin our revival meeting some time in the near future and greatly desire the fervent prayers of every Christian that much and lasting good may be accomplished.

Our hearts were made sad by the death of Brother J. P. Sills, or "Grandpa" Sills, as he was lovingly called. There was a large number and sorrowing relatives gathered to pay their last tribute of respect and honor to our departed brother. May God's blessings rest on all his friends and relatives. Brother N. G. Bethea, from Lexington, had charge of the funeral services, as it was Brother Sills' desire that he administer the last rites. He was laid to rest in Bessemer City cemetery.

LUCY BLANTON, Reporter.

Siler City.—Tuesday evening, May 1, from 7:30 to 10 o'clock, the Senior Philathea Class of our church held a social meeting in the Sunday school rooms.

The rooms were very beautifully decorated with dogwood, spirea and lilacs.

The social committee, composed of Miss Clata Andrew, Mrs. Duncan Welch and Miss Sallie Smith, proved themselves very efficient by providing plenty of innocent fun for the social hour. Ice cream and cake were served in abundance to all present. There are 35 members of this class. At the appointed hour all departed for their homes after thoroughly enjoying the evening together.

We were very much pleased with the Mother's Day program which was prepared by the Senior Christian Endeavor Society. The program consisted of a number of appropriate songs and solos, while many splendid talks were made on the subject, "Mother—Home." We are very happy because we can observe Mother's Day on the second Sunday in May and endeavor to let our parents know how much we appreciate them and the home they have made for us.

Prayer meeting and Sunday school are still moving along. There will be no Sabbath school next Sunday on account of the Circuit Rally at Chapel Hill. F. L. SMITH.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Rumley

Roy Rumley departed this life at his home in Glen Raven May 2, 1928, aged 30 years, three months and three days. He had been in ill health for some two or three years, but was confined to his bed two months. The funeral was held at Bethlehem Christian church, near Altamahaw, the third day of May at 4 o'clock by the writer.

He professed faith in Christ and, I believe, died a Christian. The pallbearers were Messrs. Tyson Humble, David Huffines, Max Wrenn, W. E. Barbee, Coy Thompson and Willie Gant.

Mr. Rumley is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Rumley, and one child; an infant had passed on to the glory world some two or three years before; his mother, Mrs. Mary Rumley, and half-sister, Miss Zettie Cates; a half-brother, Ira Cates.

May the Lord bless and comfort them in their sad and lonely hours.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

Terrell

Henry Terrell died May 10th, 1928, aged about 63 years. He had been a member of Chestnut Ridge church for a number of years.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Rogers, pastor of West Durham M. E. Church, South, at Chestnut Ridge, May 12th.

Brother Terrell had been afflicted for some time. He bore his afflictions patiently.

A good man is gone. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Tomatoes.—"Have a good crop of tomatoes this year," says E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturist at State College. "The mid-season varieties may be planted now and it is wise to get the seed started some three or four weeks before the plants are needed. Give these plants plenty of room so that they will grow stocky and strong. The early tomato crop might well be staked for best results. Drive down a stake six feet long and tie the plants to this, using soft twine or strips of old cloth. Prune to a single stem."

In What Language Did They Court?—We met Missionary Soderbom and Mrs. Soderbom recently and were finely impressed with them in the short conversation we had with them. But one question of interest we failed to ask them. We wonder about it. They met each other in China where both were missionaries and in the course of time were married. He was a Swede and she was an American. He says he cannot speak English well and she says she cannot speak Swedish much. Both, however, speak Chinese fluently. We wonder if the courting was done in Chinese.

—The ladies in attendance at the Executive Board Meeting in High Point last week visited Grace church, Greensboro, on Saturday afternoon and took tea with the ladies of Grace. They admired the beauty of this splendid edifice.

FIFTH DISTRICT RALLY

The fifth district rally meeting was held Sunday, April 29, 1928, at the Maple Springs church near Winston-Salem, N. C., with Rev. R. C. Stubbins, chairman, presiding.

Winston Church charge had two members present, West Forsyth 12, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion 19, Forsyth 35, and South Winston five.

Rev. C. H. Whitaker gave a brief talk on "Stewardship," after which the Mission Band of Hickory Ridge church rendered a vocal selection. Miss Lena Hunter, of Union Ridge church, also sang a solo.

Rev. Lester Ballard, pastor of the First Methodist Protestant Church, of High Point, N. C., spoke of the necessity of better music in the church and Sunday school, urging that hymns be used that were appropriate for the service. He also sang a solo which was very much enjoyed.

Mr. J. K. Norfleet, of Winston-Salem, gave a most interesting and inspiring talk on "Business Methods in Church Management."

Prof. Paul Kennett, of High Point College, read the history of the Methodist church up until 1864.

Officers were elected for the coming year, Rev. R. C. Stubbins being re-elected chairman, and Miss Christina Fulton, of Hickory Ridge church, was elected secretary. Motion was made that the next meeting be held on the fifth Sunday in May, 1929, at a place to be decided on later.

WHY NOT THINK?

It's a little thing to do,
Just to think.
Any one, no matter who,
Ought to think.
Take a little time each day
From the minutes thrown away
Spare it from your work or play—
Stop and think!

You will find that men who fail
Do not think.
Men who find themselves in jail
Do not think.
Half the trouble that we see,
Trouble brewed for you and me,
Probably would never be
If we'd think.

Shall we then consider this?
Shall we think?
Shall we journey, hit or miss,
Or shall we think?
Let's not go alone by guess,
But rather to ourselves confess
It would help us more or less
If we'd think.

JAPANESE EMPEROR A TEETOTALER

It is a little known fact, even within the confines of the Japanese empire, that the emperor is an absolute teetotaler. On the Royal Banquet tables not a drop of alcoholic beverage is set, and, in addition, his majesty is also a non-smoker. This good example of the Mikado already has begun to exert a benign influence over the youth of Japan, and many who have been addicted to pay homage at the shrine of Bacchus or to enjoy the fragrant weed have eschewed the practices altogether, these young men reading in the act of his majesty an example to them all.

The 300 special policemen whose duty it is to guard the palace precincts have taken the pledge, and the emperor's example is giving the spreading temperance movement a tremendous impetus.—North China Herald.

A BRILLIANT AFFAIR

During a fire in a village in Ohio, the editor of the local paper, being unable to locate the regular reporter, sent out the young woman who "did" the society gossip. Here is her report as it appeared:

"A brilliant fire was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Slipps, on Hope street. A large number of people attended the function. Mrs. Slipps, who recently had her hair shingled, made a charming escape in an exceedingly handsome henna silk blouse, the pattern of which appeared on our woman's page last week. The firemen, who presented an attractive appearance, were suitably garbed in blue, the tunics being full cut. The weather was quite delightful for an affair of this kind, a strong wind blowing. It is rumored that the fire was on a larger scale than any previous affair of a similar kind for years. It is also rumored that it cost Mr. and Mrs. Slipps about $25,000."—The Boston Transcript.

IF I WERE PRESIDENT

If I'm elected President,
I'll eschew my politics;
My daily working hours will be
From six o'clock to six.

When I am made the President,
The workman's wage will soar;
I'll arbitrate, conciliate,
And plan to outlaw war.

I want to be the President,
My task will be no joke;
I'll build an ideal Cabinet
With men of sturdy oak.

I'd like to be the President,
And guard the public purse;
The grafters and the sycophants
Will travel in a hearse.

Should I be made the President
I'll use the income tax
To print great tons of money
And treat the poor with sacks.

As soon as I am President
I know where to begin:
I'll put some inside rascals out,
But no outside rascals in.

Editorial Correspondence

The editor writes from St. John's Church, Baltimore, the seat of the General Conference. The trip hither was without notable incident excepting a brief stop to see the church in which George Washington worshiped near Alexandria, Va. This church was built of brick and Washington was one of the building committee. It is of about the size of Calvary Church, Greensboro. The pews still remain as they were in the days of Washington. The pew occupied by the Father of our Country is marked with his initials. The sitting space of the church is divided into spaces nearly or quite square with seats on all sides. It was and is an Episcopalian church and has two or three positions for the officiating clergyman, he moving from one to another in the course of the same service. As he moved from one side of the room to one end, the occupants of the pews were expected to change their seats in the pews so as to keep their faces toward the minister.

Rev. S. W. Taylor was so impressed that he led us in a brief service of prayer, thanking God for such men as Washington was.

We spent the first night from home 14 miles from Baltimore at a tourists' camp where we were lulled to sleep or kept awake, as the case might be, by the plaintive notes of the whip-poor-will.

We arrived in Baltimore on Wednesday morning in good time to be present at the opening of General Conference at 10 o'clock. The Conference sermon was preached by Rev. G. I. Humphreys, of the Maryland Conference, the theme being "The Ever-flaming Revelation.' It was a masterly discourse setting forth the continuous effort of God to reveal Himself to men. A communion service followed, participated in by a very large number. The attendance at this first session of the Conference overtaxed the seating capacity of the large church in which the Conference meets.

The President, Dr. T. H. Lewis, read his report the first day. In the afternoon came the election of President and Secretary. Dr. R. M. Andrews was nominated by Dr. A. G. Dixon for President. Dr. T. H. Lewis, Dr. J. C. Broomfield, and Dr. Harlan L. Freeman were nominated by others. On the third ballot Rev. J. C. Broomfield received 87 votes, Dr. Lewis 70 votes. Dr. Broomfield was declared elected. Dr. C. H. Beck moved that the unanimous vote of the Conference be cast for Rev. C. W. Bates for Secretary. This motion was adopted.

On Wednesday night came the great meeting in the Lyric Theater to celebrate our centennial. Perhaps never before were so many Methodist Protestants assembled in one body. The building was full of folks eager to see and hear. The initial performance was a song service conducted by Rev. Ed Stone. He had gathered out of the churches of Baltimore and trained for this service about three hundred singers. Not often can such singing be heard this side of Heaven.

The speeches of the occasion were of the same high order with the songs. Dr. Lewis read a paper sketching the hundred years' history of the denomination. Speeches of felicitation were made by distinguished speakers from the Episcopal, the Presbyterian, the Methodist Episcopal, and the Congregational churches. Mr. T. O. Atwood, a lay member of St. John's M. P. church, responded with a speech notable for its emphasis on the exaltation of Jesus Christ in all our church life.

Following the speeches came the Gratitude Gift from the Annual Conferences, presented in the form of vouchers by ladies representing the contributing conferences. Miss Vista Dixon represented our conference in this pleasing service. Dr. J. H. Straughn announced that the aggregate was more than twelve hundred dollars over the hundred thousand dollars at first proposed, and additions have since been made to the fund.

More next week.

A SERMON BRIEF

Text: "I am the Good Shepherd."

That meant that Jesus loved people. He was not simply saving them out of a book, no matter how great or holy, not preaching by text and chapter, but preaching with a heart full of love and wise experience. In His own life He had realized the goodness of God and knew that the man who realized that goodness was saved, though a thousand wild oxen should pull his body to peices.

Jesus found that the multitude were not living as rational beings in an ordered universe, but like a drove of hogs because of their sensuality, or a pack of wolves because of their propensity to prey upon each other, or a flock of sheep because of their muddle-headedness. But He knew that they were fitted for something better, that they had kind hearts and the capacity for doing something better with their lives. He knew that they were like sheep going astray. They needed the rallying point of a great sympathy.

And so He became the Shepherd, ready to lay down His life for His sheep. He did lay down His human life. But by the laying down even the foolish sheep were made to understand that there was a great Good Shepherd, some of the hogs discovered their kinship with a Better Something, and even the hearts of the wolves were softened with the thought of a tender relationship to their fellows.

Though the Christ should come again, He would again be crucified. Daily in the spirit is He crucified. Yet there He stands, the Good Shepherd, and still, though they tear and rend each other and tear to pieces their better selves, men sometimes hear His voice and in penitence return to the Shepherd of their souls.—The Rev. Albert L. Whitaker.

NON-CONCURRING PRESBYTERIANS IN CANADA

(Note: In June, 1925, the combination of three denominations—Presbyterian, Methodist, and Congregationalist—formed the United Church of Canada. All the Methodists and Congregationalists and two-thirds of the Presbyterians went in. The remaining one-third of the Presbyterians—including 160,000 members, 600 ministers, 432 self-supporting charges, and 161 aided charges—refused to go into the union, and are continuing as a distinct denomination under the Presbyterian name. Recently, the Rev. Charles Clayton Morrison, D.D., editor of the Christian Century, Chicago, made a tour of the churches, conferring with many individuals and groups. In a series of articles he is giving the readers of his journal his impressions on the situation. The article on "The Non-Concurring Presbyterians" is a most masterly and Christian treatment of the subject. I am giving here the most important section of that article. I cannot conceive how any Christian can read this without being deeply moved. Dr. Morrison has, I believe, correctly interpreted the mind of Christ on this tragic situation. It should serve as a warning to any Methodists—North or South—who continue to oppose the unification of those two bodies. It should also touch the hearts of members of other denominations who are moving toward union, and should guard them against un-Christian opposition. Dr. Morrison's words follow.—Luther K. Long.)

A Story of Dissension

I do not intend to go into the story of this defection. One comes out of a conference with a group of anti-unionists or a group of unionists with not only a bleeding heart, but with a dizzy head. The story palled on me terribly after I had heard it repeated every day for nearly three weeks. The most painfully depressing observations I made in all my journey were three Presbyterian church buildings under construction in Regina, Saskatoon, and Brandon, erected to house groups of dissentients whose former congregations had gone into the United church. This tragic paradox will haunt my mind always. I say I do not intend to tell the story of dissension and rupture. One of my reasons is that I cannot make head or tail out of it. If I should undertake to tell it, I could not hope to satisfy either side or do justice to the bitter facts. But my other reason is that it makes no difference anyhow. I am not interested in the events that occurred after the opposition adopted an attitude of active defiance. I wish to know why there was any opposition at all. That there was a fierce contest in local churches, in presbyteries, in general assemblies, in parliament, and particularly in the lobby of parliament, all the world knows, a struggle which all sensitive and right-minded persons on both sides would now like to forget—if they could. I am willing to forget it, and to acknowledge my inability to describe it fairly. But what I cannot forbear to ask is, Why was there any such struggle at all? Was there some great issue at stake—an issue great and vital enough to warrant a minority in precipitating such a scandalous situation? I wish to go back of the scandal stage of the controversy to the difference-of-opinion stage.

What Does Christ Think?

One of my chief purposes in going to Canada on a tour of inquiry was to get at the reasons which had actuated the minority in its unyielding defiance of the majority, a defiance for which the cause of Christ has paid and is paying an immeasurable price. Was there a good reason for the minority's defiance? Was there a Christian reason? Will their answers to my inquiry bear the light of the mind of Christ? Can these brethren who insist upon continuing a sectarian Presbyterian church in Canada against an overwhelming vote to abandon such sectarian separation, justify their enterprise with an apologetic which they could present unblushingly to Christ Himself? That is what I was getting at. I was determined that my judgment should not be vitiated by what I call the sociologist's fallacy—that of standing on the outside of a human event, coolly analyzing it into its factors and thereby reaching a conclusion that the event was a "mistake," or that it was "premature," or what not. That is the sort of report which some observers of the Canadian church situation have given us. Whether it was premature or not is a wholly academic point. If it was premature, I wished to know why it was premature. Whether it was a mistake or not, is likewise an academic point. I was interested to know why it was a mistake, if it was one. Who is responsible for its being premature? Who is guilty of its being a mistake? There is no academic matter, for it reveals the facts upon which a Christian judgment of the church union event must rest. It is this Christian appraisal of the Canadian union that The Christian Century's public desires to make. We care not at all what the metropolitan press of Canada thinks about it; nor what the Canadian public as such thinks about it. Our question is, What does Christ think about it? How does it look when seen through His eyes?

When the Cock Crew

I am willing to give my answer to that question. Indeed, I cannot avoid giving my answer. If I should try to be a mere reporter or neutral recorder of the church union event in Canada, my answer to that question would be bound to creep in. That being so, is it not better to make my answer explicit and deliberate rather than furtive and cryptic? My answer, then—and I speak with all reverence and humility, recognizing the full right of any one else to interpret the mind of Christ otherwise—is that Christ looks upon the anti-union Presbyterians with the same eyes through which he looked on Simon Peter when the cock crew, and that he has every reason for thinking the same thoughts which he thought then. For if there is any such thing as denying Christ, this non-concurring Presbyterian church has surely denied Him.

Consider the facts. Not the petty facts as to the wisdom of this or that man's electioneering tactics, or this or that detail of procedure, or this item in the basis of union or that item, but the big facts, the long range facts, the facts that will be recorded in the history, not the gossip, of the movement. Consider the paramount facts. For a full generation the movement had been under way. It was no sudden impulse. Three times it was voted on by the churches concerned. It carried all of them in 1911. It carried again in 1915. In 1917, action on the 1915 vote was deferred until the close of the war, with the admonition that the church "patiently await the new light which it may receive by divine guidance, through the growing experience of the people and the lessons of the war." In 1921 the general assembly took decisive action to proceed with the union, which was finally consummated in 1925. Throughout the series of votes the union proposal had carried each time in the Presbyterian church by roughly a two-thirds majority. In a democracy, what course should the minority have adopted? The answer is plain. It is plain unless there were adequate reasons of conscience why the minority could not in loyalty to their Christian convictions enter the union. Here, then, is the nub of the matter.

Sacrifices Involved

Let us continue to consider the facts.

A basis of union had been adopted in 1911 and amended to meet certain criticisms in 1915. Did this basis of union involve on the part of any Presbyterian any sacrifice or violation of his personal convictions? What kind of basis was it? It was soundly evangelical. It consisted essentially of the rewriting of the historic creeds, omitting nothing of substance except the articles setting forth the extreme points of Calvanistic doctrine. It encountered little, if any, opposition or criticism. It involved the sacrifice of no one's personal faith or belief.

What sacrifice did the basis of union involve on the part of the churches? Did it call for any material change in their internal character or procedure? None. A Methodist or Congregational or Presbyterian local church in the union would continue to exercise its functions according to its established tradition and habit. Its internal structure and activity were left untouched by the union. There would be no constraint nor any suggestion of surrendering its identity or modifying its character in any way. Moreover, its connectional relation with other congregations would be essentially Presbyterial, for the policy of the United church was practically that of the Presbyterian system.

Plainly, the facts show that there was no good Presbyterian reason why a Presbyterian Christian, or a Presbyterian church, or the Presbyterian denomination should not participate in the proposed United Church of Canada. Did the union, then, involve no sacrifice at all on the part of those who would enter it? It did involve a sacrifice, a real and substantial sacrifice, but a sacrifice of something which falsifies the spirit of Christ and is hostile to the well-being of the church of Christ. Union demanded the sacrifice of sectarianism—and that the non-concurring Presbyterians would not give up.

Now sectarianism is a sin of which all our churches are guilty. Our whole denominational order is tarred with this same stick. But the defectionist group in Canada is peculiarly guilty because its eyes were smitten with the heavenly vision of a united church and it proved disobedient to it. This group made the great refusal. It set up standards that are not Christian standards, and closed its heart to the most elementary Christian appeal. It wilfully, and proudly, and selfishly thrust itself in the path of fulfillment of the most Christian movement which has found expression in the ecclesiastical life of the church since the Protestant reformation. It lowered the Christian banner and caused it to be sullied with shame. For itself it carries a different banner; it is not a Christian banner, but the banner of anti-Christ. In turning away from the goal of a united church, the non-concurring Presbyterians of Canada have brought confusion into the work of Christ, and created a condition of such bitter and scandalous recrimination and division among the followers of Christ as ought to call forth from the whole body of Christ a judgment of unqualified condemnation.

I do not judge churches. I do not like to say that one church is better than another, or worse than others. But I am convinced, after making an open-minded and thorough inquiry into the facts, that the church at large—in the United States and England and Scotland—should, in loyalty to the great Head of the church, register a judgment of condemnation upon the sectarianism of the recalcitrant Presbyterians of Canada. All our talk and prayer and dream of Christian unity is vain and insincere if we are able to regard with complacent tolerance or with neutral minds the condition for which this group is responsible.

I am expressing my personal conviction. I do not know of any one else in the world who shares it. I did not form so sweeping and unqualified a judgment while I was in Canada. It has been steadily defining itself by the study of the data which I brought home with me, and by reflection upon the conferences I had with United churchmen, Anglicans, Baptists and non-concurring Presbyterians themselves. Certainly this judgment was not given me by any Canadian unionist. I detected among leaders of the United church no such fundamental attitude as that which I have just now registered as my own. On the contrary, their expressions of disappointment and criticism impressed me as strikingly magnanimous. I found no man who swept the details of his criticism together in a single condemnatory generalization challenging the Christian character of the anti-union Presbyterian church, as I am doing.

A CENTENNIAL PRAYER

O Thou, whose Spirit through a hundred years
Didst guide our fathers—didst their souls inspire—
Whose Life gave life, whose Presence banished fears—
Impart to us, their sons, Heaven's holy fire!

Let Truth illumine deeper still man's soul,
And Faith give strength to energies new-born!
May Love Divine, encompassing the whole,
Thy church with grace and beauty new adorn!

A glorious halo crowns the pioneer
Who blazed the way o'er hills and prairie sod:
New tasks must mark the Kingdom's new frontier—
Endue Thy servants, then, with power from God!

A world confounded with a thousand ills—
Blind leaders of the blind, and mocking foe—
Must hear Thy voice, and learn the spirit-thrills
That so transform the lives of those who know!

So, in an age when knowledge fills the land,
And science echoes, too, Jehovah's laws,
O give us wisdom, Lord, to understand
Thou art, of All, the Everlasting Cause!

In Thee we live, and move—in Thee exist—
This, let Thy prophets speak with tireless breath!
O let Thy Word dispel earth's cloud and mist:
If God is not, then naught can be but death!

The greed of man—the lust, the shame, the hate—
O may they be from thrones of power hurled!
May all that curses human life abate,
And peace descend upon a warless world!

The threshold of a hundred years to come
Marks this, our day! O Father, God Divine,
Thy church would speak! Let not her voice grow dumb!
O Christ—Lord Christ—make all earth's kingdoms Thine!

—Herbert Taylor Stephens.

MONKEY MEN

(From Faithful Words)

They tell me men resembled apes
A long, long time ago;
And though I've tried, I cannot see
How they can prove them so.

They claim that monkeys came to be
From just a bit of slime,
And then these ugly apes evolved,
And men appeared in time.

All apes could not have wished to change,
If they evolved at will.
If nature caused them to evolve,
How have we monkeys still?

Has evolution ceased to work
On monkeys now-a-days?
And why don't sinful men evolve
And leave their wicked ways?

It puzzles me to understand
Why men, with style and taste,
Enjoy the thought that they were once
But slime, and filth, and paste.

Where have they room for boasting, then,
If they were monkey-men?
But I suppose they pride themselves
On what they're now—not then!

The Bible says that Adam was
In God's own image made,
And that, instead of climbing up,
We've all gone down the grade.

We've drifted far from God e'er since,
In our own sinfulness,
But God in love gave us His Son
To be our righteousness.

Then trust in Him and you shall prove
The Bible to be true,
For through the power of endless love
You shall be born anew.

BETTER

Better the heart to ache than to freeze.

Better to suffer poignant pain for the sin or the need of another than to be indifferent, careless, cold.

Better to be worn to a shred serving others than that others should ever, ever doubt for a moment your willingness always to be a helper.

Better to pray and plead and sweat drops of blood than to grow weary and leave lost souls wandering in darkness.

Better to be misunderstood, wounded, misrepresented standing for highest ideals, than to compromise ideals one whit.

Better to love intensely, suffer keenly, sacrifice to the last drop of the heart's blood, than to be shallow, wooden, earthy. —Brown-Gray.

ANOTHER CHANCE

Our father's message to the poor faltering learners in His school is the message of another chance. With each new year it comes. Forgetting the failures of the past, we may begin life all over again.

"He came to my desk with a quivering lip—
The lesson was done.
'Dear teacher, I want a new leaf,' he said,
I have spoiled this one.'

"I took the old leaf, stained and blotted,
And gave him a new one all unspotted;
And into his sad eyes smiled,
'Do better now, my child.'

"I went to the throne with a quivering soul—
The old year was done.
'Dear Father, hast thou a new leaf for me?
I have spoiled this one.'

"He took the old year, stained and blotted,
And gave me a new one all unspotted,
And to my sad heart smiled,
'Do better now, my child.' "

It is this message that gives hope for the future. The golden age is still before us. It is this that gives one back his youth. It is this that draws the curtain of night over the unsatisfactory past and paints the future in golden light. It matters not the number of our years, the best is yet to be.

To each of us at the turn of the year there comes a flood of memories, of mistakes innumerable, of opportunities for good and for service gone, and we fain would turn the page and forget. But God Himself cannot change history. But the Christ comes with the new year and shouts a message of forgiveness for the past and power for the future. Believe it, receive it, follow it. It is the fabled fountain of youth so long looked for by men. Come and sit by its waters and rest. Come and bathe your aching brow and find peace. Come and let its gentle music refresh your tired heart. Come and look into its crystal depths and see reflected the stars of hope and the sun of righteousness. Come and drink and your soul shall live. Come and stand with the risen Christ, your face toward the east. There shall be no night.—J. Sherman Wallace, in Young People.

THE WORTH OF THE AVERAGE MAN

If a planet suddenly sweeps into the heavens all eyes are aloft at once. It is something unusual, something exceptional. But who ever stays for a moment to look at the steadfast stars that are always there? And it is fairly frequently the same in human life. If a five-talented man suddenly sweeps within our sight all attention is fixed on him at once, but rarely do people pause or stay for a moment to consider the value of the average folk. "The backbone of the army," said Rudyard Kipling, "is the non-commissioned man"—in other words, the average man—and it is a growing conviction with me that the backbone of life in every sphere is the average man. I am firmly convinced in my own mind that it is the contented consecration of the man with two talents to his job in life that makes for strength and stability, whether in the home or in the naion or in the church.—The Rev. B. Bernard Beard.

THE CHRISTIAN

To be a Christian is not a matter of mere words. It is a relationship; the relationship of a soul with God. It has three distinct phases. It begins with the New Birth, through which we become sons and daughters of God. It finds its consummation in the day when we come face to face with God, and our eyes open on the joys and delights of the heavenly mansions. In between these two ends lies the Christian life. It is here that we are greatly in need of new emphasis. We have appealed to the fear of hell and the hope of heaven. We have tried hard to bring people into this relationship. What we have not fully grasped is that the whole experience is one, in different stages. Without the new birth there can be no Christian life. Without the Christian life there can be no glorious consummation. Without the consummation the Christian life would lose its highest hope and expectation. Without the Christian life the new birth would be a tragically incomplete thing. It is not a matter of the length of life, but of its character. The new born soul that lives but a day, but lives that day as God would have it, has the right to the consummation. The life that has many years, but these years spent without the approval of God, will be a dread disappointment. Our aim must be to so present the message of the Gospel that men and women may come into the full and rounded and complete Christian experience.—W. E. Denham.

BE BRAVE

Be brave, my brother!
Fight the good fight of faith
With weapons proved and true,
Be faithful and unshrinking to the death,
Thy God will bear thee through.

Be brave, my brother!
The recompense is great,
The Kingdom bright and fair;
Beyond the glory of all earthly state
Shall be the glory there;
Grudge not the heavy cost,
Faint not at labor here,
'Tis but a life-time at the most,
The day of rest is near.

Be brave, my brother!
He, whom thou servest, slights
Not even His weakest one;
No deed, though poor, shall be forgot,
However feebly done;
The prayer, the wish, the thought,
The faintly spoken word,
The plan that seemed to come to naught,
Each has its own reward.

"TAINTED MONEY"

Two colored men were discussing tainted money. One of them said: "It is disaway, Jim. Dat money taint mine and taint yourn. Dat's why it's tainted money."

Of course, there is no tainted money. The taint is on the man and not the money. And that money taint has tainted many men and women, in all classes. Holy Writ declares that the love of money is the root from which all evils grow. We have never yet realized the grip and blight of stinginess and covetousness.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

HIS OTHER CHANCE

He laughed with scorn. "Are there two of me?
He was down and out, and his pluck was gone,
And he said to me in a gloomy way:
"I've wasted my chances one by one,
And I'm just no good, as the people say.
Nothing ahead, and my dreams all dust,
Though once there was something I might have been;
But I wasn't game, and I broke my trust,
And I wasn't straight and I wasn't clean."

"You're pretty low down," said I to him;
"But nobody's holding you there, my friend.
Life is a stream where men sink or swim,
And drifters come to a sorry end.
But there's two of you living and breathing still—
The fellow you are, and he's tough to see,
And another chap, if you've got the will—
The man that you still have a chance to be."

He laughed with scorn. "'Are there two of me?
I thought I'd murdered the other one.
I once knew a chap that I hoped to be,
And he was decent, but now he's gone."
"Well," says I, "it may seem to you
That life has little of joy in store;
But there's always something you still can do,
And there's never a man but can try once more."

"There are always two to the end of time—
The fellow we are and the future man.
The Lord never meant you should cease to climb,
And you can get up if you think you can.
The fellow you are is a sorry sight,
But you needn't go drifting out to sea.
Get hold of yourself and travel right;
There's a fellow you've still got a chance to be."

THE SONG OF THE BLOOD

The tempter's voice will not be heard when the song of the Blood is raised. "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood . . . to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen." Sing it again and again. This song is going on right through the eternities. Jesus! Jesus! Jesus! Thy blood! Thy blood! Thy blood! Thine own blood!

Oh, the sophistry of Satan, explaining it away, counting it of no avail, ignoring it and abusing it! The resources of hell have been brought to attempt to take from the power of the Blood. But God is more than a match for all the devices of Satan. The Blood is going to have the right place.

"They overcame by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony." They overcame him who tried to overcome Jesus. The Blood is the only defeat Satan will acknowledge. As sure as the Blood is shed, so sure is his doom sealed. The song of triumph has already started in the heavenlies, and the echo has already come to the earth. We are taking up the strain, "Unto him that loved us, and washed us." The song penetrates into the place of the doomed. Keep the song going and it will obliterate the songs of hell.

When He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will teach you God's estimate of the Blood of His Son. Be filled with the Spirit.—Selected.

SEVENTY TIMES SEVEN

L. S. Bacon

Linda-May came home from school in tears. "I'm goin' to forgive that horrid Tom Grant, never," she exclaimed. "Why, Linda dear?" said mamma, "I wouldn't say that."

"But he's so horrid, mamma; he put some nasty, slimy fishin' worms in an envelope and d'rected it to me, and put it on my desk, an' I thought it was a note from Bessie, an'—I opened it an' all the horrid things came crawlin' out all over me. Ugh! I never, never will forgive him," she added.

"Linda-May's forgiven Tom lots of times," said Sadie staunchly. "When he put the frog in her desk and when he tied her hair to the chair back, an' other times too."

"Yes," said Linda-May, "jus' heaps an' heaps of times, but I won't any more."

"But, Linda," said mamma, "we must forgive, not seven times, but 'seventy times seven.'"

Linda-May did not say anything but she remembered just a few Sundays ago, Miss Annie had had that very lesson at Sunday school. Oh, yes, Linda-May remembered. "But I just can't," she said to herself, "those nasty worms."

She did not speak to Tom the next day. Then came Saturday and at Sunday school, although Tom sat very near Linda-May, she did not look at him at all. "I'm not goin' to forgive those worms," she thought.

"Children," said Miss Annie, "we're trying very hard to raise some money to help a poor mission school up in the mountains and I want my class to see if they cannot make a little in some way; it will be wonderful to feel you have made it yourselves."

The children were very much interested, Linda-May especially.

"I don't know however I'm goin' to make any," she said as they walked home. "Maybe I could rent out Lady Arabella; I could charge two cents an hour."

"Hugh!" said Tom Grant, "who'd pay for it?"

"Nobody's talkin to you," said Lind-May.

But the next day Papa-doctor solved the problem.

"Linda-May," said he, "when I went to see Miss Andrews today, you know she's been ailing a long time, well, she said the only thing she fancied in the way of food was mushrooms. Now in that pasture land of mine I noticed a lot and I know Miss Andrews would pay you well for them, but you have to get up pretty early to gather them, Linda-May."

"Oh, I don't mind that," cried the little girl. "I'll begin tomorrow."

"And I'll go, too," said Sadie.

Sure enough the two little girls were up bright and early. Miss Andrews was delighted. "Bring them to me every day," said she, "and when I tire of them I'll find you another customer." After the first day or two, Linda-May found it very hard to get out of her warm bed, and Sadie gave up entirely. "I've got fifty cents," said she, "that's enough for one mountain child." But Linda-May did not think so.

Tom Grant's house was close to where the mushrooms grew. His mother was a widow not well off, and Tom had to get up early and do a great deal to help every morning. He leaned over the fence and spoke to Linda-May; he even offered to help gather the mushrooms, but the little girl took no notice at all.

"All right, Miss Stuck-up," said Tom.

One morning two young men came along, they stopped close to Linda-May.

"Oh, it's a little girl," said one of the men. "We want some bait; we are staying over at the hotel and we're going fishing, but little girls don't like to dig bait, do they?"

Linda-May shook her head. Then she thought of Tom. He had not been able to earn anything. She had heard him tell one of the boys he always had so much to do for his mother. But then she hadn't forgiven Tom—she never would.

"If you know any boy," said the young man, "I'd pay him a quarter and there's some other little jobs I could give him."

Linda-May hesitated. All at once she thought, "not seven times but 'seventy times seven.'" Perhaps Tom hadn't meant to be so mean, anyway—she pointed to the little cottage across the road.

"There's an awfully nice boy lives there," said she. "I'll call him."—Banner.

MARY'S CARNATION

The birds were all chattering and twittering as they settled for the night in the great elms in front of the hospital, and there was almost as much excitement on the big porch where the children slept, when Miss Glen, the night nurse, came on duty, looking so crisp and fresh in her clean uniform.

"Oh, Miss Glen!" "Oh, nurse!" cried a dozen eager voices from the little white beds.

Rosie, the big girl, who hadn't gone to bed yet, came sailing up in her wheel-chair.

"Oh, Miss Glen, such a good idea, we have it!" she said.

"What is it, dears?" asked Miss Glen, smiling into Rosie's shining black eyes.

"Oh, Miss Nurse! Rosie, she was readin' to us 'bout Mothers' Day an' lots of folks gives their mothers flowers on that day." Jennie, convalescing from typhoid, raised her cropped head to explain.

"Yes, white carnations!" said Miss Glen.

"Ja, I know, mine gross-mutter has 'em in her garden!" said blonde Freda eagerly—"only they's pink!"

"Well," stout Henry broke in, hobbling up on his crutches. "We all 'cided it would be nice to give our mothers a flower—it's next visitin' day an' we all got some money from las' time!"

"Could youse go to the market and buy us a bunch tomorrow, Miss Glen?" asked Rosie, wheeling closer, "then we kin have 'em for afternoon?"

"Yes, indeed, I'd love to!" replied Miss Glen, putting her arm about her big girl. "But now we must all be quite still and have our temperatures taken."

"Well, I'll take up the collection," volunteered Henry. "I won't break the temometer if I walk 'round easy!"

"All right, but be careful!" said Miss Glen smiling, for Henry had a plaster cast on one leg and his gait was not very "easy."

Then from pillow slips and under draw sheets and, alas! from little pink mouths, came pennies and nickles, and even Mandie, who wasn't very bright, had three green pennies in her moist palm.

"Mary's asleep, I won't bother her," said Henry, "she kin give hers in the morning!"

"It will be a lovely surprise," said Miss Glen, beaming, "and now we'll sing our evening hymn and drink our milk and go to sleep. See the sparrows are all settled down and you must be careful not to wake them!"

Soon all was quiet and dark and as Miss Glen went about her duties with shaded lanterns she heard a faint sigh from the corner where Mary Perkins lay, apparently asleep. Two large blue eyes, full of tears, looked up from the pillow when the nurse came to her bedside.

"Why, darling, what's the matter?" inquired Miss Glen, setting down her light. "Haven't you been asleep?"

"No, Miss Nurse," whispered Mary, choking her sobs, "I ain't got no money. Ma, she works hard all the time but there's all those kids at home to feed—Joe an' Agnes and Augustus an' de baby—she can't spare none for me! If dis ole leg was all right I could scrub steps or pick some coal and git a few cents—but I can't do nothin' now!' and she wept again quietly in her pillow.

"Well, well, cheer up, Mary, we'll find something you can do in the morning—your two hands are well and strong—don't worry!" said the nurse brightly, but the tears stood in her eyes, too, as she turned Mary's hot pillow and made the bed comfortable and smooth. Mary fell asleep trustfully.

At midnight when Dr. Carrol came on his rounds she told him the story and showed him the little collection. He was so big and kind and always knew what to do for sick bodies or hearts.

"I have some pasting in my scrap book that won't be too hard for her. I'll send for her to come to my office in the morning and she shall have her flowers—and earn 'em, too!" he said, finally.

So a very happy, though pale, little girl went for an elevator ride in a wheel-chair next morning. Dr. Carrol had not forgotten her, for her work was all laid out and not too hard for little hands. In half an hour when the doctor came in, it was neatly finished, and he laid a bright new quarter in Mary's palm.

"O-ah-all that!" she cried. "I don't git that much scrubbin' steps!"

"Well, this is office work," explained Dr. Carroll, "and here's Miss Glen, ready to go to market!" So Mary traveled back to her bed, thrillingly happy.

That afternoon the whole ward was dressed up with white carnations. The day nurses had given each child a glass for the flowers and they gleamed gaily by every bed. Even Mandie, who didn't know what it was all about, chirruped merrily about the ward, waving a flower and singing "Little Drops of Water—" which was the only song she knew, and the tired, work-worn mothers were cheered and surprised when they filed in the ward and were all presented with carnations by the happy children.

Mary's eyes were fastened on the door and brightened when at last her mother hurried in a little late, for she had just a few minutes from her work. She came straight to her daughter's bed.

"O, the pretty flowers! What, for me?" she cried breathlessly as Mary pinned them on her shabby black coat. "What for?"

"It's Mothers' Day," Mary explained, "an' all the mothers gits white carnations—I bought these just for you!"

Mary always thought her mother beautiful in spite of the lines of care and work on her face, but she had never seemed so lovely as she knelt by Mary's bed and took the little hands in her hard, rough ones.

"Why Mary child, how grand! I never had no flowers before in my life!" she said. "I'll keep these always! An' you bought 'em your own self. My word! I'm that proud!" Her eyes shone with happy tears.

That night when Miss Glen came back on duty she was greeted by a happy chorus and the gladdest face was Mary's. —Selected.

WHEN ROGER WON

Carrying pails, baskets, and sacks, a group of merry boys and girls went skipping along the winding trail that led down to the old Camden woods. There was to be a nutting party that day, a nutting contest. The one who gathered the most nuts in a certain time was to be given a prize.

There was the chatter of happy voices and the rustle of yellow leaves as many feet moved rapidly through them. A red squirrel frisked across the path and up a tree where he sat pertly and watched the strange visitors. Presently another squirrel was peaking at the boys and girls from a safe distance. Then there was the curious chatter of squirrel voices from the tree tops. Only someone who understands squirrel language could have told whether the squirrels were pleased or displeased at the coming of the boys and girls into their home neighborhood.

"I think this is the best place to begin," Mr. Maxson, the young man who was to direct the contest, was saying a few minutes later. "You may pick up nuts wherever you like. But because those who rove about much are seldom winners in a nutting contest, I would advise you to 'stick to your bush' as the old berry pickers used to say. I'll blow this whistle when the time is up, and you are to bring your nuts to this big tree."

Such a hurrying and scampering about as there was! Each boy and each girl wanted to find the place where the nuts were the thickest. And one couldn't tell where the nuts were until the dry leaves were poked off.

Soon every one except one of the boys was busy picking up nuts. That boy was Roger Martin. He dashed from one tree to another, picking up a handful of nuts in one place and then hurrying off somewhere else. Presently he left the other pickers and went deeper into the woods.

"Roger runs around so, he won't win," remarked little Susie Smith to her neighbor.

"Yes," briefly agreed the other little girl who was too busy gathering nuts to take time to talk much.

Pails were filled, small baskets were heaped up, then larger ones. And some of the sacks were filled when Mr. Maxson's whistle blew.

Laughing and shouting, the boys and girls came tugging their nuts to the big tree where they were to be measured.

"You've done fine!" Mr. Maxson declared. "There'll be ever so many nuts to be sent to those children who live where no nuts grow."

But the boys and girls were waiting to hear something else. "Who do you think will win the prize?" one would say, and then another would ask the same question.

Suddenly there was a great shout, for Roger was coming, dragging a great sack of nuts, ever so many more than any one else had picked.

"Roger will win! Roger will win!" they chorused.

And Roger did win. It was only a few minutes later that Mr. Maxson was handing him a book bound in brown. "Autumn Sports" was written on the cover, and all the pickers had hoped to be the winner of it.

"You must have found very good picking to get that many nuts, Roger," remarked Mr. Maxson.

"Yes," the boy admitted slowly.

"We didn't think you would win, Roger, because you moved around so much," one of the boys said as the party of pickers started home.

"You must have worked fast while you were out of sight," added another.

Roger kicked the dry leaves out of the path as he walked along and said only that he found a good many nuts.

Mrs. Martin was pleased when her son brought home the prize. But for some reason Roger didn't seem very glad to have been the one that picked up the most nuts.

The next morning when Roger's father announced he was going down to the woods to cut some logs, the boy asked if he might go with him. Then he explained why it was he wanted to go back.

While the dry leaves rustled and the squirrels chattered as they had the day before, Roger gathered nuts hour after hour. Because it was rather a lonesome place there that day, Roger whistled as he worked. The whistling made the squirrels sit up and listen pertly.

It was nearly night when Roger and his father drove home. Because the boys and girls were to meet that night to pack the nuts that were to be sent away, the winner of the prize had to eat his supper as fast as he could.

Even then Roger was the last one to arrive at the meeting place. He carried an oblong package as he met Mr. Maxson near the door.

"I brought back the prize, Mr. Maxson. I didn't earn it yesterday," Roger said frankly as he held out the package.

The leader looked surprised and all the boys and girls listened while the boy hurried on to explain. He said he had found the most nuts the day before because he had discovered a squirrels' storehouse in a hollow tree. "I got to thinking last night," Roger continued, "how disappointed those squirrels would be when they found their winter nuts gone. So I went back today and refilled their storehouse. But I don't deserve this prize," he finished, "for I wouldn't have had the most nuts if I had picked up the nuts the way the rest did."

"I believe you have earned the prize today, Roger, while you were working to put those nuts back," one of the boys said quickly.

"Yes, I think you did," another said and then some one else agreed until almost all the boys and girls were talking at once.

"Yes," smiled Mr. Maxson. "I believe you did win, Roger. But you won today instead of yesterday."—Ina E. Lindsley.

LET HIM BEAR YOU

An officer who was engaged in the siege of Sebastopol tells the following incident: "My general wishing to send some orders to one of the regiments, I had to pass across an open space exposed to the full fire of the batteries. I got across in safety, and as I was coming back I saw a little drummer boy lying wounded, who, if he were left where he was lying, would almost to a certainty be killed. I went to him and told him I was going to carry him back with me. He objected, and declared that I could not carry him. As I carried him, he was most restless, declaring he was too heavy, and tried constantly to put one foot to the ground 'to help us along,' as he said. All the time he kept on saying, 'I am sure I am too heavy for you, sir. Please let me try and walk myself.' At last I was obliged to put him down for a minute under the shelter of a large monument, and tell him that he must keep quiet while I carried him, or he might sacrifice both our lives. With great difficulty, on starting again, I got him to lie still in my arms, and was able to carry him to a safe shelter. Next morning I went to the hospital to see how he was, and I then reminded him how difficult he had made it for me to help him, owing to his belief that, crippled though he was from his wound, he could yet do better for himself than by trusting entirely to me. 'Ah!' said he, looking up in my face with a smile, 'but I did not know, sir, that you was so strong!'" How often does the sinner hinder the Saviour's interposition through trying to help by his own work? Have we yet realized that He is "so strong?"—Sabbath Reading.

ONWARD, TRAVELER!

Traveler, faint not on the road;
Droop not in the parching sun;
Onward, onward, with thy load,
Till the night be won.
Swerve not, though thy bleeding feet
Fain the narrow path would leave;
From the burden and the heat
Thou shalt rest at eve.

By the mystery of thy trust,
By the grandeur of that hour
When mortality and dust
Clothed eternal Power;
By the purple robe of shame,
The mockery, insulting rod,
By the anguish that o'ercame
The incarnate God:

Faint not! fail not! be thou strong,
Cast away distrust and fear;
Though the weary day seems long,
Yet the night is near.
Friends and kindred wait beyond—
They who passed the trial pure;
Traveler, by that holy bond,
Shrink not to endure.

THE HABIT OF PRAYER

When a pump is frequently used, but little pains are necessary to obtain water; it flows out at the first stroke, because the water is high. But if the pump has not been used for a long time, the water gets low, and when it is wanted, you must pump a great while, and the stream comes only after great efforts. And so it is with prayer; if we are instant in it and faithful to it, every little circumstance awakens the disposition to pray, and desires and words are always ready. But if we neglect prayer, it is difficult for us to pray, for the water in the well gets low.

The human heart is a leaky vessel; and in a world like this the tendency of spirituality, like that of water, is downward. If we neglect prayer, little by little we soon lose its spirit; and the spirit declining, its habit is soon laid aside, or retained only in the form; and as the next step the form itself will soon be given up, the soul become prayerless, and the heart and life alike forsaken of God.—Selected.

BEHOLD I STAND AND KNOCK

It was midnight when a traveler,
One I had not seen before,
Woke me from my easeful slumber
Knocking at my chamber door.

And I heard His gentle pleading
Saying, "Open," as He knocks,
"For the dew rests on my forehead
And the night drops fill my locks."

But I thought to make excuses,
"I have put my garments by
And my body's cleansed for sleeping—
There's an inn that standeth nigh."

Ere I ceased, the pleading traveler
Put His hand through the door,
And my heart was moved within me,
For the hand was wounded sore.

'Twas the hand of my Redeemer,
Straight I put my garments on,
Quickly then threw wide the lattice.
But, behold, my Lord had gone.

Then I sought, but could not find Him;
When I called He gave no heed;
Enemies took away my mantle,
And my soul was sore in need.

I adjure you, oh ye watchmen,
By the stars that shine above,
If you see my soul's beloved,
Tell Him I am sick from love.

Tell Him I am filled with longing,
That my spirit knows no rest,
That my heart is always open
For my Lord to be my guest.

AS A SECULAR JOURNALIST SEES IT

For a clergyman to remain within the membership and even the ministry of a church whose doctrines he repudiates, is evidence of a lack of stamina which must fall beneath the contempt of all normal-minded men and women. To be willing to take advantage of the opportunity for a hearing afforded by such profession and at the same time to use it for the purpose of subverting or destroying the institution to which he ostensibly yields allegiance, is a violation of the tenets of common honesty. . . . It is about time for the rank and file of the churches of this country to rise up and demand that their disloyalists be required to do what honorable men need not be asked to do—get out under their own flag and fight from the side of the breastworks on which they belong, rather than to seek betrayal of the camp from within. Unless such rebellion is raised, vast injury is sure to be done to the cause of religion within the next few years.—The National Republic.

THE CROSS-ROADS

Lord, I am at the cross-roads!
O! help me choose aright,
For blinded is my vision
And darker grows the night;
Lord, help me in my weakness,
I would not go astray;
One road is broad and luring,
One is the "narrow way."

Lord, I am at the cross-roads!
It is my hour of trial;
One leads to wealth and honor,
One leads to self-denial:
The gods of earth are seeking
To win me to their side;
But O, thou God of heaven,
I would with Thee abide!

Lord, I am at the cross-roads!
One road is very fair,
And they that tread its mosses
Are decked with jewels rare:
I hear their careless laughter,
Their songs and revelry;
But, ah! this road of pleasure
Leads far away from Thee.

Lord, I am at the cross-roads!
One road is rough and bare;
I see the crimson blood-drops
Of One who traveled there:
He drank the cup of sorrow
That flooded o'er the brim;
But He is crowned the Victor—
And I will walk with Him!

LIVING OUR RELIGION

A certain evangelist we have heard sometimes uses this illustration:

"Two merchants went to a revival service to listen to the preacher, a man of some reputation, and a preacher of the whole Gospel. These men were competitors in business, and each one knew the heartburnings that arose in their business life. After some nights, one of them went to the altar as a seeker. The other was under a measure of conviction, but unyielding. As he saw his competitor go forward, he said within himself: 'I will watch him, and if he lives it one year I will believe there is really something in it, and will become a Christian myself.' For one whole year he watched that man. There was a complete change in his whole life—business life, social life, every-day life; he could not find one flaw, and, at the end of the year, the watcher sought and found God in the forgiveness of sins. He then went to the merchant whose life he had watched so closely, and said to him, 'For one whole year I have watched you, and your life has convinced me there is something real in religion.' How glad the merchant was that he had lived straight. One failure might have wrecked a soul. Actions speak louder than profession."—Selected.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

MISS MARY C. MCCULLOCH, Editor

FLAT ROCK W. H. M. S.

The Home Missionary Society of Flat Rock church, Vance charge, met with Mrs. U. J. Parrott on Tuesday afternoon, May 15, with the president, Miss Mary V. White, presiding. Mrs. U. J. Parrott conducted the devotions. The secretary called the roll and read the minutes of the last month's meeting. Then came the reports. An interesting feature of this meeting was a report of two organizations of young people. The program was then taken up: Reading of Chapter C, by Miss Mary V. White; reading, "Bearing the Cross," by Mrs. U. J. Parrott. The society then adjourned, after which the hostess served delicious refreshments. Four visitors were present for this meeting.

On April 24, the auxiliary met in the home of Mrsfl F. M. White. An enthusiastic business session was held. Miss Mary V. White gave a most interesting report of the branch meeting, giving us new ideas from which much good may be accomplished.

MRS. T. P. HESTER, Sec'y.

MINUTES OF THE WOMAN'S BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS

The thirty-fifth annual session of the Board of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church convened in First Church, Washington, D. C., May 12-15, with the president, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, in the chair. Mrs. M. O. Everett, of the entertaining city, who had blazed the trail for our work in Wolf County, Kentucky, led the opening devotion, using the subject, "Hear My Voice." Dr. T. R. Woodford, the superintendent at Pine Ridge, Ky., school, read the scripture, Psalm 55. It was most fitting for these two, who have given so much of themselves for the mountain people, to be together on this program, using the assigned theme.

Mrs. H. E. Risler, president of the Washington-Virginia Branch and member of First Church, graciously extended a welcome, to which Mrs. A. P. Badger delightfully responded. All but three of the Board officers were present and responded to the roll call.

The registrations showed there were 15 branches represented, coming from 19 different states. Those branches being represented for the first time were Texas (organized last July and Alabama.

There were five branches with full quota of delegates, namely: Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, Pittsburgh, and Iowa-Missouri.

All Methodist Protestants who were visitors were invited within the bar and extended the privilege of the floor.

Rev. W. L. Heitz, of Indiana, very graciously led the singing throughout the session and Mrs. E. A. McWilliams, of Mississippi, presided at the piano.

Mrs. A. G. Dixon, in the president's message, gave a brief but comprehensive review of the work being done at the various places, and urged the workers to continue in the same persistent manner which has heretofore been manifest, and especially emphasized prayerful efforts.

The corresponding secretary's report showed growth along every line and increasing interest. A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. A. G. Liebelt for her untiring efforts and good report.

During the first day's session, the following visitors were introduced: Dr. J. H. Straughn, director of the Centennial Gratiture Gift; Rev. W. L. Heitz and Rev. D. W. Hetrick, of Indiana; Rev. Messrs. Fuller and Howard, of Onondago Conference; Rev. Messrs. Hodges, Nicholson and Turkington, of Washington, D. C.

There were eight branches who overpaid their apportionment, namely: Easter, Iowa-Missouri, Maryland, Pittsburgh, Alabama, West Virginia, Indiana, and Michigan.

The secretary of literature reported that she had mailed out 4,500 programs, 2,942 Five-Fold Booklets, 2,712 Shining Light Booklets, 883 temperance reports, 1,348 leaflets, 377 pageants, 74 adult study books and 25 junior study books.

Secretary of stewardship reported she had sent out more than 600 pledge-cards and could have used more if she had had them, and that as far as reported we have 767 tithers, Indiana leading with 278.

The secretary of Buds of Hope reported she had sent out 625 certificates during the past year.

The secretary of thank-offering and blessing boxes reported that Eastern Branch made the greatest gain in thank-offering over last year, the total from all branches being $5,412.72, an increase of $738.31 over last year. Sixteen branches used the blessing boxes.

Our most faithful treasurer, Mrs. W. B. Gilligan, reported that receipts had amounted to $25,466.93 with disbursements of $23,658.86, leaving a balance of $1,808.07.

On Saturday afternoon Rev. A. R. Corn came to the meeting and took a moving picture of the members and visitors at this session, afterward showing on the screen the various institutions of our work, the Children's Home, Bethel Home, and Pine Ridge, which courtesy was greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

Mrs. J. A. Rhodes, of Indiana, led the devotional for the Saturday afternoon session, using the theme, "Hear His Voice and Harden Not Your Hearts," taken from Psalm 95.

After the various committees had been appointed, Mrs. Arthur Hinkle gave an interesting report of the new department of efficiency.

The report on young people's work was most gratifying.

The secretary of temperance and moral reforms stressed the Christian's duty of so laboring that the Protestant and a dry candidate be selected for president of the United States.

Saturday evening our worthy president, Mrs. Dixon, led the devotions, in the absence of the appointed one, using the subject, "A Voice in Singing." Miss Bessie Eiss led in prayer, following which all sang America. Rev. Mr. Hetrick closed the devotions with prayer.

The field secretary, Miss Mabelle Shaffer, read her report, showing she had traveled 18,480 miles by rail and 2,800 miles by auto, creating 26 W. H. M. societies, four Y. P. M. societies, and one Missions Club, having worked in seven annual conferences.

During the reading of the branch reports it was generally noticeable that increased interest was manifest and a general progress was being made.

San Angelo, Texas, of the Colorado-Texas conference, has taken on new life. The first missionary societies of the North Mississippi conference were reported just created, one at Sandy Flats, Tenn., the other at Hopewell, Corinth, Miss.

Greetings were sent to the W. F. M. S. which was in session at High Point, North Carolina.

Considerable time was used in the round table discussion of what auxiliaries have done to create interest and raise money, which proved very helpful.

On Sunday, Mother's Day, the Rev. Mr. Turkington preached a very forceful and helpful sermon on "The Still Small Voice." The special Mother's Day music was effective and enjoyed.

At the night service Rev. Mr. Turkington sang a beautiful solo and the Hon. Wm. C. Hammer, Congressman from the Seventh District of North Carolina, the husband of our Mrs. Hammer, addressed those assembled on "Law Enforcement," and he strenuously recommended the prevention of crime rather than the punishment of crime.

On Sunday afternoon many attended the missionary pageant at the Y. P. Centennial Convention in Baltimore.

Monday morning Mrs. John Feth, of Cincinnati, led the devotion service, using the theme, "They Know His Voice," and read John 1:19. The Rev. Mr. Turkington sang, and Rev. Homer Casto, of Bethel Home, offered prayer.

A message of condolence was sent to the family of the late Rev. Mr. Ganes, who had been killed on the way to the Y. P. Conference at Baltimore on Thursday.

The report of Mrs. George Greaves, editor of the Woman's Home Missionary Society Department in the Missionary Record, was read. She urged more news to be sent her from the field, more auxiliaries to report. When you have any good news or some good worth-while result from some project, send it to her that others may know of it.

At 11 o'clock busses came and all the people were taken to the White House and were given audience by President Coolidge, who shook hands with all and told our president, Mrs. Dixon, he was glad they came. This audience was arranged by Mrs. W. J. Brewer, of the hostess church, and it was appreciated by every one.

At the opening of the afternoon session Miss Mollye Stewart, of Louisiana, led the devotion, on the subject, "His Voice Was Like the Voice of Many Waters."

Dr. T. R. Woodford then gave his most interesting and looked-for report. In this report we found that students' board, room and tuition amounted to $10,321.40—that $2,604.81 had been realized from the sale of old clothes, that at the end of this closing year over and above all expenses there is a cash balance in hand of $1,312.60 with which to begin this year's work. The newest, nicest gift that has come to Pine Ridge is a Thor washing machine, which we rejoiced to learn was the gift of Miss Lettie Kinkaid. Last summer the work was a drag and no real improvement could be done because of lack of money in the treasury and none coming in. All through the sessions, at this meeting, our president and others continuously urged that one-twelfth of each branch's apportionment be paid in monthly so improvements may go forward and the workers not be called on to make such a personal sacrifice as has been done this past year.

During this session a most cordial greeting was received from Mrs. George Tillotson, recording secretary for the Board of W. F. M. S., and upon motion the body stood in appreciation of this greeting.

A rising vote of thanks was tendered to the central committee, who so faithfully worked throughout the year to keep things moving; their report showed that considerable business had been transacted.

Miss Edna Dexter's report shows she is a real community worker, visiting homes, creating Sunday schools and seeing that they are kept up, superintending them and teaching in them. She also sees that programs for special days are prepared, travels over many miles of rocky, muddy roads, fording streams and climbing mountains, when the "bridle paths" are too muddy and creeks too high, she helps in our store and has for three months visited churches in Onondaga and Maryland Branches.

Miss Bessie Eiss, who is a new worker among us, having accepted the work in Dilonvale, Ohio, only last November, was very optimistic and showed a zeal for the work in his new field where opportunities for service are unlimited.

Mrs. F. C. Cooke, president of Pittsburgh Branch, read the report from our mission at Second M. P. Church for foreign-speaking people in Pittsburgh. The report showed that Miss Pearl White, our social worker there, was generally busy and that in the sewing classes, kindergarten and cooking classes, the Boy and Girl Scouts, and the library and Sunday school, she was doing a good work and helping many to be "better Americans."

The "Home for Business Women" has been formally opened by the Maryland Branch after these several years of struggle and effort. It is a credit to this branch work. During the Y. P. Centennial Conventiona, 30 young ladies were roomed there and it will also be used during General Conference. It has not been opened for business girls yet but will be at once following General Conference; just now they are busy helping house the many visitors to Baltimore. There are several applicants awaiting this opening.

After reading the report of the Children's Home, many questions were asked concerning it, which answers helped all to see the great need there. There are 74 children in the Home, "our love home," and 146 on the waiting list. This surely presents a great need for larger dormitory space. Let us all pray and work to that end that we have this dormitory before next Board meeting. They need all kinds of bedding there, too, really need it. Will you help meet this need? For information on this, write Mr. Auman, Supt. M. P. Children's Home, High Point, N. C.

Rev. Homer Casto, our beloved superintendent of Bethel Home, a tubercular home for Christian men and women, gave a brief history of this work. His rehearsal of many experiences and his faith in God, his assurance of appreciation of all kindnesses and cooperation, affected his interested audience; at the close of his talk, all stood pledging prayers and co-operation. If any desire to send material gifts to Bethel Home, remember bed blankets, sheets, pillow cases, jellies and fruits are always desirable and generally needed.

Mrs. A. P. Badger gave a very good report of the meeting of the Council of Women for Home Missions, which was heard with interest. Mrs. A. G. Liebelt, who also attended this meeting, read an interesting paper on the Indian and immigrant work. A motion prevailed that $100 be sent to the Council of Women for Home Missions for this work. Twenty-five dollars of this amount is dues from our Board to the Council. This is the first time we have ever paid more than the dues and we are happy to take this progressive step.

Following a season of prayer at the opening of the evening service, the committees began to report. All were helpful and will make our work more successful, but only a few can be mentioned here.

The committee on banners and efficiency reported:

Indiana received the membership banner.

Pittsburgh received the thank-offering banner.

Ohio received the Buds of Hope banner.

North Carolina received the Mission Club banner.

North Carolina received the Home Circle banner.

Maryland received the Young People's banner.

The secretary of scholarship maintenance reported that $2,712.34 had been received this year. The committee on scholarship maintenance urges every auxiliary and Sunday school to make some gift to this fund, which means so much to our boys and girls of the mountains.

Our reports show that there are 48 new life members, 26 new memorial and 17 new perpetual members. It was voted, after being urged by the committee on special memberships, to urge every member of our auxiliaries to be some special member. Would it not be fine if every auxiliary could report next May they each had at least one new special membership? Let's try it.

Mrs. C. F. Stroup, who had some most interesting posters on stewardship, was granted permission to display same at the exhibit room at General Conference.

The student loan fund was discussed, and as we have a student, Mr. Joe Elkins, a graduate of Pine Ridge this spring, who desires our help to further his education in preparing for the ministry, and as there was only about $50 in said fund, which department was created only last year, $151 was pledged and partly paid to help swell the student loan fund so that we could at least loan Mr. Elkins $200 throughout the year.

The nominating committee reported as follows:

President, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Liberty, N. C.

First vice-president, Mrs. H. E. Risler, 11 4th St., N. E., Washington, D. C.

Second vice-president, Mrs. B. S. Gadd, Prospect Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

Corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. G. Liebelt, 116 Annabelle St., Mt. Wash., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Recording secretary, Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer, Asheboro, N. C.

Treasurer, Mrs. W. B. Gilligan, 3406 Elgin Ave., Baltimore, Md.

Auditor, Mrs. T. R. Mathews, 3702 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

Secretary of Christian Stewardship, Mrs. C. F. Stroup, Saginaw, Mich.

Secretary of Thank-Offering and Blessing Boxes, Mrs. C. W. Howerson, 431 Maynard Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

Secretary of Buds of Hope, Mrs. J. A. Harp, Luray, Mo.

Secretary of Scholarships, Mrs. Charles Knight, 2304 N. 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Secretary of Life, Memorial and Perpetual Members, Mrs. J. S. Piper, 103 Lara St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Secretary of Student Loan Fund, Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville, N. C.

Secretary of Literature, Mrs. O. W. Cole, Jenera, Ohio.

Secretary of Temperance and Moral Reform, Mrs. W. H. Bowen, Avon, N. J.

Secretary of Efficiency, Mrs. Arthur Hinkle, 405 Spring St., Fairmont, W. Va.

Director of Young People's Work, Mrs. C. S. Kidd, 755 East 89th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Historian, Mrs. A. P. Badger, 1111 Edmondson Ave., Baltimore, Md.

Editor, Mrs. George B. Greaves, Fern Bank, Ohio.

The Board elected four representatives to sit at General Conference, as follows:

Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Mrs. A. G. Liebelt, Mrs. W. B. Gilligan and Mrs. A. P. Badger.

All matters pertaining to the W. H. M. S. were left to the representatives to General Conference.

One could not close this report without saying something about the lovely way the ladies at First M. P. Church entertained us. We all had fine homes and the meals furnished at the church were unexcelled.

It was a great temptation to those who for the first time were in the Capitol City to go sight-seeing, but it is most commendable that but few did so, the most of the women coming for business and stayed for business throughout the sessions. Only those who were continually there realize the full value of good derived therefrom. Truly, all have said this was the best meeting of our history.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

June 3—Jesus Facing Betrayal and Death.

Scripture Basis—Mark 14:1-42.

Golden Text—Not what I will, but what thou wilt. Mark 14:36.

The Anointing at Bethany

After sunset each day during Passion Week, our Lord retired to Bethany where dwelt His friends, Mary, Martha and Lazarus. It seems that on one of the evenings Jesus was the guest of one Simon the leper, which doubtless means one of his friends and followers who felt a deep sense of gratitude to him for cleansing him from the dreaded disease, leprosy. It is conjectured that he was either the husband of Mary or Martha.

While reclining at the table, Mary "the beloved," we may justly call her, expressed her love for her Friend and Master by a special anointing of his head with ointment from far away India, spikenard, which is estimated to have been worth $50. This was more costly than it would seem to us in our wealthy land, but were it changed to present-day purchasing power it would amount to between $600 and $900.

Despite the indignation of some of the guests, Judas in particular, Jesus commended her for the deed, for it was her way of expressing her love for him. The ointment was not wasted; the deep sentiment behind it sanctified the deed as holy. And as Jesus foretold, this act is spoken of today in the preaching of the gospel in her honor. Sentiment is not to be despised or even evaluated in dollars and cents.

Preparation for the Passover Feast

Judas Iscariot, the greedy treasurer of the Twelve, sought opportunity to bargain with the chief priests for the life of his Lord. The money consideration agreed upon seems to have been about $18, which was the price of a slave and was equivalent to four months' pay for an ordinary laborer. Gladly these despisers of the Master handed out the money and greedily the betrayer grasped it. The contract was sealed and the plot laid.

In accordance with his policy of observing the Jewish feasts, Jesus sent two of his faithful disciples into the Holy City to prepare the Passover. "Follow a man with a pitcher," he directed. This was his way of laying the responsibility of locating the place upon the two, for he could have just as well told them the house. It was not a difficult thing to do, however, for it was unusual for a man to be carrying water in a pitcher, especially in the morning. It is thought that the man was John Mark, and the home was that of Mary, his mother.

The Lord's Supper Instituted

The Passover feast was prepared and the Lord and his family of twelve were grouped about the table. A startling assertion was made by Jesus—"One of you shall betray me." None dare ask, "Lord, is it he?" but one by one they inquired, "Lord, is it I?" It made much difference as to which pronoun was used, and it does today. Should we be more ready to use "I" instead of "he," we'd find less cause to heap criticisms upon our brothers and sisters in Christ.

Jesus answered them by stating the sign that should be used to disclose the identity of the traitor. The cakes of unleaven bread were distributed by him and were dipped in the bowl of sauce before eaten. When Jesus and Judas dipped their cakes into the bowl together, they all became aware of the guilty one. John tells us that Judas immediately went out, "and it was night." Very significant is that closing clause.

It was not until the betrayer left the company that Jesus instituted what is generally known as the Lord's Supper. It was then that he broke the bread as symbolical of his broken body and distributed the wine as significant of his shed blood. Although they may not have fully understood the meaning of this ceremony, yet we can imagine that it was a solemn occurrence. May we ask ourselves if we partake of the eucharist with as great solemnity as we should? Are our thoughts centered upon the experiences surrounding this occasion and their meaning to us? Lord, help us not to commune unworthily!

The Spiritual Battle and Victory

Concluding this ceremony, they sang a hymn, crossed the valley of the Kidron, and entered the Garden of Gethsemane on the slope of Olivet. The disloyalty of them all was foretold, likewise the denial of Peter; but they emphatically asserted their faithfulness to the end. The "Inner Circle," Peter, James and John, were taken within the garden gate and left there while the Lord went further into the blackness of the garden; where he alone fought the battle of our redemption. Doubtless Satan was present, and was responsible for the agony of the struggle. But the Father sent his angel to comfort his Son, and in the assurance of his support and approval Jesus committed himself to his Father's way. Consequently the sinful world has been redeemed; salvation has come to us who have accepted! "All hail the power of Jesus' name!"

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

In a recent speech before the British and Foreign Bible Society, Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of Great Britain, paid high tribute to the Bible. He said in part:

"The Bible works in strange ways and no living man can tell or know how that book, in its journeyings throughout the world, has started an inlividual soul 10,000 different places into a new life, a new belief, a new conception, and a new faith. So much of the time in this world we seem to be carrying on our struggle in twilight or fog—friends, and men who ought to be friends, sitting blindly by in the melee and wounding men who ought to be their brothers. Nothing but the light from that Book can lighten that twilight or dispel the fog."

—Rev. J. F. Minnis will preach at Calvary church Sunday morning. It is possible that the pastor, Rev. C. W. Bates, will have returned from General Conference at that time, but Rev. Mr. Minnis will occupy the pulpit at the morning service. President S. W. Taylor will speak at the evening service.

MEN OF MANY NATIONS DISCUSS WORLD PEACE

An international conference on world peace, commemorating the one-hundredth anniversary of the founding of the American Peace Society, was held recently at Cleveland, Ohio. Ambassadors and ministers to the United States from many foreign countries and noted men and women of this country attended the meetings.

Theodore E. Burton, Representative in Congress from Ohio, president of the American Peace Society, gave the opening address of the conference. He traced the history of the society and outlined its purposes and achievements. The society was founded May 8, 1828, by William Ladd, a New England social reformer, and David Low Dodge, a rich merchant, of New York.

"War," said Congressman Burton, "has been put on the defensive and the attainment of world justice and peace has become the chief concern of statesmen, diplomats, educators, churchmen, and men and women of financial and economic interests. The next one hundred years will find the nations appreciably nearer the goal of a warless world. There is no cause for which men have hoped and prayed and died that is worthy of so much attention."

Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, criticized newspapers that are constantly predicting wars. "There is more joy on earth," said he, "over two sinners who break each other's heads than over ninety and eight just men who keep the peace. This is, then, I am convinced, one of the principal obstacles in the way of educating men in the ways of peace. In spite of the journalists who are always predicting wars, every year that passes sees an improvement in the European situation."

Said Paul Claudel, the French Ambassador: "Your society for many years has dedicated its steady and powerful effort to the commendation and establishment of peace among nations, and for many years the only answer was the flashing of guns and the hurrah of marching armies. But today another answer is coming to you. It is only a whisper, but it is a whisper which is breathed from every point of the compass."

Dr. von Prittwitz-Gaffron, the German Ambassador, read a message from Foreign Minister Stressemann, of Germany, as follows: "The bloodshed of the last European war would seem to have proven definitely that humanity did not want peace. In truth, however, that great catastrophe has, more than any other happening, aroused in the hearts of millions the yearning for justice. The American Peace Society may be assured that the German people welcome its work with deep sympathy and with the cordial will of co-operation."

John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, attended the meetings and made an address. "Education," he said, "is a more potent factor in the promotion of world peace than either politics or diplomacy."—Current Events.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point.—Examinations are in progress at High Point College this week, and commencement exercises will begin Thursday evening with the oratorical and essayist contest at 8 o'clock. Next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in the First church, the baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Rev. C. D. Sinkinson, D. D., of Atlantic City, N. J., who is one of the outstanding leaders of the denomination. A vesper service will be held on the campus at 6:45 p. m. President Andrews will return from Baltimore, where he is in attendance upon General Conference, in time to deliver the farewell address to the senior class on Sunday evening. Forty-five young men and women will receive degrees on Monday, and Hon. O. Max Gardner, of Shelby, N. C., will give the address in the college auditorium. Thirteen members of the graduating class live in High Point. These exercises will be exceedingly interesting and unique, closing as they will the first four years of the work of the college.

At the close of Dr. Spahr's sermon last Sunday morning he announced the receipt of a message from Capt. A. M. Rankin, now in Baltimore, to Rev. E. L. Ballard, asking for instructions to be wired him to invite the next session of General Conference to meet here in First church in May, 1932. The congregation voted to ask for it, and a message to that effect was sent. Dr. Spahr said that if accorded the privilege of entertaining this body of distinguished men and women, we should consider it a very great honor indeed.

A very sweet and interesting service last Sunday morning was the christening of Robert Sherwood Allred, the beautiful little son of Prof. and Mrs. J. Hobart Allred, by Dr. Spahr. It was the occasion of the little boy's first birthday. His parents are among our most highly esteemed members, Professor Allred being the head of the Department of Romance Languages in High Point College, and Mrs. Allred is a member of the choir and an earnest worker in the Missionary Societies and other organizations of the church.

The general monthly meeting of the two missionary societies was held Monday afternoon at the church with a good attendance. Mrs. Ben Moore, the new president of the Home Society, was in the chair, and opened the exercises with a beautiful talk on prayer and the reading of an excellent extract on its power and efficacy. The Home Society was credited with being a Standard Auxiliary or 80 per cent efficient at Branch Meeting in Greensboro. Mrs. E. L. Douglas, the untiring secretary of High Point College Loan Fund, reported $48 paid in with additional pledges of $16. Interesting reports of proceedings of the recent Branch meeting in Grace church, Greensboro, were given by the delegates. Reports from the Executive Board Meeting of the Foreign Society, which met here last week, were heard, and a rising vote of thanks was accorded to Mrs. R. D. Neese for her faithful, efficient work as chairman of meals and young people's banquet Friday evening, which proved to be a most enjoyable occasion as well as a success financially. It was suggested that our society hold one meeting in the form of a picnic some time during the summer.

Mr. C. E. Bulla was leader of Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening, the topic being "How to Train for Larger Leadership."

The teacher-training class under the able leadership of Prof. P. E. Lindley is progressing nicely, and everybody is invited to attend Wednesday evening.

An effort to make some needful additions to our Sunday school library is being put forth by the Workers' Council and a goal of $100 has been set to be raised for the purchase of new books.

The engagement of Miss Eugenia Williams, of Greensboro, and Mr. Charles Reginald Strause, of Chambersburg, Penn., was announced at a party last Saturday afternoon at the Jefferson Standard Club, the wedding to take place June 5th. A number of High Point College girls attended this delightful affair, and will be bridesmaids in the wedding. The bride-to-be is a daughter of Mr. R. F. Williams, and was a member of the graduating class of High Point College last year.

Rev. and Mrs. E. Lester Ballard returned Saturday afternoon from a trip to Baltimore, where they were guests of Mr. Ballard's parents, and attended the Young People's Convention.

Miss Gladys Kivett attended the Baraca-Philathea Convention in Durham as a delegate from the A. M. Idol Philathea Class.

Miss E. Vera Idol, of the English Department of High Point College, will make a tour of Europe during the summer, sailing from New York in June.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—The church here and all its organizations have been doing splendid work for the Lord. Rev. G. I. Ferree, the pastor, is an earnest worker, and with him at the helm things have to move forward.

The Sunday school has been having an average attendance of over a hundred which is very good. Mr. T. B. Nalley, the superintendent, is to be commended for his faithfulness.

Home-Coming and Mother's Day, being observed together again this year, was a success. Every one enjoyed meeting old friends and acquaintances who had moved away and possibly not been back since they left. During the morning hour Rev. H. B. Hendry, of Concord, N. C., delivered an impressive address on "Mother," and also told some interesting things about the history of our denomination. In the afternoon Rev. Mr. Kendrick, of Central, S. C., gave a good talk. The quartet from Central College rendered several selections, which were thoroughly enjoyed. The day passed too quickly, but every one went away looking forward to Home-Coming Mother's Day, which will be observed again next year.

Mr. R. F. Wyatt, the oldest and one of the most loyal members of our church, gave an instructive and interesting talk last Sunday morning on the history of the church. According to the records, it was organized before 1850, making it next to the oldest church in the North Carolina M. P. Conference. We are justly proud of our ancestors, who were pioneer Methodist Protestants and the records Fairview has made during these years.

We wish to thank each one who contributed to the fund for painting the church inside and out. It helped it quite a bit.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferree and family are planning to go to Asheboro, N. C., for a two weeks' visit. They came here from there, so it will be like going back home. Mr. Ferree has secured Mr. Carey, of Clemson College, to fill his appointments while he is away.

REPORTER.

English Street.—The pastor wishes to say a few things through the Herald, although our reporter has kept the Herald readers pretty well informed as to the work of our church.

Our work is going along very well. We have held our spring revival meeting. We secured the help of Rev. C. G. Isley, of Bonlee. He came to us on Tuesday, April 17, and remained through the fifth Sunday, doing all the preaching. Brother Isley did good preaching and we had a very good revival. The church was revived; had eight conversions; nine joined the church, three by profession and six by letter.

Sunday, May 13, was another good day with us. Mother's Day was observed, the pastor preaching on a subject appropriate to the occasion. At the close of the service four young people united with the church by profession of faith.

The church and city of High Point was saddened on Sunday morning, May 13, to hear of the death of L. R. Gibson, who was one of the leading men of the church and city.

On Saturday, May 12, the pastor united in marriage Mr. Joseph Merritt and Pearl Garner. Saturday night of the same day Mr. Noah Wood and Esther Robbins were united in marriage by the writer. We wish for both of these young couples a long and happy life together.

D. I. GARNER, Pastor.

Asheville.—Last Sunday we were blessed with two delightful messages. In the morning Herbert Caskey spoke on the name that Our Father would give unto us; that Peter gave to Jesus the use of his boat and nets and time, and his will; and was blessed with a big haul of fishes; and was given a new name.

At night Mr. VanMeter gave to us an unusually helpful message: "Faith Accepts God's Covenant and Promise. Hope Anticipates It. Patience Waits for It." There were a number of visitors at both services. We are glad to have Brother Walter Harden and his family, from Julian, to attend all our services.

Mrs. G. D. Eller entertained our Missionary societies last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shaw recently went on a visit to Tennessee. Mr. Shaw's father was an M. P. minister in Tennessee.

Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Miller have our prayers for the recovery of their son, Waco Miller.

We also pray for the recovery of Mrs. James Moore.

On Wednesday night, May 30, Brother Paschall will be with us, and will give a farewell word to Dr. VanMeter, who has labored so faithfully with us these six months. We also deeply appreciate Brother Casto's messages.

Brother A. C. Rogers, of the Alabama Conference, spent a while in Asheville last week, visiting his sister, Mrs. Atkinson, who is in a sanatorium here. He was on his way to General Conference.

REPORTER.

Randleman Charge.—The opening day at Worthville the second Sunday in May was a grand success. President Taylor occupied the pulpit at 11 a. m. and delivered an inspiring message. Pledges and cash amounting to $50 were received on Gratitude Gift.

A Mother's Day service was held in the afternoon. This also was a fine service. Near the close an appeal was made for help on church debt and more than $100 subscribed. This new church was begun with only $600 cash in treasury. Today we have a plant worth $5,000 and an indebtedness of not quite $2,000. Worthville is justly proud, and worthy of our commendation.

Mt. Lebanon was painted recently. At this point we are to begin revival services the first Sunday in June. Rev. T. A. Williams is our engaged help.

The many friends of Bro. Dosier will be grieved to learn that he was carried to a sanatorium last Monday.

W. H. NEESE.

State Street, Lexington.—Two pleasing features of the Sunday school hour Sunday morning were a solo beautifully sung by Miss Kathrine Hutton and a report from Mrs. C. L. Koonts of the fine things she heard and enjoyed at the Young People's Convention. Mrs. Koonts was able to impart to us some of the inspiration and enthusiasm she had received. She made us proud of our North Carolina representatives and justly so, as we claim Lawrence Little, Dr. Dixon, Dr. Andrews, Mr. Bethea, and many others who were there and took leading parts in the great service. Mrs. Bethea returned Thursday with Mrs. Koonts, Mr. Bethea staying over for the General Conference.

Bro. C. B. Way preached a fine sermon for us at 11 o'clock and also at night.

We are all pleased with the growth of the Sunday school attendance. Since spring has come, new members come in almost every Sunday and many of our folks who were unable to attend regularly during the winter are coming back. REPORTER.

Spencer.—We are glad to report our church work progressing nicely. We are faithfully working and looking forward to the near future to be able to start our new church. What we need most of all at this time is money.

We have a small band of earnest and deserving people. Of course they are all people who live by work and are willing to go their length toward building, but our number is too small to finance a building that will accommodate our growing needs. We are greatly handicapped by the lack of space for our Sunday school and church attendance. Therefore, we feel justified in saying to our loyal Methodist Protestant neighbors, "Come over into Macedonia and help us."

Now that the M. P. C. G. G. campaign is finished, we are appealing to each Sunday school or church for five dollars. It is not much, but when that amount from each church is put together it will help us greatly in putting on the map another Methodist Protestant church. Mail your checks to Mrs. A. L. Moore, Spencer, N. C.

We are glad to acknowledge $15.00 from Calvary church, Greensboro. Many thanks.

T. GLENN MADISON, Pastor.

Democrat. We have started our Sunday school and are getting along just fine. We are also having prayer meeting once a week.

We missed our pastor, Rev. Mr. Bell, and his family Sunday, as they are visiting at Thomasville. We hope they will be back soon to be in prayer meeting and Sunday school with us. We are looking forward to having a bigger and better Sunday school because we are striving more to do right. We ask the prayers of all Christian people.

REPORTER.

Charlotte, First Church.—Our revival services began the fifth Sunday in April. Rev. R. C. Stubbins came on Monday and preached twice daily during the meeting. There has been much good accomplished and future prospects very encouraging. Mr. Stubbins was pastor of the Charlotte church in its early history and his many friends were glad to have him here again. The following have been received into church: By confession, Edna Kelly, Stella Brown, Macie Garmon, Neal Shaw, Tillman Helms, Ralph Caudle, Harry Hooper and Mrs. Annie Simpson; by certificate, Miss Almetta Coggins, Mr. W. Whitson King, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown.

The Sunday school has a contest on which is getting very interesting. The attendance last Sunday was 163, which is probably the most in the history of the church. There is quite an increase in church attendance, also the mid-week prayer services.

Mother's Day was observed in our church with appropriate music and a splendid tribute by Mr. Surratt on the subject, "Memories of Mother."

The Workers' Council of the Sunday school met last Thursday evening at the church. Future work and business was discussed and planned, one of the things the Daily Vacation Bible School, which will be put on early in June.

Messrs. Roy Garmon and Luther Kelly represented our church in the Young People's Convention in Baltimore. On next Sunday evening Young People's Night will be observed and we expect to hear some interesting things from the convention.

The W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. have started the new year both working and hoping to win an efficiency banner by doing the work required.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet the first Monday in June with Mrs. C. B. Muse at her home on Plaza.

Mrs. T. A. Shaw is quite sick at her home here. Mrs. Shaw recently came to our church and is a splendid worker and teacher of Philathea class. REPORTER.

English Street.—Since our last report the cold hand of death has visited our church family and claimed two of its members. On May 4 Mrs. Fannie Ring, who had been sick and suffered much for a long time, laid aside her burdens of this world and quietly passed to the great beyond. On Mother's Day, May 13, early in the morning L. Roy Gibson's life suddenly passed out. He was a man with a big heart who stood by his church and was ever ready to help those in need. In the passing of these two members a shadow of sorrow has been cast over the ones who attend this church, but we hope and trust that each one will look up and say, "Thy will be done."

In the absence of our pastor the first Sunday, Mr. Baker, a young man from the High Point College, preached both morning and evening. He seems to be a man who has the gift of reaching people's hearts.

The social committee carried the Endeavors on a "hobo" trip Friday night, May 11. It was a beautiful night and about 20 young folks went on this trip. Every one enjoyed it very much. Will some one please tell us how to interest the boys in Endeavor work? It seems our girls are more willing to work than the boys.

Mr. Noah Wood and Miss Esther Robbins, both members of our church, were quietly married at the parsonage Saturday, May 12. We wish them a long, useful life in church work.

Mrs. J. S. Loflin is seriously sick with mumps at this time.

Ladies' Aid is increasing in number and we are hoping to have many more.

Let's remember that "more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of," so let us pray regularly and earnestly for each one of our services.

MRS. JENNIE LEE, Reporter.

MRS. COWAN SERIOUSLY ILL

The condition of Mrs. E. G. Cowan, of Kannapolis, N. C., does not improve as rapidly as we had hoped for. She has been in a very serious condition for the past five weeks, but is some better at this time. By the advice of her physicians she has been sent to Moorestown, N. J., for a period of six weeks or two months to rest, and if physically able at that time she will be removed to the New Charlotte Sanatorium, Charlotte, N. C., where she will undergo two different operations. Brethren and friends of the conference, please remember us in your prayers during this trying time. We are hoping, trusting, and praying that the trip into New Jersey will very greatly help Mrs. Cowan. E. G. COWAN.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Braswell

Little Harold Braswell was born March 19, 1927, and on May 7, 1928, while just a sweet little bud, the Lord had need of him, so He called him home. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Braswell the great-grandson of the late Rev. D. A. Braswell. The last five weeks of his life he had suffered greatly, but did not cry or complain. While we mourn over his absence, he is safe in the arms of Jesus. Heaven is nearer and dearer to us now, as it holds a treasure for us. If we are true to God we will find our treasures by and by. Where our love centers there we want to go.

On May 8 at Porter Methodist Protestant church, the funeral was conducted by the writer, and the little body laid to rest in the cemetery at that place in the presence of many loved ones and friends.

Be comforted with these words:

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine for evermore.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He bears our best loved things away,
And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate;
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers;
Transplanted into bliss, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

C. H. HILL.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas God in His infinite wisdom has called our beloved sister, Mrs. M. F. Masten, a loving member of our Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid Society:

Though quiet and unassuming in her manner she was always interested in the work of the Society and present when health would permit;

Resolved, That we as individual members hold in loving remembrance her Christ-like spirit and that we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this great sorrow that has come into their home, and that we commend them to our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well;

And, be it further resolved, that this resolution be entered in the minutes of the Missionary Record and the Herald, and a copy thereof be presented to the family.

Thompson

Mrs. Kate, as many called her, passed on into that fuller life beyond April 26, 1928, aged 77 years. She leaves to mourn her departure one son, two grandchildren, one sister, two brothers, three stepchildren and a host of friends and relatives. Her husband preceded her several years ago.

Mrs. Thompson died suddenly and did not have to suffer but little.

When a young girl she professed faith in Christ and connected herself with Bethel M. P. church, of which she remained a loyal member until death. For several years she was a member of our W. F. M. S., though when she died she was not.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, and interment was made in Bethel cemetery.

Mrs. Thompson was a very sweet woman and loved by all who knew her. We cannot see why she was taken from her family. But our loving Father, who never makes a mistake, knew it was best. Sometime we will understand. The home circle will not be complete without her. But we believe she has gone to a much better place. Her troubles and trials are all over, and we all hope to meet her in that beautiful Home of the beyond, where partings never come and we never say good-bye.

MRS. R. W. LINDLEY.

THE WAR SITUATION IN CHINA

Events of vast importance to the world are happening in China. The Nationalist armies (armies of South China) are advancing northward toward Peking. That city, the capital of the so-called Republic of China, may fall into their hands at any moment. The commander-in-chief of the Nationalists is Chiang Kai Shek.

The head of the armies of North China is Chang Tso Lin, who is known as "the war lord of Manchuria." He has been in control of Peking since 1926. Reports last week said that Chang had left Peking and was leading his army into Manchuria, his stronghold.

If those reports are true, the Nationalist forces will be able to take Tientsin, the seaport for Peking, and Peking itself, without fighting. Will they attack foreigners in those cities? That is a question that is causing grave concern to the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and other foreign nations.

Last year, when the Nationalists captured Shanghai and Nanking, in Central China, there were disorders in which some foreigners lost their lives. Only by prompt action on the part of Great Britain, Japan, and the United States was greater loss of life prevented. The cry of the Nationalists at that time was "Down with the foreigners!" The United States has a number of warships and about 4,000 marines in China. About 3,000 marines are now at Tientsin.

The history of China for more than 15 years has been one long continued story of civil war. In 1911, a revolution in China overthrew the ancient Chinese Empire and set up the Republic of China. Dr. Sun Yat Sen, known as "the George Washington of China," was provisional president. However, the tuchuns, or war lords, of the various provinces of China made the Chinese Republic a government in name only. Finally, Dr. Sun organized the Republic of South China, with Canton as its capital. He was President of that government for several years. He died in 1925.

Dr. Sun was the chief founder of the Kuomintang (kwo-mintang), the National People's Party in China, which is now the real power behind the Nationalist armies. He drew up the platform of that party known as the "three principles of the people"—people's nationalism, people's sovereignty, and people's welfare. Thus, although Dr. Sun is dead, "his soul goes marching on." The Kuomintang has created a national feeling throughout China which may sometime make real Dr. Sun's dream of a free and united Chinese people, with a government independent of all foreign nations.

But will the Nationalist leaders, once they gain control of China, carry out the principles of Dr. Sun and the Koumintang? Will they work wholly for the welfare of the Chinese people, or will they, in their turn, become mere war lords working only for their own selfish interests? Opinions differ on those questions. Some say that Chiang Kai Shek is a leader after Dr. Sun's own heart and that he has no selfish personal ambitions. Others insist that he is working for himself and not for the Chinese people.

Unless practically all the leaders of the Nationalists are unselfish, a united China is far in the future. Chiang cannot unite China by himself. In the present drive on Peking, he is being aided by Feng Yu Hsiang, the 'Christian General." Will Chiang be able to depend on Feng?

Feng has proved in the past that he is very changeable. In 1920, he was an ally of General Wu Pei Fu, who gained control of Peking. In 1924, Wu placed him in charge of Peking. Then he deserted Wu and aided Shang Tso Lin. Later, he and Chang had a disagreement and, in 1926, Chang defeated him for the control of Peking. Then he retired into northwestern China, where he has been raising another army. It is said that he has been aided by Soviet Russia. This spring he made an alliance with Chiang Kai Shenk.—Current Events.

AN EMINENT SCIENTIST

Dr. Max Mason, president of the University of Chicago since 1925, has resigend. He is to become the head of the new division of natural sciences of the Rockefeller Foundation. In his new position, Dr. Mason will exert a large influence on the advancement of knowledge in the natural sciences throughout the world. The Rockefeller Foundation has completed a plan under which universities and other research institutions in many countries will co-operate in scientific work.

Before Dr. Mason became president of the University of Chicago, he was for 17 years professor of mathematical physics at the University of Wisconsin. During the World War, he invested the "Mason hydrophone," as a protection against submarines. By means of this instrument, a submarine can be detected while it is several miles away from the ship it is trying to sink. The instrument was used by both the American and British navies.—Current Events.

A teacher conducting her pupils through an art museum stopped in front of Rodin's famous statue, "The Thinker." She asked them what they thought he was thinking of.

"Oh, I know," replied one little boy. "He's been swimming and can't remember where he put his clothes."—Exchange.

A sumptuous dinner was spread and we did not fail to do justice to same. At 2 o'clock a group of "Our Children" rendered a recital to a large audience, then we came to Denton, which is historical ground to "Our Home," where the good folks spread a delicious supper enjoyed by all. After the program was given to an attentive audience we were cordially received into homes for the night.

GOD'S MIRACLE OF MAY

There came a message to the vine,
A whisper to the tree;
The bluebird saw the secret sign,
And merrily sang he!
And like a silver string the brook
Trembled with music sweet—
Enchanting notes in every nook
For echo to repeat.

A magic touch transformed the fields,
Greener each hour they grew,
Until they shone like burnished shields
All jeweled o'er with dew.
Scattered upon the forest floor
A million bits of bloom
Breathed fragrance forth thro' morning's door,
Into the day's bright room.

Then bud by bud the vine confessed
The secret it had heard,
And in the leaves the azure-breast
Sang the delightful word:
Glad flowers upsprang amid the grass,
And flung their banners gay,
And suddenly it came to pass—
God's miracle of May!

Comments on the General Conference

Years ago we heard our General Conference described as "a great windy body." Perhaps the characterization is no more true of any session than the last. There was much talking. Sometimes there were several men and women on the floor at once wishing to be permitted to talk. But all Methodist conferences are talking bodies. Methodist thoughts are not too deep for utterance. Many Methodists (and people of other denominations) talk and think afterward. But when you have a thought that seems so pertinent to the question in discussion, how can you keep from bobbing up and saying, "Mr. President"? President Broomfield heard himself addressed on all sides, but tried to determine who was the first of the simultaneous speakers and give him the floor. In addition to the noise made by those eager to speak, there was a great volume of sound from those impatient to vote without further debate, in the confusion of which you could distinguish the much repeated word. "Question," "question," "question." President Broomfield maintained his self-possession to a remarkable degree. He did some talking himself without calling any one to the chair, little bits of speeches too brief to be subjected to the requirements of formality. We cannot say that the amount of work done by this General Conference was in proportion to the amount of talk, still much was done. The most important work was in the consolidation of church boards. The four missionary boards (two home and two foreign) were replaced by one board to be known as the Board of Missions. It was voted that one church paper take the place of The Methodist Protestant and The Methodist Recorder. The Board of Education and the Board of Young People's Work were combined. These mergers were made with a view to economy in administration. Also on the ground that a better co-operation in the work might be secured. This question of union or separation of boards has come up several times in the present century. It always provokes much discussion. There is wide room for difference of opinion. Nobody can convince everybody else that his way is the best way. We doubt whether there is any absolutely best way. We think the best way depends somewhat upon those who have the responsibility for action. Some machines are made "fool-proof." This is in the realm of mechanical devices. When it comes to social devices, there are no fool-proof devices. The plan of work ought to be adapted to those who must do the work. Charles Lindbergh may cross the Atlantic in an airplane, but most of us would better go in ships that glide on the waters. We have serious doubts whether the average member of the one board of missions will be able to familiarize himself with all the problems of missions, home and foreign, including those heretofore in the women's care and those in the care of the church's two boards, so as to act wisely in every case.

Many inventions are born of necessity. Most of our church machinery has been devised to meet pressing needs. It is questionable whether it is wise to junk all this machinery to use some devices that have not stood the test of experience. There are minds in our church that love simplicity. This is not quite the same as saying they are simple-minded people. They might love complexity better than they love simplicity if only they appreciated the superiority of complexity. They remind one of the young man who wanted to travel in a vehicle of his own construction. He thought of a wheelbarrow, but did not see how he could push it and ride at the same time. He finally decided that he must choose between an automobile and an oxcart. He found that the automobile was too complex, and so he went after his bride in an oxcart. Oxcarts are simple, but their day has passed. We should seek to employ the best inventions of the Christian world in our church work.

We noted the fact that the average member of Conference cared much more about questions of personnel than questions of law. Several efforts were made to speed up the time of election of secretaries and editors. We learned that there was one false prophet in the Cofnerence. We heard him predict that a certain officer of the church could not possibly be re-elected. We saw that officer re-elected by the unanimous vote of the Conference. It was remarkable with what unanimity the editors and executive secretaries were elected. All but one were elected by the secretary casting the unanimous vote of the body.

Rev. S. W. Rosenberger was elected Secretary of the Board of Missions. Rev. J. H. Straughan was elected Treasurer and Promoter of Stewardship Practice. (This is not his precise title.) Rev. J. M. Sheridan was continued in charge of the work of the Board of Home Missions until October, at least. Rev. L. E. Davis, Rev. F. T. Benson, and Rev. C. S. Johnson were elected editors of the Methodist Recorder, Methodist Protestant, and the Sunday school literature, respectively. The Board of Missions was authorized to elect another officer to be editor of the Missionary Record and do other service. Dr. T. H. Lewis was elected contributing editor of the two general church organs or the one church organ after they are combined. We have wondered how the man felt who voted for the unification of the church papers with the hope of eliminating one editor—how he felt when he found that the Conference had elected three editors instead of one. Rev. F. W. Stephenson and Rev. Lawrence Little were elected secretaries of the combined Boards of Education and Young People's Work.

Some minor changes were made in the Book of Discipline. A proposed change was made in the law regarding church property. This was not adopted, but an interpretation given by a lawyer present makes it easier to sell property. According to this interpretation, if there are not members enough present in the meeting to authorize the transaction, the vote

IMPORTANCE OF CIRCULATING TITHING LITERATURE

By A LAYMAN

Most ministers overestimate the importance of preaching sermons on tithing and underestimate the importance of circulating tithing literature.

Luther E. Loveoy was selected for his present position as Secretary of Stewardship in the Methodist Episcopal church because of his success in winning tithers in every church of which he has been pastor since he entered the ministry. In answer to my question regarding his methods he writes:

"Your letter of January 19th is before me asking for the statement I made a few weeks ago respecting my teaching of tithing in my churches. I think you may quote me as having said substantially the following:

" 'During my experience as a pastor, except in the church in which I first introduced the subject, I do not think I ever preached on tithing more than once to the same congregation, but I did endeavor to keep my people well supplied with readable tithing literature, and to let them know by constant example and by frequent reference and illustration the very high value I set upon this practice.'

"L. E. LOVEJOY, Secretary, Stewardship Division."

As a preface to the next letter, I give the record of the Buena Memorial Presbyterian church of Chicago, of which Dr. Henry Hepburn is pastor, in contributions to Home and Foreign Missions, the best test we have of unselfish giving by churches. 1919—per capita $1.95; 1920—$5.62; 1921—$7.29; 1922—$9.02. I doubt if this percentage of increase in contributions has its equal in any of the large churches of this country.

During the four years previous to May 1, 1921, Dr. Hepburn ordered and circulated large quantities of the Layman Company pamphlets. The number of tithers at this writing is something over 300, about twenty-five per cent of the membership.

Instead of writing direct to Dr. Hepburn, I asked one of his elders, Mr. H. M. Rossiter, to give me briefly the methods used in Buena Memorial church. Following is his reply:

"Buena Memorial church, of which you know, is reported to have something over three hundred enrolled tithing stewards. I have been a member of the church for about four years. During that time, so far as I remember, I have never heard the pastor preach a sermon on tithing, though he often refers to it in his sermons and talks.

"During the four years we have had one Sabbath morning devoted to the enrolling of tithing stewards and 167 signed at that time. The others have been added since and many of the young people in the Christian Endeavor Society are tithers.

"There has been no great effort made to secure these enrollments, but the people know where the pastor stands and what he believes about tithing, and as you, yourself, have said, we hold the record among the churches of Chicago of all denominations for having the largest number of tithers in any one church. The pastor is Rev. Henry Hepburn.

"H. M. ROSSITER."

Tithing Expensive—Be Careful!

The following was not written by "Layman," but any one can see that it should have place in his literature.

One of the great boards of the church was in session. To it came, among others, a banker who supervises a great and otherwise important fund.

Said a visitor to the banker, "Do you happen to know the work of 'Layman,' who advocates tithing?"

"I should think I do," was the emphatic answer. "That man has cost me many thousands of dollars!"

The visitor said he would like particulars.

"Nothing easier. Twenty-five years ago I came across one of the 'Layman' leaflets; I think it was 'What We Owe, and How to Pay It.' The reasoning convinced me. I began to tithe, and have kept it up ever since."

"Well," said the still inquisitive visitor, "what has been your experience?"

"That would be too long a story," the banker responded. "But I will say this: My present tithe is a good deal larger than my total income was when I began tithing. You can make what you will of that?"

Eight Assistants

H. O. MacDonald, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Mercer, Pa., ordered 150 each of two Layman Company pamphlets.

"I have eight men who have become so interested in educating the congregation on the subject of tithing that they are willing to distribute to the people personally the literature I may put into their hands.

"Again, as I said to you in a former letter, I am determined to bring this subject as thoroughly as possible to the attention of every member in our church. I thank you for your suggestions, and now come asking for 150 copies each of the next two pamphlets you would suggest to follow after the two I have already distributed.

"My plan is to distribute one leaflet every two weeks and preach a sermon on the subject the first Sabbath of each month until I have exhausted my resources, and then make a personal canvass of the congregation for pledges.

"This done, I will feel that I have done my best and will not let go until the problem lies between the individual and his God."

This is an answer to the question, Can a poor man tithe? "When they began to tithe they were renting their home. Since then they have built and paid for a comfortable little home now valued at $3,500 and they are entirely out of debt. This is the experience of a poor couple, in poor health who did tithe and more."

"THEY DID ME WRONG"

A preacher once asked a certain man why he had ceased to attend his church. He replied, "They haven't treated me right over there." "Then why don't you go home and beat your wife?" asked the preacher. "Oh, she hasn't done anything against me," said the man. "Well," continued the preacher, "has the Lord Jesus done anything against you?"

How utterly silly men become in trying to give an excuse for failure to support the cause of Christ.

The truth is, when you see a man or woman begin to stay away from their church because of something that has been said or done, there is something wrong with them.

Down deep in their hearts they usually know it, but simply haven't the grace to make a confession. But just supposing that some in the church should do us a wrong, would we be warranted in taking our spite out on God? Would it be right to forsake his house? That is what it amounts to when people quit the church for such a reason.—Selected.

TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

May 22, 1928.

Your committee on Foreign Missions and Home Missions, acting as a Joint Committee, to consider the question of consolidating all of the missionary activities of the church, as referred to us, have given exhaustive consideration to this subject, and herewith submit our recommendations which incorporate the plan of organization which has been adopted in consolidating the two foreign missionary units. The plan of organization which is recommended in this report is simply an expansion of the unification of the foreign missionary units so as to incorporate also the two home missionary units of the church, and we recommend that any points of the previous action of this conference covering foreign missionary unification which may not harmonize with the recommendations contained in this report we are now submitting, shall be so adjusted as to harmonize therewith, the recommendations covered by this report to take precedence and be considered as Conference action in lieu thereof.

1. That this General Conference create a Board of Missions, to which shall be entrusted the work now being done by the Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration, the Board of Home Missions and the Woman's Home Missionary Society.

2. That this Board shall consist of ten men and ten women, six of the men being ministers. The president of the General Conference to be an ex-officio member of this Board.

3. That two executive secretaries be elected, the one a man, the other a woman; the former to be known as the Corresponding Secretary of the Board, whose duties shall be those performed hitherto by the Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions and the Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Home Missions, and such other duties as the Board may assign; and the latter to be known as the Associate Corresponding Secretary of the Board, whose duties shall be those now performed by the Corresponding Secretary, and the Treasurer of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, the Editor of the Missionary Record, the Secretary of Scholarships and Native Workers, and corresponding officers of the Women's Home Missionary Society, as also any other promotional work involving expense. The election of the Associate Corresponding Secretary shall be left to the Board to act within the next three or six months.

4. That these executive secretaries shall be members ex-officio of the Board.

5. That the Joint Committee on Foreign Missions and on Home Missions recommend to the General Conference for election as the original board the names of ten men and ten women, three of the women to be selected from each of the executive committees of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society and the Women's Home Missionary Society, the respective presidents of the two women's missionary societies to be among the women so selected.

6. That the officers of the Board shall be a President, a Vice-President, and a Recording Secretary, who shall be elected annually by the Board.

7. That the Board shall elect annually two men and two women, who, with the executive secretaries, shall constitute the Executive Committee of the Board, and shall perform all the functions of the Board in the interim of the Board meetings.

8. That five of the men elected on the Board, together with the Corresponding Secretary, constitute the Board of Foreign Missions, and that five of the men elected on the Board together with the Corresponding Secretary constitute the Board of Home Missions.

9. That those parts of the charters of the Board of Foreign Missions, of the Board of Home Missions, of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, and the Women's Home Missionary Society, relating to properties remain operative during this quadrennium.

10. That the Board of Missions be authorized to secure immediately a charter changing all items in the charters of the Board of Foreign Missions, the Board of Home Missions, the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, and the Women's Home Missionary Society, except those of property rights, so as to harmonize them with these recommendations.

11. That nothing in these recommendations shall be so interpreted as to immediately interfere with the present method of organization and work of the local auxiliaries and branches of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society and the Women's Home Missionary Society, but that both of these women's societies amend their constitutions so as to correspond with these recommendations, and effect this unification in the branches and auxiliaries as soon as practicable.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Union Board Meeting

The Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration met in the Starr Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Md., May 15, 1928. All the members were present.

We were privileged to have with us Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Soderbom, of China; Rev. J. Clyde Auman, of Japan; Rev. J. F. Minnis, of India, and Mrs. H. E. Amos, editor of the Missionary Record. The missionaries, fresh from the three fields of our missionary enterprise, brought us very valuable information concerning our foreign work.

Rev. I. M. Dinkle, a member of the 1928 graduating class of Westminster Theological Seminary, came before the Union Board to apply for work in one of our misison fields and is ready to go at the call of the Board. He is a member of the Maryland Conference and is a young man with sterling qualities, with a keen sense of his call to the foreign field. It is the hope of the Board that sufficient funds may soon be had to send him out.

The reports of our three fields of operation were taken up and carefully considered.

Japan

From Japan came the good news that in most respects the work there is in better condition than it ever has been. The attendance at Nagoya College, for the ensuing year, is not so large as it has been, but more stress is being laid upon intensive rather than extensive work.

One hundred yen (a yen is worth about fifty cents in American gold) were given by the membership of the Nagoya First Church for the placing of a new floor in their church. Seven hundred yen were given by the Special Help Society for apparatus and a small addition to the Tokyo School for the Blind. This school has been the recipient of a number of special gifts during the quadrennium and so splendidly has it grown and so fine is the work being accomplished that the last session of the Japan Mission Conference manifested an entirely different attitude toward the school and is now willing to back it in its great work in behalf of those sightless unfortunates.

Some Forward Steps

The teachers of the Girls' School, Yokohama, on their own initiative, joined the Pension System of Private Schools.

The annual meeting of the Mission was held during Holy week. On Holy Thursday evening communion services were held in the new Klein-Coulbourn Memorial Church and on Good Friday, at three o'clock, the Mission adjourned and held devotional services, conducted by Miss Mary Williams and Rev. E. I. Obee, in commemoration of the passion and death of our Savior on the cross.

A Parents Association has been recently organized and a Daily Vacation Bible school will be conducted this summer.

Children's Day services are being held in a number of our Japan churches and offerings taken for the development of the work.

The Japan Mission Conference gave 283 yen and the Women's Council 32 yen toward the $100,000.00 Gratitude Gift, as an expression of their appreciation of the work accomplished by the Methodist Protestant church during the first century of its existence. Both of these gifts came unsolicited.

China

The Union Board approved the recommendation of the W. F. M. S. to accept Miss Sallon as our new missionary to China.

Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Soderbom will leave for Sweden June 2, 1928. They will spend the remainder of their furlough in Sweden with Rev. Mr. Soderbom's son, Erick. At the expiration of their furlough they will return to Kalgan, planning to arrive there about December 1.

Mr. Horace Williams, having already remained in China longer than the term of his contract, was granted the privilege of coming home on his furlough upon the return of Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom.

The reports from China show that our work has grown from 200 to 2,000 since we took it over in 1914.

India

India is our missionary child. The future outlook for its growth is very bright and hopeful. We have an excellent corps of workers there and the work is going forward gradually but surely.

On Friday, May 11, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis and Miss Mildred Miskimen landed in New York for their well deserved furlough. They will be glad to do any deputation work that the home churches desire.

Up to the present time there has been no church building, not even a chapel of our own, where our people may worship. At our Board meeting one of our church organizations consented to build a chapel on the settlement or farm. Since then, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Lee, of Baltimore, Md., have consented to erect another chapel, this to be called the "Lee Chapel."

At the request of the Ohio branch, the Executive Board of the W. F. M. S., in session at High Point, N. C., granted the branch permission to build a girls' school in India.

So the work goes. May many others be inspired to come to the support of this new and undeveloped field of missionary enterprise. Our outstanding need now in India is a good church building costing from $10,000 to $15,000. Recently the first church has been organized at Dhulia with a membership of 140. Their only place of worship, in all kinds of weather, is beneath the spreading branches of a tree standing on the Compound. Our hope and prayer is that this new quadrennium may see the building of this church in India as the last quadrennium saw, with pride, the building of the beautiful Klein-Coulbourn Memorial church in Japan. This is our new quadrennial goal for India.

After an existence of just one quadrennium the Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration has passed into history. It, with the two branches of the Home Missionary work, was caught in the sweeping tide for union and now all of our missionary work has been placed under one head to be known as "the Union Board of Missions." This action came as the climax of a growing desire of the majority of our constituency for closer unity of our various departments of denominational work. The new Union Board consists of 20 members, ten men and ten women. Rev. S. W. Rosenberger was elected as Executive Secretary, to be assisted by Rev. J. M. Sheridan, former Executive Secretary of the Board of Home Missions. A lady Associate Secretary is to be elected by the new Union Board to take over the work vested in the Treasurer, Corresponding Secretary, Secretary of Scholarships and Editor of the Missionary Record, of the former W. F. M. S. and W. H. M. S.

Since this action was taken by an overwhelming majority of the representatives to the General Conference, may we all enter into it heartily but prayerfully with the one set purpose that God may be greatly glorified and that our missionary work may experience an unprecedented growth and development.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

The Centennial General Conference, which opened in historic St. John's church, Baltimore, Md., May 16, and closed May 24, was, in our judgment, the most inspirational, the most constructive, and the most far-reaching conference of recent years. The great Lyric meeting on Wednesday night will be a lasting memory with every one who was privileged to be there. In purpose, program, and attendance (the Lyric was packed to its seating capacity) this is perhaps the greatest assembly in the history of our denomination. Enthusiasm ran high throughout the entire conference, and the spirit of fraternity, hope, and progress was always in evidence. We can not go into details here. The church papers will give full reports of the proceedings; and besides, the full program of the conference is to be preserved in a Centennial Memorial Book, which will be ready for distribution as early as possible.

It was not our privilege to attend the Young People's Convention, which was held in Baltimore immediately preceding the General Conference. All reports indicate that it, too, was a great success. About fifteen hundred young people, we believe, registered for this convention. This was by far the largest assembly of our young people that has ever been held. Truly God is with us, and in His name we are making history as a church.

Due to the courtesy extended to us by the editor of the HERALD, we motored to Baltimore and back in his car. Others in our party going were Bros. Hutton and T. F. McCulloch. Bro. Hutton came home by train before the close of conference, and Bros. Stubbins and J. D. Williams joined our party. The trip was without car trouble, and pleasant.

Worthville

May 13 we were honored with the privilege of being present at the opening of the new church at this place. The building is well located, designed and constructed. In size it seems adequate, being forty by sixty feet, with Sunday school rooms on the back and each side of the rear. We spoke at the eleven o'clock hour, and in the afternoon different speakers, with pleasing and helpful messages, made up the program. At the morning service $50 was raised on the Gratitude Gift, and in the afternoon $175 on the church debt.

We believe that this was a good day for Worthville, and we most heartily congratulate Pastor Neese and his people upon this worthy thing that they have done in the erection of their new church. We hope to have the picture of their building in the HERALD later.

Thomasville

May 27 we shared, at night, in the twenty-first anniversary program of the founding of this church. An all-day program was carried out, and participated in by various speakers. It was most fitting that the speaker for the morning hour should have been Bro. Edwin Suits, who was pastor when the church was organized. We understand that there were but eleven charter members—not a very large group with which to begin a church. But subsequent events have fully justified the venture. This church now has 159 members, and the services of a full-time pastor, and is the mother of two other progressive Methodist Protestant churches in the growing city of Thomasville. True it is that the "day of small things" is not to be despised. We enjoyed sharing in each of these significant programs, and we most earnestly hope and pray for Pastors Neese and Trollinger and their respective churches that they may have continued encouragement and progress.

Commencement

May 28.—It was our happy privilege on this date to attend the commencement exercises of High Point College. The large college auditorium was taxed far beyond its capacity with interested auditors. Honorable O. Max Gardner, lawyer, farmer, statesman, made the address of the hour, after which diplomas and certificates were given to those completing the college courses of study. The A.B. degree was conferred on 38 students, the B.S. degree on six, and the B.M. degree on one, making a total class of 45 graduates. Besides these, there was a considerable number of students who received certificates for having completed the business course offered by the college.

Considering the short time that the college has been in operation, this is a very unusual graduating class, and affords just cause for pride in what has been achieved by the institution. There is every reason to believe that High Point College is set toward a career of growing and gratifying prosperity. We thoroughly enjoyed the commencement program.

College Maintenance

In pastor's reports for second quarter, we notice, with great pleasure, the number of charges that have paid or expect to pay the college maintenance assessment in full. No item in our budget is more necessary than this, and we can not urge too strongly that every charge meet this assessment. The amount assessed is a small item for the charge, but the aggregate means much to the college. Let us have, brethren, every charge an honor roll charge on the college assessment. All together now, until we are there—all there!

Children's Day

Bro. Pastor and Superintendent, please have this program in every church. It will stimulate the general interest of your charge; it will provide missionary education; it will secure money for doing what Christ wants His church to do—carry the gospel to the utmost parts of the earth. Much of the money that we receive for this purpose comes through "Children's Day." We most earnestly urge that every church observe it.

Representative's Expenses

Representatives to the General Conference will please send their expense account to the treasurer of this fund, Rev. J. Clyde Auman, Enfield, N. C. As soon as he has sufficient means in hand he will forward checks to cover this expense.

And will charges that have not paid the assessment for this purpose please do so at once, so these representatives may be reimbursed as soon as possible.

Revivals

The recent General Conference created a Commission on Evangelism, and it was heartening to find in the conference a disposition to put renewed emphasis on this all-important business of the church. Nothing else is so certain to keep life and power in the church as the spirit of evangelism. We are now approaching that period in our conference when this subject receives our most active attention—the period of our revivals. Let us plan wisely and earnestly for these meetings, and make them far more than simply the carrying out of the annual program of the local church. Evangelism lies closer to the heart of God than anything else that the church can possibly do. Surely, then, as we enter upon our special evangelistic programs, we ought to give ourselves to them so thoughtfully and so earnestly that God can make of them occasions of pronounced spiritual refreshing and soul-saving. Let us begin praying now that the mighty power of God may rest upon us in our special season of evangelism.

Assignment

Bro. Jabus W. Braxton has been assigned pastor of the Mocksville charge to fill out the unexpired term of Rev. J. T. Sisk, resigned. Bro. Braxton will enter at once upon his duties as pastor of this charge. We most heartily commend him to the love and confidence of the people whom he goes to serve, and we bespeak for him and for them a happy and prosperous relationship.

Appointments

June 3, Mocksville charge: Elbaville 11 a. m., Dulins 3 p. m.; and we hope to be at Bethel at night, if the brethren can arrange an appointment for us at that time.

June 10, with Fairfield church, 11 a. m.

June 17, with Saxapahaw charge, in rally at Concord church.

One Word More

Are there problems? difficulties? besetments? Do the clouds lower and the storms break? Don't be discouraged; don't despair. These are the moulds out of which comes real manhood. These are the things that make achievement a lasting glory. God is with us, and this is a great day for our church. The faith and courage and perseverance that has brought us the blessings of heaven for a hundred years is still our guarantee of enlarging and enriching service. "The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Therefore will not we fear, tho the earth be removed, and tho the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea."

S. W. Taylor.

HOW THE CUP WAS KEPT SHINING

The rocks rose steeply at the side of the road, through a cleft, the spring bubbled out. The drop of the water was music in the ears of travelers driving by on a hot day. And, however intense the heat, however parched the meadow, the spring trickled out to refresh the thirsty, as cool and delicious as if it came from some sunless cavern in the heart of the earth.

One day a passerby drew his horses and stopped, not to drink, but to look and wonder. For a small girl, with a cake of scouring soap, was scrubbing away energetically at the tin cup which had been hung beside the spring for the convenience of travelers.

She looked up and flushed under the man's scrutiny.

"Do you want a drink? I'll hurry and finish."

"No, I'm not particularly thirsty," said the man. "But what are you doing?"

"Why, I'm cleaning the drinking cup. It gets dirty and rusty standing here, so every few days I come over and give it a good scouring."

The man stared. "You don't get anything for it?"

"Why, no, of course. But thirsty folks enjoy the water so much better if the cup is shining."

"Why don't you leave it for somebody else to do? It is as much their work as yours."

The girl laughingly replied: "And it is as much mine as theirs. Besides, there's lots of things I can't do, but I can keep the cup shining."

The man took up his lines and his horses moved on. But he looked back over his shoulder at the little figure busy with the self-appointed task, and in his mind he was thinking that it would be a better world if more people would act on that girl's principle.—Selected.

A WONDERFUL PROMISE TO YOUTH

As one of that group termed "Youth," or as a member of the "younger generation," while reading the Book of books —the Bible—last evening, a line from the sixteenth Psalm struck me with such a force as to imprint itself distinctly and definitely in my mind.

It is the last line of the eleventh verse, which verse is as follows: "Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fullness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

Youth is always, and quite naturally, seeking pleasure and what more wonderful promise was ever given than, "At thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

So let us keep this promise before us, although it may mean giving up what appears to us as pleasures now, and work toward the time when it shall be so gloriously fulfilled. —Catherine Dixon.

A SAD THOUGHT

Many persons who are almost Christians will never enter into the Kingdom of God. Is it not a sad thought that a good ship has borne its precious freight of humanity across the sea, has battled successfully with the storms until the beginning of the last half day, only to go down in sight of the harbor? Is it not a sad thought that the passengers, many of whom have been absent from home for years and are just finishing a wearisome and dangerous voyage, must sink beneath the dark waters in sight of their native hills?

Is it not a sadder thought that men and women who have been born and brought up in Christian homes, have been trained and taught in Christian Sunday schools, have lived all their lives in the atmosphere of Christian thought and sentiment, have walked along the borders of the Kingdom of God so near that they could hear the songs of Zion and the prayers of the saints with every rising morning will never be Christians? They have come to the threshold, but will not enter in.—Selected.

of those present may be registered and the meeting may adjourn to a specified time and then take the vote of additional members present, and keep on in this way until the requisite number have voted.

Conference adjourned on Thursday evening, May 24th.

The next meeting is to be in Columbus, Ohio, in May, 1932. There were invitations from High Point, N. C., and from Lansing, Mich., but the Columbus invitation captivated the assembly.

As we enter into this new quadrennium, let us renew our consecration to our great task as a denomination. God has permitted us to do much. Through faithful devotion to God and His cause in the earth, we may make this new century glorious.

A CRISIS—A DUTY

The nation, and especially the Southland, is today face to face with a moral crisis. Our ideals, involving the purity of the American home and the sobriety of the American people, which have required two hundred years to build up, are threatened with overthrow through the nomination and possible election of a whiskey candidate for the presidency of the United States, and the consequent re-enthronement of rum. But it is still believed that, through the earnest and instant co-operation of half a million Christian voters in the South, the nomination of such a candidate may be prevented. Great national leaders, like Senator Simmons of North Carolina, and Senator Owens, of Oklahoma, who are co-operating with the Southland Committee of Safety, believe that a sufficiently strong protest presented at Houston will defeat the program of the "wets."

The Southland Committee has sent to every community of the South an S. O. S. call in the shape of a printed protest to be signed by Democratic voters. Reports from our workers indicate that already one hundred thousand of these protests have been signed in the South outside of Texas, which promises a huge list, possibly two hundred thousand. Protests at the rate of four thousand daily are coming into the Southland Committee's office at Nashville. But the time is now short. Thousands on thousands more of protests are needed. Will not the Christian Democrat who reads this call write with typewriter or pen at the top of a sheet of paper these words: "We protest against the nomination at Houston of a 'wet' candidate for the presidency," and then secure and send to us all the signatures thereto possible? Our workers report that ninety per cent of the voters approached readily sign.

Will not our brethren of the pastorate in all the evangelical churches, who have not already done so, send us the number of men and women in their congregations or church circles who are known to be committed against a "wet" candidate? This will require but a few minutes of time. It is numbers we need. Do this today. Send to Southland Committee of Safety, 827 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tennessee.

A Protest

To the Delegates-Elect to the National Democratic Convention to Assemble in the City of Houston, Texas, June 26, 1928.

Honorable Delegates:

We the undersigned, legal Democratic voters of the County of....., State of....., do hereby record, and respectfully transmit to you this our solemn protest against the nomination by the Democratic party for the presidency, or vice-presidency, of the United States of any candidate who has declared himself in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead law, enacted thereunder; as also any candidate who is not fully committed to the principle of the complete prohibition of the liquor traffic, and the enforcement of all laws enacted to that end, which is now the established policy of the American people and nation.

High Point College Commencement

The editor was permitted to attend two important parts of the closing services of High Point College: the sermon on Sunday and the address on Monday. Dr. C. D. Sinkinson, of Atlantic City, N. J., was the preacher. He was introduced as a pastor who has been serving one church continuously for 34 years. He preached a sermon which revealed the secret of his success to those who were looking for it; namely, his faith in Christ and his devotion to the will of Christ. Honest and persistent use of the same means will bring any soul to true success in the enjoyment of the more abundant life. The sermon made a fine impression and we trust that its good influence will abide with the young seeking for themselves the best careers in life. The auditorium of the First Church was filled for this service. The members of the graduating class were in their caps and gowns.

The speaker on Monday was Hon. Max Gardner, of Shelby. He said that he had been impressed with the rapid growth of High Point College and with the appropriateness of its architecture. He announced his theme as "The Arithmetic of Christianity." He spoke of the essential place of Christianity in human life if it is to be worth while. Wealth does not bring happiness. He had found this out by associating with men of great possessions. The spirit that was in Jesus Christ must be in the man or women that would be perfect or that would live a satisfactory life.

We also witnessed the awarding of honors and the conferring of degrees. The graduating class has 45 members. We were pleased with the fact that 17 of these were pupils of ours in Mathematics in 1924.

Our North Carolina Conference is to be congratulated on the fact that its young college is developing so fast and so well. Continued wise management and earnest support by our people will, we predict, result in securing to our college a career of ever-increasing usefulness.

"RUN AWAY, BOY, I'M BUSY"

Doctor Potter tells the story of a young man who stood at the bar of a court of justice to be sentenced for forgery. The judge had known him from a child, for his father had been a famous legal light, and his work on the "Law of Trusts" was the most exhaustive work on the subject in existence. "Do you remember your father?" asked the judge sternly, "that father whom you have disgraced?" The prisoner answered, "I remember him perfectly. When I went to him for advice or companionship, he would look up from his book on the 'Law of Trusts' and say, 'Run away, boy, I am busy.' My father finished his book, and here I am." The great lawyer had neglected his own trust, with awful results. —Selected.

NO WAR ON THE OTHER SIDE

Only now, it would seem, are the most beautiful of World War stories being circulated. Someone tells of a German officer and a French soldier mortally wounded and, with many others, abandoned on the field of battle. The German was calling for water, of which the Frenchman had a small quantity. Crawling near the officer as quickly as his weakness and wounds would permit, the soldier extended his canteen. The other sipped a little of the contents and kissed the hand of his benefactor, saying, almost with his last breath: "Thank you, good-bye. There'll be no war on the other side."—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

A CURIOUS PET

The tables were turned in a very queer way at Oak Dale Farm this year.

Bob Bennett had grown up to be a big broad-shouldered young man, and so had his brother, so he was not needed at home. When his maiden aunts, Miss Patricia and Miss Annette Peebles, asked him to come to Oak Dale Farm and live with them and run the farm, he was very much pleased.

He had only been there a short time when he decided that his aunts deserved a fine present. So the next time he went home to his father's farm across the hills, he got something which he thought would please the ladies.

He brought it into the kitchen in his pocket and got Miss Patricia to feel of it and guess what it was.

"A rabbit," she guessed.

But when he brought the thing out she gave a squeal and jumped up on a chair, gathering her skirts tight around her ankles.

"It isn't a mouse," laughed Bob. "It's a beaver baby. He won't hurt you. I found him one day last winter down by the creek. He's a funny little beggar."

Miss Annette was braver than Miss Pat. She came from the pantry and patted the beaver's head.

"Does he like milk?" she inquired.

"No, he likes bark," explained Bob.

They named the little animal Rascal and became very fond of him. He was full of cute and unexpected tricks. For instance, his favorite indoor sport was making pretend dams out of anything he could find around and it got so that if anything small was missing, a spoon or thimble or comb or brush, it was pretty sure to have found its way into Rascal's dam, which was being built under the kitchen table.

In one way Rascal caused his new owners some trouble; he was rather moody and had a poor appetite. Bob went down to the creek and brought him nice willow twigs, but Rascal only nibbled at them. He grew noticeably thin and his fur looked dull and moth-eaten.

"I'm afraid our pet is getting sick," mourned Miss Pat. "If he should die, I'd feel just too terrible for words. I've gotten strangely fond of the little critter."

"I, too," admitted Miss Annette. "Bob, do you think we ought to have the doctor for him? Maybe a tonic would do him good."

So Bob went and got the vet, who had treated lots of cows, horses, dogs and cats, but never a beaver. He watched Rascal working nervously on his dam under the kitchen table. Then he said:

"These wild animals need their natural environment. My advice is to turn him loose."

"But he's tame," objected Bob. "He wouldn't last a week out in the open. And besides, he was perfectly well and happy over at Dad's. It's only since coming here he's gotten off his feed."

"Well, maybe you keep it too warm in the house," said the vet.

"He likes to be out here in the kitchen," Miss Pat explained.

"Sure," said Bob, "he always stayed in the kitchen at home."

"Then he may have worms," said the vet and left some medicine for him.

But Rascal got no better, in fact, he seemed to be going into decline, and at last his good mistress decided to part with him for his own good and send him back to Bob's folks.

On that sad day of parting, the two ladies went with their nephew and Rascal across the hills to the other farm. When they arrived Rascal went under the kitchen table and began measuring for a new dam, but he went about his task in the same nervous way. The folks sat and watched him, when suddenly the door burst open and in walked little Jimmie Henricks, Bob's sister's child who lived there. Then you should have seen Rascal perk up. He shambled over to the child, and Jim put him on his shoulder, and afterwards went under the table and helped him with the new dam.

"Well," exclaimed Miss Pat, her cheeks getting very red, "it's plain to be seen what ails Rascal. He wants companionship. We'll have to adopt a child for him. There's that nice little Jones girl over in the valley. Maybe we could get her to come and live with us."

Miss Annette had always wanted to have a child around. So she was willing, and they went at once to see the people who were boarding the little girl who was an orphan.

"Of course, I wouldn't think of standing in the child's way," said kind Mrs. Black. "It is very good of you to want the young one."

"We'll have to explain something to her," whispered Miss Pat to Miss Annette. "Maybe she's afraid of beavers."

"We'll try her out," said Miss Annette.

Then she asked the child in her nicest way if she liked cats. Yes, indeed, Tiny Jones did love cats. And dogs? Yes, oh, yes! Er—how about—er, say, white mice. White mice. White mice were all right. Well, then, how about raccoons? Tiny Jones liked raccoons but admitted that she had not seen many. Rabbits she adored. Then, feeling encouraged, Miss Annette mentioned beavers. Yes, the little girl thought she liked beavers.

"Don't they build mud houses and slap the mud with their tails?" she inquired. "I think they must be very smart and industrious."

Miss Pat nodded at Miss Annette, meaning, "A sensible remark. She will do."

So Tiny Jones went to live at Oak Dale farm. And the next day Bob went home and fetched Rascal.

"Bring him in here," said Miss Pat, and they all held their breath while he was introduced to little Tiny Jones.

"This, my dear, is Rascal. A beaver, as you can see, but a very sweet beast," said Miss Pat. "He has never bitten anybody."

"Aw, ain't he cute!" cried Tiny.

"Just get under the table, honey, and play with him as much as you like," said Miss Annette.

Tiny Jones was delighted, and in a little while she and Rascal were building a very remarkable dam. Rascal grew plump and contented, and his fur once more was glossy and sleek. As for his appetite, Bob was kept busy getting sticks for him.

Kind old Mrs. Black came to see how little orphan Tiny Jones was getting along, and found her a very happy little girl.

"We don't see how we ever lived so long without a child," said Miss Pat. "She has brought back the roses of youth into our lives."

"And look," cried Tiny, "the pretty dresses I have, and they tuck me in and kiss me every night. And they got me the cutest pet. You'd never guess. It's a beaver named Rascal. Yes, ma'am, they got it specially for me to play with!"

"Well, I never," exclaimed Mrs. Black. "Do tell now! Don't you good people go and spoil this young one. A beaver for a pet. I never did hear of such a thing."

Miss Pat and Miss Annette looked a little embarrassed. They did not want to be deceitful, yet how could they explain that Tiny Jones was Rascal's pet, not the other way around? Oh, well, let it go! thought good little Miss Pat. We wouldn't part with Tiny now even if she didn't favor beavers!——Selected.

THE PETREL

Everybody remembers the old Bible story where it tells about Peter walking on the water. Well, this interesting little bird that loves the ocean so much that it never leaves it gets its name Petrel from Peter, because it can walk on the water too, something that very few creatures can do. When performing this wonderful stunt the bird has to keep its wings spread, and move them slowly with a fan-like motion which prevents it from sinking.

He is a little bit of a fellow, only about six inches long, but with very long wings, and long legs which make him appear much larger than he really is. The back and wings are sooty black, shading to grayish brown underneath, while the base of the tail is pure white.

His legs, feet and bill are as black as ink, but the web that joins the toes is bright yellow. He not only makes his home on the restless bosom of the ocean, but he insists on staying far from any land—usually hundreds and hundreds of miles far out at sea, where there is nothing but water—water—water.

The passengers on ocean vessels would find it mighty lonesome if flocks of Petrels did not keep them company, silently flitting here and there over the waves like wind-tossed butterflies. Numbers of them follow the vessel day after day in her voyage across the ocean, and feed greedily on the scraps, thrown overboard from the ship's kitchen—only they call it galley instead of kitchen.

Though the big steamer may be plowing through the waves at full speed, the petrels not only keep up without any seeming exertion, but dart far ahead and then come swinging back, and actually seem to be playing hide-and-seek from one side of the ship to the other. Of course, at times they leave the surface and depend on their wings, but generally their little black feet are pattering over the waves, up one side and down the other, actually running on the water.

Even when there is no wind, they can walk or stand on the water, just by moving their wings a little faster. By the time dusk comes, and the sun has taken his nightly dip in the west, the petrels that have been playing around the rapidly moving ship all day seem to be a little tired, and settle down on the water for their night's rest, and with heads tucked under wings are soon fast asleep, literally rocked to rest in the cradle of the deep.

The vessel leaves them and forges ahead through the night, but when the passengers wake up the next morning, the petrels have overtaken it, and are impatiently waiting for the breakfast dishes to be washed and the scraps tossed overboard, as they want their breakfast too.

It is not possible for all of them to pick up a living from the refuse of passing ships, so their regular rations must consist of the small marine life that finds its way to the surface. They feed ravenously on any kind of grease or other matter. They come as near being in perpetual motion as anything that lives—they are never at rest except when asleep. As they are seldom, if ever, seen on land and for a long time it was a mystery how they managed to raise a family; but of late years it has been discovered that thousands of them rest in crevices of rocks on certain Antarctic islands, January and February being the months that they devote to the children. On some islands the pair dig a horizontal burrow just under the roots of the grass, and leave the single white egg there.

The young are probably fed only once or twice a day, as the mothers spend their time far out at sea, and it would be out of the question for them to carry food in their bills for several hundred miles, so the mother just eats it herself, and when she gets home she divides with the baby by forcing up some of the partly digested food. Not a very nice way, it is true, but under the circumstances it is about the best she can do.

Sailors call the petrels Mother Carey's chickens, and they have a superstition that if any one on board injures or kills one of them that some disaster is sure to happen to the vessel, so they are never harmed if the sailors can prevent it. When unusual numbers of petrels are seen, it is thought to be a sign that the weather is going to be stormy. But the rougher the weather, and the higher the waves, and the more the water swirls and foams,, the happier the petrels seem, at any rate they are then more active, probably feeding on what the commotion brings to the surface. They have the distinction of being the smallest web-footed birds known.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

June 10—The Arrest and Trial.

Scripture Basis—Mark 14:45; 15:15.

Golden Text—He was despised, and rejected of men. Isa. 53:3.

Jesus Delivered

The battle had been fought and won in the Garden of Gethsemane. The events following were comparatively insignificant to our Saviour, for they doubtless appeared before him in awful foreboding as he struggled in the Garden. So when the betrayer with the Roman soldiers came to take him, he submitted without resistance. The disciples were near by but were frightened. Peter, in an effort to demonstrate his pledged loyalty, drew sword and sliced off the ear of the servant of the high priest as he dodged the weapon to save his head. This displeased his Lord, who rebuked Peter and immediately restored the dismembered flesh. Observing the other affrighted disciples, this impetuous leader lost his nerve and slunk back with the rest. Soon they all fled, and as John Mark, the writer of this gospel, pulled away from a would-be captor, he left his linen covering and fled naked. Peter still tried to be bold by following his Master, but afar off. This was the first step toward his denial; this is the first step toward our denial of our Lord.

Jesus Denied

Jesus was then taken to the palace of the high priest, where had gathered the chief priests, elders, and scribes. Peter succeeded in getting into the court yard, where he could witness what was going on. In an effort to appear indifferent, as he warmed himself by the of Nazareth. He was led from the high priest's palace to Pilate's judgment hall. This Roman ruler was corrupt, as were many of them in that day, but we must give him credit for making a feeble effort to save our Lord. He could find no fault in him. IMPORTANT NOTICE—LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL AT SEMINARY POSTPONED

We regret the necessity of announcing that our Denominational Standard Leadership Training School, which was to have been held in in the Seminary at Westminster, Maryland, June 5-16, has been postponed indefinitely. This is necessary for a number of reasons:

Some of the instructors have had to cancel engagements because of illness; the fact that the school follows so closely the dates of our Young People's Convention and General Conference makes it impossible for some of our workers to attend who otherwise would do so; because of the unusually heavy pressure of work incident to the Young People's Convention and General Conference and in view of the large number of Conference Leadership Schools which are to begin in the near future, our workers find it impossible to be away from the office for this length of time just at present; and only a few registrations have been received, thus indicating that the attendance would be relatively small.

Executive Secretary.

It consists in blowing rock dust, pulverized shale, sandstone, gypsum or other stone against the walls, ceilings and floors, where it clings to the surface. Fires started by exploding dust are snuffed out when they reach the rock-dusted area, limiting fatalities to one or two. A PRAYER

Almighty God, we adore Thee, we praise Thee, we worship Thee as "God over all and blessed forever." The world is not only the source of all supplies for man, but a great school in which generations continue to learn. Here science finds all of its material for human convenience and progress, and beyond the earth "the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork." Colleges are created and operated to aid the young in finding the path that leads to God. They are the depositors of thought, prayer, purpose and money. They are built on the rock of ages, and should honor Him in their pursuit of knowledge. We acknowledge Jesus Christ as the Founder of Christian colleges, as they do not exist where He is unknown.

Our prayer is for all colleges, that they may continue to grow in their buildings, their facilities, their endowments, their students, and their service for the church and the kingdom. To this end we pray that Thou mayest inspire men and women of means to give liberally, that financial strain may be lifted, that the church may reap a harvest of men and women who will honor Christ and extend His kingdom in the world. Give those in authority wisdom to direct, to teach, and to inspire holy aspirations in the minds of the young. Remove all hindrances to Christian character, all organized frivolities of a worldly nature, all show and pride. May the spirit of consecrated effort, the courage of honest work, the loyalty of honest hearts, and the "faith that works by love" make diligent study after truth. Help our colleges to find the truth by finding Jesus Christ, "who is the way, the truth, and the life."—Christian Sun.

WATCH CHILDREN'S SPEECH

All children's speech, the experts advise, should be watched from the very beginning. Training along this line cannot be begun too soon. In fact, it should be begun as soon as a child begins to talk. Such training, of course, must be very simple, consisting merely of substituting right habits for wrong. The difficulty of overcoming wrong habits in speech, says Hygeia, is in exact proportion to the length of time they are permitted to exist. Many fond mothers and fathers delight in talking baby talk to their baby. This, we are told, is one of the worst things that can be done. From its earliest years a child should be spoken to in correctly and distinctly articulated words, and these words should be in simple but complete sentences. Also, any defect in speech or of the mouth and vocal apparatus should be corrected in early life.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Concord.—There were 316 present in Sunday school Sunday. A good congregation heard Rev. C. S. Hartridge preach a splendid sermon at the morning hour, and at night another good sermon by Rev. W. R. Gross, D. D. These ministers are from Orlando, Fla., and stopped over on their way home from General Conference with Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Hendry.

Mrs. S. C. Cass furnished flowers for the church Sunday in memory of her father.

We were glad to have Rev. Raymond Hallick, of High Point College, fill the pulpit for us on May 20 in the absence of our pastor, who was attending General Conference in Baltimore.

Since our last report, death has claimed one of our most devoted and loyal members, Mrs. Lee Reed. Mrs. Reed had been a great sufferer for over a year, and had been under treatment in several hospitals during that time, but nothing could stay the hand of death. On Thursday night, May 10, she quietly passed away. (Funeral services were held in the church on Saturday afternoon. In the absence of her pastor, Mr. Hendry, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, of Kernersville, a former pastor, had charge and was assisted by Rev. T. W. Fogleman, pastor of McGill Street Baptist Church, this city. The funeral services were attended by a large crowd and the floral offering was large and beautiful. Interment was made in Oakwood cemetery.

Mrs. Reed was the daughter of the late R. O. Atwell and Mrs. Atwell and was 41 years of age. Besides her mother, she is survived by one daughter, Miss Adelaide Reed, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. D. T. Campbell, of Tolar, Texas; Mrs. Tom Vanderford, of China Grove, N. C.; Mrs. Ed Powers, Mrs. Edward Kerr, Mrs. Robert Phillips, of Mooresville, N. C.; Mrs. C. H. Cox, of Newton, N. C.; Clark and Smith Atwell, and Mrs. Earl L. Helderman, of Concord. MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Henderson.—We have made great steps forward in the Sunday school work by the increase of attendance and new members. This shows what can be done when we but try. A contest among six of our adult classes has been carried on for six weeks now, closing last Sunday, with the Baraca Class and Mr. Clyde Finch's Class as winners. They are to be the honor guests of the other classes in the future when a supper will be given.

The Young Ladies' League met May 17 at the home of Misses Gertha and Myrtle Trogden. The president, Mrs. H. A. Jordan, presided. The general routine of business was followed and reports given. During the meeting the Efficiency Club was discussed and voted on to be carried out this year. The proposition to buy new pedestals for the church was brought up, however, no motion was made. Mrs. C. F. Tanksley, Jr., gave an interesting talk on our work in China during the program period. At the close of the meeting the hostesses served refreshments.

Rev. R. A. Hunter was called home from the General Conference last Sunday to conduct the funeral of Mrs. Jane Harris, widow of the late Major J. Harris.

On Sunday morning, May 27, our pastor gave a very interesting account of the opening of the General Conference in Baltimore. Mr. Jasper B. Hicks, also a delegate from this church, reported some of the important events of that wonderful occasion. A complete report will be given in the Herald, I'm sure, later. Following these reports Rev. R. A. Hunter preached a short but most impressive sermon, using Paul's words found in Galatians 6:9, "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Most helpful and encouraging was this sermon, especially to those of us who long for quicker results from our Christian efforts. At the evening service a young graduate of Westminster Seminary, Mr. Robertson, who is here for the interest of the Hulbert's Bible Story, gave a splendid sermon, using for his text the words of Christ on the cross, "I thirst." On Wednesday night at prayer meeting Mr. Roberts, an associate of Mr. Robertson's, will make the talk for the evening.

All the friends and members of our church were indeed delighted to have Mr. Geo. B. Harris present at the morning services yesterday, after an illness of several months.

Rev. R. A. Hunter and Miss Mattie Hayes, accompanied by little J. B. Baity, Jr., motored to High Point to attend the graduating exercises of the High Point College of which Miss Helen Hayes is a member.

Mrs. A. B. Young and Miss Lucy Taylor attended the Baraca-Philathea convention at Durham last week. REPORTER.

Tabernacle Charge.—Memorial services were held at Tabernacle church on the third Sunday in May. Rev. G. W. Holmes preached the memorial sermon at 11 a. m., and Rev. W. F. Kennett preached in the afternoon. Both sermons were instructive and inspiring. The choir furnished special music for this occasion. Every grave in the large cemetery was decorated with flowers. Visitors were present from High Point, Greensboro, and other nearby towns.

Preparations are being made at Julian and Tabernacle for Children's Day services.

Bro. C. R. Fields, who had the misfortune to break his leg, is again occupying his pew at Tabernacle. Miss Lizzie Hardin has returned from the hospital much improved. We miss her from the services at Julian.

Bro. C. G. Hunter recently joined Tabernacle church on profession of faith. We gladly welcome him into our fellowship and communion.

Miss Elizabeth Hanner, of Julian, represented Tabernacle charge in the Young People's convention at Baltimore.

Bro. C. R. Fields and wife have our sincere thanks for one-half bushel of strawberries.

H. L. ISLEY.

Cleveland Circuit.—We are glad to report that our work is progressing nicely. Our pastor is doing a wonderful work; he is preaching many of his sermons in harmony with the Sunday school lessons, which are very effective. Memorial days seem to be the spirit of the churches at present. The memorial services were held at Pleasant Hill the third Sunday; the speaker for the morning was Hon. Clent Newton, of Shelby, N. C. The memorial will be held at Kistlers the first Sunday in June. The speaker will be Mr. Newton. We are hoping for those folks a good time.

The memorial service was held at Oak Grove the 27th; the speaker for the morning hour was Hon. O. Max Gardner, of Shelby, N. C. A very large crowd was present to hear the next governor of North Carolina. The writer could see faces from a good many of the nearby churches; everybody enjoyed the fine speech.

We are glad to state that Bro. Seth Irester filled our pastor's regular hour at Mt. Moriah the 27th. Bro. Irester is one of our most promising young preachers.

Cleveland Circuit has purchased the land for the new parsonage which will be erected this summer. CHARLIE GRANT.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—Bro. Ridge preached for us today, giving us another good sermon. We all like to hear him preach. We love to have him and family come in our homes. We welcome him any time.

The Lord's Supper was administered. The congregation was small, but seemed attentive.

We were glad to have Brother Ridge in our Sunday School and to have him give us some information on the lesson. We have had Sunday school but two Sundays in some time; measles and bad weather. But we hope that we can go forward now and have a good school yet, although the time is short; only about two months until revival meeting will begin. Brother Ridge will preach for us only twice more before the camp meeting, which will begin the third Sunday in September. We ask all Christian readers to pray that there may be a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit. May many souls be saved.

Last Sunday was a good day at Chapel Hill; all-day services. We had some good speeches from some of the brothers from the other churches on the charge; glad to hear them talk on Sunday school and other things. We were glad to have some of the orphan children from High Point to speak.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The attendance and interest in Sunday school is very good. We have increased our number on roll from 61 to 72. Our Sunday school is planning to have Children's Day some time soon.

We had a very large congregation at the morning service Sunday. Brother Spencer used for a text the first commandment. It was a splendid sermon. We were very glad to receive Mrs. C. R. Knight in our church at this service.

The Missionary Societies held their monthly meeting with the writer on May 15. We had a splendid meeting. Mrs. W. A. Ellington conducted the devotional. Our society is getting up a missionary quilt. We are also planning to have barbecue to sell some time soon. Our next meeting will be with Mrs. Henry Tidewell.

Several of our people went to Louisburg and Greenville to hear Rev. Billy Sunday.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—The church and community of Midway were saddened on Saturday, May 19th, to hear of the sudden death of Bro. B. W. Delopp, who had been a member of this church for 40 years. He was a man who was loved by all and was always ready to help those in need. The funeral was conducted on Sunday afternoon at the home by Bro. W. F. Ashburn, attended by a large crowd, and the flowers were many and very beautiful.

Our church is at last finished, and is very attractive indeed.

We had our opening services last Sunday with all-day services attended by a large crowd. There would have been more had it not been a rainy day. Brother Kennett preached the first sermon, which was good. In the afternoon Bro. W. D. Reed, our former pastor and who deserves much credit for this new church, preached for us. We were glad to have these good men with us.

Brethren, pray for us.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Efland, Orange Charge.—On the evening of May 22nd, death claimed Mr. H. Douglas Brown. In the passing of Mr. Brown our community has lost one of its best citizens and our church one of its charter members. He was a good man, a regular attendant at church services when his health would permit. He was 68 years of age. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, three sons, C. C. Brown, of Greensboro, J. J. and C. W. Brown, of Efland, one daughter, Mrs. C. A. Bivins, of Hillsboro, and seven grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted May 23rd by his pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, assisted by Rev. O. B. Williams, and interment was made in the M. P. Cemetery.

The work on our new church is progressing nicely. We hope to be back in it soon.

Our Sunday school is about to get back to normal again. We hope to have enough regular attendants to fill up all our new Sunday school rooms which are nearing completion. Every one is cordially invited to come to our Sunday school every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Come once and we will try to make you want to come again.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—No report has been sent in from this charge for some time by the reporter; sickness has kept her from church.

Rev. B. M. Williams filled his appointment Sunday afternoon and he brought us a splendid message.

The work of the church seems to be moving along nicely; the attendance at Sunday school is increasing some, but still could be much larger.

The vote for candidates for delegate will be taken at Chestnut Ridge the second Sunday in June.

Children's Day service will be held here the fourth Sunday in June; all-day service, dinner on the grounds.

ANNIE SQUIRES, Reporter.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Sunday, May 20, was a great day for Mt. Zion. In spite of misunderstanding regarding the date of the memorial service, there was almost a full house all day.

Sunday school looked and sounded like some of the spirit of other days when our average ran around 150 and we are sure our attendance will continue to increase. However, today, 27th, there were but very few braved the steady downpour of rain that started falling about 8 a. m. Memorial service brought us closer together. When we see so much hand-shaking over the congregation at one of these memorial services, those of us that are together every Sunday feel almost ashamed of ourselves when we begin to try remembering when we took each other by the hand. We become so engrossed with our housework and so many material things that even my neaerst neighbor and I become strangers, so to speak. We almost let formality reign in our Sunday school and church service and rush off without taking time to be holy, shaking hands with each other and telling our pastor that we appreciate his sermons.

The superintendent and teachers need encouragement of this kind a lot of times that would help so much. Then comes the memorial or home-coming service that brings about a renewal of Christian fellowship. They are grand and glorious services. We want to take time here to say to every church that has not held an annual memorial or home-coming, by all means, if at all possible, not to let another single year pass without holding a service of this kind.

Our program started at 11 o'clock. Bro. Frank Swanson, of Pilot Mountain, a young man who has just finished school and is starting in ministerial work, gave a fine sermon that was very befitting the occasion.

Dinner was served on the grounds, mostly in picnic fashion, and was successful in every way.

At 2 o'clock the congregation re-assembled. This service opened with several songs by the choir, after which Brother Hunter gave a splendid talk on how he thought we might best do service in memory of the pioneers of our church that have passed on. Among other things, and outstanding, he said we should by all means do them honor and remember their efforts in behalf of our church by building new churches and making things more attractive. His closing remarks dealt with things he saw and heard at Baltimore while attending the recent session of the General Conference. His discourse was enjoyed to the utmost.

We would not feel just right not to mention Bro. Osborne and his good wife, of Greensboro. They drove from their home about 50 miles and got here in time for Sunday school. (Isn't it funny how some of us can't get up and drive a mile or two on Sunday morning to Sunday school?) Bro. Osborne gave some splendid remarks on his experience as a tither that we believe was a real eye-opener to some of us.

Our hearts and doors were wide open to each one present and we feel that it was good for all of us to have been together.

The service closed after a kind of expressional service in which several took part.

Our message is: Pray, attend church, and shake hands in memory of what our Lord has and is doing for us.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary auxiliaries met with Mrs. A. A. Currin Wednesday, May 23. Mrs. Cary Cheatham, president, had charge of the program. The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Maude Hight. The Jubilee secretary, Mrs. J. W. Wrenn, presented the Jubilee plans. Mrs. John Wrenn read the prayer calendar. Prayer was offered by Mrs. A. A. Currin, after which the Bible-study was taken up. It is planned to have a Bible lesson at each meeting. The dues and "nickel shower" monies were collected. Roll call was answered with Bible verses. After reading of the minutes the meeting adjourned to meet in June with Mrs. John Wrenn. The hostess served a delicious ice course.

The missionary rally of district No. 2 will be held May 31 at Mt. Carmel church.

The pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, will hold his regular appointment next Sunday.

The Children's Missionary Auiliaries will meet this week.

Miss Delphie Harris, who is a student at Meredith College, is spending her vacation at home.

REPORTER.

Yarborough Chapel.—Our second quarterly conference has been held and was very well attended. The business was transacted and interest manifested in our church work.

Brother C. T. Hughes and General Lee Gossett are the nominees for delegate to our Annual Conference.

W. B. SURRATT.

Rockingham.—The Sunday school is working nicely. Collections and attendance good. The interest seems to be fine.

On Sunday evening, May 27th, our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, brought to us a very interesting and helpful message. Miss Nettie McLean sang a solo, "Sin Caused It All," at this service.

We have formed a Christian Endeavor Society in our church. We hope to see it grow and be of much benefit to the church and community. The officers elected were: President, Mrs. J. H. Trollinger; vice-president, Miss Thelma Horne; secretary, Birdie Connell; vice-secretary, Miss Lizzie McQueen. May the Lord bless us in what we undertake to do in His name.

We are expecting to begin our revival next Sunday night, June 3. Rev. C. E. Phillips will be the pulpit help. We have had Bro. Phillips with us before and very much appreciate his presence. We are very glad to be for tunate enough to have the expectation of his being with us through another revival meeting. Pray for us that great good may be accomplished for our Savior during this time.

BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

Grace Church.—The Senior Christian EndeavorSociety recently elected new officers. Ernest Scarborough was elected president. The society hopes to do a great work during the coming year.

The church greatly regrets the leaving of Miss Gwendolyn Mitchell, who for the past year has been singing in the choir. We know that she will have a better chance for good training.

The congregation heard one of the best sermons yesterday. Mr. Tamblyn preached about "Success." There is no test of human character more truly trying than success." He said that success was not always best for people. In a recent letter published by Mr. Roger W. Babson, he says: "During a period of prosperity people become dishonest, extravagant, and selfish; the interest in religion declines, and the people feel self-sufficient. To endure success, one must walk humbly before God and love nothing better than justice and kindness."

Mr. Tamblyn spoke last Sunday night to the graduates of Curry High School, Greensboro. His sermon, "The Enlistment of Life," was especially adapted to the young people of the class and the classmates who attended. Mr. Tamblyn urged that all through life the young girls would go with God.

Tabernacle.—The third Sunday in this month Memorial Service was observed at our church. A large crowd of visiting relatives and friends were present. We are always glad to welcome them. The speakers for the day were Rev. G. W. Holmes and Rev. W. F. Kennett. Their talks were very interesting and inspiring.

Last Sunday our pastor and the Moriah pastor exchange pulpits. Rev. Mr. Carmichael delivered an interesting sermon. We hope he will visit us again.

Our Sunday school has enlarged some in the past month, but the attendance is not what we would like to have. Plans are being made for Children's Day service.

The Foreign Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. William Smith last Saturday afternoon. One new member was added to the society. After the meeting Mrs. Smith, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Norman Fields, served delicious refreshments.

GOLD MEDAL FOR "THE WIZARD"

Thomas A. Edison, "the electrical wizard," was highly honored last week by the National House of Representatives. The House passed a bill which would authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to have a gold medal made in commemoration of Edison's achievements. The bill also provides for duplicate medals in bronze which would be sold to the public at a price that would cover their cost. It seems certain that the Senate, too, will pass the bill, and that it will be signed by the President.

The measure, which is in the form of a joint resolution, was reported to the House by the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. Representative Perkins, of New Jersey, the chairman of that committee, estimated that industries based on or aided by Edison inventions have a total value of nearly $16,000,000.—Current Events.

AMERICANS IN CHINA

The American population of China is now less than 9,000. A census taken by American consuls shows that the total number of Americans living in that country on January 1, 1928, was 8,569. The American population of China reached its highest point in 1923, when there were 12,530 Americans living there. Since that year, many Americans have returned to the United States. The civil war in China makes that country a dangerous place for foreigners.

Baltimore church, West Forsyth charge, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, pastor, is the "honor roll" church this week, having paid the college assessment in full. We trust that this may be an inspiration to other churches, and that this list may grow rapidly now. To date, 20 charges have paid the college assessment in full, and 13 churches on other charges. Let's double these numbers during the month of June. Can't we do it? There is nothing like a try, so here goes the challenge: 40 charges and 26 churches on other charges "in full" on college assessment by June 30. Fall in line, now, please, and everybody moving together to do this thing! There will be interest in seeing what charges and what churches bring up the count. Watch the reports!

Pastor Hill reports Porter paid in full on all assessments. Hats off to Porter! As soon as reports are made to Treasurer Idol, proper recognition will be given in our financial statements.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Brown

H. D. Brown died May 22, 1928, aged 68 years, three months, 14 days. He first joined the Hebron M. P. church, later transferred his membership to Efland M. P. church, where he remained a faithful member until death.

He was one of the charter members of the Efland church and at the time of his death was a class leader of this church.

As our Efland church is being rebuilt, funeral services were conducted from the Efland Baptist church by the writer, assisted by Rev. O. B. Williams, May 23, after which the remains were placed to rest in Efland M. P. cemetery. The large congregation present showed the esteem in which his memory is held.

Bro. Brown was a good citizen, a good neighbor, a good churchman. The writer has lived by him for three years, consequently he knows the above statements are true.

Of his immediate relatives who remain are one brother, one sister, his loving companion, three sons, Julian J., and Curtis, of Efland, and Chas. O., of Greensboro; one daughter, Mrs. C. A. Bivins, of Hillsboro, and seven grandchildren.

He will be missed in the community, in the church, but most of all in the home.

May God comfort all the bereaved ones.

Sincerely,

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Kirkman

Mrs. Pearl Kirkman, wife of Mr. Edward Kirkman, was born June 3, 1891, and passed to her reward May 2, 1928. Before her marriage Mrs. Kirkman was Miss Pearl Reynolds, daughter of J. C. Reynolds. She was converted and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church at the early age of twelve, and was a faithful and active member until death. God's will was the law of her soul. Obedience to that will was the inspiration of her life. Tabernacle community is poorer because of her passing, yet her influence lives on.

She is survived by her husband, her father, Bro. J. C. Reynolds, three brothers and three sisters.

Revs. W. F. Ashburn, G. F. Millaway, T. M. Johnson, C. W. Bates and T. F. McCulloch assisted the pastor in the funeral at Tabernacle May 4. She was then laid to rest in the nearby cemetery.

Gibson

L. Fox Gibson was born October 4, 1876. His spirit took its flight from the body on Sunday morning, May 13, 1928. He was 51 years, five months and nine days old. He was married to Clara Lou Russell February 5, 1899. To this union were born three children, two boys and one girl: Theodore, Marvin, and Mary. Brother Gibson was reared in Randolph County. He moved from Randolph to High Point, N. C., soon after his marriage in 1899. He remained in the city of High Point the rest of his life, except the year 1912, at which time he lived in Richmond, Va.

Brother Gibson was converted in a revival meeting conducted here by Rev. Jim Green in the year 1925. Soon after his conversion he united with English Street Methodist Protestant Church. He remained a faithful and loyal member until his death. He loved his church; he wanted to see it progress. He was at the church with his efforts and money when there was anything to be done. He was a good citizen. He was indeed a friend to man, for when he saw a person in need he was there with assistance.

Brother Gibson leaves to mourn their loss a wife, two sons and one daughter, his mother, two brothers and one sister and a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral service was conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. C. H. Hill, of Albemarle, and T. E. Pierce, of High Point, in the First M. P. Church of High Point, Monday, May 14. His body was interred in the city cemetery on Tuesday at 10 o'clock, committal service conducted by Rev. G. L. Reynolds, of High Point.

The floral offerings and the crowded church at his funeral testified as to how Brother Gibson was held in esteem.

May the comforting and sustaining grace of God, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost comfort and sustain the grief-stricken family, relatives and friends of the deceased.

D. I. GARNER.

IS RHUBARB POISONOUS?

Most of us enjoy rhubarb pie, rhubarb sauce and the like because of the tart taste rhubarb has. But many people are afraid to eat anything rhubarb because they believe it is poisonous. True, rhubarb contains a considerable amount of oxalic acid and oxalic is a poisonous acid. But one must eat an enormous amount of the food in order to consume a dangerous amount of the poison. It is very rare that a person consumes a sufficient amount of rhubarb to suffer from its poisonous effects. The oxalic acid really helps make rhubarb acceptable as a food. However, cases of "rhubarb poisoning" have occurred, either from eating very large quantities of rhubarb or when the victims were very susceptible to the action of the acid. Yet it is safe to say that almost any one can enjoy a slice of rhubarb pie or moderate indulgence in almost any rhubarb dish without fearing the consequences.—The Pathfinder.

CARRIER PIGEON WON FAME IN WAR

The dean of the war-time carrier pigeons, "Charlie," is dead. So says the Associated Press in a dispatch from Lille, France.

The pigeon's owner, Maurice Richardson, an Englishman, was able to conceal the bird during the four-year German occupation of Lille, and Charlie carried hundreds of valuable messages to allied authorities. Since the war he has received a "pension" of two francs a month from the French government.

THE FEMALE STRANGER

In the fall of 1816 a man accompanied by a woman arrived in Alexandria, Va., and put up at Gadsby's Inn. These strangers were well dressed and appeared to be persons of quality. The woman, however, was very ill and soon died. The man was taciturn and would give no information about himself or his family.

He purchased a lot in St. Paul's Episcopal cemetery in Alexandria in which to bury his wife, giving as payment a draft on England, which, it is said, was dishonored. Over the grave he erected a tombstone, consisting of a large marble slab resting on six supports. On the stone, which contains no name, were inscribed the following words:

"To the memory of a Female Stranger,
Whose mortal suffering terminated
On the 11th day of October, 1816,
Aged 25 years and 5 months.
This stone is placed here by her disconsolate
Husband, in whose arms she sighed out her
Latest breath, and who, under God,
Did his utmost, even to soothe the cold dead ear of death.
How loved, how valued, once, avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot;
A heap of dust alone remains of thee;
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be.
To Him gave all the prophets witness, that through His name
Whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins."

After the burial and the erection of the stone the stranger disappeared as mysteriously as he had come, and has never been heard of since. There is a local tradition that he was once seen in prison in one of the northern states.

Many speculations have been made as to who he was. Some writers have attempted to associate the Female Stranger with Theodosia, who was supposedly lost at sea in 1812, while on a voyage from Charleston to New York. But the mystery has never been solved. The inscription on the gravestone is still legible, and the little plot of ground in St. Paul's cemetery is known as the grave of the Unknown Female Stranger.—The Pathfinder.

INDIANS ARE DECREASING

Contact with the white man has reduced the Indian population of America north of Mexico from about 1,153,000 pure bloods in their aboriginal state to about 406,000, including a high percentage of mixed bloods. These are the totals arrived at after extensive investigation by the late James Mooney, of the Bureau of American Ethnology and published now for the first time by the Smithsonian Institution.

The story told by Mooney's figures is not a cheerful one. It shows tribe after tribe wiped out by the diseases, guns and dissipations of the white man. A series of great epidemics of smallpox, beginning in 1637, seems to have been the most potent single factor of destruction. The white men carried the disease wherever they penetrated.

Among the New England tribes destructive wars, like King Philip's War of 1675-76, with their accompanying slavery and head bounties, decimated the tribes. The Gulf State Indians suffered from slave raids organized by the English of Carolina. "In 1702," Mooney wrote, "the Chickasaw admitted to Iberville that in 12 years they had killed or captured for slave traders 2,300 Choctaw at a cost to themselves of more than 200 men."

The revolt of the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico and Arizona in 1680-92 against the Spaniards wiped out the two largest pueblos and inaugurated a decline which has continued to the present. The California Indians dropped from about 260,000 in 1769, when the first Mission was founded, to 19,000 in 1907—a disaster to which the evil effects of unaccustomed confinements, epidemics, widely prevalent infanticide, the dispersal and starvation of the Mission Indians after 1834, and wholesale massacres and robberies of stores by the gold seekers of '49—all contributed.

In sections like the northwest and Alaska, where firearms were little used against the natives, they fell victims to whiskey and diseases and decrease in food supplies caused by whalers and traders. "In the winter of 1878-9, some 400 natives of St. Lawrence Island starved to death in consequence of the introduction of a cargo of whiskey in the preceding summer, causing them to neglect their hunting through continuous drunkenness.

One of the few bright spots recorded of the white man's treatment of the Indians is the story of Danish colonization in Greenland. Mooney wrote: "The Danish government and the resident missionaries have been particularly careful and successful in shielding the natives from outrage, liquor and other destructive agencies so common elsewhere in the contact of the savage with civilization." The Eskimo population of 10,000 in 1721 when the Danes came, had grown to 11,000 in 1907. —The Pathfinder.

FAMOUS FRANKLIN TREE

John Bartram, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1699, is known as the "father of American botany." Linnaeus termed him "the greatest natural botanist in the world." In 1765 Bartram traveled through the Southern colonies and near Fort Barrington, Ga., he discovered a rare and beautiful flowering shrub or small tree of the Camellia family. He named it the Franklin tree, in honor of "that patron of science and truly great and distinguished character, Dr. Benjamin Franklin."

Strangely enough, the Franklin tree has never been found growing wild anywhere else. It was never seen around Fort Barrington after about 1790. Fortunately Bartram's son, William, who was with his father when he discovered the Franklin tree and who later became a noted naturalist himself, later returned and gathered some seeds of the shrub and planted them in his garden in Philadelphia. Only a single seedling survived. This one had been transplanted to an acid corner in the garden. It grew into a good-sized tree, and, multiplied by cuttings, is the source of all the Franklin trees that government experts have been able to locate.—The Pathfinder.

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP

Editor Our Dumb Animals:

I recently learned of a rather remarkable case of the conversion of a trapper. The facts are as follows: In going his rounds this trapper stepped into one of his own bear traps. Being miles from any human help, he found that he hadn't with him the screw clamp which he usually carried to compress the powerful springs. By dint of great exertion he succeeded in cutting down with his jackknife the only sapling of sufficient size within his reach for use as a lever. This, however, broke against the unyielding jaws of the trap. He was about to do what many a trapped animal has done—amputate his own leg. Yet one more thought came to him. Twisting his body into such a position that he could hold the muzzle of his rifle close to the end of one jaw of the trap where it is reduced in size to serve as a pivot, he fired. The bullet broke the pivot. His foot was freed. Then came a solemn vow never to set another steel trap. R. L. W.

—Who wrote the book of Genesis? Did a geologist write it? Did an astronomer write it? Did a biologist write it? Did any sort of scientist write it? Not hardly. The brevity of all that pertains to natural science shows that no scientist was the author of the book. Neither is it the product of a legalist or historian. Some religious teacher certain of a few great truths was unquestionably the writer of this first great book of the Bible. First, he was certain of God. Secondly, he was certain that God made the world. Thirdly, he was certain that God made man in his own image. He was also certain that man sinned. Another thing this writer knew was that God was very real to the people of that day. Are we still certain of these truths? —N. C. Christian Advocate.

LINCOLN'S PRIVATE PAPERS

The following very interesting statement was recently issued by the Library of Congress:

"The letters, manuscripts, documents and other original private papers which constituted the literary remains of President Abraham Lincoln, and which passed into the possession of his family at his death, were presented to the United States of America to be deposited in the Library of Congress by a deed of gift dated January 23, 1923, from Robert Todd Lincoln, the then sole surviving child of Abraham Lincoln, and the absolute owner of all said papers and letters.

"The conditions of the gift were that the papers should be deposited in a sealed vault, and should not be opened to official or private inspection until the expiration of 21 years from the death of said Robert Todd Lincoln.

"The gift was made in perpetuity and for the benefit of all the people. It was acknowledged by letter of the librarian January 23, 1923, which merely recited the terms above and expressed proper appreciation of Mr. Lincoln's action."

These literary relics consist of about 10,000 letters, documents and manuscripts. They are stored in six small trunks. Naturally historians and biographers are anxious to get a peek at this wealth of original material about Lincoln. If the terms of the agreement are carried out—and they certainly will be—the papers will not be inspected either privately or officially until 1947—21 years after Robert Todd Lincoln's death in 1926. —The Pathfinder.

CHRISTIANS AND ANIMALS

It seems too bad to call the dumb animal a brute. It is the one who walks on two legs and calls himself man that is the brute in many cases. The man who delights to roam the woods and shoot God's innocent creatures for sport is not the man I call Christian, even though he may have the fine theory.

Show me the boy or girl that loves to have pets and treats them kindly, and I will show you the man or woman who in after years will make the good citizen and kind neighbor. When a man has been soundly converted and becomes a true Christian in the fullest sense of the word, the horse, dog, and cat will find it out. I believe there will be animals in the kingdom on earth made new.

Let me say, no one can abuse God's dumb creatures in my presence while I keep silence. I not only say something, but if they persist I am quite liable to do something. Educate the young to be kind to all animals.—Our Dumb Animals.

SLEEPING IN CHURCH

This is frequently attributed to bad ventilation. But bad air is not always to blame. Paul's man was sitting in the window when he went to sleep and fell out. Neither is dull preaching to blame in every instance. Paul was not a dull preacher. In fact, wherever he went there was either a riot or a revival and sometimes both. Yet they went to sleep under the preaching of Paul.

There is a grave responsibility, however, upon the preacher at this point. As a rule the pew does not snooze if the pulpit be on fire. Beecher said that when he had nothing to say he always "hollered." That may help, but people soon become accustomed to noise. "The miller wakes when his mill stops running" is an old saying based upon fact. Some people in church if the noise were to cease would wake up.

The general's instructions to his soldiers who asked what they should do if their ammunition ran out was, "When out of ammunition, cease firing." That is wise admonition to a preacher. Furthermore, there is little question that long sermons make short pastorates.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

He was on the side of a Pennsylvania mountain when his brakes failed. He was rushing down grade and feared that at some curve he and his family would fall over a precipice. To prevent this he turned his car toward an embankment with the result that his car was overturned and he was killed and his wife and daughter seriously injured.

All friends and former members are cordially invited to return for this year's annual celebration.

The Agony of Jesus in Gethsemane

There has been much conjecture as to the nature of Jesus' sorrow in Gethsemane. The gospel writers describe his sorrow and indicate the awful weight of it, but do not give much hint as to the real cause or nature of it.

One conjecture is that it was mere dread of the physical torture and death which he must endure the next day. As the hour for his predicted sufferings drew near, his human nature naturally revolted against the endurance of it, and he instinctively sought a way of deliverance from it. There is much plausibility in this conjecture, yet we do not believe it touches the secret of his sorrow.

There is another conjecture, that his agony was one of fear that he might not live to act his great part on the morrow, that anticipation might prematurely end his life and that he might not be able to carry out the great purpose of his life by dying on a cross. This conjecture seems to have less probability than the other.

When we take into view all the circumstances and all the phrases used to describe the experience, we are led to another view, not a strictly definite one, yet a view wholly distinct from the others.

One phrase used is that he began to be "sore amazed." This would seem to indicate that he was entering into an unprecedented experience, so different from anything he had ever felt before that he was amazed. It was an experience of sorrow such as the "man of sorrows" had never entered into before. He told the three disciples with him that he was oppressed with sorrow, almost ready to die under the crushing weight of it. Surely it was a sorrow greater and more profound than the mere anticipation of physical pain. He had accustomed himself to the thought of the cross and the shameful accompaniments. Other men have faced terrible bodily death without a tremor. Jesus was here suffering something not given to other men to pass through. What was it? The reason the gospel writers did not tell us probably was they could not. We cannot know, but we can well believe, that he was enduring some fearful spiritual agony incumbent on him as the world's redeemer. He had taken upon himself the guilt of a world of awful sinners. Could he bear that load without agony of soul? Surely not. He bore it that we might never know the awful final results of sin. It was so terrible that he prayed that he might be delivered from it if possible. When he realized the necessity of it, he said, "Not my will but thine be done." The sufferer of Gethsemane was in that hour the hero of the ages. We will never know what he endured for us in that hour. Even his sufferings on the cross cannot be compared with his Gethsemane sorrows only in the extremity in which he felt himself forsaken of God and cried out in his desperation, "Why hast thou forsaken me?"

The Coffin Argument

Years ago the editor of the HERALD was called on to go to Madison, N. C., and preach in the Presbyterian church. He went on Saturday afternoon and was entertained in a boarding house. At the close of the afternoon the regular boarders came in from their work. Among them was a dress-maker who claimed to be a spiritualistic medium. She saw me sitting on the piazza, and made this comment to her associates: "Ah, the new minister; I see a coffin by his side." I did not hear the remark but it was repeated to me by one that heard it.

I was not in the least terrified, but I might have been had I not in previous years investigated the doings of spiritualistic mediums, so-called. I have wondered what the motive of the speaker was. But it must have been the common motive of those who employ the coffin argument, a desire to intimidate.

Dr. ——, a Greensboro physician, made a better use of this argument. A lady came to him for treatment. He prescribed a course for her; it was so full of requirements that she frankly told him she would not do it. He said to her: "Then if you prefer any particular style of coffin, you would better have it ordered." This brought her to terms.

Our fear of coffins has a mighty restraining effect upon us. We don't like to think that somewhere in the world is the tree from which the boards of our coffin will be sawn, if they have not already been sawn. But the coffin is only for the body. Why not think more of the soul's destination?

—A useful handbook has been compiled by The Fellowship Forum, of Washington, D. C., called the American Political Reference Book. It is full of matter interesting to the average citizen. You will find in it the presidential campaigns sketched from 1789 down to the present. You will find the various political parties listed with an outline of their platforms. You will find the candidates for the presidency in all the campaigns and a statement of the number of votes received. You will find brief biographies of the presidents. You will find information as to salaries of federal officers. You will find a list of all the governors of the states now in office. You will find a complete list of all members of Congress now serving and information as to their religious affiliations. And you will find more than this. This book of 112 pages in paper binding sells for 50 cents and is worth it to the citizen who wishes to keep abreast with political movements.

Salvation becomes a delusion unless it is perceived that it means righteousness. Heaven and the saints' everlasting rest become worthless and misleading ideas unless we recognize that it is the abode of goodness, and that saints are not, as we sometimes seem to imply, bad people regarded as holy by a legal fiction, but people who are made good and are actually holy.—*R. CENTENNIAL ASSEMBLY AT BALTIMORE

Salutation by Rev. Thomas H. Lewis, D.D., LL.D.

Members of the Twenty-Fifth General Conference, Fellow Methodist Protestants from Twenty-Eight States, and from Japan, China and India, Distinguished Guests and Friends:

In the name of our Lord, whom we serve, and who hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light, I salute you as brethren beloved, and bid you a joyful welcome to our Centennial Assembly. Through all the vicissitudes of a hundred years God has graciously led us to the close of the first century of the organized existence of the Methodist Protestant church. And now, in the city of its origin, we have assembled to give thanks to God; to meditate upon the strange provisions of our history; to make an inventory of results; to deliberate upon our tasks for the new century; and to lay on our altar a small gift to express our gratitude. At the beginning of this twenty-fifth quadrennial gathering of our people from all parts of this land we would pause to mark with simple ceremonial our sense of this crowning mercy of God to us, setting up a stone, and inscribing upon it, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

If in this glad time our joy urges us to walk about our beloved Zion, going round about her, telling the towers thereof, marking well her bulwarks, considering her palaces, that we may tell it to the generations following, it will not seem inappropriate to the occasion, I am sure, nor the exhibition of any undue pride.

The Methodist Protestant church has come out of great tribulation; and though it may not dare to claim that it has washed its robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb, in the perfection expected of us by our Blessed Lord, it may humbly rejoice that through all the years of its many trials it has heard his encouraging voice saying unto it: "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

He has fulfilled this promise to us beyond all we could ask or think. He has given us for our century birthday gift, and I open it for you tonight, the largest membership we have ever had in our history, the greatest increase coming in the very last year; the largest number of church buildings and much the most splendid; the largest number of Sunday schools and young people's societies, the greatest increase coming the last year; and an aggregate of collections for our benevolent and missionary budget thirty per cent larger than that of the preceding quadrennium, or of any in our history. We are joyful tonight, therefore, not only that we still live after a hundred difficult years, but that our eye is not dim, nor our natural force abated. According to his good promise we are renewing our strength; we are mounting up with wings as eagles; we are not weary of running nor faint with walking.

The name under which this church was organized in 1828 was "The Associated Methodist Churches," proposed by Rev. Nicholas Snethen, perhaps the most prominent of our early leaders. Two years later this name failed to command sufficient votes to incorporate it in the constitution adopted in 1830, and the present title, "The Methodist Protestant Church," was adoped on motion of Rev. Francis Waters, D.D., the most scholarly of our leaders, and at one time the president of the oldest college in the State of Maryland. Our name has been frequently subjected to careless if not malicious alterations. In the early days we were called "Radical Methodists," "New Side Methodists," and other caricaturing names, and to this day we are often designated "Protestant Methodists." In fact, not a few of our own people suppose that the word "Protestant" was intended to suggest that we were making a protest against the Methodism of that day. Doctor Walters always denied this intention. He claimed, in explaining his motion, that he used the word for the same reason that the adherents of the Church of England in America used it in styling their church "The Protestant Episcopal Church," to ally it to the great Reformation of Luther. But the first word of our title indicated our first love for Methodism. If the contention of our fathers that laymen should be admitted into the councils of the church had gained a few more votes and a few less expulsions, they would never have left the old church, nor organized a new one. It was ordered otherwise, however, and Methodism took a new trend towards democracy. The trend has evidently come to stay, and no matter what the Methodist Protestant church has or has not done, or what may be its destiny for the future, it has stamped upon Methodism for all time its idea of equal rights for the ministry and laity.

In all matters of theological doctrine we are legitimate descendants of the Church of England. John Wesley died a member of that communion. In matters of church polity, we are Presbyterians. So much so that it is not surprising that more than once it was suggested in the days of our beginnings that our name be "The Methodist Presbyterian Church." But matters of doctrine, spirit and method, or at least practice, have been so modified, tempered, and distributed during the century that it is difficult, if not impossible, now to completely isolate one body of Christians from another by a name. We are satisfied with the name given us by our fathers, but we are determined that our name shall never exclude us from fellowship and communion with any who "have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ."

Having achieved a name and an organization under a written constitution, our fathers at once set about finding their task in the ecclesiastical vineyard. The task at that time was simple and obvious. They were Methodists, and up to that time the inspiration of John Wesley held them fast to the single conviction that "God had thrust them out to spread Scriptural holiness over these lands." In common with all American Christians of that day, their conception of this duty was almost wholly of a personal character, and was limited to their immediate environment. The social implications of the Gospel had little emphasis in their ideas, and their neighborhood was the only world they clearly saw. To repent, to believe, to live a holy life and constantly to persuade some other sinner to do likewise, comprehended the whole duty of a Christian as they understood it. The first Methodist university was not organized until three years after our church started. The first Methodist missionary did not leave America until four years after our church started. These were the days of the first missionary society, the first Bible society, and so on. The eyes of our fathers were holden from the great developments yet to come. To preach the Gospel and to get their neighbors converted was Methodism's task, first, last and all the time.

Our fathers in prosecuting this simple task had peculiar difficulties, however. They had no churches. In most instances they quietly left the churches they had helped to pay for and went out without receiving any financial consideration. I can learn of but one exception to this rule, and that, I am proud of say, was where our people had the majority in the membership, but agreed to a division of property interests with the minority. Everywhere our people had to start from the ground. The preachers that joined them were largely local preachers, that is preachers without a pastorate. For this was a movement that concerned laymen almost wholly, and regularly settled pastors were slow to give up their certain provision for a livelihood to cast in their lot with those whose future was so precarious in every respect. So they had to provide pastors as well as churches. And they had to bear not only extraordinary financial burdens, and the prospect of failure, but, what was much harder to bear, the stigma of schismatics, it appeared, who had renounced allegiance to Bishop Asbury only twelve years after that saint had gone to heaven, and divided Methodism by stressing new-fangled notions of the rights of laymen, instead of confining themselves to saving sinners and minding, not mending, the discipline.

I have been some sort of a student of this history for more than fifty years, and I have no reason, even if I had the disposition, to be boastful of what these men accomplished, for ours is still one of the small denominations, and the great church from which we parted still pursues its triumphant way unhindered by any sensible decrease in numbers, resources or success because of our defection. But I declare to you that when I think of the opposition, the slender resources and the solemn responsibilities our fathers faced, I am amazed at their audacity, their faith, their devotion to a principle, and their determination to make their contention good before an unfriendly generation. I will not suffer them to be called whimsical faddists. The light they saw was no ignis fatuus. They blazed the trail for a freer Methodism, for a truer conception of Christian brotherhood, and for a more responsive, because a more responsible, laity. And for their sakes I rejoice, yea, and will rejoice, that this church could live and has lived a hundred years, and that today its numbers, its vigor, its resources and its faith are greater than they have ever been, and its star of hope shines before it more radiant and more benignant than when our wise men followed it a hundred years ago.

> "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake."

There now remains for me the pleasant duty of giving a special salutation and welcome to the representatives of four great Christian churches, who as good neighbors come with their felicitations on our joyous festival.

In the early days we had to get not only new churches and new pastors, but new friends. Alienated by a long and acrimonious, albeit a somewhat academic, controversy from their Methodist brethren, and with neither great numbers, wealth nor influence to recommend them to others, our fathers appreciated all the more those who showed friendly consideration and fellowship. One outstanding instance of this was the cordial tender of their building by the St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, located on Liberty Street of this city, in which to meet and organize the new church. That property was afterwards purchased by the new Methodists, and still remains, although on a new location, the St. John's Methodist Protestant church, where our General Conference meets today in its twenty-fifth, as it met one hundred years ago in its first, quadrennial session.

It is a peculiar pleasure to us, therefore, to welcome, as one of our guests on this occasion, the Right Reverend John Gardner Murray, D.D., bishop of Maryland and presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church, and to express to him the appreciation our fathers transmitted to us as a sacred legacy for this early and magnanimous courtesy of Christian fellowship.

Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D.D., president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, comes to greet us in the name of the many Protestant denominations co-operating in that great organization. Doctor Cadman had his early training under English Methodists, and we feel that this fact will somehow render his fellowship with us easy and natural. But his sympathies are so broad and generous that he is at home in any Christian assembly, and, in fact, his voice sounds equally pleasant in them all. His cosmopolitan pulpit, and his vast audience of those who listen in, give him the largest congregation, perhaps, in the world today.

With your permission, Dr. Cadman, I move that this assembly adopt you as a Methodist Protestant. All who favor this motion, please raise your hand.

Another instance in our early days of genuine fellowship was the generous welcome our fathers received from the Presbyterian church. I have already mentioned the fact that the Presbyterian model of church polity was largely followed in our organization, so that in a sense Presbyterians might be regarded as our godparents. Whether it was due to this, or to their long experience as dissenters enlarging their sympathies, or to their natural charity and broadmindedness, Presbyterians from the first welcomed and fraternized with our ministers, opened to us their churches and treated us in all respects as brethren. And through all the years it has continued so. It has been our happy experience frequently to welcome their people into our communion in localities where they had no church. And although I must in candor say we have never known them to change their convictions about their own church, they have always loyally co-operated with us in all our denominational work.

Rev. J. Ross Stephenson, D.D., former moderator of the General Assembly, and president of Princeton Theological Seminary, comes to greet us in the name of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., and we welcome him most cordially. We wish him to bear to his brethren the assurance of our deep appreciation, nurtured by a long and pleasant experience, of the many kindnesses we have received from that great church. We will never forget and we shall continue to teach our children to remember that when we were a feeble folk the multitude of Presbyterians, rich and powerful, did not delay to put their loving arms about us and encourage us to the perseverance of the saints.

Rev. Charles Wesley Burns, D.D., one of the forty-four bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church, has been delegated by his Board of Bishops to represent here tonight the perfect good will and Christian fellowship existing between our two churches. We are specially glad to welcome him to our family circle tonight.

It would be mere affectation in me, or in you, Bishop Burns, to ignore on an occasion like this that old controversy between our fathers. Neither of us was born when our honored sires raged so furiously together about church polity. We are not willing to designate that history as "bunk," but I assume that neither of us will think it worth while to rage over history. Unhappily there are always some on both sides of a controversy who persist in keeping it up long after the principals have hoisted the signal to cease firing. Bishop Asbury and Nicholas Snethen have long ago resumed their former intimate traveling companionship. Editor Bond and Editor Lipscomb have laid aside their trenchant pens for the mightier weapon of the golden harp. John Emory and Asa Shinn have left the noisy arena of the General Conference debates, and are now uniting in a unanimous report that it is good and pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity. They are all at peace, the peace that passed their understanding while they were on earth. But we triumph over the saints in this respect. We have already entered into peace

> "While here on earth we stay,
> We more than taste the heavenly powers,
> And antedate that day."

I beg you, Bishop Burns, to assure your brethren that I speak for this General Conference, and for the whole Methodist Protestant church, when I say, "God bless the Methodist Episcopal church." We glory in your strength, your numbers, your wealth, your successes; but more, for the magnificent stand you are making in these modern days, these compromising days, for "righteousness, temperance and judgment to come." And let me add for those to hear who are just now so exceedingly mad against you, that we love you for the enemies you have made.

And God bless all the churches. We love them all. We desire a league, offensive and defensive, with them all. There cannot be too many churches while sin abounds, and hearts ache, and human problems multiply. Let love also abound, and the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ abound in us all and through us to the uttermost parts of the earth.

And if I forget thee, O my own beloved, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah; if I do not remember thee, at least in this thy day; if I prefer not thee above my chief joy, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth.

God bless the Methodist Protestant church; with long life do thou satisfy her, and show her thy salvation.

THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE

The Pastors' Summer Conference will be held in conjunction with the Young People's Conference and will begin July 16 and close July 20. "The Pastor and His Work" is the theme of the conference. It is hoped that a full program will appear in the next issue of the HERALD. The slogan that should be before us just now is, "Every pastor for full time attendance." The laymen of every charge should see to it that their pastor goes and that his expenses while there are paid in full. This should not mean much to the people of the charges, but it would mean much to the pastors and it would mean much to the charges in what they would get as service from their pastors. If some good layman on each charge would take it upon himself to raise the necessary amount to pay his pastor's expenses at the conference there would be little doubt about our pastors being present. It is hoped that this will be done. Bro. H. A. Garrett has been asked to act as lay leader to assist in this matter with the hope that laymen on our various works might become interested in caring for this matter. Any one raising the necessary amount will please direct same to Bro. Garrett, whose address is R. D. 7, Burlington, N. C., or the undersigned. Let's get busy and see to it that every pastor is made to feel that his people want him to have full benefit of the summer conference.

For Christ and the church,

GEO. L. CURRY, President.

FIFTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT OF WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE

Students may come and students may go, and faculties, however stable and stern, may pass from the scene, but the "Old College" goes on—if not forever—yet usually for countless decades. The historic campus may occasionally change its dress, and buildings may seem to be under some kaleidoscopic law of shifting patterns, yet the institution itself, amidst ordinary vicissitudes, abides through generations, and stamps its impress on one's children, and their children's children. Yet, the institution is the product of the personalities that have made it, and immortalizes the ideals and the names of those who have wrought it and for it.

Another class, that of 1928, has just stepped out of the portals of W. M. C.—to re-enter many times in the future as visitors or in some other loving capacity, we hope—into the yawning world. We hope it has individuality enough not to be swallowed up without registering at least its protest against any political or moral wrongs that may seem to exist, and vitality enough to record somewhere its loyalty to ideals that shall not perish from the earth.

Kindly Boosted Out—and Up

Thus it almost seemed as Thursday, May 24, was given over to senior farewells. First, the juniors, in good traditional form, paid their respects in a unique play, a burlesque prophecy, and the loving-cup circle farewell. Then the sophomores planted the memorial ivy. The Poets' Club met in the tea room for a poetical farewell to their seniors, and then after dark the freshmen in their beautiful lantern chain service on Hoffa Field escorted the senior girls to and from the field in dignified processional between gold and green Japanese lanterns, with appropriate music. Once more, on Sunday, the Sunday school, through Mr. Wesley Day as spokesman, and Mr. McGowan and Mr. DeHaven as soloists, and a male "septet," said its sincere farewell. After all these spectacular and musical hints the seniors were with difficulty persuaded to stay over for commencement.

The Great Indian Play

Friday night, June 1st, the erstwhile Indians of the Dakota and Objibway tribes, in fantastic ceremonials, with weird rites and mystic lights, showed the fine work being done in the Department of Dramatics.

"Hiawatha" was dramatized in one of the best plays ever put on in Alumni Hall. In six highly colorful scenes, under the skillful management of Miss Esther Smith, Indian life and traditions were impressively portrayed, including home-life, courtship, wedding feast, war dance, famine hardships, funeral scene, and the coming of the White Man. The cast included Miss Mills as the Spirit of Legend; Miss Ward as Hiawatha in childhood; Miss Logue as Nokomis; Mr. Barnes as Hiawatha grown and chief of the Objibways; Mr. Lambertson as Iagoo; Mr. Meredith as "Arrowmaker"; Miss Shockley as Minnehaha; Miss Schlinke as Owaissa; Mr. Callihan as Pankukkeewis; Mr. Phillips as the musician, and a large retinue of Indian men, maidens, and the White Priests. The efficiency of the Speech and Dramatics Departments under Miss Lease and Miss Smith was well illustrated by this and other plays during the year, and in Western Maryland College's success again this year in carrying off first honors in the State Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest.

Speech Contest for Norment Prizes

The Norment Prizes in Speech, one might suppose, are offered as stimuli to the freshmen and sophomores for oratorical effort, to discover latent genius, or bring to the fore budding statesmen, publicists, and aspiring suffragettes. The contest is always successful as a display of varied talent in interpretation of literary masterpieces, folk-lore, etc. On this occasion, Saturday evening, June 2nd, the freshmen were represented by Misses Helen F. Eckard, Viva May Reed, Ruth Anne Roop, Messsr. Hayes B. Callihan, of Kentucky, William C. Rein, and Clarence O. Sullivan. The sophomores were represented by Misses Asenath A. Bay, Catherine E. Read, Matilda F. Thompson, and Messrs. Wilmer V. Bell, Clarence T. DeHaven, and Mason B. Sterling. Misses Laura A. Hutchins and Mary A. Bennett interspersed vocal pyrotechnic with excellent instrumental numbers.

Baccalaureate Service

A beautiful feature of this annual service at W. M. C. is the splendid Christian fellowship shown in the union of a number of the Westminster churches on Baccalaureate Sunday for both morning and evening worship, the various pastors having some part on the programs and the congregations united in one worshipful body—a concrete example of the deepening and broadening of spiritual life through co-operative endeavor for the promotion of the common good and appreciation of universal values in human life.

The processional, this year with seniors, faculty and visiting speakers only, marched into Alumni Hall, singing the usual processional hymn, Luther's "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

The opening number on the program was a violin solo, "Romance," by Wilhelmj, played by Kurt Alt, of Bohl's Orchestra of Baltimore, with Miss Harris as accompanist. Rev. Charles M. Elderdice made the invocation, and the college choir, under the splendid leadership of Miss Mabel Harris, rendered impressively Dudley Buck's magnificent anthem, "Te Deum." The choir never has had better voices than it has this year, and solo and chorus parts of all numbers were unusually fine and well-trained. The Ten Commandments were then read by Dr. Stephens, with impressive choral responses by the students and choir. Rev. J. N. Garner, of St. Paul's Reformed Church, then read the 115th Psalm. Vice-President McDaniel made the usual announcements and Dr. Edward Hayes, of the Centenary M. E. Church, read the Scripture lesson, Genesis 12. The grand old hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," was sung, after which President Ward, announcing the presence of President-Emeritus T. H. Lewis on the platform he had so often graced in former years, introduced the preacher of the day, President Geo. W. Richards, D.D., LL.D., of the Lancaster Theological Seminary, whose message was one of great spiritual significance and power. The text was a part of verse 3 of the 12th chapter of Genesis, "So Abraham went," and the theme might have been "Loyalty to Visions," or "Faith as the Basis of a Successful Life." A fool Abraham was for going, the world would say. Think what he left behind in Haran and Chaldea, where he had lived 75 years—kinsfolk, friends, possessions, safety. Obsessed with an idea he went forth and his kinsmen could not understand him and pointed at him fingers of scorn. Still he went forth, as the Epistle of the Hebrews says, not knowing whither he was going. If he was a fool for going, what a fool he would have been for staying! His life would have been a dismal failure—perhaps lived in luxury, died, been buried, but the world would never have konwn there was a man like Abraham. He would have been like an "unseen flower wasting its fragrance on the desert air."

Huxley's striking phrase, "the sin of faith," might have meant "the sin of credulity." But "faith" is the scientist's best venture, and an element without which he loses all that makes him pre-eminently a discoverer and truth-finder. Abraham seemed to have thrown all precaution to the winds, and to have taken no account of resources at hand, and without a man to guide him across the desert, or chart marking the way, he went forth. Not knowing the land to which he was going, still he went forth! A foolhardy venture, says the worldly wise man. Man ought not to walk by faith when he can walk by sight. This objection is true in part. If a child is sick, it would be foolhardy to trust to blind faith. It would be wise to use all medical resources possible and avail oneself of the skill of the physician. Soldiers going to war must not ignore the question of resources, strength of the enemy, etc. Only in this knowledge can they go forth intelligently. As we celebrate the anniversary of Lindbergh's great achievement, we do not forget the intelligence shown in his acquainting himself with material forces, laws, and resources, but after every possible precaution he went forth over the deep. The great things of life are not accomplished by sight alone. The Apostle says, "Without faith it is impossible to please God." The things that abide, that become a part of character, that live on when time and space are no more, are not done by sight but by faith! As Lord Balfour says, "All great movements in life have had their beginnings in the irrational and the unreasoned. There is a voice more trustworthy than 'reason,' a way more safe than the way of sight. When a man dares to make the venture of faith, he will reach the goal designed of our Maker."

Is this not true in all departments of life? In statesmanship, it is when men forget themselves in service, and stand for justice, truth and national honor at any cost, they belong to that group of humanity who have gone forth in faith, and are true sons of Abraham. Those who have turned the current of the world's history are those men and women who ventured forth not by sight but in faith.

In Durer's "The Four Evangelists," the light of faith that shines on Paul's brow is the light of a conqueror, and shines clearer than that of Alexander the Great. It is a light that reaches the bounds of the earth. Paul, once a Jew, but with a vision that now could look not merely at Jerusalem, or at the city supreme in a pagan empire, the eternal Rome, where he would stop off and preach—set his eye on Spain, and beyond. The whole world was to share the light. Luther, nailing his ninety-five theses to the door of the church in Wittenberg, could not see far ahead, but he was making the venture of faith, and became the leader of the modern age and modern Christianity. Lincoln, the rail-splitter, seeing the iniquities of the slave traffic at New Orleans, could not see far, but saw in faith a different order of things and said, "If I ever get a chance to hit that thing, I will hit it hard"—and he dipped his pen in ink one day and signed the Emancipation Proclamation. In the venture of faith he had behind him the wisdom of God.

Life has its uncertainties and its certainties. I ask you to weigh the uncertainties over against the certainties. We consider the uncertainties and they take the courage out of us, and we stay at home. Who can tell, we say, how long health will last, what dangers we will meet, our wealth and social standing? We may be rich today and poor tomorrow—applauded today, hissed tomorrow. We really can't build on the uncertainties of life. We can't see very far ahead. But we can build on the certainties. There are some things that are surer than the earth on which we stand, or the mountains which we behold. There are some things more certain than "cosmic certainty," the "nature" above and around us shows everywhere the reign of law. Seasons come and go—summer and winter, seed-time and harvest; generation follows generation. Without these certainties of nature the farmer could not be a farmer, nor could the sailors or navigators of the air travel safely. The reign of law surrounds us on every side.

But there is a greater certainty than that—moral certainty. Two things, said Kant, filled his soul with wonder—the starry heavens above him, and the moral law within him. We may doubt many things in philosophy and in theology—our definitions of this and that. But who can doubt truth, or the beauty of purity, or chastity, or the law of service, or goodness, or the reality of God? On such certainties must life be built.

Socrates of old, in one of the highest utterances of the human mind, said, "No evil can befall a good man." One may lose health, or wealth, or popularity, or be slain with the sword, but "no evil can befall a good man!" In the Christian words of the great Apostle, the same truth is stated, "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord." The message that comes through the great characters of the world—for God speaks through persons, and not stars and rocks only—is, "Leave the lower, the carnal: Go forth! Let inferior things go, that you may lay hold on eternal life."

So, in the light of these words, spoken four thousand years ago, and written two thousand years ago, I speak to you graduates this commencement day. Go forth! Go forth in faith! There is an eternal imperative at every step in life—as the boy leaves home for the public school, from college into the world. Make the venture in loyalty to truth—to God. "No evil can befall a good man!" Jesus calls you. Don't give your lives simply to the making of things, but make men. Make men true, pure, Christ-like. It will not suffice to work for truth and beauty in the abstract, but for good and true persons. When we work merely for ourselves, the universe is against us. When we work for truth and the eternal verities, we are bound to succeed, for the universe is for us. Enter into life's work with due regard to the routine, and for temporal values, and physical laws, but like the great preacher Jewett's mother, sitting at the window overlooking the sea, and open to the sky, "look up at times, to rest your eyes, and to get a larger vision!"

At the close of this inspiring call to world service and a worthy life, the college choir took up the theme and gave musical expression to the appeal in song, "The Voice in the Wilderness," by Scott. Never, one felt, was selection more fitting, or melody more beautifully rendered. The prayer and benediction by President H. L. Elderdice, D.D., LL.D., of the Westminster Theological Seminary, in fine accord with the message and on the spiritual heights of the prophet interceding for his people, closed the service in words that were a benediction indeed.

Sunday Evening Sacred Concert

An innovation was made this year. Instead of the usual sermon before the Christian Association, a sacred concert was given by the Peabody Quartette, of Baltimore. Mrs. Horn's rich soprano, so bird-like in quality, was the voice of one superbly trained in her art, while Miss Nuensinger's contralto, and Mr. Martinet's tenor could not be praised too highly. And Mr. Bibb, as accompanist, was perfect.

Society Reunions

On Monday afternoon the four literary societies—the Webster and the Irving representing the men, and the Philomathean and the Browning representing the ladies, held open house for visiting alumni and alumnae, serving refreshments and listening to programs and speeches from old "grads." Of course, one big object was to "pep up" a little their respective performers in the contest that was to come a little later in the evening.

Annual Literary Society Contest

Oratorical giants they were, on supposition—and who shall dare to deny the reality of the claim? Literary societies, as they go today, are not in every instance as "literary" as of old—the amusement feature predominating, and "literary stunts" relegated to the Departments of English and of Speech. Yet there are some exceptions—and on especial occasions their oratorical, forensic, and dramatic abilities are simply appalling! Talent is usually discovered and put in training, and energy is concentrated for final release at the June contest. Perhaps no other event of the week so stirs the deeper loyalties, or exercises keener rivalry. The program was full of interest, the essays and orations showing a serious appreciation of real problems, and handling them in a way quite creditable to the speakers individually, and to the societies they represented. Browning was championed by the Misses Thelma E. Reid, of San Juan, P. R., who discussed "Ambition" selfish and unselfish, and Margaret E. Hamilton, of Lonaconing, who vindicated the youth of today in her essay, "Life as I See It." The Philomatheans proved by Miss Mildred E. Raum, of Sharpstown, that "Boomerangs" may be effective for evil or for good in the physical or spiritual realms, and Miss Virginia C. Merrill, of Pocomoke City, that "A Corner of Life" presented, after all, many angles and revealed many underlying principles controlling conduct.

The "Irvings," through Mr. Albert M. Reed, affirmed once "The World's a Stage," and we are actors, and life is the drama variously played, and through Mr. Joseph L. Mathias that we still need great monuments in stone as memorial "Mirrors of the Ages," to record the achievements of the race for the information of future generations. The "Websters" put up Mr. Joe C. Newcomer, of Williamsport, to handle "The Supreme Task of the Hour," which he did very creditably, by urging every one to oppose war; and presented Mr. William G. Eaton, of Centreville, to defend "The Death Penalty" as the only effective way of dealing with criminals.

The music of the evening was furnished by Miss Mabel Warde with Etudes 4 and 2 from Ruberstein, and by Miss Ruth H. Schlincke, who sang an aria from Gounod's "Reine de Saba," with Miss Gesner, of the Music Department, as accompanist.

A New Vision of Spring.—It is said that no two people ever see the same rainbow. It may also be said that no person who is growing as he should in mind and soul ever sees the same vision of springtime again. If our souls have expanded as they should, our vision of spring this year will be a larger and finer vision than we have ever had before. A lady living in eastern North Carolina writes of her increasing enjoyment of the scenes of nature as the years pass. We take this as evidence that her mind and heart are growing. In all the years God has been trying to impress our dull minds with His own glory manifested in the world about us. Happy is the soul that can receive the proffered revelation of God.

Mocksville

June 5.—We were at three of the churches on this charge on this date—Elbaville, Dulins, and Bethel. The immediate purpose of this visit was to present to the people their new pastor, Bro. Jabus W. Braxton, who will serve them for the remainder of the conference year. Bro. Braxton preached at each point visited, and made favorable impressions. We predict that this will prove a happy arrangement for this charge, and that the work will continue to go forward. We were glad to find encouraging signs of progress on the work. Elbaville has recently added Sunday school rooms, and we learned that Bethel contemplated a similar improvement, but was waiting the final location of a hard surface road, the survey for which has already been made near the church.

Mocksville is one of our old charges, and has been served by a number of our leading ministers. As we went to Dulins Sunday we recalled that, as a very small boy, we traveled this same road with our father's family on the way to this same church to worship Sabbath after Sabbath. Little did we think then that in the long years ahead we would drive an automobile over this road and go back, as a minister, to this old church that is so indelibly fixed in the recollections of our childhood. How true it is that we know so little of the paths that await us. We enjoyed our visit to these churches, despite the rain, and our deep interest will continue with the charge. Pastor Braxton is entering zealously and hopefully upon the work, and his people assure us that they will give him loyal support. We are confident of the outcome.

Budgets

The year is rapidly passing, and not a great deal has been paid to date on the budgets. Some charges, however, have done well, for which we are very grateful; many have done something, and we fully appreciate this. There are still a few charges that have no credits at all. We wonder why? Are the people not interested? Are they not able? Do they not have a proper financial system? Is the pastor timid in presenting these claims? Whatever the difficulty, it surely is not insurmountable, and now that the year is more than half gone, it does seem that every charge should have credit for some amount on the budgets.

We are making special effort for the college now. During the month of June we want to enroll 40 charges paying the college assessment in full, and 26 churches on other charges. That is to say, we want to double the number that we have now. It is superfluous to say that the college greatly needs this money. Everybody understands that. What we are assessed is not beyond our ability, and we should raise every dollar of it. We are urging, therefore, that pastors and people heartily co-operate with this June program. Please see to it that your charge, or churches on your charge, pay this assessment in full during this month. Thank you.

Pastoral Visiting

It has been well said, "A house-going pastor makes a church-going people." Some pastors are so situated that they can do more visiting than others. However, this should be regarded by every pastor as a highly important part of his ministerial duties, and one to which he must not fail to give persistent attention. It is to be said, too, that such visiting is not for social purposes. There is, of course, that phase of it, but that is not primary. The minister, in the performance of his ministerial duties, visits in the interest of Christ's Kingdom. In his visitations he is an ambassador of Jesus Christ, and when his visits end, there should be with those he leaves the unmistakable impression that God's man has been with them. His spirit, his conversation, the whole manner of his bearing should give emphasis to that impression. And above all, it should be emphasized in that brief parting moment when God's man stands with bowed head, and earnestly and gladly invokes heaven's benedictions. This, in our opinion, is the sort of pastoral visitation that the people will most appreciate and longest remember.

Pastors' Reports

Nearly all pastors have their reports in for second quarter. A few are still lacking. We shall be grateful to pastors if they will let us have these reports as soon as possible. When they are all in, we will make a digest of them, and publish it in the HERALD.

Children's Day

Some of our churches have already prepared and rendered this program. Please let the offering go promptly to Treasurer Idol. Many other churches, we are sure, will hold this service later. We are anxious that all of our churches do so. It is not too late now to order the program. Send card to Rev. S. W. Rosenberger, D.D., 2525 N. High Street., Sta. B., Box 95, Columbus, Ohio, with request for program, and he will forward, postpaid, at once. Please do this, and let us have the best returns from Children's Day this year that our conference has ever had.

Appointments

June 5, Littleton, for business conference with the officials of the charge.

June 10, Fairfield, 11 a. m. 8 p. m., First Church, Charlotte. (This is subject to confirmation of the Charlotte church.)

TO THE MINISTRY AND MEMBERSHIP OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

REV. J. C. BROOMFIELD, D.D.

President of the General Conference

Beloved in the Lord:

The General Conference in its recent session held in St. John's church, Baltimore, saw fit to call me to its presidency for the coming quadrennium.

This office makes me your leader for the next four years. The responsibilities inherent in such an office are exceeding great, and no man in himself is equal thereto. Because of this fact I come to you, in this my first official message, with two requests.

First, pray for me and my co-workers—the secretaries and the members of the various boards—that together we may be used of God in leading our beloved Zion to new heights of spiritual attainment; and in the winning of multitudes from sin to salvation. This is our major task.

Second, make the new program of the General Conference your program. Generals may plan, and officers may execute, but it is the man in the ranks who wins battles. Hence my appeal to you.

Instead of six appeals for funds as in the past, with their associated competition, we have now only two, with their inherent co-operation.

"Missions and Christian Education" is our new slogan. Everything and everybody is now in the General Conference budget. All cause for disturbing competition has been removed and a new basis for harmonious and efficient co-operation has been provided. We are entering the new quadrennium and the new century as one family. Our gifts are placed on one altar; our eyes are fixed on one goal; our hands are engaged in one task; our feet are found in one path; and our hearts are lifted to one God. Thus united it ought not to be difficult for 200,000 folks to give to the church in one year $500,000.00 to carry out its program for God and mankind.

A sister denomination of similar numerical strength gives six times that amount annually.

Now that everything is in the budget, I appeal to everybody to help pay the General Conference Budget in full in their local church.

Our first opportunity to express our new spirit of unity will be in our Children's Day offering. I am anxious to have every congregation, and every organization in every congregation, get behind the Sunday school in its Children's Day service and make its offering the largest in our history.

A similar appeal for support will come from me in behalf of each special day.

Pray earnestly and definitely for me and my co-workers.

Plan your co-operation definitely and operate your plan zealously.

YOUR MISSION

If you are sighing for a lofty work,
  If great ambition dominate your mind,
Just watch yourself, and see you do not shirk
  The common little ways of being kind.

If you are dreaming of a future goal
  When crowned with glory, men shall own your power,
Be careful that you let no struggling soul
  Go by unaided in the present hour.

If you would help to make the wrong things right,
  Begin at home; there is a lifetime's toil,
Weed your own garden, fair for all men's sight,
  Before you plan to till another's soil.

God chooses His own leaders in the world.
  And from the rest He asks but willing hands—
As mighty mountains into place are hurled,
  While patient tides may only shape the sands.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE KNIGHT OF THE BATH

Miss Bailey had seen it all coming; how, if the class met around at each boy's home, the day would certainly come when it would be Giovanni's turn to entertain, and the big problem was—could Giovanni entertain? And how could they not accept an invitation if it came? She began to feel embarrassed as November, December and January passed, then February, with the time drawing near for the next class party.

But Giovanni himself felt no embarrassment. He came to Sunday school with his face beaming from ear to ear one Sunday: "Say, what do you know about this, teacher, Miss Bailey, we've moved! We got six rooms. Six! And we gotta bathroom! Say, what do you know about that?"

Miss Bailey congratulated him.

Miss Bailey thought that in six rooms there could be no trouble in accommodating the class, and the other boys seemed glad to go, for Giovanni was popular. But little did she guess what lay ahead. For when they reached the new flat so dear to Giovanni's heart, there stood Giovanni beaming more than ever—oh, an eighteen-tooth-wide smile. For it was a proud day for him, to have "teacher" in his own home, not to mention the boys.

"Walk in," he said hospitably. "I like you should see the flat. See, the kitchen here, the sitting room; one, two, three bedroom; the dining room. And now," said Giovanni with an extra pride booming all through his voice, "now I show you the bathroom."

The class poked their heads inside.

Miss Bailey poked her head inside.

The class stared with all its eyes.

Miss Bailey stared with all her eyes.

For the new and spotless bathtub which they had all expected to see was heaped high with—coal! Black, grimy piles of coal, heaped to the very top of the tub! The class looked at Miss Bailey. Miss Bailey looked at the tub! Giovanni looked at everybody gratefully. Quite evidently they were even more impressed and astonished than he had dared to hope. In his polite little voice, he said, apologetically: "Of course, you all got bathrooms in your houses maybe; but we never lived in a flat with a bathroom before, and I got a swelled head over it. I want everybody to see it! Ain't it one nice, fine little bathroom? Ain't it nice and white and shiny?"

"Indeed it is!" Miss Bailey agreed.

"Indeed it is!" echoed the class.

But they carefully kept their eyes away from the tub, and, much as they liked Giovanni, there was a nudging started here and there wherever two elbows came together. And a winking started, too, whenever eye met eye.

"This won't do," thought Miss Bailey, for Giovanni was the one poor boy in the class, and she could not have all the rich men's sons feeling superior, for until now they had all been pals. "What shall I do? What shall I do?" she thought, for at all their parties it was a rule that after the games she should tell a true story. She was fully decided in her own mind that this time the story must help to put Giovanni back on a level with the other boys. But how?

Suddenly she knew, for she spent the game time thinking back over all she knew about bathtubs; and when the story hour came she was ready for the test.

"This is to be a story about bathtubs," she announced laughing.

The class looked a bit sheepish. Was "teacher" going to laugh at poor, ignorant Giovanni! But no, "teacher" was laughing at herself, and at them, and at their Anglo-Saxon ancestors.

"History," said she, "is the most amusing study. Did you ever hear about the so-called Dark Ages?" (Nods here and there). "Well, the better name would have been the Dirty Ages, for back in the days of Henry IV of England, any nobleman who had courage enough to wash himself all over was rewarded with a royal accolade and dubbed a Knight of the Bath, an order which still exists, by the way. Nobody dreamed that uncleanliness mattered, and thousands died every year from plagues which could have been prevented by the simple means of cleaning up and keeping clean. History tells us that the Dark Ages came to an end with the invention of the printing press; the Dirty Ages ended with the introduction of the modern bathtub. How long ago do you suppose this was?

"Just 82 years ago," smiled Miss Bailey. "The first American bathtub was made by Adam Thompson, a cabinet maker of Cincinnati, Ohio. He got the idea of his tub from one owned by his friend, Lord John Russell of England, who at that time enjoyed the distinction of being the only Englishman who took a bath every day."

"Suppressed giggles rippled around.

"Mr. Thompson built himself a gorgeous tub of solid mahogany, lined with sheet lead. It weighed nearly a ton. The water was pumped by hand from a well in the back yard into a tank in the attic. From there it came in pipes down into the tub, one pipe coiled through a chimney to give warm water. Mr. Thompson took his first bath in it on December 20, 1842; he was so enthusiastic about it that he gave a party on the following Saturday night (Christmas Eve) to celebrate the great occasion. History tells us that four of his guests daringly accepted to take a bath in that new-fangled toy. I think they all expected to catch terrible colds! Who, in all America, had ever heard of taking a bath in midwinter? Who indeed?"

This was a surprise to the class. It almost seemed as if the tables were being turned on them! Giovanni was not so peculiar after all, if only 80 years ago nobody in America knew any more than Giovanni knew now.

Miss Bailey began laughing again: "It is funny to tell it, but you boys will be amused to know that the newspapers heard of the affair, and wrote lengthy editorials about it, gravely predicting that if the practice spread, it would spoil America's democratic simplicity. Weren't we started to be a nation of people all equal, and free? The doctors had their terrible warnings against such a ridiculous practice—'Beware,' they said, 'all this foolishness will surely lead to rheumatism, pneumonia and other exceedingly serious ailments.' The clergymen went just as far! From their pulpits they announced that there was only vanity and sinfulness in this daily scrubbing. In Philadelphia a city ordinance actually prohibited bathing between November first and March fifteenth."

"Oh, Miss Bailey!" gasped the class, "in Philadelphia!"

She nodded! "And in Boston one had to procure a doctor's certificate to take a bath. Yes, really and truly. Down South in Virginia the authorities tried to stop this luxurious sin by taxing every bathtub $30 a year! And practically every city boosted its water rates to make bathing practically impossible."

Well! Well! Well! The rich boys were certainly leveled to Giovanni's state, when they realized that their own grandparents had been so violently oposed to the "luxury" which was now a daily necessity in every American home.

Giovanni was entirely unembarrassed. He smiled on everybody present: "I never knew! My mother never knew! My father never knew! Tell me, is the tub for washing yourself in? We never had one before."

"Sure, it's for washing in," explained Tom Anderson promptly. "I take one every day. It makes you feel great."

Giovanni grinned. Then sighed. "My mother, she won't like it. She will say, 'Where we going to keep that coal, huh?' But she will be awful surprised when I tell her about how I must wash all over every day. She'll be as scared about it at first as your grandparents were."

And Giovanni became in his turn, as you have guessed, a "Knight of the Bath."—The Baptist.

PRAYER

But this I know: God answers prayer.
I know not by what methods rare.

I know not when He sends the word
That tells us fervent prayer is heard.

I know it cometh soon or late;
Therefore, we need to pray and wait.

I know not if the blessing sought
Will come in just the guise I thought.

I leave my prayers with Him alone
Whose will is wiser than my own.

DR. HOWARD A. KELLY ON THE BIBLE

(Some extracts from an address of Dr. Kelly, of Johns Hopkins University, at the Princeton Theological Seminary on February 25, 1927)

In 1889 I said to myself that the earlier Christians evidently got far more out of the Bible than I was getting, and I determined to investigate it. I am interested in all science—since this is my Father's world, as the song has it—and being a scientist I follow the scientific method; I ask, "What does this science say for itself?" I do not read newspaper discussions about the Bible, the way many people do. Indeed, some doctors form their medical opinions from newspaper and magazine articles, rather than from first-hand investigation.

So I asked, "What does the Bible say of itself?" I went through the Book—through the Old Testament and through the New—and I found hundreds, yes, thousands, of times that it claims to be the Word of God. Well, I tried it and it worked, and it has been working ever since. I read the Bible in both the Greek and Hebrew originals, and I find it consistent in all its parts. I have not yet seen anything of importance that needed correction. I have seen it confirmed by research, times without number. I believe concerning the Bible that it is all that it claims for itself. Rationally and logically it is God's Word.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

June 10: "How Are Our Amusements a Measure of Our Christianity?"

Rom. 14:7, 13-19

I. Plans for the Meeting

Have a "measuring meeting." Send a notice to each member to bring a ruler or yardstick to the meeting. Have each one to name some amusement and measure it in the light of the standard set by Christianity. Take a vote on which are harmful and which are right forms of amusements with the idea of discarding the harmful.

II. Hints for the Leader

Paul wrote: "All things are lawful for me; but not all things are expedient; but I'll not be brought under the power of any." Explain Paul's reason for this statement.

Play tells: What one does during leisure hours is a pretty fair indication of one's character. Joseph Lee had this in mind when he said, "If you want to know what a child is, study his play; if you want to affect what he shall be, direct the form of play."

"Play the game": The correct forms of play are recognized as the greatest health builders. Wholesome play restores worn out bodies to their normal health. It also develops co-operation and team work. Fair play teaches one to deal fairly in business and other forms of human activity.

IV. Bible Light

1. We are responsible for our influence. Rom. 14:13.
2. We are social characters. Rom. 14:7.
3. We must leave off some things because they harm our fellow associate and our inner self. 1 Cor. 6:12.
4. What we do must be done for the glory of God. 1 Cor. 10:31.
5. What about the social butterfly and the modern flapper? 1 Tim. 5:6.
6. Play should be unselfish. Rom. 12:10.
7. The test of amusements. Matt. 7:17-20.
8. First things first. Luke 12:29-32.

V. Measure in the Light of These

1. Do my amusements hurt others?
2. Do they develop desirable traits of character?
3. Do they stimulate real joy?
4. Do they enrich my social contacts?
5. Do they strengthen or weaken my character?
6. Do they give healthy thought?
7. Are they physically helpful?
8. Do they master me or am I the master?

VI. Debate

Query: "Resolved, that the church should supervise and direct the play life of its members."

VII. Poetry to the Point

When the one great Scorer comes
To write against your name,
He will not write that you won or lost
But how you played the game.

(N. B.—The C. E. notes beginning this week will appear a week later than formerly. For example, this week you will receive the topic for the Sunday of June 10. It is the desire of the writer that these notes shall be of help to all of our Christian Endeavorers of our conference.)

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

June 17: The Crucifixion

Scripture Basis: Mark 15:16-47.

Golden Text: God commendeth His own love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Rom. 5:8.

Consenting to the Crown

Before studying this lesson, it would be profitable to reverently and carefully read Isaiah 53rd chapter, to get the prophet's prophecy concerning the suffering Messiah.

Jesus had been condemned by Pilate and turned over to the Roman soldiers and the mob, who availed themselves of the opportunity to engage in a little sport at the expense and suffering of our Saviour. They dressed Him as a mock ruler, and for a crown they twisted a branch from one of the many thorny bushes into the shape of a laurel wreath and cruelly shoved it down upon His head. Some time previously He could have received a crown from the enthusiastic Jews, but He refused it. This crown of mockery He accepted, and submitted Himself to the basest indignation. We may venture the suggestion that their pastime soon grew monotonous, for such resignation on the part of the victime yielded little return for their efforts.

Carrying the Cross

In conformity with custom, the cross was laid upon the Saviour to carry to Golgotha. Jesus had been under heavy strain; His body was cut and bruised with lacerations and contusions from the scourge of the Roman soldiers; He fell under its weight. Snatching a Cyrenian from the crowd, a Roman officer compelled him to bear the load. O glorious privilege! Doubtless it was considered a disgrace by the hateful mob of Jews, but we may wonder if that Simon did not bear the cross nobly for the Son of God? He cannot bear the cross alone today, Christian friends.

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No, there's a cross for ev'ry one,
And there's a cross for me."

Crucified on Calvary

Onward they trod to the place of crucifixion. The way over which they went is called today Via Dolorosa, which is, the Way of Sorrows. Roman Catholics and others point out the very road or street made sacred by the feet of our Saviour, stretching from the tower of Antonia to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. They mark 14 stations along this way where certain experiences occurred. Protestants do not accept this as authentic. A place outside of the wall which today bears the resemblance of a skull is considered by many as the place of the crucifixion.

Jesus was nailed to the cross and the upright beam was dropped into the hole. He hung to the center cross between two thieves. At His feet was the triumphant mob, the quaternion of soldiers casting lots over His inner garment, and a few of His loved ones. In spite of their jeers, He looked upon them in compassion and said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Think of the meaning of such words! Put yourself in His place—what would you have said? Only those filled with His spirit and following His example have been able to manifest such compassion and forgiveness for their enemies.

Caring for the Corpse

Jesus did not linger in the almost indescribable agony of a victim of crucifixion as long as some. His body had become weak with the pain and strain of preceding cruelties. Six hours of suffering was able all that He could endure. "And Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost." Nor was His body to be left on the cross for the vultures to consume, as was often the case. Joseph of Arimathea, a secret disciple of our Saviour, went to Pliate and begged His body that it might have a decent burial. He was doubtless a man of influence and means. The Roman ruler consented, and the disciple tenderly took the body from the crass, with the assistance of several faithful women, prepared it for burial in his new tomb in the garden at the foot of Golgotha.

He was dead—yes, but as He had triumphed over the death of others while living, so He was victorious over death in His own body. Peacefully He slept during the Jewish Sabbath, but on the first day of the week He came forth a glorified Christ. He is our Saviour; He is Lord of our lives; He is our Intercessor.

"He lives, all glory to His name!
He lives, my Saviour, still the same.
What joy the blest assurance gives,
I know that my Redeemer lives!"

THE VISION OF PERFECTION

I know I am loving, strong, and whole,
Happy of heart, serene of soul;
For, no matter what seems to be,
I see myself as God sees me.

I never can dwell in doubt and gloom,
My mind is like an airy room—
A room that is open, wide, and free;
For I see myself as God sees me.

But whenever it seems that things go ill,
I seek the silence and there grow still.
I know that healing is Love's decree,
And I see myself as God sees me.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheville.—We are all very happy for the coming of Rev. F. W. Paschall this week. On Wednesday night he will be given a welcome service, and at the same time he will thank Bro. Casto and Bro. VanMeter for their services in supplying our pulpit since November 1.

These men have certainly helped us by their messages, their prayers and words of encouragement. Bro. E. C. Faweett has also filled a number of appointments to the edification of all. Bro. Fawcett and family are the same as our very own, so devoted and regular and faithful they have been.

Sunday night a number from the Chestnut Street Methodist church worshiped with us, their church being closed for the evening.

Brother Casto gives a glowing account of the recent General Conference. Our young friend, Oscar Havner, has our sympathy for the accident that befell him a few days ago.

The work here has kept up well during the year. It will now move forward under the ministry of Bro. Paschall. REPORTER.

High Point.—The most notable commencement that will ever occur in the history of High Point College was brought to a close yesterday; notable in the fact that the first four-year class of 45 fine, splendid young women and men was graduated, and this institution, young in years but sturdy and virile in power, has demonstrated to the world its strength. Beginning in September, 1924, with no background nor established precedent, with buildings scarcely finished, it has assembled by degrees a faculty of strong, cultured men and women, a good library, and a plant of which any denomination may well be proud; as Hon. Max Gardner said, it is the only college that he knows in the state of North Carolina whose buildings are in complete symmetry and harmony. They are said to be perfect specimens of the English Renaissance type. Fortunate indeed and happy are the boys and girls of High Point and surrounding community today, for it is in the reach of every one of them, though of limited fortune and means, to obtain a college education at home.

Beginning Thursday evening, May 24, with the Oratorical and Essayist Contest, in which three girls and the same number of boys competed, and on Friday evening, the play, "The Imaginary Invalid," was presented in a splendid manner by the Department of Expression under the direction of Miss Mary Todd, the exercises from first to last were admirably presented and enthusiastically received. Each event was greeted by large audiences, in fact on Monday morning the auditorium was overflowing, and as Dr. Andrews remarked, the trustees can but feel that a new and larger assembly room will soon be imperative.

On Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock the beautiful memorial gate was dedicated and a tree planted by the class of 1928. This gate stands at the entrance to the campus, and is the gift of the senior class, representing love, service, and sacrifice; in fact, some of the members gave up willingly and cheerfully their own personal graduation gifts in the form of checks from relatives to pay their part of the cost of this pledge of love and loyalty from the class. It is built of brick and marble, surmounted by two handsome lamps, and will be an enduring memorial to this splendid group of young people. Class day exercises were held on Saturday evening, when a clever drama, depicting three episodes in the life of the class of 1928, was given in a charming manner: Anticipation, a scene in high school when several students were discussing with their teacher the opening of the college; then Disillusion, when they first arrived, to find the dormitories unfinished, the lights playing hide and seek, and the campus a sea of mud with torrents of rain for two entire weeks; then Realization was represented by the appearance of the entire class on the stage in Roberts Hall. Miss Lucille Morrison, of High Point, having made the highest average grades for four years, delivered the valedictory, and Miss Lillie May Braxton, Snow Camp, N. C., the second highest, was salutatorian.

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock the baccalaureate sermon was delivered to the senior class by Rev. Chas. D. Sinkinson, D.D., pastor of Christ church, Atlantic City, N. J. A most imposing and impressive scene was the procession of faculty and seniors in the classic Oxford gowns and caps with vari-colored hoods as they marched into the seats reserved for them in the First church. Dr. Spahr, Dr. Andrews, and Dean Lindley were seated in the pulpit with Dr. Sinkinson, surrounded by palms, ferns and baskets of lovely flowers. Mr. Ernest B. Stinson, who will be head of music department in the college next year, sang a solo with charming effect. A lovely violin duet was rendered by Miss St. Clair and Mrs. Grover Kester. Dr. Sinkinson, who has been pastor of the same church for 34 years, took for his text the familiar verse from John 10:10, "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." After giving different definitions of "life" from the dictionary, scientists, poets, and the Bible, he declared that though death is a great mystery, life is a still greater one. He deplored the conversation of the average group of Americans, which is filled with talk of baseball, football, races, theatricals, politics, radio, and the like, with no passion to do or say something about the Kingdom of God. Every man must love something, have a ruling passion, a governing ambition in life. As examples of men who dedicated their lives to noble achievements, he noted Peary, who discovered the North Pole; David Livington, who went into the wilds and marshes of darkest Africa; John Howard, John B. Gough, apostle of temperance, and the great Christian statesman and philanthropist, Lord Shaftesbury. He told the seniors that all around us men are asking for help, and opportunities for service beckon us on every hand. He begged these boys and girls to work incessantly, conscientiously. If we want success, we must pray as well as work. Instead of the time-honored "Now I lay me down to sleep" of blessed and hallowed memory, he would suggest that sometimes they pray thus: "Now I get me up to work, I pray thee, Lord, I may not shirk. And if I die before the night, I pray that my work is all right." As these eager young souls, with faces turned to the morning and unafraid, push out into the great avenues of usefulness and take up the tasks and responsibilities of life, he admonished them to keep in mind the question, "Am I doing my best?" so that when the last lesson is learned, and the book of life is closed, they may be greeted by the well-earned plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

On Sunday evening Dr. Andrews gave a touching and affectionate farewell address to the seniors in the college auditorium. Mr. Ernest B. Stinson was again the soloist in this delightful and impressive service.

On Monady morning at 11 o'clock the closing exercises were held in the auditorium, and the speaker was Hon. O. Max Gardner, of Shelby, N. C., our next governor of North Carolina. Always eloquent, he surpassed himself on this occasion. He paid beautiful and loving tribute to the mothers of the graduating class, who by patient toil, loving sacrifice, and loyal devotion have made possible this happy day in the lives of these 45 young people. He said that the small denominational college will fill a great need, and be the salvation of our commonwealth. His subject was "Christ's Arithmetic," and it might have well been delivered as a sermon in any church in our land. He advised the members of the class to take the Bible as their standard of conduct, and Jesus as their pattern and guide. He says the young people of our grand state have the best heritage of blood and ancestry in the world for they are purest American. After this masterful address by a man full worthy of the gubernatorial seat in our grand old state, medals were presented by Rev. Paul S. Kennett to the following: Essayist medal to Miss Vista Dixon, Liberty, N. C.; the oratorical medal to Jacob Robinowitz, given by his father; a medal for best all-round girl to Miss Helen Hayes, Henderson, N. C.; one for best all-round boy to Fred Hauser, King, N. C. Degrees were then conferred. At 1 o'clock the alumni luncheon was served in college dining hall. A creditable art exhibit was on display in Roberts Hall.

The Vacation Church School, under leadership of Rev. E. Lester Ballard, will open June 11, and will continue three weeks. There were 100 boys and girls in attendance last year, and probably 150 to 200 are expected this year.

Eight members of our church or Sunday school will graduate from High Point high school next week: Mary E. Adams, Annie Robbins, Farnk H. Robbins, Elizabeth Reitzel, Grace Koontz, Ruth Penny, Ivan Hill, and Kermit York.

Holt McPherson is a member of the graduating class from University of North Carolina.

Minnis and family with us for this service. Bro. Minnis spoke to us in the afternoon. He used India for his subject. His talk was enjoyed by all who heard him. Wish that more could have heard him.

Our revival meeting begins first Sunday in August with Rev. J. Clyde Auman as help.

We will be very glad to have Mr. Auman with us again. He once served us as pastor. We ask the prayers of all you people that we may be revived.

We are very glad to have Misses Mae and Gladys Snipes, graduates of High Point College (our college), with us in our Sunday school and church again.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

Charlotte Church, Richland Ct.—On Sunday, June 3, Hr. Gurney Ferree, of South Carolina, filled Mr. Love's appointment at this church. He preached a fine sermon from Luke 19:10: "For the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." We were glad to have Bro. Ferree preach for us, who with his family is visiting homefolks near Asheboro. He has many friends here who wish him success in his work.

We are sorry that Mr. Love was unable to be with us Sunday, on account of the ill health of Mrs. Love. We are glad that she has sufficiently recovered to be able to go to her old home near Asheville, and hope that the change will soon restore her health so that she will be able to be with us again. We miss Mrs. Love very much.

Our Sunday school attendance has increased since the weather has got warmer. But it should be better yet. We have about one hundred on roll and our average attendance is about fifty. Our Sunday school collection every first Sunday goes to the Children's Home at High Point.

A part of the graveyard at our church is in a neglected condition. We are planning to work on it every Saturday afternoon until it is well cleaned.

There is a singing in progress at our church now, taught by Mr. A. M. Fentriss, every Saturday afternoon and at night for eight more days. The people in reach of this singing are urged to attend. Mr. Fentriss is a fine teacher and it will be well worth your time to attend these singings.

Sandy Ridge Church, Kernersville Charge.—A memorial service was held at Sandy Ridge the fourth Sunday in May. Rev. J. P. Pegg, of Flat Rock Circuit, preached for us at 11 o'clock and gave us a good sermon. We are all very proud of Brother Pegg. He is one of our own boys and is a member of our church. We wish him great success in the ministry.

Our Sunday school is doing fine. We have 93 on roll and expect to reach the 100 mark soon.

The men of our neighborhood have made our cemetery look quite different. But there is yet more work needed. Our church is badly in need of a new roof. A committee has been appointed to look after this matter and we are hoping to see it re-covered real soon.

The Ladies' Aid Society, which was to have met last Tuesday afternoon, but on account of the rain and sickness was postponed, will meet Saturday, June 9, at 2:30 o'clock. We are expecting to have a short program and would like to get all the ladies of the church to come. We feel sure that if we could get the ladies of our church all to join in and do their "little bit" that we could accomplish something for Jesus Christ and His kingdom. It is our duty to do what we can. All are urged to be present.

Death has visited our church and taken from us a loyal member, Mrs. Malinda Morgan. She hadn't got to attend church much lately but she was faithful to her vows. The largest crowd of people that has been to our church in a long time came to pay their last tribute of respect to this good woman. May the Lord abundantly bless the children and help them to meet mother in the skies.

A number of our young people have recently married and the latest one, we believe, is Mr. Harland L. McPherson, to Miss Grace Cheek, of Mebane, N. C. We wish for each one a very happy journey through life.

Miss Taylor, our all-time young people's worker, is expected to arrive the latter part of this week to assume her duties at this church, and we feel sure that her services will supply a long-felt need in this church and Sunday school.

Best wishes,

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

IN MEMORY OF MRS. D. M. SULLIVAN

Dear grandmother, you have left us,
And we know not where you wander.
But when the sun begins to fade,
We will all meet you up yonder.

We loved you and we loved you true,
And now we know our loss;
But we must think that our dear Lord
Was first to pay the cost.

Oh, how we miss your loving smile,
And the love that was always so true.
But we are waiting for the day
When we may meet with you.

We will meet you at the river,
Where we all have waited long.
Oh, I think I hear the chorus
Of the angels' welcome song.

They are launching on the river,
From the calm and quiet shore.
Where we all will be together
And the weary will sigh no more.

Oh, how I long to be with you,
In those mansions of the blest,
Where we all are cleansed from trouble
And the weary are at rest.

We are waiting for the Boatman,
We are waiting on the shore.
We wil soon be at home with you,
For our journey is almost o'er.

We will wait, yes, we will wait
Until the Boatman comes,
And when He blows His trumpet,
We will meet you in His home.

Oh, how we long to meet you
On the street that's paved with gold,
Oh, how we long to meet you
When we hear the story told.

Your chair will be always vacant,
Your voice we miss so much.
We are going home to meet you,
For the Lord says, "Of Life There Is Such."

A GRANDDAUGHTER, MARY MOSER.

Vance

Laura Jane Dwiggins Vance died May 25th, 1928, aged 77 years, four months and 24 days.

On July 3rd, 1873, she was united in marriage to Virgil P. Vance; to this union were born two sons, Charlie and Oscar. There were also nine grandchildren. Charlie, the older son, died in the faith several years ago. Oscar, the younger son, lives near Pleasant Garden. The husband, Virgil P. Vance, passed on to his reward some three years ago. Sister Vance was converted and joined the church in early life. She was a member of Pine Grove M. P. church at the time of her death.

In the Kernersville M. P. church at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday, May 27th, the writer, assisted by Rev. Wm. Porter, of Kernersville, and Rev. Mr. Wommack, of Pleasant Garden, conducted the funeral, after which her body was laid to rest in the Kernersville cemetery. The many who attended her funeral, notwithstanding the downpour of rain, and the large contribution of flowers was evidence that a devoted wife, a faithful mother, a kind neighbor, and one who loved her church, was much appreciated.

May the God of all grace greatly bless and comfort the bereaved.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Raper

Mrs. I. P. Raper was born November 7th, 1853, and died May 2nd, 1928. She had been an invalid for over two years but she bore her sufferings with great patience.

She often expressed her wish to go home and be at rest, and among her very last words she was heard to repeat a few words of that good old hymn, "Jesus Is a Rock in a Weary Land," and we feel sure that she has now anchored safe in that shelter and is singing with the angels. She is free from all suffering and pain. Her trials and troubles are over and while we miss her we would not call her back if we could. She left three children, 15 grandchildren and several great-grandchildren. Two children and the father preceded her a number of years.

Her funeral was conducted by Rev. Carter, Rev. B. F. Crowder and her pastor, Rev. Smith. The body was then laid to rest by the side of the husband under a beautiful mound of flowers, in the Sandy Ridge cemetery.

The shooting parson then turned his gun on himself and took his own life. He is said to have been crazy, and truly he acted very much that way.

Bro. A. L. James asks us to announce that Children's Day service will be held at Hickory Grove the third Sunday in this month at 11 o'clock. A good time is anticipated.

Richland, Bro. Fred Love, pastor, is the new charge to be added this week to our paying list. Thank you, Richland.

We are reporting this week full payments to date of all charges, including credits due from missionary societies. It is our purpose to keep this report accurate, though we are not infallible. If errors are detected we shall be glad to have our attention called to them that they may be corrected promptly.

We want to express our appreciation for all efforts that are being made throughout the conference to raise the budgets, and to venture the hope that these efforts may increase, now that we are entering the last half of the year. Raising money is not the chief work of the church; yet it is a part of our work, and we must do it up to the full measure of our ability if we are to have the Master's "Well done." There should be from now until the close of the conference year a steady and encouraging increase in budget receipts. Prayer enough and push enough, and it will be even so.

Fraternally yours,

S. W. TAYLOR.

REGISTER! REGISTER! REGISTER!

Who will be the first to register? Register for what? For the Leadership Training School to be held at High Point College July 14-21. We are calling it a Leadership Training School instead of a Young People's Summer Conference. We want 1,200 registrations! This goal is not too high. On your mark, ready, go, and let's reach it by July 1. Reach that goal in one month? Yes, we can do it, the youth of our church can do it. Come on, young people, let's reach this goal in one month! All pastors ought to register first, thereby setting the proper example. Every Sunday school superintendent, every Sunday school member, every C. E. member, and every member of the other organizations in the church ought to register.

Several banners and rewards will be given.

1. All registration agents securing over fifty registrations will be registered free.

2. All registration agents securing one hundred or more registrations will be given free entertainment during the school.

3. The registration agent securing the largest number of registrations will get free entertainment for himself or herself as the case may be, also free entertainment for the pastor of that charge.

4. The district having the largest number of registrations will get a banner.

5. The largest delegation, multiplied by the number of miles traveled to and from the school, will be given a banner.

The person or persons receiving these awards and banners will be publicly acknowledged and the banners will be given at the close of the school.

Register now! Registration fees are 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

METHODIST PROTESTANT MINISTERS AND PREACHERS FROM ALAMANCE COUNTY

Perhaps Alamance county has furnished more ministers and preachers for the Methodist Protestant church than any other county in the state. While in the parsonage of State Street church, Lexington, talking with the pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, the writer began a conversation which was in part on the subject of Methodist Protestant ministers and preachers entering the work of the conference from Alamance county. The writer and the pastor were interested in the subject because each of us entered the work of the conference from Alamance county.

In the recent appointment of Rev. Jabus Braxton to the Mocksville charge by President Taylor, the number of ministers and preachers now in the conference from Alamance county is eighteen, Bro. Braxton making the eighteenth. Those of you who reside in Alamance county are proud, I am sure, of the fact just related in this article. I used the word "perhaps" in saying that Alamance has furnished more men for the ministry than any other county in the state. If there is another county in North Carolina that has furnished more men for the ministry than Alamance, will some one with the facts report it to the Herald? We are anxious to know.

Who are the ministers and preachers who have entered the conference work from Alamance? According to Conference Journal records and the memory of Rev. N. G. Bethea and this writer, the names of the men are given here:

R. M. Andrews, C. E. Forlines, N. G. Bethea, T. M. Johnson, D. M. Loy, G. W. Holmes, R. S. Troxler, L. W. Gerringer, A. O. Lindley, H. L. Isley, P. E. Lindley, C. C. Lindley, W. M. Loy, O. C. Loy, Jr., C. B. Way, C. G. Isley, F. L. Gibbs and Jabus W. Braxton.

It is interesting to note that four of the above mentioned ministers are serving charges in Alamance county: Rev. L. W. Gerringer, at First church, Burlington; Rev. W. M. Loy, Fountain Place, Burlington; Rev. G. W. Holmes, Haw River Mission, and Rev. O. C. Loy, Jr., Saxapahaw circuit.

On Wednesday of this week Mrs. J. W. Boyles, of Thomasville, accompanied by her daughters and son, also Mr. and Mrs. White, came to the Home, celebrating the birthday of Mrs. Boyles, her daughter Isabel, Mrs. White and quite a number of the children in the Home; they were very generous in bringing five gallons of ice cream, and two birthday cakes, which every one declared to be delicious, and all hope they will make an annual visit.

Others enjoying the evening with us were: Captain and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe, Mrs. Gibson, Rev. and Mrs. Bodie, and Miss Winnifred Bodie.

The last feature, but not least, was a recital rendered by some of the children, who are Miss Bodie's students.

Mr. McPherson, of the Sunshine Laundry, again brought sunshine to several of the children by bringing them some nice dolls.

We recently received a nice box of towels from the Mebane W. H. M. S., which is indeed a splendid donation.

For each cash contribution and otherwise we are truly grateful.

A GIFT TO THE M. P. CHILDREN'S HOME

Last fall I was at the Randolph county fair held at Asheboro, and saw on display a green pea sheller, and after returning home I thought that such a machine would be quite a help to our Children's Home, so I wrote to the maker, Mr. J. W. Coggins, asking him to make a donation of one of his machines to the home, and he readily replied that he would, but had no machines on hand at that time, but would have in due time for the next crop of peas, so he recently, I am informed by Dr. Allman, the superintendent, delivered one of the machines to the home. I am sure that the writer and all other friends of the home appreciate this splendid gift. The machine is said to shell one bushel of green peas per hour. Mr. J. W. Coggins, the maker, lives at Sophia, N. C.

FUNERAL COSTS EXCESSIVE

A two-year study of the funeral business by a committee on burial survey found that funeral costs in this country are exorbitant. These costs were found to be relatively higher for groups with low incomes than for the well to do. In fact, a graphic chart prepared by the committee shows that 52 per cent of the estates under $1,000 is absorbed by the average funeral costs. This condition is blamed on the desire for an elaborate funeral as a token of respect for the dead or to satisfy demands made by social or religious tradition and the disorganization and waste in the funeral industry.

Interesting! Who Said It?

"A Protestant church is designed, no matter what the sect may be to which it belongs, not for poetical or aesthetic purposes, not for the admiration of architectural expenditures, not even for music, but for earnest people to hear from the preacher the words of life and death, that they may be aroused by his enthusiasm, or instructed by his wisdom; where the poor are not driven to a few back seats in the gallery; where the meeting is cheerful and refreshing, where all are stimulated to duties. It must not be dark, damp, and gloomy, where it is necessary to light the gas on a foggy day, and where one must be within ten feet of the preacher to see the play of his features. Take away facilities for hearing and even for seeing the preacher, and the vitality of a Protestant service is destroyed, and the end for which the people assemble is utterly defeated. Moreover, you destroy the sacred purposes of a church if you make it so expensive that the poor cannot get sittings. Nothing is so dull, depressing, funereal, as a church occupied only by prosperous pewholders, who come together to show their faces and prove their respectability, rather than to join in the paeans of redemption, or to learn humiliating lessons of worldly power before the altar of Omnipotence. To the poor the gospel is preached; and it is ever the common people who hear most gladly gospel truth. Ah, who are the common people? I fancy we are all common people when we are sick, or in bereavement, or in adversity, or when we come to die.

"Let the pulpit be situated where the people can hear the preacher easily, without straining their eyes and ears. Then only will the preacher's voice ring and kindle and inspire those who come together to hear God Almighty's message; then only will he be truly eloquent and successful, since then only does his own electricity permeate the whole mass; then only can he be effective, and escape the humiliation of being a part only of a vain show, where his words are disregarded, and his strength is wasted in the echoes of vaults and recesses copied from the gloomy though beautiful monuments of ages which can never, never again return."

—On St. Paul Street, Baltimore, not far from where our General Conference was held last month, stands an imposing church belonging to the Methodist Episcopal denomination. This church has in its windows some memorials very interesting to Methodist Protestants. It is a roll of its ministers of a hundred or more years ago. In this roll we find the honored names of Nicholas Snethen, Asa Shinn, and we believe also that of Dennis B. Dorsey, all of whom were leaders in the reform movement which eventuated in the formation of the Methodist Protestant church. We venture to believe that this church does not have in all its long line of pastors two men with ability superior to that of Snethen and Shinn.

—It is better to be right than to be President.

Al's Cruel Joke

It has been reported times without number that Al Smith said in a meeting of his bibulous friends that he hoped the time would come when they might sit with their feet on the brass rail and blow off the foam as they used to do in the good old days. This expressed hope of Al's has given great comfort to many disconsolate wets. They have treasured it as an inspired prophecy full of hope and joy. But now Al has spoiled it all. He has admitted that he was only speaking in jest. He declares that all sensible people know that the saloon has gone forever. Such a cruel, cruel joke!

A Great Book With Only Four Leaves

Rev. C. W. Bates tells about a wonderful book he saw in a Baltimore book-store. This book has but four leaves. The first leaf is black, representing the sinful human heart. The second leaf is red, representing the cleansing blood of Christ. The third leaf is white, representing the soul cleansed from sin. The fourth leaf is gold, representing the value of the soul saved by Christ.

TOBACCO PROPAGANDA AMONG WOMEN

That splendid publication, Moral Welfare, issued by the Board of Temperance and Moral Welfare of the Presbyterian church, says: "It is true, no doubt, as reported, that the tobacco interests often supply certain young women cigarettes and perhaps pay for their lunches, on condition that they advertise themselves and the tobacco companies by smoking in public. These incidents are repeated over and over again for advertising purposes in the newspapers, thus creating the impression that the habit is more common than it is."

Dr. Wm. Brady hasn't a big opinion of women who smoke. Here is one of his late comments upon the subject: "As a health expert and adviser I have received the confidences of thousands of young women, and I say now that the girl or woman who cultivates the cigarette habit is quite as untrustworthy as is the youth who smokes! not because of any terrible degenerative effect of tobacco, but because some inherent defect in her education or character leads her along this road."

Other physicians claim that nicotine in the system of a woman affects her more seriously than it does a man; that it will have a tendency to cause a beard to grow on her face, for instance, robbing her of feminine qualities. Dr. F. A. Wall, of the Columbia School of Optometry, warns women smokers that the habit will seriously injure their eyes.

The probabilities are that women who do not respect themselves enough to keep free from tobacco, will not give it up for any other reason, except by force of law—and that's what the female part of the question is evidently rapidly forcing to an issue.—Will H. Brown.

LITTLE WINDOWS IN THE LIFE OF WASHINGTON

By H. H. Smith

It is not an easy matter to write anything concerning the lofty character of George Washington that is not already known to the average reader. There are, however, some incidents in his life that many readers, perhaps, have passed over as trivial, but which, nevertheless, reveal admirable qualities of this many-sided man. We may regard these inconspicuous incidents or sayings as "little windows" through which we gain more light upon his character, recalling what Plutarch, "the prince of ancient biographers," said: "Nor is it always in the most distinguished achievements that men's virtues or vices may be best discerned; but very often an action of small note, a short saying, or a jest, shall distinguish a person's real character more than the greatest sieges, or the most important battles."

Woodrow Wilson, in his life of Washington, gives this description of him at the beginning of the Revolutionary War: "That noble figure drew all eyes to it; that mien as if the man were a prince; that sincere and open countenance which every man could see was lighted by a good conscience; that cordial ease in salute, as of a man who felt himself brother to his friends. There was something about Washington that quickened the pulses of a crowd at the same time that it awed them, that drew tears which were a sort of voice of worship. Children desired sight of him, and men felt lifted after he had passed."

Such a description of him prepares us to understand the following incident when he took command: "He reached Cambridge on the 2nd of July, and bore himself with so straightforward and engaging a courtesy in taking command that the officers he superseded could not but like him; jealousy was disarmed."

In reading of Arnold's treachery we are apt to overlook Washington's chivalrous treatment of Arnold's distressed wife. He had loved and trusted Arnold and was cut to the quick by his act of treason. "When Washington learned what had happened, it smote him so that mighty sobs burst from him, as if his great heart would break; and all the night through his guards could hear him pacing his room endlessly, in a lonely vigil with his bitter thoughts. He did not in his own grief forget the stricken wife upstairs. 'Go to Mrs. Arnold,' he said to one of his officers, 'and tell her that, though my duty required that no means should be neglected to arrest General Arnold, I have great pleasure in acquainting her that he is now safe on board a British vessel.'" How the chivalrous character of the great man shone forth in this trying hour!

Through another "little window" we get a glimpse of "his personal courage and firmness of resolution which neither dangers nor difficulties could shake." He was fiercely set upon by his enemies whose cry against the Treaty with Great Britain was "like that against a mad-dog." "The cruel abuse heaped upon him cut him to the quick. 'Such exaggerated and indecent terms,' he cried, 'could scarcely be applied to a Nero, a notorious defaulter, or even to a common pickpocket.' But the men who sneered and stormed, talked of usurpation and impeachment, called him base, incompetent, traitorous even, were permitted to see not so much as the quiver of an eyelid as they watched him go steadily from step to step in the course he had chosen." But at last the storm cleared and "shame came upon the men who had so vilely abused the great President."

How his life was consecrated to the service of his country and the welfare of his fellowmen is shown in the following incident. At one time, during the French and Indian wars, Washington's task was the "hopeless work of keeping 350 miles of frontier with a few hundred men against prowling bands of savages, masters of the craft of swift and secret attack." The heart of the great man is seen in this trying situation. "The supplicating tears of the women, and moving petitions of the men," cried the young commander, "melt me into such deadly sorrow that I solemnly declare, if I know my own mind, I could offer myself a willing sacrifice to the butchering enemy, provided that would contribute to the people's ease. . . . I would be a willing offer to savage fury, and die by inches to save a people."

Washington was noted for his hospitality to the poor. In 1775, he wrote to Lund Washington at Mount Vernon, the superintendent of his plantations during the war: "Let the hospitality of the house, with respect to the poor, be kept up. Let no one go hungry away. If any of this kind of people be in want of corn, supply their necessities, provided it does not encourage them in idleness, and I have no objection to your giving my money in charity to the amount of forty or fifty pounds a year when you think it well bestowed. What I mean by having no objection is that it is my desire that it should be done. You are to consider that neither myself nor wife is now in the way to do these good offices. In all other respects I recommend it to you, and have no doubt of your observing the greatest economy and frugality; as I suppose that you know I do not get a farthing for my services here, more than my expenses. It becomes necessary, therefore, for me to be saving at home."

One of Washington's managers said, after the war: "I had orders from General Washington to fill a corn-house every year for the sole use of the poor in the neighborhood, to whom it was a most seasonable and precious relief, saving numbers of poor women and children from extreme want, and blessing with plenty. And when, on one occasion, much distress prevailed in the country around, on account of the failure of the harvest, he purchased several bushels of corn at a high price to be given away to those who were most in want, and most deserving of relief."

Long years of public care and lofty honors did not alter his conduct toward his friends. "An old comrade, who had come in his rough frontier dress all the way from Kentucky to Philadelphia to see the President, had been told 'that Washington had become puffed up with the importance of his station, and was too much of an aristocrat to welcome him in that garb.' But the old soldier was not daunted, pressed on to make his call, and came back to tell his friends how the President and his lady had both seen him and recognized him from the window, and had hurried to the door to draw him cordially in. 'I never was better treated,' he said. 'I had not believed a word against him; and I found he was "Old Hoss" still.'"

COMMENCEMENT DAY, WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE

The commencement address, the music, the crowds, the weather, the spirit that pervaded all—were all ideal and inspiring in the highest degree. Alumni Hall was crowded to capacity when the processional of seniors, faculty, trustees and visiting dignitaries took their places on the platform. President E. C. Makosky, of the Maryland Conference of the Methodist Protestant church, led the audience at once onto the heights in prayer. The music of the day, by Bohl's Orchestra, of Baltimore, with Miss Harris as pianist, was in itself a joy.

President Ward then graciously introduced the speaker of the day, Dean Charles R. Brown, D.D., of the Yale University Divinity School, whose masterful address we wish we could present in full to our readers—sparkling as it was with wit, and a compact of wisdom. "The Best Use of Knowledge" was the theme. The world, he said, was larger than the college campus, and life itself was lived mainly off the campus The world itself was the only field large enough to raise the fruitage the Master of Life demands. On the campus, knowledge is only in the abstract. Knowledge must be put to work. It furnishes the tools to work with—to save life. Knowledge is not a picture to be hung on the wall, not a memory of Plato, not giving of tithes to Atlantic Monthly, but something to make people alive, alert and worth while as personalities in God's world. So schools from the kindergarten to the university should quicken these inner graces and energies of the soul. "I am come," said Jesus, "that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly." The best use of knowledge is to translate it into terms of life. The Word must be made flesh. Knowledge must make us live better lives. Metaphysics may underlie, but it must obscure the physical. It must be translated into terms the common people can understand. William James, as a contributor to philosophy, is a standing rebuke to the obscurantists, in that he expressed truth in understandable terms—the language of the street. He insisted that truth worked, and it was the only thing that would work satisfactorily. These fine theorists and "specialists" in their "original research," who lose themselves in scientific, philosophical, and etymological abstractions and neglect the vital issues of life, or fail to distinguish essential values from the trivial and inconsequential, may confuse men rather than help. I have no quarrel with "original research," but let investigation be in realms worth while, and for ends that will make men and women better and richer in life. To spend life in counting the leaves of the trees in the forest, or the commas in the British Encyclopedia, or the semicolons in the Bible does not make for world advance. Knowledge is for life, not life for knowledge. India's ability to produce speculative abstract systems in philosophy stands in pitiful contrast with her inability to redeem and rationalize the life of her people—lost, so many of them, in ignorance and squalor—their practical needs ignored. Knowledge must be brought into the reach of the people, and transform life, individually and nationally.

Bronson Alcott's colloquy with the pupils of a New England village school, "What are you here for?" "To learn!" "To learn what?" "To learn to behave!" "That is right —to learn to behave wisely, nobly, usefully in your day and generation—that is all!" epitomizes the true educational program of life. To send out men and women who know, and who know how to use what they know to the good of the world in service is, or should be, the aim of every college and university—to teach men "to live wisely, usefully, nobly, in their day and generation." On most college campuses are different groups. Some students who come of their own desires, under their own head of steam, and who get the enrichment that sends them out men and women to honor humanity and glorify God. Others are "sent," and are exposed to education four years, and it doesn't always "take"; if it does, it is soon over. Some just "go" to college who ought not to "stay." Some are just "good spenders," imbibing such college spirit, or "spirits," as are not usually contemplated in the catalogue curricular announcements. The only use they are is to consume "good meals" and inflate the wallets of those in the community who thrive by swallowing such common fish.

We have also (we have them at Yale), those who, if we ask what they are here for, would regard the questioner as in his dotage to ask so foolish a question, but would condescend to answer, "To make money, of course! I hope to make it honestly, or, at least, legally, but to make money." Not to make a life, but to make money! Poor fools, not to have learned that "Life consists not in the abundance of things which a man possesseth, but in certain qualities of soul that make rich the inner man." I wonder if colleges and universities should not make it their chief concern to introduce into the business world that fine idealism that will redeem it from the selfishness and greed that so commonly rule; and into other activities of high professional ethics that would make every calling in life an effective agency for the advancement of the social order, and the improvement of life conditions that would bring nearer the day when God's will would be done on earth as it is in heaven!

The preacher who would preach for the biggest salary he could get would be no preacher of Christ's gospel. The physician who would "practice" only for his rich patients and would not visit the poor would be quickly denounced as a quack. The teacher who would teach simply "for the money that was in it," who would regard his boys and girls not with love for their personal development but as so much "pig-iron" to be thrown into the furnace, would not long be tolerated. Everywhere, it must be emphasized, profit must be subordinated to service. Business itself must be redeemed. What right have business men to impose on preachers, teachers, professional men, what they are not willing to accept for themselves? Let business men conduct their business with the higher aims of promoting the intellectual, moral, and spiritual good of the people—of those who make their business possible. Let the "Kingdom of the Spirit" be the objective of all human activity. Man has a right to make money, but he must suboridnate the idea of personal gain to the needs of society. His knowledge must be a means to the enrichment of human life.

Education is not merely imparting information, or training for vocational skill in making money, but in setting before the students and the sons of men the open door to the understanding and better appreciation of the higher values of life, that lead above all else to finer fellowship and development of more worthy character—to the making of nobler men and women.

The world is facing its greatest problems now. It isn't over, over there. It isn't over in Russia, Italy, the Balkans, France. It isn't over in the United States! In the face of flippant arrogance and the mad passions of those who are wrecking life in the foolish pursuit of the flimsiest sort of pleasure and physical vices, there are holier victories to be won than were won in 1918. If these victories are to be won they will be won by the men and women of this coming age who will give themselves as freely to world service and world peace as the men who went to war in 1917. Idealism must save the world. Knowledge, ideas—consecrated to service of truth and the good of men. Industry must be humanized. Education itself must be spiritualized, and life be established by a steady vision of citizenship in that City that hath foundations whose builder and maker is God.

After this masterful address and another orchestral number, Captain H. D. Wooley called to the front the young men who were to receive commissions as second lieutenants in the U. S. army, to take the oath of loyalty and allegiance—a pledge so inspiring that every citizen would be the nobler for the making. Mr. T. K. Harrison, secretary of the Alumni Association, in a very felicitous address, commended these men, after which Lieutenant E. O. Waters administered the oath and called the roll while Captain Wooley presented the commissions from President Coolidge. As the young men uttered the closing words of the oath, "So help me God," many, no doubt, in the audience breathed the prayer, "Help them, O God, and may there be no more war!"

The secretary of the faculty, Prof. Carl Schaeffer, then announced the undergraduate honors, and called the roll of the graduates while President Ward conferred the degrees on one of the best classes that ever was graduated from W. M. C. There were also the degrees of Master of Arts conferred on John Nicholas Link, William A. Ledford and George Hyson Enfield, and the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Letters on Dean Percy Elliott Lindley, of High Point College, North Carolina.

GIRLS GROWING MORE CASUAL

With the increasing casualness of the girl toward what her maternal ancestors regarded as matters of serious import, there comes an increasing responsibility on the part of her elders who would protect her from the results of her own rashness. This is one instance of many: girls today, yielding to the wanderlust, start for tours around the world more casually than their grandmothers departed to visit in the next county when the granddaughter's age. A few things stuffed into a handbag, a wave of the hand, and the girl is off.

If she hasn't the wherewithal to pay her way all around the world, she goes as far as she can on her money, stops, dead broke, and turns to the Young Women's Christian Association for a help which has never been denied her, though there is always some regret that the girl did not make more ample preparations for meeting such hazards. To her credit, it may be said that she and her English sisters are usually trained to take any kind of work from stenography to nursing and employment for them is not so difficult to find. Of girls of thirty-three nationalities who applied for aid in the short space of two years at the Y. W. C. A. for Foreign Girls in Shanghai, China, it was not difficult to find work for the girls of two—British and American. The others, untrained, incompetent, helpless, are a constant problem. Willing, often, to go into a kitchen, they do not make acceptable servants for the reason that the natives are so much more efficient than any foreigners could be, and are more economical.

This problem of caring for girls at the Honolulu Y. W. C. A. is augmented by the distressing number of girls who reach Honolulu as stowaways. They, too, are on their way around the world, but haven't the funds for the first "hop-off" and stow themselves in the hold of some vessel. "Two such girls," reports Miss Lucie Ford, general secretary of the Association in Honolulu, "were Stanford University graduates. They finally got work after long looking and borrowing money.

"Our own girls," continued Miss Ford, "however feel a little resentment toward girls of this type. It does not seem fair to beat one's way and then expect help because of the spectacular method. The stowaways are always discovered, which may lead to discouragement in attempting it."

In fact as well as fiction, everything has a way of coming out all right in the end and it is this hope that sustains girls in attempting feats which would deter one twice their age. Eventually they make their way around the world but their families are distressed and worried and the girls themselves cannot, under such conditions, do other than impair their health. Always there is the admonition from those who help them that they never attempt such a thing again without greater preparation. If they will wait a year longer, increasing their financial resources in the meanwhile, they will make possible an adventure fraught with less alarms, and affording them greater luxuries and opportunities.

A year? Girls look at the word in alarm. A whole year! That is as long as eternity when one is young.

HE CHOSE YOU

"He chose you not to bitter tears,
Though dark your life may seem;
He chose you not to foolish fears,
And not to sit and dream;
He chose you in His loving grace,
To action, patience, trust,
To show upon a smiling face
What God can do with dust.

"He chose you for His service here,
To witness of His love;
He chose you—oh, the call is clear,
It comes from heaven above—
He chose you, is not this enough
To man you for the fight?
What if the way be lone and rough,
Be true to God and right.

"He chose you for His faithful vine,
Peculiarly His own,
To magnify His life divine,
To live for Him alone.
He chose you for that home above,
Where endless praises ring;
He chose you—oh, the matchless love—
A priest of God, a king.

A THOUGHT THAT WAS EFFECTIVE

A man stopped a preacher in a London street, and said: "I once heard you preach in Paris, and something you said was the means of my conversion." "What was it?" "The latch. You said, 'The latch is on our side of the door.' I had always thought God hard, and that we must do something to propitiate Him. It was a new thought that Christ had done it all, and was waiting at the door for me."—The Southern Churchman.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

(Our readers will miss President Taylor's letter this week. He returned home a little later than usual and the printers arranged to go to press this week a little earlier than usual. These two circumstances combined caused Brother Taylor to postpone till next week his message. It may be expected then with its usual vigor. We regret that any occasion for delay has arisen, but trust that in the end all will be well.—Editor)

Announcements

June 17—Concord church, Saxapahaw charge, 11 a. m. At night of this date we are to be at Haw River Mission church at 8 o'clock.

Appointments for other fields will be made promptly and announced next week. S. W. TAYLOR.

REGISTER! REGISTER! REGISTER!

The above heading over an appeal from Bro. Paschall to register for the Leadership Training School in last week's HERALD was indeed striking and interesting to say the least. It is hoped that this very earnest appeal will meet with the response as is desired and as is necessary to make the Training School a success. Let's go up with the 1,200 strong. There is another registration that is quite important. That is the registration on the part of some layman or a number of laymen that will register the amount of the pastor's expenses of his or their charge for the pastor's Summer Conference. It is hoped that there will be some one on each charge that will become responsible for the amount of $6.00 which will cover the expense of his pastor while attending the conference. This will cover board and charge for platform fee. Send the money to Bro. H. A. Garrett, R. D. 7, Burlington, N. C., or the undersigned, Brown Summit, N. C. Then pastor can be informed that all he has to do is to go. Most pastors will be glad to go if this encouragement is offered them on the part of their people. Please, laymen of the various charges, register for your good pastor. In this way give your pastor the encouragement and the Summer Conference your endorsement.

Yours for the best conference yet,

GEO. L. CURRY.

BEES AND MOSQUITOES

"How busy is not so important as why busy," says The Outlook. "The bee is congratulated, the mosquito swatted." Both the bee and the mosquito make things hum, but the one lays up honey and the other gets a bad reputation.

There are human bees and human mosquitoes. Some people hurry from one pleasure to another, trying to sap up all the thrills that they can get for themselves, not caring how much they may inconvenience others. Ask them to give time to something worth while and their excuse is always, "Too busy."

But there are others who spend their hours extracting nectar from the common flowers of daily duty. They unselfishly lay up good words and kind deeds for the happiness of others, and rarely think of themselves. When there is a call for sacrificial service they are always ready with a helping hand. God bless them!—Forward.

"HOW TO PREACH TO CONVERT NOBODY"

1. Let your supreme motive be popularity rather than salvation.

2. Study to please your congregation and to make a reputation, rather than to please God.

3. Take up popular, passing and sensational themes to draw the crowd, and avoid essential doctrines of salvation.

4. Denounce sin in the abstract, but pass lightly over sins that prevail in your congregation.

5. If asked, "Is it wrong to dance, play cards or attend the theatre?" answer very pleasantly, "Oh, that is a matter for private judgment. It is not for me to say you shall or shall not."

6. Preach on the loveliness of virtue and the glory of heaven, but not on the sinfulness of sin and the terrors of hell.

7. Reprove the sins of the absent, but make those who are present pleased with themselves, so that they will enjoy the sermon and not go away with their feelings hurt.

8. Make the impression on worldly church members that God is too good to send any one to hell, even if there is any hell.

9. Preach the universal Fatherfood of God and brotherhood of man so as to show that no second birth is really needed.

10. Do not rebuke the worldliness of the church, but fall in with the amusement policy. Instead of meeting for prayer, let the people "sit down to eat and drink and rise up to play."

11. Avoid seriousness, alarm and earnest efforts to pull sinners out of the fire, and the old-fashioned idea that the church is a rescue mission.—Charles G. Finney, the Great Evangelist.

GROWING SMILES

A smile is quite a funny thing;
It wrinkles up your face;
And when its gone you never find
Its secret hiding place.
But far more wonderful it is
To see what smiles can do;
You smile at one, and he smiles at you,
And so one smile makes two.

He smiles at someone, since you smiled,
And then that one smiles back;
And that one smiles, until, in truth,
You fail in keping track.
And since a smile can do great good
By cheering hearts of care,
Let's smile and smile and not forget
That smiles go everywhere.

NOT LEFT DESOLATE

Once an aged Christian, while in great suffering, was asked by his friends whether he could bear it, if he would not break down under it; and he replied, "Not until the sixteenth Psalm breaks down at the eighth verse." They asked him what he meant, and he answered, "Because He is at my right hand, I shall not be moved." There is your confidence. No matter how alone you are, yet you are not alone, for Christ is with you even unto the end of the world.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

THE FIRST MEETINGS OF THE NEW BOARDS

The recent session of the General Conference directed me to call together the new boards of the church for organization, on or before July 1. Because of my desire to get under way with our program as soon as possible, I called the Board of Christian Education to meet on Wednesday, June 6, and the Board of Missions on Thursday and Friday, June 7 and 8. Both boards met in Pittsburgh. Of the thirty-three members composing these boards, thirty-two were in attendance.

The Board of Christian Education organized by electing Rev. G. I. Humphreys president and Rev. C. J. Morton secretary. Revs. Humphreys, Morton and Mrs. Maier, along with the secretaries, constitute the Executive Committee.

The Board of Missions elected Rev. G. H. Miller president, Mrs. Henry Hupfield vice-president, and Rev. G. W. Hawley secretary. These officers, along with Mrs. A. G. Dixon and the executive secretaries, constitute the Executive Committee.

I attended all the sessions of both boards and desire to pass on to you in a few words my impression.

I think it will be agreed by all that the meetings, in their unity, optimism and undertakings, duplicated the session of the recent General Conference.

In spite of the new situation created by the two mergers, in the deliberations and conclusions of the board, there was manifested a confidence that was refreshing.

Very naturally the merging of all our missionary agencies under one head carried with it the greater problem.

Now that these first annual meetings are over and the programs for the year adopted, I am greatly pleased with the result and with the outlook. If all our members will co-operate as heartily with these boards as the members of these boards are co-operating with each other, our success is assured.

During the session of the Board of Missions, telegrams were received from the annual meeting of the Onondaga branches of the Woman's Home and Foreign Mission Societies, approving the action of the General Conference merging our missionary forces and pledging their moral support.

To me these telegrams received on our new Mount Carmel are the cloud the size of a man's hand, full of promise for the future.

Pray for us. "Stand by. Carry on."

J. C. Broomfield,
President General Conference.

BIBLE BEES

The "Bees of the Bible" are very numerous. They never sting; they yield a great deal of honey, and it is their nature to be found together in swarms. Here is a specimen of them:

"Be kindly affectioned to one another."
"Be sober and watch unto prayer."
"Be content with such things as ye have."
"Be strong in the Lord."
"Be ye courteous."
"Be not wise in your own conceits."
"Be not unmindful to entertain strangers."
"Be not children in understanding."
"Be followers of God as dear children."

THE FAILURE OF MANY CHURCHES

Sixty Thousand Pulpits Fail to Win One Convert in Year! Such was the big headline of a prominent New York newspaper a few weeks ago. This is not idle talk, but a fact. It was brought out in a meeting held at the Madison Square Hotel by the Men's Church League. Dr. J. Campbell White, General Secretary of the League, said that 3,268 of 9,299 Presbyterian churches in the United States did not add any converts on profession of their faith. Of 8,765 Baptist churches, 3,474 did not gain any converts, and of 16,581 Methodist churches, 6,652 had none. Smaller denominations were also cited.

What is the cause of this Protestant stagnation? One of the speakers, Dr. C. H. Fenn, returned missionary from China, said a good thing when he gave the following analysis. He said, "Churches are afflicted with fatty degeneration of the heart (wealth, luxury and ease); pernicious anaemia (lack of blood in their theology and in the figth with sin); cerebro-spinal meningitis (destruction of backbone and brain center); cancer (unbelief in the supernatural); and neuritis (supersensitiveness to ridicule or criticism)."

The cancer is the worst, the subtle unbelief of Modernism, which rejects the supernatural in Christianity. What can save the situation? Only a whole-souled return to the old Book and to the old Gospel, the preaching without any question mark, that man is a lost and guilty sinner and that Christ died for our sins.—"Our Hope," New York City.

TRANSFIGURED FACES

Of Daniel Webster it is recorded that, for several hours after he had delivered his great oration at Bunker Hill, his face wore an indescribably grand expression that awed those who came into his presence. Character carves the countenance. Sydney Smith said of Francis Horner that the Ten Commandments were written on his face. "Human physiognomy," says Victor Hugo, "is formed by the conscience and the life, and is the result of a multitude of mysterious excavations."

Some have become so sanctified by the Holy Spirit that they wear a heavenly aspect and are verily transfigured into the likeness of Christ.—Selected.

MISUSING THE FLAG

One day a school inspector was visiting a school and he rose to give a talk to the boys and girls. He chose the subject of "Patriotism." As he proceeded he pointed to the American flag that was draped on the wall, and asked impressively, "What is that flag hanging there for?" A boy replied steadily, "Please, sir, it is to hide the dirt." So many people wear the badge and emblem of Christian discipleship—the banner of the Cross—just to cover up some blemish, weakness, or fault in their lives. The real work of the Cross is to blot out sin, not to cover it up.—Christian Herald.

COFFIN NAILS

The following press dispatch, clipped from a secular daily, gives information of interest:

New York, April 18.—(AP)—American smokers will smoke 111,000,000,000 cigarettes in 1928, W. F. Axton, president of the Axton-Fisher Tobacco Co., estimated. The increase over 1927 is attributed to the increasing number of women smokers. Last year 97,000,000,000 cigarettes were used in this country.—Selected.

BETTY AND ANN

Betty was one of these stout, quiet girls who would rather sit and read than be romping around. Her doctor told her mother that Betty didn't need to gain a pound for a very long, long time.

Betty's sister Ann was quite different. She had to take cod liver oil, and be coaxed to lie down and rest in the afternoons. She was up at 6 o'clock in the morning, singing like a bird and just as eager to be up and out in the fresh morning air. But she was fidgety and made grown-up people nervous.

These girls had a cousin named Connie who was just betwixt and between in her disposition, which made her about right. Both Betty and Ann adored her and could get along with her perfectly, even if they found each other rather tiresome at times. Poor Connie used to wonder how she could divide herself in two and be in two places at once, because when Betty wanted her to come indoors and cut out or paste pictures, Ann would be just as anxious to have her outside roller skating or climbing on the garage roof.

It was a nervous day for Connie when she went to stay with her cousins over the week-end.

"I just know there'll be a fight or something," she thought. "Those girls are so funny."

As she came up the walk, out dashed Ann from the house and gave her a big welcoming squeeze.

"Oh, Connie," she cried. "Daddie has bought me a sidewalk bicycle. Come on and let's ride it. I haven't learned to ride well yet but I could help you learn."

"Oh, I'd love that," replied Connie, "but I ought to speak to Aunt Jo first, I guess."

She ran into the house to kiss her aunt and leave her little over-night bag, and in the hall she ran into Betty.

"Oh, Connie," cried Betty, "I'm so glad to see you. I've been keeping something to show you all this time. It's from Germany, a doll house that folds all up and all you have to do is open it and the furniture and everything is all ready—"

Ann, who was behind her cousin, interrupted:

"Oh, Connie, you can play with that on a rainy day," she said. "It's so nice out and the paper says showers for tomorrow. Do come out and try my new bike."

"It'll only take a little while to see my house," exclaimed Betty, seizing hold of Connie's right arm. "Come on, Connie. Don't pay any attention to Ann. She got only sixty in English and I don't believe she's going to pass the third grade this year."

Ann got quite red and angry and grabbed Connie's arm.

"Connie," she begged. "Betty's getting so fat and lazy. I'll never let her ride my new bike. Besides, she's stuck up."

"Listen," cried Connie, dropping her over-night bag, "let go, both of you. You're hurting my arms."

But Betty only pulled harder, and Ann held on tight and braced her foot against the newel post.

"I won't be pulled to pieces!" cried Connie. "I think you're both dreadful and I'll go right home if you don't let go at once."

Of course, they let go then, and stood looking at her rather ashamed.

"Well," demanded Betty, scowling, "are you coming with me or not?"

"Not!" exclaimed Connie, rubbing her arm.

"All right for you!" said Betty, and stalked away with her chin in the air.

Ann gave a gleeful giggle.

"We'll have lots of fun," she said.

"I hate to think that Betty's mad at me," mumbled Connie.

"I guess I ought to go and make up. You won't mind, will you?"

"I will so!" cried Ann. "You said you'd play with me!"

"I will, but let's see if we can't coax Betty to come, too," said Connie. "I never can enjoy myself when people are mad at me."

"Well, I'm going to be mad if you go off and leave me," said Ann, beginning to scowl.

Poor Connie moved slowly away to speak to her aunt.

The mother of the two girls was in the sitting room writing a letter when Connie came slowly in.

"Why, hello, dearie!" she exclaimed. "So you've come to spend the week-end? Good for you!"

"I—I don't know if I can stay or not," said Connie.

"Of course you can stay," protested Aunt Jo.

"Maybe, but it depends," said Connie.

"Really?" smiled her aunt, but the telephone rang just then and ended the conversation.

Connie walked out to the hall and found her cousin Ann out there.

"I heard what you said," Ann told her. "What did you mean?"

"I mean I can't stay if you girls are going to fight and get mad at me," said Connie firmly. "I wasn't going to tattle on you, but you might as well know it. I'm going right home unless you both behave."

Ann ran upstairs to Betty and soon came down with her.

"We'll behave!" she cried. "We're going fifty-fifty with you. See, I have my wrist-watch on. Betty is going to play out with us for an hour, then I'm coming in for an hour, then it'll be her turn to come out."

"All right, that's fine!" exclaimed Connie, and out the three ran.

"Well, here's the new bike. Isn't she a beaut! Get aboard, Connie," said Ann.

"Let Betty try first," laughed Connie. "She's so fat it won't hurt much if she falls."

"Hold me up then," said Betty, straddling the seat.

Connie held on to the back of the seat and ran as her stout cousin pedaled. Faster and faster went Betty, and Connie lost her hold.

"Wait!" she panted, but Betty was turning the corner on her way around the block.

"Oh, dear, she'll get an awful fall!" Connie cried.

The two ran after Betty, but when they reached the corner they saw her still riding merrily, and they did not catch up with her until they were back in front of their house.

"That was just grand!" cried Betty, hopping off. "I must get Daddie to buy me one, too."

Ann was staring at her sister with her mouth open.

"Why, Betty, you rode it the first time!" she exclaimed. "You're just wonderful!"

"What do you mean by rode it?" asked Betty. "I thought Connie had hold of me."

"I did, but you went too fast," said Connie. "Let me try."

She did try, but wobbled only a few yards. Then it was Ann's turn, and Ann tried so hard she got as far as the corner.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Betty. "I guess if I wanted to I could play outside as well as you do, Ann."

"That's all right," said Ann, laughing. "Wait till I really concentrate on geography games and English!"

She suddenly realized that her sister was a wonderful girl, smarter than Connie, for she always stood first in her class at school. She did not know that Connie was thinking: "Oh, goody! Now they're going to behave!"

Ann that evening took her books and curled up under a reading lamp in the sitting room and really put her mind on her lessons.

"I can't let Betty be the only smart one in the family," she decided. "And I'll have to go some to keep up with her."—Selected.

TOO BEAUTIFUL TO KILL

"O Calvin," cried Fergus, "I couldn't do it. I hadn't the heart to do it. I'd die myself before I'd kill anything so beautiful."

The speaker was a Scottish lad, about fourteen years old, with all the Briton's love of "sport" (?) and the natural desire of every healthy boy for outdoor exercise. He was spending his vacation in the Adirondacks, near Upper St. Regis Lake, and great was his delight when, one morning, his father presented him with a new canoe and a new rifle, with which he expected to shoot his first deer.

On an August day, so runs the story in the Pittsburgh Post, he went from camp with Calvin the guide, and was about to embark upon the lake.

It was so lovely that Fergus held his breath to look, till all at once he felt Calvin's hand on his shoulder. He gave one look at the guide's face and knew that something was happening.

At first Fergus heard nothing but his own heart-beats. Then, as he recovered himself a little, he could hear a rustle and an occasional crackle, and presently, looking up the bank, he discerned the swaying of a bush. Something was moving there.

Suddenly the bushes parted and a head looked through! It was the head of which Fergus had lovingly and longingly dreamed, a beautiful, antlered head held proudly up, the eyes alert, the nostrils wide apart. As the creature broke from cover, his mouth was open, for he was hot and thirsty and eager to get at the water.

"Does he see us?" whispered Calvin. Fergus shook his head.

"Let him get out of the bushes, then raise your rifle," whispered the guide.

Inch by inch Fergus had already raised his rifle, and was looking along it when the deer advanced, coming twenty feet nearer. Then, assuring himself that all was safe, he stood, with ears at a sharp angle, directly facing Fergus.

Fergus could see the beautiful scared eyes of the deer.

"Fire!" said Calvin.

But instead, Fergus dropped his rifle by his side. There was a sudden movement, a crashing of boughs, and the place was empty.

"Why, Fergus!" cried Calvin, disappointed and amazed, "why, Fergus!"

He looked curiously into the boy's face and discovered that each bright eye had a tear in it, and that the under lip was quivering, as he said, impulsively, "O, Calvin, I couldn't do it. I hadn't the heart to do it. I'd die before I'd kill anything so beautiful."—Success.

OLLIE EATS ONIONS

Ollie dearly loved tender, sweet young onions. They seldom had them at home because the rest of the family were not partial to this particular vegetable.

On this especial morning in early spring, Ollie was late to breakfast, and as she was in a hurry to get out to play, she didn't stop to eat as much as she should. Besides she did not enjoy being at the table alone.

By mid-morning she began to feel the pangs of a healthy appetite, and at the same time it occurred to her that she would go up the street and make a little call on Auntie Lou. Auntie Lou lived by herself in a pretty gray bungalow, and always welcomed Ollie and usually had something nice for her little visitor to eat. It might be a dainty sandwich, or a spice or sugar cookie, or some ripe fruit.

But this time Ollie found the door locked. She was in the habit of walking right in.

"Maybe," she said to herself, "Auntie Lou is busy in the kitchen. I'll go around to that door."

Sure enough, the back door was unlocked, and evidently Auntie Lou was making a cake, for her big blue bowl was out, and a basket of eggs, and the sugar can, and a cake pan. Beside them lay her receipt book.

Auntie Lou was nowhere in sight. Ollie was rather disappointed, for that cake bowl made her hungrier yet. Sometimes she dusted the front rooms for Auntie Lou, and in payment for this service, she was allowed to scrape the batter from the cake bowl. Ollie loved raw cake batter.

She decided to wait, and while she was waiting she looked into the pantry. There on a low shelf in front of the pantry window stood a tumbler of tiny green onions. Ollie's mouth watered. It was as if the young onions said, "Come eat me."

And without hesitation that is just what Ollie did. She took an onion, and shook some salt on a little saucer, and ate until her tongue began to smart. Then she opened the cracker bowl, got a knife and spread the crackers thickly with butter. They went very nicely with the onions. Still Auntie Lou did not come.

Ollie peeked into a little jar which stood there, and she was much pleased to find that it contained some of the prettiest little cakes that she ever saw. They were all white frosting with bright red cherries and little green leaves on top. Ollie tried one of these and it was so good that she ate three. Then suddenly a sense of guilt overcame her. There were just five little cakes left, and—suppose Auntie Lou was going to have company.

Ollie decided she would go home. When she reached there, she was delighted to find that a beloved visitor had arrived. It was Ollie's Grandmother Hardy, and the little girl jumped right into her lap and put her arms around her grandmother's neck.

"Been eating onions, have you?" remarked Grandma Hardy with a smile.

Ollie opened her eyes wide.

"No," she said, "the onions in our garden aren't big enough."

"Oh, but you have been eating them," insisted her grandmother kindly. "Where did you get them?"

Ollie hung her head.

"I haven't had any onions—or crackers and butter—or little cakes either," she replied slowly.

Grandma looked at her thoughtfully a minute.

"Ollie," she said, "where have you been?"

"Up to Auntie Lou's," admitted Ollie—"and she wasn't at home."

"Oh, surely you dont mean that you went in there and helped yourself," cried Grandma in a shocked tone.

Ollie hung her head and didn't speak.

"Come," said Grandma Hardy, "we will go up to Auntie Lou's and see what there is to this."

Ollie hung back but her grandmother took her hand and walked right along. Auntie Lou was in the kitchen when they arrived.

"I don't know what to make of it," she cried. "I went out on an errand for a few minutes, and somebody has been in my house and eaten up my little onions, and scattered cracker crumbs all over the pantry, and even devoured some of my nice cakes which I had planned for supper for I am expecting company. Three cakes are missing, the cherries eaten off two others, and another one has finger marks on the frosting."

Auntie Lou looked at Ollie who was very, very red. Grandma Hardy was looking at her also. Ollie began to cry but no one asked her what was the matter. They just kept looking at her.

Ollie couldn't stand it, and before either of them knew what was happening, she turned and ran swiftly out of the kitchen, her brown curls bobbing as she ran past the window.

In a few minutes she was back again. She had something tightly clasped in her hand, and she went right over and dropped it into Auntie Lou's lap, for Auntie Lou was sitting down now. It was a bright silver dollar.

"Oh, I am so sorry, Auntie Lou," she quavered. "I didn't think I was spoiling things like that. I was hungry and you always gave me things to eat when I was here—please take this and I will be gooder next time. Indeed I will, Auntie Lou."

"But that isn't all you did," Grandma, Hardy reminded poor little Ollie. "When I asked you about the onions, you told a wrong story and said you hadn't eaten any. What about that?"

Ollie looked from one to the other in a troubled way, and the tears rolled down her cheeks.

"I am sorry," she said. "I didn't think, Grandma, that you really knew about them."

"But I did," nodded Grandma. "But what really counts and what makes me very sorry was that my little grand-girl would do a naughty thing and then deny it."

Auntie Lou put her arm about Ollie.

"Thank you for the silver dollar, dear," she said. "I will take it, for I know you are doing your best to make it right with me about the onions, and cakes, and the trouble I will have to clean up the crumbs and hurry and bake more cakes along with my other work before the company comes.

"And remember two things, Ollie dear. We must never touch what belongs to someone else even if that person is a good friend of ours, and when we do wrong, we have just as much need to be sorry whether we are found out or not, for something inside of us will keep making us unhappy about it. If we are going to be happy, we mustn't do anything to be ashamed of or sorry for."

Ollie understood, but somehow she could not speak.

One week later the little girl had a birthday, and when she awakened in the morning, there was a box on a chair by her bed. Ollie was quite excited. What in the world could it contain?

She was not long taking off the wrappings, and oh, how pleased she was to find a big, blue-eyed doll she had admired so much down in the toy window.

And tied to the doll's wrist was a little note which said, "For my dear little friend Ollie, who has the courage when she has done wrong to do her best to make it right."—Selected.

PRAYERS THAT REACH HEAVEN

Many things I want to forget. Would God I could forget them. And yet, God may know that it would not be best that I should forget them. If I could, it might make me proud and lead me to do even worse things some day.

A few things I am very glad to remember. Were the memory of these things to be blotted out, it would be like tearing the last bright flowers from a desert island. And one of the things I am thankful I retain in my mind, and which, please God, I hope never can be taken from me, is the memory of the first prayers I heard when a boy, by the superintendent of the little country Sabbath school I attended.

This Sabbath school was held in a small school house, miles from any church in a very sparsely settled neighborhood. The men and women who attended the school were plain country folks. The boys and girls were always simply, though neatly, clad. The hands of the superintendent were rough and hard from his work through the week, but his heart was as tender as a baby's, and he knew God as a man knows his earthly father.

When it was time for the superintendent to pray a hush fell over the little room. We were in awe as we waited for him to get down on his knees in the narrow isle between the rows of benches upon which we sat. Not a sound was to be heard from that time on as long as he was talking with God.

Beginning in a low voice he began quietly pleading with heaven for us all. As he went on his voice showed greater intensity. The words rolled from his lips faster and faster. His whole body was quivering with emotion. As he turned his face upward it seemed almost as if he were being permitted to look into heaven. Surely, his spirit was in holy communion with the Spirit of God.

Those prayers I never have forgotten. May I never forget them! How much they may have had to do in shaping my life I do not know. I do know from that little country school house many stepped right over into the kingdom of heaven; and I have no doubt that the prayers of our superintendent had much to do with this fact. It would be like dew upon a parched plant if I could once more listen to such prayers as that man made.—E. L. Vincent in United Presbyterian.

—The recent General Conference of the M. E. church in Kansas City shows that the laymen of that church are still battling against the entrenched position of the ministry in that church. It begins to appear that that position is impregnable. Still the laymen are camping around it with great persistence, hoping that sometime they may win. They have gained this concession, their right to speak and vote—on some questions. But they will not be satisfied until they are permitted to speak and vote on all questions that concern them.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SENIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

June 17—"The Church's Responsibility for Recreation"

1 Cor. 9:22-29

I. Plans for the Meeting

1. Have the meeting in the out-of-doors if weather permits.

2. Invite some recreational worker or some person who is very much interested in that phase of Christian work. Have a well planned devotional period followed by discussion of the topic. Then have the one invited to make a talk on the subject or lead the group in some wholesome games that are suitable for Christians to participate in.

II. Hints for the Leader

1. Young people as well as older ones need some recreation. In fact youth is going to spend a part of its time in this phase of activity.

2. Since this is true, youth will find as it seeks play and rest aside from the vocations of life, that there exist both good and bad forms of recreation. The bad forms will "wreck" rather than "recreate" if that form is chosen.

3. It is the business of the church to provide the correct forms of recreation for its constituency. This the church has failed to do in the past. For a long time our fathers classed most any form of play and recreation as being of the devil. The church has come to realize its mistake and is endeavoring to meet its responsibility along this line. Today young men and young women have given themselves to the task of church and community recreational activity. Books have been written and much time and effort is being given to this work. As a result, young people are being interested in the church and its program. The whole of life must be administered to by the Kingdom if the Kingdom is to have the services of the whole life.

III.—Read and Comment on These

The Golden Rule. Matt. 7:12.
Recreational Training. Prov. 22:6.
Exercise vs. Health. 1 Tim. 4:8.
The Church and the Children. Jno. 21:15-17.

IV. Correlation With S. S. Lesson

The crucifixion meant death to a few, but to humanity it means life. Jesus died that we might have life and that it may be more abundantly rich. Have some one carry over the truth of this lesson into the prayer service.

V. Try These

1. What is meant by recreation?

2. What is the general denomination doing along this line?

3. What is the local church of which you are a member doing?

4. What opportunities do you have for recreational activities in your church?

5. Should the society plan some worthwhile recreation for the church and community?

6. When does recreation cease to be helpful and become harmful to the individual?

Debate

Resolved: "That the local church should have organized recreation for its constituency."

So we have started toward our goal! Who will be the next to register? I am hoping that in next week's Herald there will be an entire column or more of names. Will yours be in the list?

Pastors, if you have not as yet appointed some one as agent in your church, will you please do so at once? And will you please let me have just as soon as possible the names of these agents.

Quite a few agents have already been appointed. Agents, will you get busy, work real hard and do your best toward the success of this campaign? I am counting on you; do not fail me!

District Chairmen, will you get behind this campaign with all the time and effort that you can possibly put into it. Talk, boost and work for the success of this campaign.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

MISS MARY C. MCCULLOCH, Editor

MEETING OF DISTRICT NO. 2

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of District No. 2 met with Mt. Carmel auxiliary in an all-day session Thursday, May 31st. Meeting called to order by chairman, Miss Mary V. White, after which she read Scripture lesson and Rev. H. F. Fogleman offered prayer. Rev. Mr. Fogleman very graciously welcomed the workers and friends, giving us much encouragement in the work.

The morning session was given over to reports of auxiliaries in this district and delegates' reports from branch meeting. The auxiliary reports showed a more systematic raising of funds, an increased membership, and six new organizations among our children and young people. The delegates' reports were very, very good, giving much information in regard to both home and foreign work. Reports of the addresses given at the young people's session of branch meeting were most inspiring. After a bountiful lunch and a happy social hour, meeting was again called together and Rev. R. A. Hunter had charge of devotionals. Chairman then introduced the speaker of the day, Mrs. W. C. Cumming, wife of the Presbyterian minister of Henderson, N. C. Mrs. Cumming is a returned missionary from China, where she taught in a Christian school for girls. Her address was very interesting and her accounts of Christian work done by converted Chinese students was very inspiring, and will urge us on to greater work for China. We were indeed glad to have Mrs. Cumming with us an hope to hear her again in our missionary work.

The meeting was well attended. Much regret was expressed that Rev. W. H. Neese and family, of Randleman, could not be with us. Also at the enforced absence of one of our pastors in this district, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, who went to the bedside of his sick mother in Virginia. Next district meeting will be held with Union Chapel auxiliary, Granville Charge.

W. F. M. S. WEST END

The W. F. M. S. of West End church is glad to report splendid meetings for the past several months. Our June meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. R. Bull, with Mrs. J. R. Holden, our president, acting as hostess. About 20 members answered to the roll call after a very inspiring devotional topic, discussed by Miss Annie Livingood, graduate of High Point College. After business matters were attended to, the last two chapters in the study-book, "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow," were very interestingly as well as beneficially given us by Miss Ellen Stone, of Grace M. P. church. The Question Box was conducted by Dr. Glascock, after which our hostess served delicious ice cream and cake.

MRS. S. H. STAPLETON,
Corresponding Secretary.

PINE RIDGE ITEMS

I am glad to report I have entirely recovered from the effects of my trip ot the big meetings in Washington and Baltimore and we are planning and pushing the work here with renewed interest and larger vision and greater hopes.

I was sorry the evening program at the General Conference in the interests of Home Missions had to be called off, although I would always rather work than talk about it. A few things I intended to mention are these: Last year was the ninth under the present administration and I am thankful that the reports show that each year has shown an advance over preceding records and the year just closed was, in most respects, the best yet. Our enrollment for the year in Alvan Drew school was 166. The most recent outstanding success is in our Mercantile Department. In two years our stock of new goods and fixtures, amounting to more than $1,600, has been entirely paid for from our profits, and in addition the sale of second hand clothing in those two years has amounted to more than $5,000.

It will surprise you to know that in the past nine years contributions have come direct to me outside of W. H. M. S. channels, amounting to $25,000, and a considerable part of this is from folks who are not members of our church. I am greatly gratified that our work here appeals to everybody who comes in contact with it and we are very thankful for the co-operation of so many good friends. All this money has been used for increasing and improving our equipment. A conservative valuation of our possessions here now is $75,000.

In the Kentucky state-wide Bible Study Contest for 1928, there were 15,563 high school students enrolled. Our boys' class won the pennant for third place in 1926, and in 1927 they stood second, and this year we secured the cup, having reached first place, while our girls' class this year got the second place pennant.

The biggest item confronting us for the year now being entered upon is our program for extension work. The majority of our 17 high school graduates, also quite a number of our former students who have gotten further training elsewhere, are now ready to teach rural schools. We want to keep in close touch with them and help them to do the very best possible work with the children out in the backwoods and up the hollows. I met with the County Board of Education last week and they heartily approved the plan and welcomed my co-operation and supervision. What a wonderful opportunity! Pray that we may have wisdom, tact and strength.

We want to spend five thousand dollars this summer on a suitable water supply and sanitary sewerage system. Who wants to help supply this great need?

We have openings for one teacher in our grades and two, with college training, for our high school. Applicants will please give us complete information as to their age, qualifications, experience, etc. We also need a dietitian to supervise the work in kitchen and dining room.

Please let me refer briefly to a personal matter. Our son, Thomas Van Dyke, 23 years of age, graduated as a civil engineer from Kentucky State University May 28th. Three days later he was in an automobile accident near Lexington, Ky., and was taken to a hospital in an unconscious condition with his thigh bone badly broken. He has since been operated upon and is now in a plaster case from arm pits to toes, and doing as well as can be expected. We will be glad to have you join with us in prayer for a complete recovery.

Very sincerely,
THOS. R. WOODFORD, Supt.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Dodson

Mrs. Mary Emma Dodson died June 9, 1928, aged about 68 years. She first joined Hebron M. P. church. Several years ago she transferred her membership to Chestnut Ridge church, where she remained a member until death.

Funeral services Sunday, June 10th, 5 p. m., at Chestnut Ridge, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. F. Minnis, after which the remains were placed to rest in the church cemetery.

A large congregation attended these services. May the bereaved ones be comforted by the One who can bind up the broken-hearted.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Wright

Mary Ann Teague Wright, wife of W. H. Wright, was born in Davidson county near Pleasant Grove church March 6, 1852, and died at her home near here May 31, 1928. While her death was not altogether unexpected, yet it came suddenly and was quite a shock to her family and the entire community.

In early life she professed religion and joined Prospect M. E. church, but about 45 years after she moved her membership to Pleasant Grove where she lived and died in the triumphs of a gospel faith. Mrs. Wright was a good woman and said some time ago that she was ready to go whenever the summons should come. She and her husband were very much devoted to each other and Brother Wright has the sympathy of the church and community in this sad hour.

The first Sunday in May, 1881, she was married to W. H. Wright and this union was blessed with four children, two of whom died several years ago. Surviving are the husband, two daughters, Mrs. H. M. Bryant and Mrs. P. H. Carroll, of High Point; two brothers, E. E. Teague, of Thomasville, and I. B. Teague, of High Point. There are also 12 grandchildren, one of whom has spent the greater part of her life in the home of her grandparents which makes grandmother feel like her own mother. To all who mourn we extend the hand of sympathy.

Sunday at 11 a. m. her pastor conducted the funeral service in the church, after which her body was placed in the church cemetery. The weather was rainy but the beautiful flowers and the crowded church showed clearly the high esteem in which she was held by her friends and neighbors.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mecklenburg.—I have been waiting for the reporters to report. I do not see anything from our work. I have tried to select reporters that would report, but it seems I have failed in that respect. Maybe they think there is nothing worthy of report. If so, they are badly mistaken, for the work is progressing nicely. Many more are attending services than in the beginning of the year. Our Ladies' Aid at Stallings church is doing a fine work, worthy of notice. Also the C. E. Society at Stallings is doing well and very encouraging. We have filled all of our appointments, and I am glad to say there is a co-operative spirit throughout the work. I am pleased with the interest taken, and am quite sure by the end of this conference year more will become interested in the work. We had our Children's Day last Sunday; the children did fine. We used the literature from our own press, and I think it is fine. Our collection was rather small, but those of us who are acquainted with conditions down here realize why. We are arranging to have the children from our Children's Home with us in the near future, and I am sure it will increase interest in the Home and the church, for they render such good programs. Hoping when the reporters read this it will prompt them to service, I remain,

Yours in the service for the Master,
W. C. HALL, Reporter.

Pine Grove, Kernersville Charge.—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, our faithful pastor, filled his appointment Sunday and gave us a good gospel sermon. The text was taken from the third chapter of Amos and third verse: "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" Then the question: Can the church prosper except its members be agreed?

So, member of the church, let's agree and work together with the pastor for the good of the church, to the glory of God, and the good of the community.

The church was saddened on May 25 to hear of the death of Mrs. Laura Vance, a faithful attendant of the church when she was in good health.

Miss Blanche Ingram, a student of High Point College, spent a few days' vacation at home. She left Monday to attend the summer school session at High Point College.

Miss Bessie Cooke attended the commencement exercises at Guilford College this week.
REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—Our special meeting is to begin the first Sunday in July. Children's Day exercise will be held the third Sunday night in June. Mrs. L. F. Honeycutt is training the children and the program promises to be one of real interest. Rainy Sundays and unfavorable weather has made it difficult to practice as we intended, yet the children are doing well and we feel sure the pageant will be rendered successfully.

Our parsonage in High Point has been sold and the plan now is to relocate and build a new modern parsonage in the community near the church. The new high school building is going up rapidly and will be ready to open school in the early fall. This will give the pastor access to one of the best schools in Davidson county.

The Ladies' Aid Society held another successful meeting in the home of Mrs. Darr, on English Street, in High Point. The meeting was largely attended and Mrs. Darr and her mother, Mrs. J. E. Cecil, delighted the ladies in the serving of refreshments that would please anybody who likes to eat. There will be no July meeting of the Ladies' Aid because our special meeting will be in progress at the time of the next regular meet.

Mrs. Clark, who has been kept at home for several weeks because of sickness, is now able to be at her usual place at church. Mrs. B. E. Payne has been on the sick list for some time and we hope soon she may regain her usual good health. G. L. REYNOLDS.

Asheville.—Our new pastor, Rev. Fred W. Paschall, launched the work here in a formal way last Sunday morning. It might be named "an installation service." Bro. Paschall dedicated the church officers and officers of the departments and Sunday school teachers in a very impressive and inspiring manner. His text was a part of 2 Timothy 2:15. His subject was, "The Unashamed Worker." The Scripture lesson and the hymns were all most appropriate. A beautiful responsive reading was said by the pastor and the officers and teachers. It might be summed up thus:

"Save us and help us, we humbly beseech Thee, O Lord—from infirmity of purpose, lack of interest, indolence, feeble sense of duty disregard of others, half-heartedness in our work, self-conceit, offensive manners, self-assertion, love of flattery, dislike of criticism, impatience, irritation, sarcasm, gossip, all idle and hurtful words.

"Above all, O Lord, give us knowledge of Thee, to see Thee in all Thy works, always to feel Thy presence and to hear Thy call. Uplift our hearts to new love, energy, and devotion that we may go forth in Thy strength."

There was a good attendance at both services.

The prayer meeting Wednesday night was well attended, in response to the pastor's motto, "Make Wednesday night Church Night."

For two weeks we have been distressed for the critical illness of Miss Novella McIntyre. She was stricken on the night of her arrival from the High Point College commencement. Her condition seemed hopeless from the beginning, but there is slight improvement now. Her many friends are praying and hoping for sure recovery.

Miss Annette Stowe, of High Point, N. C., recently visited her sister, Mrs. C. C. McNeil. Brother W. T. Hanner and Mrs. Hanner, of Julian, N. C., visited the family of Bro. Hardin here, Mrs. Hanner's brother.

Miss Flossie Stout will remain in Asheville to attend the Asheville Summer School. Bro. J. O. VanMeter, of the Asheville school, will conduct a union revival meeting at Whitaker's, N. C., beginning June 17. Our prayers go with him and the churches uniting. He certainly blessed us for the six months he supplied for Bro. Paschall. Waco Miller is still in the hospital. Oscar Havner is in the hospital recovering from a serious accident. Brother Paschall recently addressed the Clean Life Club at the Y. M. C. A. Our entire membership feel amply rewarded for waiting for the coming of Brother Paschall. We welcome the Misses Fawcett from Guilford College for the summer. REPORTER.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—After a period of time in which severe attacks of measles have been raging in our community, I seat myself again to report from our church.

We are very glad that the measles have somewhat died out and again we have started our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor going as best we are able.

After being absent from these services somehow we grow a little cold and indifferent, but may the Holy Spirit continue to reign in each heart. May we continue to press forward and spread the tidings of joy to those who do not know the Lord in the forgiveness of sins. We want to always be found in the service of the Lord.

Many of the Lineberry folks attended the Sunday school convention at Jackson Hill last Sunday. Interesting talks and songs were rendered from the various churches which were greatly enjoyed.

Christian friends, pray for us that we may always be obedient to the will of Almighty God.

And some day may we meet in heaven where sin, sorrow and death shall come no more but where joy and peace will reign forever. ROBT. LANIER, Reporter.

Belmont.—Sunday, the third Annual Memorial Day, was one of the greatest days in the history of Belmont Methodist Protestant church. The principal feature of the day was a splendid, enlightening, inspiring address by Mr. Clarence Ross, mayor of Graham. During the morning and afternoon sessions suitable quartets and duets were rendered. After the morning address an appropriate service was conducted at the cemetery where every grave had been decorated.

Dinner was spread by the various families. Many old friends were noticed in the gathering. The afternoon program consisted of more good music, duet, quartet, sermon by the pastor, J. Elwood Carroll, and a short business meeting. The treasurer made a favorable report. The officers were all re-elected: Mr. Roy L. Sharpe, president; Mr. Green A. Nicholson, vice-president; Miss Carrie E. Nicholson, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Ramah Shoffner, corresponding secretary. Mr. C. C. Branson, a former member of Belmont church, made a short talk at the afternoon session. Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Burlington, and Rev. O. C. Loy, Jr., Saxapahaw, attended the afternoon session. In future years the fourth Sunday in May will be the regular Memorial Day at Belmont church.
MISS NANIE COBLE.

Chatham Circuit.—Although I have not reported for some time, we have not been idle, but have been endeavoring to keep the work goingas best we are able.

The first Sunday in May was Memorial Day at Zion. The sermon by Rev. D. I. Garner was an inspiration to the large congregation present. Since our last report the church has been covered, and plans are being made to paint the exterior of the building.

At Piney Grove on the fourth Sunday in May, in the morning, the Children's Day program was given. In the afternoon the memorial sermon was preached. Both of these services were attended by a large number. The Sunday school here is making splendid progress.

The Children's Day program at Boulee was given on the second Sunday in June. The program was a good one. At the close Rev. E. F. Cude, of Colfax, made a talk on missions. An offering of $16.22 was taken. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock Rev. W. M. Loy, of Burlington, preached the memorial sermon, which was well received by the large audience. A feature of this service was a vocal solo by Miss Mary Ellis, of Siler City. The concluding number was an address on "The Place of the Young People in the Church," by Rev. F. L. Gibbs, a talk that was both inspiring and instructive. The Sunday school here has grown to such a point that the building of additional rooms is being considered as a means of accommodating the classes.

The third Sunday in June will be the date of the Children's Day and memorial services at Hickory Grove. On the fourth Sunday Rev. H. L. Isley will preach the memorial sermon in all-day services at Flint Ridge. Dinner will be served on the grounds. Every one is invited to both these occasions.

A larger amount than ever before has been raised on both A. C. B. and G. C. B. Most of the churches will most likely pay in full this year.

We are thankful for a number of gifts received from the people of all the churches on the charge. C. G. ISLEY.

Flat Rock, Vance.—The work of our church is progressing very nicely. Our pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, continues to give us fine, inspiring sermons. At last appointment he preached a Mother's Day sermon. It was very appreciatively received. Our pastor is working very hard to get our church building and Sunday school rooms all finished. Old plaster has been removed from the church and it will be replastered. Main auditorium and Sunday school rooms will be given sand finish alike. We hope to have everything ready for the paint by next Sunday, June 17, then to get it painted in time for our revival in July.

Sunday school was held outdoors in the grove yesterday as the plaster and church was so torn up. It is nearing the one hundred mark in attendance, and more interest is being taken in the lessons. Two classes, Nos. 3 and 4, have on a drive for new members and better attendance. The winning class is to be entertained with an outing and supper by the other. To date Class No. 3, Mrs. B. W. Jones, teacher, stands ahead.

The Sunday evening prayer meetings are taking on new life. It may be the active part taken by our young people. For the last two Sunday evenings the leaders have been from Classes No. 4 and No. 3. They made splendid leaders. Some of our grown-ups should take notice. We are indeed proud of our young people.

The Ladies' Aid is doing good work. They have about $130.00 in the treasury towards the purchase of a piano for the church. New officers were installed last meeting as follows: President, Mrs. S. W. Reavis; vice-president, Miss Annie Satterwhite; secretary, Mrs. B. W. Jones; treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Satterwhite. This is a splendid corps of officers and deserve the hearty support and co-operation of the entire church membership.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society will meet in its June meeting with Mrs. T. P. Hester. It is their plan to pay their missionary apportionment in monthly installments. Two groups have been organized among our children and young people. The group, aged 12 to 16 years, will be called Willing Workers Missionary Society, with Miss Mary V. White superintendent. They will do both home and foreign work. They will hold all their meetings at the church. The other group, aged 6 to 12 years, will have Mrs. T. P. Hester as superintendent, meeting at the church same hours as the other group, but meetings will be held separately.

Several of our members attended the district meeting of missionary societies held Thursday, May 31, with Mt. Carmel church. They reported a good meeting. Mentioning reports given by several delegates that attended branch meeting as well as the interesting address of Mrs. W. C. Cumming, who is a returned missionary from China. At the prayer service last evening we heard of the splendid program given by Middleburg township Sunday School Association in the Middleburg Baptist church. Wish more of our leaders could have attended.

We are glad to have in our midst for the summer Prof. H. E. White, of Davidson county, who will spend his vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. White.

REPORTER.

Concord.—The interest and attendance at Sunday school continues good and our efficient superintendent, Mr. J. S. Polk, is very enthusiastic in his efforts to make the school bigger and better. There were 315 present Sunday.

A large congregation was present at the morning hour and heard a very interesting sermon on "Seeing As Others See," by our pastor.

The Men's Brotherhood meeting and supper were held last Friday night in the social hall of the Sunday school building. Prof. J. B. Roberson, former superintendent of Cabarrus county schools, was present and made a very interesting address.

Children's Day services will be held here on the first Sunday in July.

MRS. D. A. M'LAURIN.

Greenville Circuit, Hobbs Chapel.—Brother Powell preached for us yesterday at the usual hour. His subject was, "The Beautiful Life." He plainly and interestingly discussed the way to obtain and retain the beautiful life, also the rewards of it. He said to obtain it we must repent of our sins, accept Christ as our Savior, and surrender our lives fully to Him. To retain it we must study the Bible, pray daily, and live a life of self-sacrifice. The reward of the beautiful life was a promise of all that we need in this world, and eternal life in the world to come.

We will have church again the fourth Sunday morning. At this service there will be an election of delegate to our annual conference. Bro. A. W. Moore and Bro. R. M. Pearson are the nominees. Be sure to attend this service and vote for the one that you wish to represent this charge at the coming conference. REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—Rev. J. F. Minnis was with us at Chestnut Ridge at 11 a. m. and at Hebron at 3 p. m. yesterday. Congregations were good at both places. The addresses by Bro. Minnis were fine. They were well delivered and listened to attentively. We believe the missionary interest of our people was deepened.

We wish all our people could hear the story of conditions in foreign ands from the lips of those who know. Bro. Minnis tells of conditions in India as he knows them to be.

Sincerely,

B. M. WILLIAMS.

High Point.—At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday the choir rendered the exquisite anthem, "Spirit of God," and Mrs. J. H. Allred and Clarence Schultheiss sang the lovely "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," by Ambrose, as a duet. Dr. S. K. Spahr delivered a strong sermon from Corinthians 2:5, "A Faith That Will Not Shrink." He said in part that men are very careful about things precious; so we should prize most highly our faith, which is our hope of eternal life. Men are very proud of their learning, their discoveries in science and philosophy, but our chief purpose and desire should be the cultivation and increase of our faith in the power of God. He says that he is old-fashioned enough to believe that the greatest work in which men and women can be engaged is the work of the church, and that we must get back to our belief in that greatest of all old miracles, conversion. At the close of the sermon, we were much pleased to receive Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Clemmons and little daughter, Evelyn, by transfer from Grace church, Greensboro. These additions are warmly welcomed and heartily received into our fellowship.

At the Sunday evening service the anthem, "God That Madest Earth and Heaven," was sung by the choir, there was a selection by the male quartette, and Prof. J. D. Hardy, of the college, brought an instructive and helpful message.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Minnie Pickett Harrell will give her annual music recital in the assembly room, when she will present her pupils in piano.

The Teacher Training Class under the helpful leadership of Dean P. E. Lindley, of the college, continues to meet each Wednesday evening. On last Sunday morning Dean Lindley filled the pulpit of Grace church, Greensboro. We are very happy to know that he was honored with the degree of Doctor of Literature by Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., at its recent commencement.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny are now occupying their magnificent new residence on the High Point-Greensboro highway near Jamestown.

V. W. Idol, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon W. Idol, is receiving hearty congratulations on his splendid scholarship record while a student in High Point high school, from which he was graduated last week. During the four years he made an average grade of 95 1-4 per cent, which is most excellent especially when his extreme youthfulness is considered. This bright young boy has not yet reached his 16th birthday.

At the commencement of the University of North Carolina yesterday two bright and popular young members of our church and Sabbath school received the A.B. degree, Holt McPherson and Edwin E. Koonce.

Misses Helen Hayes, of Henderson, and Alice Faulkner, of Danville, Va., have returned to their home after a visit of several days to Miss Virginia Pickens. These girls were bridesmaids in the wedding of Miss Eugenia Williams, of Greensboro, and Mr. Charles Reginald Strouse, of Hagerstown, Md., which was solemnized in Grace church, Greensboro, on Tuesday evening, June 5th. The bride is the daughter of Mr. R. F. Williams, who was in business in High Point at one time, and is a graduate of High Point College of class of 1927. Mr. Strouse is a native of Chambersburg, Pa., but is now in business in Hagerstown, Md., where the young couple will reside after a honeymoon trip to Washington and New York City. The best wishes of a host of friends is extended to the pretty and popular young bride.

L. R. Johnston, principal High Point high school, has gone to Durham where he will teach in Duke University summer school. Mrs. Johnston and little daughter, Rebecca Holt, will spend the summer with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Wicker, of Elon College.

Many friends are pleased to see R. Lynn Trout and his mother, Mrs. P. T. Crawford, in High Point after an absence of several weeks.

Siler City.—Last Sunday was a very happy day for us all. Our Sunday school attendance was at its highest mark, 142 present. It is impossible to mention all those who have received their attendance certificates and pins recently because practically each Sunday there is at least one presented, but we wish to congratulate Mr. Ed Fox and family on their record-breaking attendance, four having received their pins and certificates recently.

Due to the fact that Mrs. Dixon was visiting relatives in Pittsburgh Sunday Rev. F. L. Gibbs, a former pastor, was in charge of the morning service. Mr. Gibbs, in his usual manner, delivered to a large audience a splendid message on the subject, "The Quest of Youth." We were also favored with a beautiful solo by Miss Mary Ellis, of the local Baptist church.

Recent items of interest in the Christian Endeavor Society are: Report on trip to Baltimore by Mrs. D. L. Johnson, special music by Miss Minnie Cooper and Mr. J. B. Turner, and many interesting and helpful talks by Mr. and Mrs. Dixon and other members on Vacation and Amusements.

The picnic at Kimesville June 1st, financed by the men, who were defeated in a recent Sunday school contest, was a great success. Each lady was asked to take a basket, and a good lunch consisting of fish, pie, cake and pickles was enjoyed. Fishing and boat-riding were also enjoyed by those present, which numbered approximately 100.

Our Wednesday evening prayer services are being attended unusually well. There were 49 present last Wednesday evening, at which time Mr. and Mrs. Dixon gave us a splendid view of the Baltimore conference.

Mr. Billie Wrenn, of the University of Alabama, is at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Wrenn, for the summer.

It is very interesting and encouraging to note the interest taken in the appearance of the Sunday school rooms. Many floors have been stained and other improvements made. There is not a prettier or more youthful-looking room than the Junior Philathea with the curtains, table-runner and chair cushions of a nice cretonne. The other rooms have not been completed yet.

In a business meeting some time ago it was decided that each member of the Senior Philathea class make a quilt square and each member charge a fee of 10c to embroider a name on hers. Mrs. J. A. Cooper got the consent of 102 people, thereby winning first prize. Mrs. Cooper will be given by her class all the ice cream she can eat. The total amount collected by the entire class was $55.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Last Sunday was a good day for us. We had good attendance at Sunday school, there being 77 present. We were very glad to have quite a number of visitors present. We are proud of our Sunday school, for a little over one year ago we organized with 32 members and we now have an enrollment of 109. We hope to keep on growing and are looking forward to better average attendance from now on.

The 11 o'clock service was given over to a Children's Day program. Many beautiful flowers were tastefully arranged about the pulpit. The children deserve much credit for the splendid way they rendered their pieces.

Rev. E. F. Cude, of Colfax, made a very fine talk on missions. The offering amounted to $16.22. We are very much indebted to outside friends who helped out the choir so much with the singing.

In the afternoon memorial service was held. The cemetery had been nicely cleaned and the graves decorated with many beautiful flowers. We were very glad indeed to have Rev. W. M. Loy, of Burlington, with us to preach the memorial sermon. Bro. Loy has endeared himself very much to the people of Hope church and Bonlee. He made a good talk and paid tribute to our loved ones gone before who so nobly bore their cross. At the close of Bro. Loy's discourse, Miss Mary Ellis, of Siler City, favored us with a beautiful solo.

Rev. F. L. Gibbs next made a short but appealing talk on the young people's place in the church.

We wish to thank members of the M. P. choir of Siler City for their splendid music in the afternoon.

Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, seemed highly pleased with the day's program.

Only two more months until our revival. It is not too soon to begin to pray for a great meeting. REPORTER.

To be held the fourth Sunday in this month an all-day memorial service. We are expecting a large crowd and good speaking.

Mr. D. W. Jennings has been appointed to open our next prayer meeting.

Many of our older members have been unable to attend services this year on account of ill health. The young people will have to come in and try to help fill their place the best they can in remembrance of the good work of the older members.

Let us look forward and be praying for our revival which will commence the fourth Sunday in next month. REPORTER.

Grace Church.—Although the pastor, Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, is away on his vacation, we are enjoying splendid sermons. On Sunday morning the pulpit was filled by Dr. Lindley, dean of High Point College, while Sunday night our beloved former pastor, Dr. S. K. Spahr, preached. The pulpit is being filled each Sunday during the absence of the minister by a committee. No meetings of the congregation have been stopped.

The meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, which was to have been held Tuesday evening of this week, has been postponed until next Tuesday. At this meeting Mrs. A. G. Dixon will speak about the General Conference, and Mrs. Hammer, of Asheboro, will speak concerning the union of all mission boards.

The Ladies' Aid Society met Monday afternoon at the church. They pledged $100 to the church building fund.

The Senior Christian Endeavorers find the supper each Sunday night a pleasure. It increases the attendance, and many people may obtain a small supper for a mere nominal sum. The meetings have been very well attended.

The Sunday schools of this church and West End and Calvary have entered a contest for attendance during the month of June. The two losers are to carry baskets for a picnic supper. Grace Sunday school has adopted the slogan, "We will not carry a basket."

The boys' class of the Intermediate Department entertained the girls at Dr. Johnson's club house. The party went in swimming, then a weiner roast was enjoyed by all.

We are glad to welcome back all the college students who have been away to school. Their faces add a youthful appearance to our congregation.

Henderson.—The monthly meeting of the missionary societies was held Thursday afternoon, May 21, at the home of Mrs. C. F. Tanksley, Sr. Mrs. R. A. Hunter was assistant hostess. The president, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, presided. Miss Agnes Harris conducted the devotionals, reading "The Purple Candle" from the "Jewel Box." Mrs. Clyde Finch summarized the entire study book, "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow," and gave in conclusion the last chapter. The collection of dues followed and reports from the treasurers. Roll call and reading of minutes was given by Miss Agnes Harris. Mrs. R. A. Hunter and Mrs. Sam Harris, delegates to the branch meeting at Greensboro, gave very interesting reports of the proceedings there. After the business session the meeting closed with special prayers for those mentioned in our prayer calendar. The hostess served delicious strawberry shortcake.

The Philathea class held its monthly meeting in the class room Thursday night, May 24. The president, Mrs. A. B. Young, was in the chair. She also conducted the devotionals. Reports from various committees were given and showed much work being done by the members of the class. During the period of new business it was voted to have the woodwork and walls of the class room painted, the class room committee having that in charge. Since the Philathea class was one of the losing classes in the attendance contest, they also voted to entertain the winning class, Baraca, Friday evening, June 8. Other business was discussed and voted on. Due to the lateness of the hour the program was postponed until the next meeting. Rev. R. A. Hunter dismissed the class with prayer.

We regret to report the death of Mrs. Cooke, mother of Miss Katie Cooke, who has been ill for quite a while. Death came this morning at 5 o'clock.

With the closing of schools and colleges we gladly welcome home many of our young boys and girls. REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Our Sunday school is still moving on. If the people would come more regularly we could do better work. The Bible class had charge of the opening exercises yesterday. The second Sunday in May most of our Sunday schools attended the Sunday school convention at Hollister.

On fourth Sunday afternoon in May our annual memorial services were held at this church. A large crowd attended this service and many pretty flowers were brought to decorate the graves. Corinth is considered one among the oldest churches. The history of the church was read and discussed by Rev. H. S. B. Thompson at this service and the male quartette from Aurelian Springs gave us several selections. The visitors from a distance who attended the memorial services were Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Woodruff and children, from Lawrenceville, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Taylor, Miss Mollie Carter, Mr. C. C. Crickmore, from Rosemary, and Mr. W. T. Carter from Vaughan, and a large crowd from Aurelian Springs.

Winston, First Church.—Large congregations are attending the services, and Rev. Mr. Moton has been extended a cordial welcome. He is one of the best known ministers in the North Carolina conference and is recognized as a most capable preacher. He will continue to make his home at High Point, conducting only morning services at the church here until September, when evening worship will be resumed.

The Sunday school is showing a gratifying growth, approximately 150 members being present Sunday. C. H. Smith is superintendent, and with the assistance of other officers and teachers of the various classes, marked progress is being shown.

The annual session of the North Carolina conference is to be held in Winston-Salem about the first of November.

Piney Grove, Denton Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving along and we hope still more may come. We are planning to have a Children's Day the fourth Sunday afternoon and hope for a good time.

We were very glad indeed to have Dr. Allman and Miss Jarrett bring 19 of the children from the Home at High Point Sunday afternoon and render us a splendid program. We were very sorry Bro. Bingham was sick with mumps and could not be with us Sunday, for we miss him so much; hope he will soon be well again. REPORTER.

Randleman Charge.—Our special meeting began at Mt. Lebanon the first Sunday and came to a close last Sunday night. Bro. T. A. Williams was with us from the beginning and remained through Friday night. We were almost rained out the first half week; as the weather became more favorable the attendance increased. Bro. Williams did excellent work, standing firm on the Bible. Everybody was highly pleased with his preaching. There were four conversions.

Other churches in town co-operated in a very commendable way. Rev. Mr. Morton, pastor of the Baptist church here, preached Saturday night and Sunday night.

Next Sunday morning an opportunity will be given for new candidates to unite with the church. W. H. NEESE.

Enfield.—A number of our church family are sick. Mr. Frank White has been suffering for a number of weeks. We are hopeful for his early recovery. Mrs. Ida Keeter has been suffering with her heart. Recently she was taken very ill and life looked uncertain for her; however, we are glad to report that she is much improved. Mr. Charlie Neal has also been seriously ill, yet he is much improved. Just last week Mrs. J. R. Powers was taken seriously ill and taken to the Parkview hospital at Rocky Mount. From reports she seems to be resting very comfortably. She may have to undergo an operation before her case is cleared up. We are asking the prayers of our church for these fellow workers in Christ.

The folks here are still showing their good will toward the pastor and his family. Recently we have received appreciative gifts from Miss Bustin and Mrs. H. A. Hyman, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Powers, Misses Susie and Mary Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Bellamy.

Our church here is doing things. Look for the report from the church reporter.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Enfield.—Our pastor, Rev. J. Clyde Auman, gave us two splendid sermons Sunday. The congregation was large Sunday morning; at night not quite as many. Let's all attend church; it helps the preacher; he can preach better when he sees many people interested, and your presence gives him an opportunity to help you.

The Senior C. E. is planning a social for Friday night; we will report that next week. The Intermediate C. E. is maintaining good interest and doing very creditable work. Lillian Bellamy had charge of the program for Sunday evening, Pattie Ruth Neal for the time preceding, and Robert Earl Parker for the next time. REPORTER.

Hickory Grove Church.—Please change the date of Children's Day to the fourth Sunday (instead of the third), as our pastor can be with us. A. L. JONES.

MORE ALAMANCE COUNTY MINISTERS

Revs. D. I. Garner, J. H. Trollinger and H. S. B. Thompson were reared in Alamance county. These, including the ones named last week, make 21 entering the work of our conference from Alamance county.

Bros. Kenneth Holt and Talton J. Whitehead are Alamance boys preparing to preach. Rev. L. L. Abright, who was one of our missionaries for a time, was an Alamance man. He is not preaching now.

ONE MORE MINISTER TO THE CREDIT OF ALAMANCE

In my article in last week's issue of the Herald I omitted the name of Rev. David I. Garner as one of the ministers entering the Annual Conference work from Alamance county. This makes 19 men for the gospel ministry in the Methodist Protestant church from Alamance county. Let us hear from other counties in North Carolina, and when we have heard from the big "preacher counties" of the state we will then know who holds the banner for sending the largest number of men into the work of the gospel ministry. We regret the omission of Bro. Garner's name from the list and we assure the English Street pastor that it was purely an oversight. C. B. WAY.

—Miss Pauline Haltom, formerly of the Children's Home, has been ill for months. She is now critically ill in St. Leo Hospital, this city. Her brothers and sister have cared for her.

THE VALUE OF THE INDIVIDUAL

By Rev. J. H. Jowett, D.D.

"He calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out." Our Saviour never spoke of "the mass," nor had he any equivalent to the term. And he never spoke of "the classes," nor had any such jumbled term a place in his vocabulary. In our Saviour's thoughts the individual was never lost in the crowd. It is altogether different with ourselves. We soon reach the limit of our power to discriminate and to separate unit from unit in the gathered multitude. Even the camera, with its extraordinary sensitive discernment, fails to retain the individual when he is one of a mighty crowd.

But Jesus never lost the perception of the individual, however great may have been the crowd. He calls his sheep by name. His names for people are not racial names in which the personality is lost. They are personal names, sharply defining the individual life. He goes through the crowded streets of Capernaum, and he calls Matthew the publican. He moves amid the dense throngs of Jericho, and he picks out Zaccheus by name. And these are not exceptional cases, they are typical. His interest is ever in the individual. And he does not distinguish only the rare, showy flowers in the garden—some vestal lily, some passionate rose, he is also concerned with "the grass of the field." He is not only interested in the gorgeous birds of the woodland, "strange bright birds with their starry wings, which bear the rich hues of all glorious things"; he is equally attracted by the sparrow, and in his word he immortalized it. Yes, he knows us, whether we are distinguished or obscure—whether it be a mystical Nathaniel, or a blind Bartimaeus, who is by the wayside begging. In the record of Jesus no one is lost in the crowd.

And our Saviour comes to us, not to round off and destroy our individuality, but rather to enrich and perfect it. When his redeeming grace begins to minister to us, and to carry out his will, it does not erase all our idiosyncrasies. Our distinctive faculties are not subdued, nor are they set in such formal relations that we are all as like one another as houses in a terraced row. Grace does not standardize the saints; there are many more types than one. Grace does not erase the graces, and turn the varied landscape into little plots of exactly the same measure, and having precisely the same growths. How uninteresting it would all be if our differences were wiped out, and we were merged in undistinguished uniformity! Suppose that in the bird-world there was a revolution, in which wings and feathers were to be redistributed. Suppose the sparrow were to borrow a few feathers from the bird of paradise, and the more gorgeous bird were to borrow some of the sparrow's homely brown, until they were as alike as two pins! No, that is not the way! Christ comes to develop our individuality.

Our Saviour comes to bring every life to its purposed and distinctive glory. Every one's endowments are like an unopened bulb, and Christ comes to unpack them, to elicit their strength and beauty by the awakening ministries of his grace. "To present every man perfect in Christ Jesus!" That is to be our destiny. In Christ, every one is to become complete, and every one is to be crowned with spiritual distinction.

That will be the ever-growing attractiveness of the eternal world. Our personal development will never cease. We shall always be presenting to one another new and fascinating glimpses of personal growth. Heaven is a realm where wonder is never satiated, but is always fed and free.

MOODY AND SANKEY

Billy Sunday and other contemporary evangelists had their counterparts in a past day in the famous team of Moody and Sankey. Dwight Lyman Moody started out as a selfish and mischievous youth. Born at Northfield, Mass., in 1837. His father died when Dwight was four years old. The boy became independent and neglected the opportunities of education.

At the age of 17 Dwight obtained a position as a salesman in a Boston shoe store. He continued to live somewhat recklessly until 1855 when, by accident, he heard an impressive sermon. He was attracted to the church and in turn became intensely interested in Sunday school work. In 1856 he went to Chicago and started his own business.

Two years later he opened his own Sunday school, recruiting his pupils from the streets. In a short space of time his class had grown to 1,000 pupils and North Market Hall, where it met, subsequently became Illinois Street church and Moody its layman pastor. Moody became so enthused in his missionary work that in 1860 he gave up his business to devote his every effort to the greater undertaking.

During the Civil War he was associated with the United States Christian Commission and after the war became head of the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association. The church where Moody carried on his activities was destroyed in the great Chicago fire but was quickly rebuilt by popular subscription. Under the name of the Chicago Tabernacle it started its work of supervising the great training school for foreign missionaries and lay workers.

It was in developing this work that Moody was joined by Ira David Sankey who became of equal renown. Sankey's first assistance was to sing hymns in conjunction with Moody's preaching. The pair made such a success that Moody and Sankey's gospel hymns were a byword. The two also conducted revival meetings in England. Sometimes 20,000 persons would gather at one time to hear them. In 1879 Moody opened the Northfield Seminary for young women at the town of his birth and several years later started there the Hermon school for boys. In each the training centers about Bible study; the boys are instructed in farm work and the girls in housework. It was at Northfield in 1880 that the first Christian Workers' Conference met at Moody's call, and it was Moody who in 1889 started the Bible Institute of Chicago.

Moody's sermons might not have been grammatically correct but they were forceful and to the point. They were translated into German and other languages. It is estimated that during his career Moody addressed 50,000,000 persons. Moody was a sincere and earnest fundamentalist. He died in 1899. His last words were:

"Earth is receding; heaven is approaching. God is calling me."—The Pathfinder.

—The Primitive Baptist Church has a diminishing number of members in North Carolina, but taking the country as a whole has gained about a thousand members in the last ten years. In Georgia it has 401 churches with over 15,000 members. In North Carolina it has 295 churches with nearly ten thousand members.

MISSIONS

I almost headed this article "Foreign Missions." Habit soon gets a very strong grip. That which we habitually do soon becomes second nature to us. Only a little more than one short year have I been writing missionary articles and heading them "Foreign Missions" and yet in that time it has become quite natural for me to write that title.

Sometimes it becomes necessary for us to break with old habits and form new ones. This now is one of my tasks in all our missionary operations. It is also one of the tasks of our whole constituency. It ought not to be grievous or difficult. It ought to be a joy and a delight. It is so easy to become circumscribed in our thinking, even in our missionary thinking. It will be different, but, I am wont to believe, wholesome for most of us, if not all, to get the Jesus conception and vision of missionary enterprise to be "My witnesses both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Our omniscient Father knows far more than we the imperative need of missionary effort at home as well as abroad and abroad as well as at home. And with the new plan of missionary enterprise we now have the opportunity of visualizing the Jesus conception of witnessing in every place with the same intense interest and zeal. May our hearts warm up to the new opportunity.

Children's Day

The one phase of missionary interest pre-eminently before us now is the Children's Day service. Should there be those who seemed to be more interested in the Easter exercises and offerings or in the Thank-Offering services of the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. than in the Children's Day services and offerings, let us remember that, in the union of our missionary organizations, the one has now come to mean just as much to us as the others and that already we feel a deeper interest, not only in the one, but in all. We are now on common ground and every interest of our missionary work is becoming just alike to us. Don't you feel that way in reading this article? I assure you that such are my feelings in writing it. And why not? Certainly God is just as much concerned about saving America as He is about saving Europe, Asia or Latin America. But He is just as certainly as much concerned about saving Europe, Asia or Latin America as He is about saving America. With this feeling then shall we not enter unitedly into this first Children's Day service of this new century in a way that we have never entered and make it count more for Christ and the church than it ever has counted?

A Misconception

Quite a number have written about the cost of the Children's Day programs and some have sent money for them. When money has been sent it has been returned. They are free! We are glad to furnish all that are needed to any Sunday school ordering. And, by the way, the orders are still coming. And there is time yet even though most of the services are held in June. But there is no law prohibiting the holding of Children's Day services in July or even August. So if your school has not yet ordered the programs or pageant, do so at once. And remember—they cost you onthing—not even postage. Just order, hold the service and take a big free-will offering for missions.

Historical Poster

Lest you forget, let me again remind you that every Sunday school or church ordering Children's Day supplies is presented with a large poster containing the name and picture of every missionary, except two, sent out by the Board of Foreign Missions or Woman's Foreign Missionary Society with the date of their going out. This is a very valuable poster. The General Conference requested that it be framed and kept in a conspicuous place in our Sunday school rooms or church auditoriums so that our boys and girls, even in oncoming generations, may become conversant about the foreign missionaries of our church. Should any who are using the programs not receive a copy of the poster, please let me know and one will be sent immediately.

Now may we all soon get the habit of thinking and saying missions and with a united front and love enkindled hearts go forward with our Lord and Master in world-wide evangelism witnessing "both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Mrs. Henry Hupfield, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, George H. Miller and J. W. Hawley were elected as members of the Executive Committee to serve with the two executive secretaries.

The Executive Committee was ordered to secure a charter for the Board of Missions, and to take the steps necessary to have the charters of the four organizations represented in this union so changed as to harmonize with this new charter of the board.

The question of constitution and by-laws for this board was referred to the Executive Committee.

An Investment Committee was created consisting of the Executive Committee.

The board was ordered to employ a certified accountant to audit all its accounts.

The president was authorized to appoint a Candidates Committee consisting of two men and two women.

The Executive Committee was authorized to call a meeting of this board before the end of the year if necessary.

The Executive Committee was order to meet once a month for the first six months and then once a quarter, with the understanding that other meetings may be called by the president of the board whenever the work seems to require it.

The president of this board and the two executive secretaries were authorized to sign all vouchers.

J. C. Broomfield read a communication from Mrs. Amos in which she expressed her willingness to continue her work as editor of the Missionary Record until a permanent arrangement could be made. The board expressed its hearty appreciation of this spirit of co-operation and requested Mrs. Amos to continue her work with the same remuneration she has been receiving.

The Executive Committees of the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. were requested to continue to function until the work of all the boards can be unified.

The remuneration of Mrs. Lida K. East, Mrs. Wm. Sturgeon and Mrs. Pettit was continued until September 1, 1928.

The branches of the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. of the various conferences were asked to arrange for union branch meetings and to effect a merger under the Board of Missions as early as possible during the present calendar year.

The branch treasurers are requested to send all moneys to the General Conference treasurer, J. H. Straughn, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

The board directed all incomes from special days to be placed in the general fund of the church, and to be distributed monthly, upon the percentage basis authorized by the General Conference, provided that each board shall receive a total equal to the amount given for that cause.

Mrs. Lida K. East was asked to address the board and she spoke briefly concerning her work as treasurer of the W. F. M. S.

A vote of appreciation was extended to all the former officers of the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. for their faithful service to the church in the past, and their willingness to co-operate with the Board of Missions in effecting the union of our missionary work.

The secretaries were permitted to draw upon the Gratitude Gift to the amount of $45,000 for the payment of debts.

The work done by J. H. Straughn under the direction of T. H. Lewis prior to the General Conference of 1928 was placed under the care of the Board of Missions.

The Board took up the election of an associate secretary and nominations were called for. The names of Mrs. Lida K. East, Miss Betty Ridgway and Mrs. Marie Thompson were presented. The ballot was taken and Mrs. Marie Thompson was elected. Mrs. Thompson is a widow of a Methodist Protestant minister. She is a lady of culture, with wide experience as a business woman and a leader in church work. She is licensed to preach by the Ohio conference of the Methodist Protestant church. At present she is engaged as a missionary organizer for the United Presbyterian church in the state of Michigan. She will assume her duties with our board August 1, 1928.

The Executive Committee was instructed to employ Miss Anna L. Forrest in promotional work if possible.

Mrs. George R. Tillotson read the report of the committee on constitutions and by-laws for the branches and auxiliaries. Copies of this report were ordered sent to all members of this board. Suggestions for changes are to be forwarded to the secretary, J. W. Hawley, 5451 Howe Street, Pittsburgh, Pa., for consideration at the July meeting of the Executive Committee, which is authorized to prepare and edit these constitutions and by-laws.

The committee on assignment of representatives to present the work of this board to the conference auxiliaries was read and adopted. The assignments are as follows: Indiana, G. H. Miller; West Virginia, J. P. Turkleson, Mrs. Mary Strickler, Mrs. Clyde Barbe, and Isa Hinkle; Ohio, G. H. Miller, Mrs. George Tillotson, and Mrs. John Feth; North Carolina, Mrs. George R. Brown, Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mrs. Bates; Maryland, J. H. Straughn, Mrs. J. W. Armstrong, and Mrs. Craig; Pittsburgh, J. C. Broomfield, Mrs. McRoberts, Mrs. F. W. Cooke, and Mrs. A. G. Liebelt; Michigan, J. C. Broomfield, and the presidents of the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. in the Michigan conference; Onondaga, J. W. Hawley.

Miss Mabel Schaffer was recommended to the Executive Committee for promotional work if needed.

The report of the committee on salaries was adopted. The recommendations were as follows: Executive Secretary, $3,300 per year; Associate Secretary, $2,000 per year. In harmony with the action of the General Conference, J. M. Sheridan was employed at $250 per month. Each of these secretaries is to be provided with a stenographer, if necessity requires, whose salary shall not exceed $100 per month.

The unfinished work of the board was left to the Executive Committee.

The next meeting of the Executive Committee has been set for Tuesday, July 17, 1928.

The expense of the associate executive secretary was referred to the Executive Committee of the General Conference, for a division of that expense between the two women's boards.

During the session telegrams were received from the W. F. M. S. branch and the W. H. M. S. branch of the Onondaga conference then in session stating that they had unanimously approved the action of uniting the missionary activities of the church and also pledged their loyalty to the new program of missions.

The W. H. M. S. branch of the Pittsburgh conference was in session during the board meeting and the whole temper of this meeting was one of loyalty to the Methodist Protestant church and our missionary work.

For two full days during the remarkable meeting there was not a discordant note sounded. Every member of the board manifested an intense interest in the work, and a beautiful spirit of Christian loyalty and co-operation.

The board adjourned with prayer by J. M. Sheridan, S. W. Rosenberger and J. C. Broomfield.

J. W. Hawley, Secretary.

OBSERVE CHILDREN'S DAY

The Methodist Protestant church at Cambridge, Ohio, observed Children's Day Sunday morning, June 10th. The attendance was large, the program good, the day perfect and the children beautiful. Every one was happy, a good offering was received and the older folks beamed. The pleasure that our people, both young and old, got out of this service makes one wonder why all our churches, city and rural, do not observe this great day in our church year. Many of them have, more of them will, but it is not too late even for those schools that have not planned to have a Children's Day service to reconsider, repent and still observe the day. If for any reason you cannot work out a program, you could at least tell the children in your school about the children in Japan, China and India, and give them the privilege of making an offering for the children in these our missionary fields. Have the program if possible, but at least take a missionary offering.

Fairfield

June 10. It was our privilege and pleasure to be with the Fairfield church on this date, in their Home-Coming service. The attendance was large, and the program, beginning with the Sunday school, was full for the day. We preached at the eleven o'clock hour, and presented the programs of the conference in the afternoon. In connection with this, a brief period was given to praise and testimony in which there was a ready response and a happy spirit. Most of the afternoon was devoted to singing by groups from different churches. We learned that this is one of the old churches of our conference. The exact time of organization was not learned, but we were told that it dates back well toward a hundred years. Important improvements have recently been made on the building. A new roof has been put on, and new ceiling, and the building painted inside and out. Rubber tracking has been laid in the aisles and around the altar, the pulpit carpeted and seated with new chairs, and the old organ replaced with a piano which the congregation expects to buy if it proves satisfactory. We were delighted with what had been done. The building presents an attractive appearance, and should furnish new inspiration to the membership and the community. We hope that this local interest may be extended to include conference and denominational programs. The life of any local church depends upon its participation in the undertakings of the denomination. This old church will enter the new century, we trust, not only with a renewed building, but with a renewed purpose to give increasing interest and help to every program of kingdom service. Pastor Cowan is earnest in his desire for the promotion of the work. We were glad to be with him and his people.

Charlotte

June 10. At 8 p. m. we were with Bro. Surratt and his people of the First church, and thoroughly enjoyed our visit with them. From a small and not very promising beginning of a few years ago, this church has steadily grown until it is now well organized and well established. Thirty new members have already been added this year, and doubtless this number will be increased with the passing months. From the very beginning the policy of this church has been to support all conference and denominational interests, and this, we are sure, is one of the secrets of its growth. Charlotte is an "honor roll" church. On Monday morning the Vacation Bible School was opened with about fifty in attendance. This number was expected to be increased to one hundred or more. A parsonage site has just been purchased for the church, and practically all the money is in hand with which to pay for it. The lot joins the church property on the east side, and is a very desirable location for a parsonage. For some years the parsonage has been in the church, but the continued growth of the membership has made it necessary to have this space for the activities of the congregation. Pastor Surratt and his wife are serving their fifth year with this church. They are popular with the people, and are making a record of wise and constructive work. The Charlotte church is headed toward an era of expansion and influence.

Kannapolis

June 11.—We were here in a business meeting Monday night. Industrial conditions are discouraging our people somewhat, though we have a small group who are loyal and who believe in our possibilities at this place. This is a growing community and with ample room for our church. We shall keep an eye on Kannapolis and watch with deep interest the developments in this field. Pastor Cowan is concerned for the growth of the work, but is passing, just now, through the strain of family afflictions. He has our sympathy and our prayers. We most earnestly hope that Sister Cowan may speedily be restored to health. Let her be remembered in our prayers.

Pastors' Summer Conference—Young People's Training School

Two important conference events toward which we are looking with keen interest. President Paschall is calling for registrations for one and President Curry for the other. Neither one should be disappointed. There should be 1,200 registrations for the Y. P. T. S. The goal is not too large. Let us run it up rapidly. And certainly the request of Bro. Curry is reasonable and easily within reach. All charges that send their pastors to this assembly will make a good investment for themselves. We hope that some interested layman from every charge will take up this challenge of Bro. Curry and put it over. This assembly of pastors and young people—of young people and pastors—should be a great event in the year's program. The results of such gatherings are eminently worth while, and indispensable to the inspiration and development of our conference. Let's make our coming together in July the best yet. The dates are July 14-21. The Pastors' Conference opens Monday, July 16, and continues through the week.

Twenty New Charges

Yes, and thirteen new churches during the month of June for our "in full" college assessment list. Which means doubling the number that we had at the beginning of the month. Some folks like hard tasks; some easy ones. But nobody, I suppose, objects to a task just because it is easy. Therefore, everybody should get in on this. Let us give you the cue. Here it is: "My charge in the list." This will give us our goal without fail. Isn't it easy? An encouraging letter has just come from one pastor. He will take special collection next Sunday morning, at which time he hopes to realize the full assessment on his charge for this cause. We hope to be able to give you his name next week. Brethren, please major on this college assessment, and let us have this 100 per cent increase during June.

Appreciation

What a fine art it is! Or is it an art at all? Perhaps it is rather one of those soul qualities that instinctively give to life its finer touches. But even then such qualities must be developed. In this sense, appreciation is an art. And with what eagerness we should develop it! It means happiness to us when we would otherwise many times be unhappy. It means ease and encouragement to others when they would many times be confused and deterred. An aged minister told us recently that in his younger days he was the associate pastor of a man much older than himself, and how he was impressed with the expressions of appreciation on the part of this man of God. Often in the humble homes they visited he

BLOTTING OUT

"Good morning, Graham," said Mr. Linn, president of the Hanover Trust Company, as a pleasant-faced young man entered his private office. "The note which I found with my morning mail says that you wish to see me alone for a few minutes."

"I do, sir."

There was a moment's hesitation, then followed a full, contrite confession, given without palliation or self-justification, of disobedience to the company's business rules and irregularities of bookkeeping, difficult of detection, but leading later to loss of money and reputation.

As the tale ended Mr. Linn looked up into the young man's pale face. Two sad but brave eyes met the look steadily.

"Of course, you understand that this statement necessitates your discharge?"

Mr. Linn considered a moment. Something about the young fellow's face and bearing made him hesitate to act too quickly.

"This is Wednesday, and the last of the quarter," he said, presently. "You must stay till Saturday and help us out. As the company has suffered no harm yet, we will probably not prosecute the matter. You will receive your pay as usual——"

"Oh, Mr. Linn, mayn't I work this week without pay? I should be so glad to," came the eager appeal.

"No," Mr. Linn replied, slowly. "You will need it later."

A wave of hot blood dyed Graham's face, but he responded pleasantly: "As you wish, Mr. Linn," and left the room.

* * * * *

Four weeks later, after crossing a crowded thoroughfare, Graham found himself unexpectedly face to face with Mr. Linn, who responded cordially to his silent salute.

"Good morning, Graham. Have you found another place?"

"No, sir; not yet."

"Have you tried?"

"I have made a systematic search, beginning with all the banking houses, and then trying for any honest work anywhere."

"What are you going to do?"

"If I can not find a place by Saturday, I think I shall try the country. Farmers are so glad to get help that they are not as particular about references, and five or six months of outdoor life will doubtless be good for me."

"Do you need more money to get you there?"

Graham flushed hotly as he replied: "No, thank you, Mr. Linn. I have still that last week's pay intact."

Mr. Linn wondered at his appearance, for there was in his bearing nothing of the guilty culprit, or of the disheartened, unsuccessful seeker for work—still less any air of bravado or concealment.

"Would you mind telling me why you confessed your wrong-doing, Graham? You might never have been found out, and you must have known that this or worse would follow."

"The previous Sunday evening I was passing the Asbury church while they were singing one of the hymns I used to like, and I went up on the porch to hear better. It must have been the last one, for the people began to come out as soon as it ended. I moved into the deep shadow of some big pillars just as two ladies came to that part of the porch to talk.

"'That was a beautiful thought of yours,' said one. 'Our human blots are always so black and dark, and never can be removed without leaving some trace of their blackness and the injury they have done.'

"'Our blots are the result of our imperfection and weakness, but God's are the overflow of his love,' said the other.

"'When we want to cancel some mistake in writing or printing, we blot it out in different ways, but we usually make it worse than before with a heavy black mark or several lines. Or if we try erasures of any sort, they can not bear the test of a magnifying glass, or escape detection in some other way,' said the other speaker.

"'That is why God's method of doing it is so comforting,' the second lady went on.

"'As you said,' continued the first, 'by his thick cloud he blots out the mountains of our sins from all eyes, even our own.'

"'And the cloud itself is a thing of beauty, radiant with God's love,' added the second.

"'I thank you more than I can tell,' went on the first speaker, 'and I shall never forget.'

"I did not forget either; I could not. That is why I asked to see you. I ought to have come that Monday morning, but I was too much of a coward."

"But why did you tell me? I need never have known," persisted Mr. Linn.

"I wanted to clean up the record all I could myself before I asked to have it blotted out," replied Graham, in a low tone.

There was a brief pause, then he added, humbly: "Mr. Linn, the lady who spoke those beautiful words was your mother. May I have her address so as to write her?"

Without moving Mr. Linn said: "She lives at 1215 Congress Avenue. Go and see her yourself; she will like that better."

There were several moments of complete silence, then Mr. Linn said: "We have never taken discharged men back——"

"Of course not," interrupted Graham, holding himself more erect than ever.

Mr. Linn smiled a little, and repeated: "We have never taken discharged men back to their old places; a new one seems to work better all around. Murlen is going to take charge of our branch in Jefferson next Monday, and you may have his place, if you like."

Graham gripped a chair near him—had he suddenly lost his wits? Murlen's place! Once he had dreamed of that position as possible, but only after years of service. He looked to see whether Mr. Linn was playing a cruel joke on him, but that gentleman spoke again with all seriousness: "I meant what I said. If you wish Murlen's place you may have it. Perhaps you had better go to his room now; he will be glad to explain the work; and if he, or any one else, inquires about this past month, tell him to ask me."

Still dazed and speechless, Graham took several steps. Then, suddenly recovering himself, he said:

"I must not take the place"—he caught his breath, it was so hard to cut himself adrift again. "When men asked me—questions—I had—to—tell the truth—people will know—it will hurt the company's reputation—and you, yours."

A gratified expression came over Mr. Linn's face. "That is our business—our risk," he answered quietly.

"Mr. Linn," Graham began again as soon as he could speak, his face aglow with gratitude and earnestness, "there was one other thing your mother said that night—you will understand why I did not mention it before. It was that once in a while a person was found who had so much of God and his love in his heart that he could forgive in God's generous, blotting-out way. I did not believe it then, but now I know —I have proof —that she is right."—Zion's Herald.

"ALL THE TIME THERE IS"

"I'd be a better woman if time could be bought in the open market," half jocularly, half seriously, declared a busy worker, not long ago. "I could do so many good, kind things, keep my spiritual slate so much cleaner if only I had a little more time."

"Still—we all have all the time there is," was the quiet reply of the speaker's mother. And how true it is—patent to every one, and yet well worth stopping to ponder over occasionally.

The habit of nervous hurry frequently declared habitual with and characteristic of Americans is fatal to good work, good health, good digestion, good temper. To indulge in it is like allowing the dynamic power which should suffice to move mountains to fret itself away in the impatient effort to roll little stones up hill. The quiet workers are those who accomplish the most, and who do it with least friction for themselves and others. Who ever knew a real genius to "go up in the air" or to be "just ready to fly" in times of stress and strain?

Two artists, preparing for an important exhibition, illustrated this contention finely. The day of entry was near, but both pictures were far from completion. One artist, living on black coffee and sandwiches sent in from a restaurant, toiled nervously, early and late, rubbing out and eagerly remaking at least half of the strokes. The other, calm and quiet, worked steadily, happily through a fair working day, taking reasonable time for meals, sleeping soundly at night.

"How on earth do you expect to finish in time?" the nervous painter asked the other.

"I'm pretty sure of finishing in time so long as I am doing my best, in the best way I can," was the serene reply. "If having observed these conditions, I am unable to finish, I shall know that the finishing was not destined. It's no part of my business to worry over the outcome of my efforts; all I have to do is my quiet best."

The gist of the matter is that while each of us really and truly has "all the time there is" in which to perform our various duties, "our times are in his hand," and he who controls time no less than space and life and all the other wonderful workings of his providence will see to it that we have time for all necessary accomplishment.

"God does not hurry," said a saint and sage, and it seems pretty clear that he meant us to work leisurely also—not to be indolent or dawdle, but to do that which our hands find to do quietly and calmly, perhaps with an occasional relieving and recreative glance at the marvelous beauties about us. Life is too short to be lived hastily, work too important to be hurried over. And why should man be the only one of all God's manifold creatures to make of happy employment drudgery, to fail to enjoy life "as we go along"?

He who gave us life meant it to be "good"—good in the little as well as in the greater things. And it takes "all the time there is" to find each bit along the way. Hurry means missing something of the goodness. "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength."—Ethel Colson.

HEROES OF YOUTH

A questionnaire addressed to students at Yale University has brought to light the fact that the overwhelming majority of those that answered consider Napoleon and Mussolini to be the greatest men that ever lived.

We do not know whether or not Christ was excepted; it does not affect the fact that the youth of Yale, at least definitely put the ideals of Jesus aside, for both Napoleon and Mussolini represent ideas clearly antagonistic to those of Jesus.

The choice of the students was doubtless sincere. They have probably been brought up to the worship of success. The examples that have thrilled them are those of men who conquered difficulties and became rich or powerful in spite of disabilities or disadvantages.

To wring victory from defeat is no doubt admirable, but to set material victory so high that spiritual victory is lost sight of is to encourage a dangerous misconception of what the ideal life is.

The sad thing is that we can declare as our heroes men whose whole history is a negation of the principles of Jesus, and yet not know that in so doing we have also denied Him.

So long as the ideals of Napoleon, let us say, appeal to us we shall drift away from Christ.

We cannot be Christian and follow principles that make impossible the Christ life.

If, like the students, we are honest with ourselves and frankly name the ideals that attract us (or persons in whom these ideals are more or less realized), we shall discover whether or not we are truly seeking to follow Christ. We may be saying, "Lord, Lord," and denying Him in all our ways.—Robert P. Anderson, in C. E. World.

would speak pleasingly of the unpretentious but wholesome food, and, said this man who was telling me the story, "Everything tasted sweeter to me after that." Who has not felt the sweetening effect of appreciation, when appreciation was due? And the heart that is full of this quality will often have occasions to express it. Jesus never failed to show appreciation and aside from holiness itself, but few graces count for more in the life of a minister.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

July 1: The Early Life of Saul

Scripture Basis: Deut. 6:4-9; Phil. 3:4-6; Acts 22:3, 27, 28.

Golden Text: Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy youth. Eccl. 12:1.

Saul and the Scripture

The biographer, Edersheim, says: "In the days of Christ the pious Jew had no other knowledge, neither sought nor cared for any other, than that of the law of God." Would to God, not that we had not other knowledge than God's law, but that His law was primary in the learning of our children today.

This passage of Scripture, Deut. 6:4-9, was one of the outstanding portions of the Holy Word to the Jews. They gloried in their monotheistic views of deity. Therefore, they could well believe and teach that Jehovah, their God, should receive the undivided affection of all the faculties of man. You readily recognize the fifth verse as the one Jesus quoted as the greatest commandment (Luke 10:27).

See what emphasis the old patriarch, Moses, places upon this portion of the law of the Lord. He declares that they shall be written upon the heart, which secretes the affections. They shall be taught to the children, thus bringing them up to know God's law and to love Him. They shall be talked of under whatever condition may be existing. They shall be bound upon the arm and forehead. "Phylacteries, called by the Rabbis, 'tephillin, prayer-fillets,' were worn on the left arm, toward the heart, and on the forehead." They shall be posted upon the doorposts of the home and upon the gates. Surely there was no chance for the word of the Lord to be forgotten. Comparatively, what chance has God's Word today?

Saul, the Son

Jewish children were given rigid training. Not only were they required to learn a trade, but they had to know portions, at least, of the law of the Lord. When Saul entered his 'teens in his Cilician home in Tarsus, he was selected to become a Rabbi. This meant that he must commit to memory thousands of verses of Scripture and comments of wise men upon them. He must be somewhat of a lawyer, also. That he might always have a means of livelihood, he learned the tent-making trade, which he put to good use after he had become an apostle of the despised Nazarene.

In accordance with the Jewish law, Saul was circumcised the eighth day from his birth, an Israelite by nationality, a Benjaminite by tribe, a "Hebrew of Hebrews."

He was trained a Pharisee, of which he declares himself proud. "In austerity and alertness he was a combination of Jonathan Edwards and Benjamin Franklin." His training as a Pharisee helped him as a Christian.

What a fine thing it was for Saul to be so thoroughly trained in the home! Fortunate and happy today is the son whose father and mother honor and worship the God of the heavens and earth, and whose lives tell of their devotion to Him. The church is doing all it can for the proper training of those entrusted to its care, but the church cannot do its work best unless the home is active in that which the church cannot do.

Saul at School

In the last of the three divisions of our lessons, Saul (Paul at this time) makes his defense before the authorities in Jerusalem. He tells them that he is a Jew of Tarsus who received his instruction as a youth at the feet of the learned Gamaliel. This great intellectual and wise teacher was a grandson of Hillel, "a doctor of the law held in reputation among all the people." Liberal-minded, he prevented the death of the apostles by a reasonable speech before the Sanhedrin, of which he was a member. (Acts 5:33-40).

Although a Jew, Saul was a Roman. His father was a Roman citizen, which honor was inherited by his son. This fact kept him from persecution a number of times, for the Romans respected their citizens' rights and privileges very highly.

To be born well, to be bred well, to be trained well is the right of every child. The kind of a home from which a child comes, and the kind of training he receives there as well as in institutions of learning, and religious instruction, have all to do with the kind of a man he will make. Though he may pursue a wrong course for a whole, believing he is right, when the Lord Jesus Christ reveals Himself to him he will become a devout follower of His and a loyal supporter of His church.

WORLD'S LARGEST METEORITE

According to Dr. E. E. Free, the earth was struck on June 30, 1908, by the largest meteorite of which science has definite knowledge. Fortunately this meteorite fell in the remote province of Yenissei, Siberia, and its only victims apparently were a herd of 1,500 reindeer and a few million trees.

A report on the subject has been sent to the Astronomical Society of the Pacific by N. T. Bobrovnikoff. The Russian exploring expedition sent to investigate the rumors, says Bobrovnikoff, discovered the site and proved not only that the meteor fell as originally reported but that its fall must have been one of the most spectacular events in the whole history of the earth.

Where the meteorite struck there is now an area several miles in diameter where the earth is torn and furrowed as if by a gigantic harrow. Around this, in a circle many miles in diameter, millions of dead trees of the primeval forest now lie flat and stripped of their branches, every tree pointing outward from the center, like a vast forest of fallen nine-pins.

At the nearest settlement, 50 miles away, two farmers were knocked down by the blast of the meteorite's fall and were scorched by its heat. Both the head wave and the explosion were perceived at the railway, 400 miles distant. Of a herd of 1,500 tame reindeer believed to have been near the site of the fall, no trace has since been found. Had chance directed this enormous visitor from space to the site of a city or a thickly settled country the world would have eperienced an unparalleled disaster.—Pathfinder.

LISTENING TO THE ATOMS

Some one once wrote a book called "The Fairyland of Science." It is an excellent title, for the world that science explores and describes is not the world of appearances, as we know it, but a strange land, of incredible giants and equally incredible midgets, where a table is not a solid object but a mass of imperceptible electrons, each whirling madly about its imperceptible nucleus.

The latest excursion into this extraordinary world that we have seen reported was made recently in New York, in the presence of the Electrical Society of that city, by Dr. H. Clyde Snook, a well-known engineer. He told his hearers that the most plausible theory about magnetic iron is that when magnetization occurs vast numbers of inconceivably tiny atoms rearrange themselves within the iron, turning about so that they all face the same way, as it were like soldiers on a parade ground. Accordingly he subjected some iron to magnetic action and at the same time attached to the iron an electrical appliance that amplified sound ten billion times. The sound thus magnified was broadcast through a powerful loud-speaker, and the open-mouthed scientists heard a noise which is described as similar to what a carload of iron dumb-bells would make turning over and over as they rolled down a tin roof. That, Doctor Snook informed them, was the sound of the ultra-microscopic atoms shifting about in the bar of iron.

Doctor Johnson of the Bell Telephone Laboratories entertained the same company by magnifying the noise that tiny particles of electricity make jostling against one another as a current passes through a wire. This sound, we are told, was like that which water makes when it rushes through a pipe.

What an etraordinary revolution recent studies into the construction of matter have wrought! The scientist who, not so many years ago, found the report of our senses the foundation of fact, now joins the theologian in telling us that we live in a world of illusion, though he finds his reality in quite an opposite direction from the mystic. The truth seems to be that we are so made as to apprehend only such phenomena as are consistent with bodily and spiritual health. Our ears are mercifully stopped to the roaring of the omnipresent atoms and our eyes to the destructive rays that lie beyond the solar spectrum. So we cannot know the future or conceive, except dimly, of the ultimate realities of existence. We must go on living in the world of appearances, and for successful living in such a world the wisdom of philosophers and moral leaders is likely to be a better guide than the curious knowledge that scientific investigation brings to us.—Youth's Companion.

NEW EMBASSY BUILDING

Great Britain is soon to have a new Embassy building in Washington, D. C. It is to cost more than three-quarters of a million dollars and will be the finest building of its kind in the national capital. The corner stone was laid the other day. Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador to the United States, was in charge of the ceremonies, which were attended by members of the British Embassy staff, the Canadian Legation, the Irish Free State Legation, and high American officials.

We have no new charge to enter this week, we regret to say. The total number of charges listed with credits is 79. This leaves 13 charges still with no credits on any conference claim. Of course these charges will get in later, but how we do wish that we could add them now. Of the charges now listed, 27 have no credit on the A. C. B. This means that there are 40 charges in the conference that have paid nothing to date on this budget. Think of that, brethren. The year nearly two-thirds gone, and only about half the charges contributing to the A. C. B.! Because of this we are compelled to send out an S. O. S. this week, urging collections to enable us to take care of a conference obligation. We must protect our credit, and the only way we can do it is through the receipts on this budget. We need $1,000 with which to take up a bank note, due the 10th of July. Please help us. This matter is urgent.

We know that every charge has its difficulties in carrying on the work; it is so now; it was so in other years; it will always be so. It was so with Jesus; it is not surprising that it should be so with us. But difficulties do not prevent faithfulness. And "A faithful man shall abound with blessings." 'Tis the word of God, and one jot nor tittle of His word can fail.

With an abounding hope that God will provide ways and means for carrying on and enlarging His work, I am,

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

THE DEFEAT OF THE NAVAL BILL IN THE SENATE

The defeat of the naval program in the Senate came as a good deal of a surprise to the peace workers. It will be remembered that the War Department originally asked for 74 ships at a cost of $740,000,000. The peace forces of the country were thoroughly aroused and brought all their powers of persuasion upon the House Naval Affairs Committee to make drastic cuts in this asked-for appropriation. Our own organization and others appeared before the committee, thousands of letters and resolutions were sent into Washington from the churches and church people, with the result that when the Naval Affairs Committee reported the bill into Congress, it had been whittled down to sixteen ships at a cost of about $275,000,000. In this form the House of Representatives passed the bill. It then went to the Senate. On Friday the Senate rejected the bill by a most unexpected vote of 44 to 22, so absolutely nothing is left out of it. Of course it may come up again in the Senate this fall, and there is no doubt but that the militarists were almost frantic in their disappointment and will stop at nothing to resurrect it, but at present it is dead. There seem to be only two explanations of this rather surprising happening. The first is that the mind of the country has been pretty thoroughly aroused on this matter and is getting a little tired of piling up vast armies when the world is thinking and talking peace. This feeling is very pointedly expressed in the slogan adopted by the National Board of the Y. W. C. A. for the campaign they are undertaking to give widespread publicity to Mr. Kellogg's peace proposals, namely: "Build Friendships, not Battleships for National Defense." The second cause is probably the fact that the offering of treaties renouncing war as an instrument of national policy to the nations of the world, and on the other hand, carrying out a naval program designed to bring us nearer to parity with the nations which we are asking to join with us in this solemn renunciation of war seemed incongruous in the last degree.—World Alliance for Friendship.

NORTH CAROLINIANS IN CABINET

It is an interesting fact that every North Carolinian who has served in the president's cabinet has been secretary of the navy. No other cabinet post has ever been held by a man from North Carolina. That state has given us five secretaries of the navy, namely: John Branch under Andrew Jackson; George E. Badger under William Henry Harrison and John Tyler; William A. Graham under Millard Fillmore; James C. Dobbin under Franklin Pierce and James Buchanan; and Josephus Daniels under Woodrow Wilson. All these men were of the Democratic persuasion. Samuel L. Phillips, a North Carolina Republican, who was solicitor-general, was attorney-general ad interim for about five weeks under Chester A. Arthur.—Pathfinder.

YOUR GRANDCHILDREN'S AMERICA WILL BE WHAT YOUR GENERATION MAKES IT

Are you doing your duty by these grandchildren? You can help determine the make-up of their America (a) by reading certain books; (b) then using this knowledge to consolidate public opinion; (c) learn how differential birth rates work. The old-time American family raises, perhaps, three children. The Mexican peon, the Mediterranean bootlegger may average seven. By the fifth generation one father of our stock may be represented by 243 descendants. The Mexican father, the Mediterranean, may have 16,807. Tell your neighbor, your club, your editor that, to maintain for world progress the old American stock, now the tallest branch of the white race, and extraordinarily powerful, both physically and mentally, we must hold the Quota Immigration Act. We must extend it, bar mass immigration from Latin America. Since 1900, by the largest human mass migration in all history, we admitted six million immigrants, many thereof mentally inferior. Read Stoddard's "Reforging America." (Scribner's, New York.)

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheville.—Sunday was a most encouraging day for us. Pastor Paschall's messages were inspiring. The attendance was good and the interest was very good.

Ballots were cast for delegate to the next Annual Conference. The vote will be reported at our third quarterly conference this Wednesday night. Brother G. M. Foster and Miss Eula Taylor were the nominees. In the services Sunday morning E. H. Pratt and Miss Flossie Stout sang a duet, accompanied by Miss Mildred Younginer at the piano.

Miss Novella McIntyre has not improved. An operation was performed the first of the week. We hope that after a few days the crisis may be passed. Earnest prayers are being offered for her recovery.

Our Christian Endeavor Society gave a supper on Tuesday night. A nice sum was realized toward their budget of $100. Our Brotherhood met on the same evening. Mr. Fred Willis made a fine address on personal soul-winning. We welcome Miss Elizabeth Carter from Duke University and Miss Eudora Younginer from High Point city schools.

Bro. E. C. Fawcett was called to Salem, Ohio, on account of the passing of his sainted mother. She had visited Asheville a number of times and had many friends here.

Despite his heavy duties as president of the Young People's Union of the North Carolina Conference, Brother Paschall has already accomplished much in our church here. All are pleased with his messages and his personality and consecration. He is making plans for a revival. REPORTER.

Randleman Charge.—All-day services will be held at New Salem church next Sunday. Children's Day services will be observed in the forenoon, and home-coming in the afternoon. A quartet from Greensboro will furnish a number of vocal selections.

On next Sunday night our special meeting at Worthville will begin. Bro. Ed Suits, of Mebane, is to assist. W. H. NEESE.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—Although we have been silent a few months we are still in the land of the living and we hope making progress for the Master.

Our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, filled his appointment last Sunday. There was a goodly number present considering an epidemic of measles and mumps prevalent in the community. Bro. Trogdon preached a good sermon. We are always glad to have visitors and we were exceedingly glad to have a number of people from Flat Rock Charge where Bro. Trogdon served last year with us last Sunday at preaching. These good people, eleven in number, were from Palestine and Flat Rock churches on Flat Rock Circuit. Bro. Trogdon and his good wife had already found a very warm place in our hearts and these people coming from his former charge and showing so much affection and appreciation for them makes us hold them still higher in our esteem.

Sunday school is progressing nicely here under the efficient management of Bro. B. C. Presnell. Prayer meeting is held at the church every Saturday night.

Owing to the epidemic of measles and mumps, Children's Day has been indefinitely postponed.

Our children from the M. P. Children's Home will render a program at Flag Spring Sunday afternoon, also at Seagrove high school auditorium Sunday night. We are hoping there will be a large crowd at both places. Either place will accommodate a large crowd and we hope they will be filled.

Some of our members attended Richland Township Sunday school convention at Huldah church Sunday and heard a splendid program.

Union Township Sunday school convention will be held at High Pine church the second Sunday in July.

Our special meeting will embrace the fourth Sunday in July. Pray for us that we may have a glorious revival.

MRS. NOAH WILLIAMS, Reporter.

Bethesda.—Just a card to say we held Children's Day service at Bethesda Sunday. The children acted their parts well under the efficient training of Mrs. W. H. Willcox and Miss Ethel Harrison and our faithful superintendent, Mr. J. R. Taylor. Congregation was not very large but collection good. May all of our churches in the N. C. Conference do likewise and the results will be surprising.

Success to our beloved editor.

SUBSCRIBER.

R. 2, Enfield, N. C.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We have good attendance. The teachers of junior and primary classes are preparing exercises for all-day services the third Sunday in July. On the first Sunday in July Prof. J. B. Swaim will close his singing school.

Our hearts have been saddened by the death of two of our members. On June 6 Mr. G. E. Glascoe passed away. He had been sick for nearly five months, but was able to be sitting on the porch at the time of his death. He was 67 years of age. Funeral services were held on the morning of the 8th at Abbotts Creek by the pastor, assisted by Rev. Geo. Brown, of Reidsville.

Mrs. Elizabeth Welborn passed away on June 15 after suffering from burns she received a week before. She was 77 years of age. Funeral services were held at Spring Hill June 17 at 2:30 p. m. by the pastor, assisted by Revs. Carrick and Hilliard. The large gathering of friends and beautiful floral offering showed the esteem in which they were held. We feel our loss is great, but God knoweth all things best.

REPORTER.

State Street Church.—Last Wednesday night was the close of the revival service conducted by Bro. Millaway. The preaching was splendid and was enjoyed by a large audience every night. Every Christian who came under the influence of Bro. Millaway's preaching was made stronger and resolved to do better service. There were some conversions, the exact number not having been ascertained by the writer. Only one has come into the church, but more are expected to come in next Sunday.

Sunday school attendance is good and seems to be growing in interets all the time. Good work is also being done by the children in the Junior C. E. Society and the Sunshine Circle. REPORTER.

Denton Charge.—We have not reported until we hardly know where to begin. But we will mention a few things of interest. The first Sunday morning in June the Denton Sunday school gave a splendid Children's Day service. The children all did well. Much credit is due Mrs. A. L. Hill and those who assisted her in the training. Piney Grove and Cid churches are also planning to give Children's Day services. I understand Piney Grove will give theirs next Sunday afternoon.

The third Sunday night in May we were glad to have the children from our High Point Methodist Protestant Children's Home with us at Denton. I feel that this program is one of the best they have ever gotten up at the Home. Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Allman were with the children. We enjoyed having them so much, we invited them to come to other churches on the charge. The second Sunday in June they gave their program at Canaan and Piney Grove churches. I understand they had a fine time. I was sorry that I could not be with them on account of being in bed with mumps.

The Bible Vacation School is in progress at Denton at this time. Our teachers are Mr. Marvin Sexton, Misses Julia Loftin, Ruth Floyd, and Blanche Hoover. Misses Kate Sexton and Esther Atkins have helped as assistant teachers. We feel that a good work is being done. The four weeks' school will close the last of June and our special meeting begin the first Sunday in July. A soul-winners' group has been organized and the interest seems to be good. Pray that we may have a great revival.

Last Sunday morning we had the Carlton quartet from Erlanger with us at Denton and did most of the singing. All enjoyed their quartets fine. It added a great deal to the interest of the service. We hope they will come again. In the afternoon Rev. W. E. Hill, a local preacher, filled the appointment at Mt. Ebal. Mr. Hill is a good man and always has a good message. At the evening service at Denton we had the privilege of hearing Rev. C. E. Ridge, pastor of Davidson Circuit. He brought us a fine message full of inspiration. Mr. Ridge is one of our minister members of Canaan church of this charge. We thank these brethren and invite them to come again.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Denton Church said they would buy the paint to paint the parsonage if the men would put it on. The men accepted the challenge and the parsonage is almost painted. They are painting the roof also. We certainly thank these good men and women for the beautifying of our home. E. A. BINGHAM.

Denton Church.—We were glad to have Pastor Bingham to preach for us Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He preached a fine sermon which was enjoyed by a large crowd. We were glad to have with us Sunday the Carlton quartette from Erlanger, N. C. They did some real good singing. Rev. C. E. Ridge preached for us Sunday night. I am sure everyone present enjoyed his sermon.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the management of R. C. Powell. The attendance is fine and the interest is good.

The C. E. Society had a picnic supper on the church ground on Thursday evening, June 7th. There was a large crowd present and lots of good things to eat.

The Ladies' Aid Society has bought paint to paint the parsonage and the men are to pay the expenses of having it painted. We are also planning to have some work done on the church.

The Vacation Bible School is now in its third week. This is the first Bible school ever held in our church. The attendance is fine and the interest good. The teachers seem to be interested in this school and we appreciate the work they are doing. Our pastor is leader.

Our special meeting is to begin the first Sunday in July. At the request of the people our pastor will do the preaching. We ask the prayers of the Christian people that we may have a great revival.

A MEMBER.

West End, Greensboro.—The Children's Day service was rendered Sunday night. A pageant written by Miss Dorothy Elderdice, "Wings of the Morning," was given by a group of Intermediate and Junior boys and girls, with a number of songs by the smaller children. The service was held in the new Sunday school auditorium.

Messrs. Bosher and Johnson are nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

The pulpit and choir loft have been remodeled, the gift of J. S. Ferree and M. H. Waynick. The pulpit and aisles have a fine carpet, the gift of the Foust Bible Class, and the stage a beautiful curtain, given by the Ladies' Aid.

Our pastor attended General Conference and upon his return the Sunday following told of its work, which was greatly appreciated by his congregation. Dr. Williams preached Sunday morning one of his strongest and most forceful sermons from the text, "What does it profit a man though he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" A large congregation was present and many expressions of appreciation are being made on the appealing and impressive sermons he preaches from time to time, and of the beautiful eample he gives of being about his Father's business.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society met in the Sunday school auditorium Monday afternoon. Mrs. Stapleton had charge of the program. The meeting was very interesting and many items of business were transacted. Final plans for the entertainment of the Executive Board meeting, which will convene at West End Thursday of this week, were made. Splendid meetings of this society have been held since our new year began, each meeting better than the last one. The church is glad to know that the Home Society made a grade of 100 per cent last year. Interest in mission work and individual improvement in carrying the work on is very marked. In July the Home and Foreign societies will convene together and plan for a large attendance and good social time.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society, supervised by Miss Gladys Routh, has added a new feature in its weekly prayer meetings by organizing into a choral club and having a period set apart once a week for training in choral singing. Mr. L. M. Foust, who has charge of the teaching, is efficient in this kind of work, having graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass., in that department of music. Mrs. J. R. Holden is the accompanist.

REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely under the leadership of Mr. E. T. Ellington as superintendent. We are planning to have Children's Day some time in July. Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Tidwell and Miss Kathleen Shearin are the ones appointed to prepare the program.

Our pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, gave us a splendid sermon last second Sunday night. We were glad to have so many visitors at this service. Come again; we are always glad to have visitors.

Net Sunday morning at our regular service we will elect a delegate to attend Annual Conference. Mrs. T. C. Williams and Mr. E. T. Elington are the nominees. We will also administer the Lord's Supper at this service.

Several of our members are sick. We hope they will soon be well, for we miss them in our services.

REPORTER.

Orange Charge, Efland Church.—Yesterday was a good day for us. Opening exercises were held in the new church. Rev. Homer Casto, of Weaverville, was the principal speaker. His sermon and address made a profound impression. Revs. O. B. Williams and Ivey Crutchfield were present and assisted in these services. A number of short talks were made by members of the church, former members and friends.

Rev. W. D. Fogleman organized the church at Efland. The first building was erected during his pastorate. It was fitting that his daughter, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, should be present and speak to us; also his granddaughters, Misses Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson, should sing for us.

Bro. C. C. Smith, of Mebane, one of the first trustees (and the only living one) was present and made a very touching speech.

All the talks were good. Cannot mention each person who took part. We had a good day. Every one seemed to enjoy the day.

We are glad the Efland church has so many friends who rejoice with us on the completion of our new church. We have better equipment now. May God help us to do better work.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Denton Church.—Having seen no report from Denton church in several weeks, I am taking the authority to report that we are still in the land of progress.

We are sorry that our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, has been indisposed for a few days by mumps, but we are hoping he will soon recuperate.

Our attendance is fine and much interest is being taken in Sunday school and church work.

Our C. E. Society has splendid meetings on Sunday evenings with fine attendance. Our president, Miss Mary Kearns, is very enthusiastic in conducting the meetings, and interest continues to increase.

We are glad to state that the Children's Day exercises were rendered, each child acquitting himself favorably, and a goodly collection was realized for Foreign Missions.

Quite a number of our young members who have been in college and some teaching, have enlivened our attendance and interest: Misses Bettie and Julia Lofton and Messrs. Charles Hoover and W. M. Sexton.

Mrs. E. H. Loftin, one of our faithful members, is away for six weeks of summer school at High Point College. We would not forget to mention our Daily Vacation Bible School which began June 4 and will continue through this month. To date there have been enrolled 45 or 50, which, taking into consideration that this year is our initial experience in such a school, is very encouraging. The following have charge of the different departments: Kindegarten, Miss Blanche Hoover and Miss Kate Sexton; Primary, Miss Julia Loftin; Intermediates, Miss B. Floyd; Juniors, Mr. W. M. Sexton; Seniors, Rev. E. A. Bingham.

We appreciate the co-operation the members are showing and feel that this is filling a long felt need, to teach the young people more about the Bible during part of the vacation period.

Our revival begins the first Sunday in July. We are hoping and praying that much good may be accomplished and that many souls may be born into the kingdom of God.

As I am not the regular reporter I shall say no more at this writing.

W. M. SEXTON.

Burlington, First Church.—Sunday, June 17, was a very good day with us. Attendance in the Sunday school was 342 and offerings amounted to $18.23. We all enjoyed the music and especially the selection by the orchestra.

The morning preaching service was very well attended. At this time Brother Gerringer brought us a powerful and forceful sermon on "Sabbath Observance." He spoke, at length, on the many modern ways in which the holy Sabbath is being desecrated and some of the things mentioned were: Patronizing the swimming pools on Sunday, the conduct of business by service stations and drug stores on the Sabbath. Of course, our pastor pointed out plainly that provision for medical supplies could be arranged for, if needed on Sunday. We cannot tell you all about this splendid and timely discourse in this report, but wish it coud be published as it was spoken. The evening preaching hour was fairly well attended and the sermon at this time was helpful and uplifting.

Our young people's worker, Miss Maxine Taylor, is on the job and yesterday she announced that the Daily Vacation Bible School of this church would begin its services Monday, June 25th, with Miss Mary Wills McCulloch as chief supervisor. It is hoped that all the children, up to 12 years of age, will take advantage of this school, as we can assure that it will be instructive from a religious viewpoint, especially, and the time put into these services will be well spent.

The newly elected Baraca teacher is Mr. Charles C. Lindley, of this city, and we feel that we are to be congratulated upon securing this consecrated young man of exceptional ability. Mr. Lindley is a brother of Dr. P. E. Lindley, of our High Point College, and is principal of the Glen Hope School near Burlington and we are confident that we have in him an excellent teacher and splendid instructor.

The committee recently appointed to conduct the canvass to raise indebtedness of the new church site is: Mr. J. G. Rogers, chief-captain, with the following division captains: Mr. W. E. Smith, for out-of-town members, and those to work in this city and community: Messrs. M. A. Coble, C. C. Durham, J. F. Thompson, Floy Rogers, Dave DeMoss, J. Ed Moore, J. Ed Ausley, T. T. Stafford, L. E. Anthony, and W. V. Coble.

Sunday, June 24th, is the time announced for the Children's Day service and the committee arranging for this program is busy getting things ready.

L. A. BRAXTON,
Assistant Reporter.

Friendship Station.—We want to give all our friends and readers of our church paper, and especially our former pastors, an invitation to our "old people's singing" and homecoming at Friendship the first Sunday in July. Our pastor, Mr. Hill, will preach at 11 o'clock and Mr. Anderson, of Albemarle, will preach in the afternoon. We expect a large crowd. Dinner on the ground.

Our church work is moving along nicely; have excellent preaching and a live prayer meeting. Mrs. T. J. Lefler conducts the next meeting, and we are expecting a good one.

MRS. D. W. SIDES.

Hickory Grove.—Since we made our last report there has been a little increase in our attendance. Last Sunday morning we had our Children's Day, which was enjoyed very much by every one. We had dinner on the grounds, which was enjoyed by every one. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon Rev. D. I. Garner preached a wonderful sermon, which was very instructive and helpful. We had a rather large attendance all day. Every one went home more determined to do the right things than ever before.

REPORTER.

Democrat Charge, Pleasant Gap.—We have been having a lively and progressive Sunday school since we organized early last spring. We had about 60 present in our Sunday school last Sunday. The church is taking a great interest in song service, both old and new songs.

Sunday was our preaching day and, as usual, the pastor had for us an interesting sermon. REPORTER.

Mocksville.—Since this is only the third Sunday that I have been on the work, I have been able to visit all of the churches but once and a part of them the second time. I preached at Dulins at 11 o'clock a. m. and at Elbaville at 3 o'clock p. m., and we had a fine congregation at both services.

I was at Bethel at 8 o'clock p. m. and we organized a Senior C. E. Society there. We feel that with the young people and the interest that they have shown that this Christian Endeavor Society will be a worth-while organization in this church. Mr. Glen Cartner, a sophomore of N. C. State College, was elected president of the society. We hope for him and the society a great success in the years to come. We feel that the young people of Dulins are also ready to organize a C. E. Society and we hope for them the best.

The revival services will begin at Elbaville church on the first Sunday in July with Brother T. A. Williams helping. The services are also announced to begin at Dulins on the second Sunday of July. May we pray earnestly for these services in the coming weeks.

I wish to thank the people of this charge for their co-operation since I have been with them, for the fine fellowship which I have enjoyed, and for the fine place to live. I am staying with Bro. J. W. Cartner, of Mocksville and am enjoying a fine fellowship here.

J. W. BRAXTON, Pastor.

Mebane.—Our revival meeting began the first Sunday in June with Rev. R. S. Troxler as pulpit help. The meeting closed Wednesday night of last week, Mr. Suits, our pastor, continuing the services after Mr. Troxler left. There were four reclaimed and one converted, this one joining the church here on last Sunday morning.

The vote for delegate to our next Annual Conference will be taken next Sunday morning. Mr. T. O. Pender and Mr. A. O. Allen are the nominees.

The different societies and organizations of the church are active. The Missionary Societies and the Ladies' Aid met in May with Mrs. George Wyatte with splendid attendance at both meetings. The Foreign Society celebrated its 14th anniversary in May by having a birthday party at the business meeting. Each member was requested to bring a penny for every year old they were. A neat sum was realized in this way. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Wyatte during the social hour at each meeting. The Ladies' Aid met this month with Mrs. A. C. Allen with very good attendance. The election of officers was held at this time. During the social hour refreshments were served.

On Monday evening of this week at 7:30 Mrs. Carl Sykes was hostess to the missionary societies. Mrs. H. C. Nicholson gave a very interesting report of the Board meeting in Washington at this time and a few remarks about our General Conference. She reported a beautiful and interesting trip and we feel honored indeed that our Mebane church was represented at the Board meeting and General Conference.

Some of our people attended services at the new Efland church Sunday and some took a part in the program. Our Efland friends are to be congratulated on their pretty new church building. It indeed proves they have a progressive spirit.

A committee has been appointed to prepare a Children's Day program for our church here. REPORTER.

June 19th, 1928.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Sunday, the 17th, was a good day for us. It was indeed a glad day, being the first time we worshipped in our new church. Rev. Homer Casto brought us an interesting message in the morning at 11 o'clock, which was enjoyed very much. Communion service was observed at this time. A goodly number partook. After dinner had been served on the grounds our pastor and several others, including Rev. Ivey Crutchfield, Rev. O. B. Williams and Rev. Homer Casto, made short talks; this was enjoyed very much. Much of the history of our church, which was first built in 1904, was given by different ones. This was very interesting, especially to some of the younger members. Many of the former members and friends of the church came back home for the day. To Rev. Mr. Casto and all visitors we extend a cordial invitation to come again.

Children's Day exercises will be held in our church the first Sunday night in July.

We are all very much pleased with our new church. Especially are we Sunday school teachers and the scholars proud of the S. S. equipment. Let's all work together and with God's help try to do more for the advancement of His kingdom in the future than we have in the past, not forgetting to thank Him for the many blessings He has bestowed upon us. MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Haw River Circuit.—The new Midway church is certainly to be appreciated. The old wooden building has given way and the new brick structure has taken its place. The new building is large and attractive. One of the best country buildings to be found anywhere. It is thought to be the best country church in Rockingham county. These faithful people certainly deserve credit for what they have accomplished. On the fourth Sunday in May the church was formally opened. In spite of the heavy downpour of rain the occasion was largely attended and it was a great day. Rev. W. F. Kennett, a former pastor, and Dr. E. F. Allman, of the Children's Home, made interesting talks in the afternoon. The opening service of Midway church will never be forgotten.

Mizpah church has recently received a new coat of paint, which adds very much to the appearance.

At a recent meeting the trustees of the Fair Grove church were authorized to make some needed improvements.

The children's Day service rendered at Midway on the second Sunday night was a decided success. All who had any part in the service deserve praise and thanks.

On the night of June 24 the Friendship church will observe Children's Day service. We are epecting a good service.

Services at the other churches are in preparation and will be observed at later dates.

Three of our churches will observe revivals during the month of July. Friendship will begin the First Sunday and Fair Grove will begin the second Sunday. At Mizpah the services will begin on Monday night, July 23. We are preparing for a ten days' revival here. Revival services at the other churches will be at later dates in the season.

Since our last writing death has entered some of our homes and has taken from us some of our very best. On March 22 Mrs. James G. Phibbs, for many years a member of Friendship, passed into the beyond. She was more than 77 years old. Because of distance and poor health she was not permitted to attend her church regularly for a number of years, but she was a loyal member and faithful to the end. The funeral was conducted by the pastor in Friendship church.

On April 4 the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Moore was visited and death claimed their little son, Robert Lambeth, a precious babe only a few weeks old. The funeral was conducted in the home by the pastor. Dr. and Mrs. Moore live near Midway and are among our best.

April 15 was a sad day for the home of Brother Walter Wagoner. On this sad day the death angel took the good wife and mother. Mrs. Wagoner was one of the best and most faithful members of the Friendship church. Every pastor who has served this charge in recent years knows the true worth of this good woman. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Brother Reed and Brother Ashburn, in Friendship church. These brethren were both former pastors and spoke in the highest terms of the deceased.

While the pastor was in Baltimore attending the General Conference the shocking news was received that Brother B. W. Delap had passed into the beyond. Brother Delap was one of the most faithful and loyal members of Midway church. In the absence of the pastor Brother Ashburn was called to conduct the funeral of this good man.

On June 2 Brother N. O. Phibbs, of near Brown Summit, passed into the beyond. Brother Phipps was a good man but not a member of any of our churches. Mrs. Phipps is a member of Brown Summit church. The pastor assisted Brother Reed in this funeral which was conducted in the home.

Our hearts in sympathy and love go out for the bereaved of all these deceased and in each case we can properly sing with the poet:

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is run,
And thou art crowned at last."

GEO. L. CURRY.

Asheboro.—The fact that we do not report often to the church paper does not mean that we are sitting idly by and doing nothing. The services have been held regularly except one Sunday while the writer was attending the General Conference. At the evening service yesterday we observed Father's Day. Prof. T. F. Bulla spoke on father's responsibility to his family, Brother R. T. Lloyd spoke on the family's responsibility to father, and Brother J. W. Wolff spoke on father's problems. It was a very helpful service.

A week ago last night we were favored with a good sermon by our young brother, Rev. Henry Kirkpatrick, of Kansas. Brother Kirkpatrick and his mother have been visiting Mrs. Kirkpatrick's brother, Mr. O. E. Rich, and we prevailed on the young man to preach. The sermon was favorably received and the young man gives promise of making a real good preacher.

We were greatly shocked just after church last night to know that our good brother, S. F. Lowdermilk, had died suddenly in his home, he being ill not more than 30 minutes before passing. For a year or more he had been in failing health but was at church yesterday morning seemingly as well as usual. The funeral will be held from our church tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock and burial will be at Flag Springs M. P. church. A good man has gone and we shall miss him greatly. An obituary will be furnished at an early date.

Brother J. S. Lewis, another one of our valuable members, has been critically ill for days with no improvement in his condition.

Still another one of our members, Miss Lucy Lee Lovett, daughter of Mrs. Louella Lovett, underwent a rather serious operation in the High Point Hospital last Saturday. She is doing well now. For all who are sick or sorrowing we ask for grace.

Our third quarterly conference will be held at the church Wednesday evening, June 27, with President Taylor in the chair. The subject of a new parsonage will be discussed.

Next Sunday will be known as Sunday School Day in our church and we are hoping to have present the entire enrollment of our school and lots of new pupils. The speaker for the occasion cannot yet be announced, but we are hoping to have a good one. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Monday, P. M.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—We are glad to have with us Bros. Edgar Lane and Norman Culler, who have returned from High Point College.

Brother Hunter has faithfully filled every appointment with increasing attendance manifested.

There was a very noticeable increase in our S. S. attendance—110 present, 12 new pupils.

We have started rehearsing for the Township Sunday School Convention program, to be rendered when Little Yadkin Township S. S. Convention meets at Chestnut Grove next Saturday week, June 30th.

The Ladies' Aid of Mt. Zion will give a lawn party at the home of Brother and Sister Ed Jones next Saturday, June 23rd. You are hereby invited to attend with a keen appetite and fat pocketbook.

Our Children's Day literature has arrived and we are delighted with the program. We mean to carry it out to the letter as nearly as possible the third Sunday night in July.

Our protracted meetings will begin at 11 o'clock a. m. on the third Sunday in July. We extend to each person who is interested in a revival of Christian religion at Mt. Zion who possibly can do so to attend all or a part of this special meeting and to those who can't come, pray that we may have a revival.

C. W. ALLEN.

High Point.—A most interesting session of the two missionary societies was held at the church Monday afternoon. In the absence of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, president of the Foreign Society, the vice-president, Mrs. C. F. Barton, presided. Upon request, Mrs. A. M. Rankin gave an entertaining account of the proceedings of the recent General Conference. Rev. E. L. Ballard made an interesting report of the Young People's Convention. These reports were greatly enjoyed by all those present. An agreeable surprise was given Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell when it was announced that the Aunt Lizzie Welch Sunday School Class has contributed $30 to make her a perpetual member in the Home Society. This is indeed a beautiful tribute to their efficient and well-loved teacher. Each of the three circles of the society will be given credit for $10. It was decided to ask Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, to come and give a summary of the Home Mission Study Book some time during the summer.

The announcement was made that in the contest just closed, Circle No. 1, Mrs. L. J. Diffee, chairman, had won the greatest number of points, having raised the sum of $125.40, and had maintained an average attendance of 11 1-4 at the meetings. According to the challenge the losing circles, No. 2, Mrs. J. H. Walker, chairman, and No. 3, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, chairman, were obligated to entertain the three circles, and all those in attendance were invited to the assembly room where delightful refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. There were 35 members present, and this meeting proved to be one of the most pleasant in the history of the society.

The Daily Vacation Bible School is proving very popular, and the interest of the little folks increases daily. The registration has reached the 100 mark. The teachers and assistants are efficient and faithful.

The Christian Endeavor Society held an enjoyable wienie roast Monday evening about eight miles from High Point on the Winston-Salem highway.

Mayor W. A. Davis and family have moved into their attractive new home on Woodrow avenue.

The sympathy of a large number of friends is extended to Mr. J. E. Perryman and family in the loss by death of his sister, Mrs. Thomas, which occurred at her home in Winston-Salem last week.

The Misses Edwards, of Henderson, who once taught in our city schools, have been guests of Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin for a few days.

SENATOR CRITICIZES CONGRESS

"There is no hope for the Republic," says Senator King, Democrat, of Utah, in a statement criticising the long session of the Seventieth Congress for extravagance. Part of his statement is as follows:

"The long session of the Seventieth Congress was the most extravagant session in history. I stood practically alone on the Democratic side of the aisle in endeavoring to curtail appropriations. If this movement in favor of centralizing the government in Washington continues, in 25 years there will be no states. It is clear that appropriations next year will be greater, and still greater each year following. We are building up the most powerful, paternalistic, and bureaucratic government there is in the world. The cost of government during the next fiscal year, federal, state, and municipal, will be approximately twelve billion dollars. That means about 17 per cent of the gross earnings of the people of the United States."—Current Events.

ON A PAYING BASIS

Nearly 35,000 passengers were carried by commercial companies operating airplanes in the United States in 1927. The companies made a profit on passenger traffic, even though it was small. Total receipts of the companies amounted to $2,149,111; total expenses, $2,100,427. That left a net profit of over $48,000 for the year. The passengers were carried at an average fare of less than 11 cents a mile. Air mail contractors were paid a total of $2,643,454 during the year. —Current Events.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

White

Sunday morning about 2:30 marked the passing of Mr. Frank White, a loyal and faithful attendant of our church here. While he had been in poor health for a month or so, yet his sudden passing was a shock to us all, and especially to the members of his immediate family. His body will be laid to rest in the Eden Methodist Protestant cemetery. He was a member of this church.

Our hearts go out in great sympathy to those who feel this separation most.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

In Loving Memory of H. D. Brown

'Twas sad to see a father leave
His children and wife so dear,
In confidence to him they went
With every wish or care.

A loving wife's heart is crushed,
Her mate no more is heard,
Death on him rushed and his voice hushed
Without one parting word.

While in the silent grave he lies,
Beneath the crumbling sod,
The angel with his spirit flies
To bear it home to God.

Bright mansions fair He will prepare
For those who in Him trust,
And come again and take them there
To live among the just.

We'll praise the Lord for blessings given
And grant His judgment just,
And hope to meet again in Heaven
When dust returns to dust.

A NIECE.

Green B. Taylor

Our community was saddened Sunday night by the death of Mr. G. B. Taylor. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock from Harmony church and interment was in the church cemetery.

The deceased was 70 years old. He is survived by his widow, who before her marriage was Miss Cornelia Medlock, and by two brothers, G. P. Taylor and R. E. Taylor, of Princeton. Mr. Taylor had been an invalid for about eight years. E. H.

A Tribute

We, the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church, desire to offer a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. Pearl Reynolds Kirkman, who was so suddenly called from our midst to her heavenly home.

Though quiet and unassuming in her manner, she was always interested in the work of the society and present when health would permit.

Therefore, be it resolved, that we as individual members hold in loving remembrance her Christ-like spirit; that we extend to her bereaved husband our heart felt sympathy in this great sorrow and that we commend him to our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well;

And, be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the husband, one to the Herald, and one to be placed on the minutes of this society.

MRS. NORMAN FIELDS,
MRS. H. L. WHITELEY,
MRS. E. T. COBLE,
Committee on Resolutions.

Hendrix

Lewis Spencer Hendrix died June 11, 1928, aged 75 years, 10 days. In January, 1887, he was married to Avery Jane Foster. To this union were born seven children, four boys and three girls.

From early manhood he had lived a Christian life. He was a member of Dulins M. P. church. He died as he had lived—quietly, submissive to his Master's call.

Of his immediate relatives who remain are one brother, one sister, his loving companion, one daughter, Mrs. George Barneycastle, four sons, Messrs. Lee, Thomas, Rierson, and Frank Hendrix. He also leaves nine grandchildren. Two of his daughters have gone before him to their final resting place.

It was the pastor's pleasure to meet Bro. Hendrix a few hours before he was called to be with his Master. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, in Smith's Grove M. E. church, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, after which the remains were placed in Smith's Grove cemetery.

Phillips

The members of First Church, Burlington, were shocked and saddened to hear of the death of one of our members, Mrs. John Phillips. She had gone to the hospital only a few days before her death for an operation, and before many of us realized that she was seriously ill she was gone.

She leaves a husband, two small children, her father and mother, a sister, two brothers, and many relatives and friends to mourn her passing. Before her marriage she was Lizzie E. Sutton. She was only 25 years of age. She had only begun to live when suddenly she was called to her reward.

The husband and other relatives have our sincere sympathy in this time of great sorrow. May the same Savior in whom she trusted be your comfort and help.

The funeral service was conducted June 4th at 2:30 p. m. in the First M. P. church. President S. W. Taylor, who for a number of years was her pastor, and Dr. Lankford, pastor of the First Christian church, assisted the pastor in the service.

Mrs. Phillips was faithful to her church and she will be greatly missed by the pastor and the membership of First church. May the Lord bless and comfort the young husband and give him wisdom for the added responsibility that is upon him of being not only father but mother as well to his two precious children.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Saunders

Mrs. Mary Saunders, wife of J. H. Saunders, died April 23, 1928, aged 65 years, 10 months and 27 days. She joined the M. P. church at an early date, and remained a faithful member until death. She was laid to rest in Macedonia cemetery, there to wait until the morning of the Resurrection, when Christ shall come back to claim His own.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Hulin, assisted by Rev. George Loftin. A large crowd gathered at the home with untold numbers of flowers as a token of the love that they had for her. Leaving the home a large number of cars fell in line; reaching the church there was a large crowd there waiting to pay the last tribute of love to her. As Bro. Hulin was her pastor for several years, he knowing the hospitality that she always had for her pastors, used for his subject, Let your light shine. Bro. Hulin declared that her stay here on earth was full of good deeds, that what she had done to help some one in time of need and her church and her home was the pride of her life for almost fifty years. She was ready and willing to feed a number of people during the revivals. She believed in the old-fashioned religion.

Rev. Loflin had been going in her home for fourteen years without a break, as he had been given a lifetime right to help in the special meetings at her church. And Bro. Loflin said that he always spent Sunday night in Mary's home, every second Sunday in August, and that her full preparation for his coming had been one whole year and she always wanted her home to be the preacher's home, and her table was lined with the best that could be had and her whole desire was to help her pastor in every way that she possibly could, realizing that a preacher's responsibility was great.

The writer can recall the time when Aunt Mary's words were so true that it doesn't seem that she is gone, but she is gone. Why do I know? Because you can't see her in the old home place any more. After all the medical aid had been rendered and her companion held her dying head, sisters stood by her bed as much as to say, I wish I could take Mary's place, friends offering a helping hand—after all these kind deeds the death angel came and claimed his own. Jesus told His disciples that I go to prepare a place for you. The writer believes that Aunt Mary is now in that beautiful Mansion of God, gone where she will know no pain or sickness. On her dying bed she spoke of that love that binds our hearts in Christian love. It seems that she had her mind on love, that emotion expressive of the good will or affection or kindness which human beings entertain one for another. She was a mother to all little children. She has filled the hands of a number of children with bread and meat, therefore she had the love of all the little children, also the older people. If Aunt Mary had an enemy, it was not made known. Her neighbors would call upon her in time of sickness and they always found her advice worthy of accepting. In spite of her feebleness she would think of the duty that the Christian people owe their Heavenly Father, realizing that there was no way of serving God only through human agency, and she would be found visiting the sick people, also the poor class of people, giving her advice, also her dollars and dimes. May God's richest blessings abide and be with the relatives, and may their lives be so that they all can meet over on the evergreen shore where parting will be no more.

MARRIED

Cox-Hewitt

A marriage of considerable interest to a large circle of friends took place June 5th at Ramseur when Myrtle Cox and Harry Hewitt were united in matrimony. Rev. L. W. Pickens-Munyan

A wedding of much interest to many relatives and friends of the young people came as a distinct surprise last Saturday afternoon when Rupert T. Pickens and Miss Ida C. Munyan, both of High Point, motored to Greensboro and were quietly married by Rev. J. Clyde Turner. The groom is the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Picketns, a grandson of the late Rev. C. A. Pickens, who was a member of the N. C. Conference for 40 years, and also a grandson of Wyatt J. Armfield, of High Point. He was graduated from the University of North Carolina with the class of 1925, and later studied law at Chapel Hill, passing the bar examination in January, 1927. He is now associated with ex-Judge Don C. MacRae in the practice of law in High Point. His bride is the pretty and attractive daughter of the late Mr. John W. Munyan and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. T. Munyan, of High Point, with whom she has made her home for the past several years. She is a graduate of Duke University, Durham, of the class of 1925, and since that time has taught in the city schools.

Young Mr. Pickens and his bride are both members of the National Scholastic Fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa. After a short honeymoon trip to Washington and Richmond, the happy young couple will be at home to their friends at 708 Montlieu Avenue, High Point, the residence of the bride's grandparents for the present.

This marriage is the culmination of a pretty romance which began in High Point High School when both were members of the class of 1921, of which he was president, and she was valedictorian. The choicest blessings of Heaven are invoked for this worthy young pair and the congratulations and best wishes of a large number of loving relatives and friends are extended to these young people, who with happy hearts and love-lit faces begin the journey of life in its fair morning, "hoping to meet the night together."

"There's nothing half so sweet in life as love's young dream."

"Yet I know past all doubting truly,
And knowledge greater than grief can dim,
That as he loves, he will love me duly,
Yea, better, e'en better than I love him."

Holt-Harden

A very beautiful wedding was solemnized at the Graham Methodist Protestant church Wednesday evening, June 13, when Miss Nina Jo Holt and Mr. John William Harden were united in marriage.

The church was beautifully decorated with twining ivy, fern, and Dorothy Perkins roses. A soft light was thrown over the entire setting from the many lighted candles.

Prior to the entrance of the bridal party a beautiful musical program was given. Miss Elise Thompson was at the piano and Miss Mildred Moore sang, "I Love You," and Miss Teresa Peacock, of Salisbury, sang "Until." To the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin the bridal party entered.

The ushers, Don Holt, brother of the bride, and Turner Harden, brother of the groom, took their places on each side of the altar. The bridesmaids and groomsmen followed: Misses Caroline Parker, of Greensboro, and Billie Carnmer, of Southport, and Messrs. Richard Slagel, of Franklin, and Watt Cooper, of Blackey, Ky., and maid of honor, Miss Frances Barber, of Asheville. The tiny flower girls entered hand in hand carrying miniature baskets of flowers. Little Ray Harden, Jr., dressed in white satin, carried the ring on a satin pillow.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, Mr. S. S. Holt. Her gown was of white duchess satin and lace and she wore a veil with orange blossoms and carried an arm bouquet of Bride roses showered with valley lilies.

Mr. Harden was attended by his brother, Ray Harden, of Wilmington, as best man.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. R. Williams, pastor of the bride.

Leatherman. Rev. H. F. Fogleman, brother of the bride, and H. L. Isley, the pastor, performed the ceremony. Only a few near relatives and intimate friends witnessed the ceremony.

—The editor of the Herald was honored one day last week by a call from Prof. and Mrs. Munch, of Chapel Hill. Prof. Munch is employed by the State University to teach in the Department of Education. He is a graduate of Adrian College, Michigan. Mrs. Munch was a student in Adrian Colelge in 1904-5, while the editor was teaching there. It was therefore an especially pleasant surprise to have them call. They were accompanied by their three younger children. The older son is a student in the University. Mrs. Munch is a sister of Missionary Obee in Japan, of Rev. Chas. Obee, of Kansas City, and of Mrs. Rev. J. C. Williams, of the Ohio Conference.

—Last Monday morning's record of accidents included the following gleaned from the Greensboro Daily News: E. J. Johnson, of Durham, killed when train hits car; Robert F. Stafford, of Erlanger, is killed by his son; three were killed and four injured in Warren, Pa., when an automobile plunged through the railing of a bridge over the Allegheny River; three young men and two young women were killed in Jamestown, N. Y., when their car collided with a trolley car; a Chicago actress was killed in an automobile accident; Worth Benfield, of Statesville, lost his life while in swimming; R. A. Springs, of New York, had his collar bone broken in an auto accident; hundreds are made homeless in Missouri by the breaking of levees in the St. Francis River; two passengers in an airplane in New Hampshire were burned to death; four persons are injured in auto mishaps in Raleigh; five people are hurt, some of them seriously, in an auto accident near Newbern; three Goldsboro youths are involved in an accident which badly damages two cars. Sunday is the most prolific day of the week in accidents.

—The National Republican convention in session in Kansas City last week nominated Herbert Hoover for President, and Senator Curtis, of Kansas, for Vice-President.

—What can go further toward cheapening college degrees than conferring the degree of Doctor of Laws upon Charlie Lindbergh? To add to the monstrosity of it, the statement is made that the same university that conferred the degree once asked Lindbergh to withdraw from its student body because of low grade in his studies.

—Rev. Lawrence Little, Secretary of Young People's Work, announces 22 Leadership Training Schools for the summer months. Among them is the one to be held at High Point College July 14-21, under the direction of Rev. F. W. Paschall.

VOLUME XXXIV GREENSBORO, N. C., JUNE 28, 1928 NUMBER 34

Rev. J. F. Dosier

Many of our readers will be sensible of a great loss when they learn of the death of Rev. J. F. Dosier. He has been a frequent contributor to the columns of the HERALD for years and his articles have been widely read and with keen interest. More of our readers have written appreciatingly of Bro. Dosier's contributions than have thus written of the writings of any other contributor. He was quick in the detection of shams and strong in their exposure. Plausible novelties had no charm for him unless he could find in them harmony with well-known truth. He had a mind that could not easily be imposed upon. Others might be carried away by some wind of false doctrine, but he kept upon his feet. He had read widely and well. He adhered to the doctrines that have stood the test of the most thorough examination and refused to be stampeded in the direction of any new but fallacious teaching. The faith of our fathers was precious to him and he was ready to defend it against all enemies. Surely he fought a good fight. He kept the faith. He is now crowned. His death came last week and his funeral was held in Mt. Lebanon Church, Randleman, N. C., last Saturday at 2 p. m.

Those taking part in the service were Rev. W. H. Neese, the pastor, President S. W. Taylor, Revs. J. H. Moton, W. M. Pike, and W. F. Kennett, classmates of Brother Dosier in the Conference course of study, and Rev. W. F. Ashburn, a special friend. All paid fitting tributes to the character and work of the deceased. Besides these, sixteen other Methodist Protestant ministers were present and three ministers of other denominations. The congregation of course included many neighbors and friends. The burial took place at Level Cross Church where Brother Dosier was converted in early manhood. Bro. Neese remarked that he would sleep the long sleep within thirty feet of where he gave his heart to the Lord.

He leaves his wife, two sons and two daughters. In their sense of bereavement they will have the sympathy of many who knew and loved Brother Dosier.

Had he lived until his birthday in July he would have been 73 years old.

Proposed Calendar Reform

It has been proposed that the nations of the world agree to a change in the calendar which will make all months consist of four weeks, all months beginning on Sunday. To make up the 365 days it would be necessary to add a thirteenth month. It is proposed that this thirteenth month be inserted between June and July and called Sol. The thirteen months would make only 364 days. The 365th day would be added to December and called "Year-Day"; that is, December would really have 29 days, but the last day would not be Sunday. That last week of the year would have seven days between Sundays; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Yearday. It is pretty certain that the Seventh Day Adventists will never agree to having seven days between two Sundays. Every fourth year "Leap-Day" would be added to June, again putting seven days between two Sundays.

If this proposed calendar is adopted Easter Sunday will always be April 8 and Christmas Day will always be on Wednesday.

Church people in America are now earnestly invited to give this matter careful study. If they find any real objections to the proposed calendar they are requested to communicate promptly with the President of the Federal Council of Churches, who will assemble all such information for the benefit of the National Committee. Objections or approvals should be in hand as soon as possible.

If a world decision is reached during 1929, the new calendar will go into effect January, 1933, when January 1st falls on a Sunday. In case the decision is reached after 1929, the next date on which the new calendar can easily be put into operation is 1939, when January 1st against falls on Sunday.

Those who desire a brief yet adequate pamphlet discussing this question should secure "Calendar Simplification," by George Eastman (343 State Street, Rochester, N. Y.).

Are We Forgetting the Near East Orphans?

We have just received from J. B. Ivey, of Charlotte, State Chairman of Near East Relief, a communication which reads as follows:

The National Executive Committee in early June voted to cut alarmingly orphanage overseas appropriations. The very same day this was voted, we received a letter from C. C. Thurber, a Carolinian, who is our director at Athens. He knew there was danger of such action with its necessity of turning children out of the orphanages and wrote as follows:

"If you do cut our appropriations, it will mean turning out orphan boys and girls to the bleak dreary plains of Macedonia, where they will live in mud huts, holes in the ground, will be ravaged by malaria, tuberculosis, hunger, and filth, and all because you folks at home do not care enough to make a real sacrifice."

Thurber has pledged his own salary months ahead to meet the needs—twice he has suffered in Turkish prisons—he has been beaten with rods and walks lame today in consequence—he nearly died of typhus –and he remains at his post against his doctor's orders.

The recent cut has already caused orphans much suffering and misery. The danger is that the need compels spending more than our income. Before the middle of July there will be a vote on another large cut. What response the American people make between now and then decides how the vote must

THINKING PEACE

By Rev. Charles E. Jefferson

(A sermon, somewhat abbreviated, preached in the Broadway Tabernacle, New York)

Text—"They say peace, peace; when there is no peace." Jeremiah 6:14.

Who said "Peace?" The religious leaders of Judah. The prophets and priests of Jerusalem. The men ordained to speak for God in Israel. They extolled peace, glorified peace, pleaded for peace, promised peace, but there was no peace. Why? Because the politicians of Judah thought war, the government in Jerusalem prepared for war, the statesmen of Israel were pursuing a policy which made war inevitable. There were two groups of men in Jerusalem, one group praising peace, the other group planning war, one group looking for peace, the other group making peace impossible.

The situation is an instructive one because it recurs again and again. It was that sort of a situation which preceded the World War. Through fifteen years before the World War, the workers for peace were unusually active. Ministers of the gospel in large numbers preached eloquent sermons on peace. They were always exalting peace, showing the beauty of peace, urging the necessity of peace, promising world peace if only certain conditions were fulfilled. The preachers were not alone in exalting peace. A great company of educators and publicists and philanthropists spoke frequently of peace. The ministers of the church and the ministers of the state unitedly proclaimed the beauty of peace, but there was no peace because the governments were all thinking war. Every great nation was preparing for war. All responsible statesmen felt it to be their first duty to carry out a program which would safeguard their nation in war. And so, because the political rulers of Christendom were thinking war and preparing for war and waiting for war, the war came.

The world finds itself today in a most curious predicament. Let me sketch hurriedly the world situation. All the people want peace. As one of our foremost generals has said: "The longing for peace fills the minds of untold millions." The longing for peace is undoubtedly more passionate and more nearly universal than at any other time in the history of the world. All the people love peace. We Americans do. We do not want war. We want peace. If you should hear an American say: "I hope we can have another war soon," you would feel he ought to be hurried to a sanatorium and treated for lunacy. But we Americans are not more peace-loving than the peoples of Europe. I have been in every nation of Europe but one, and I assure you that all the peoples of that continent love peace. There is not a solitary war-loving nation there. They long for peace more passionately than we long for it, because they know better than we do what war is. I have been in the Far East, and I can tell you that all the nations of the Orient want peace.

The whole world abhors war. We now know what war is. Its nature was completely revealed in the world's greatest tragedy. Before the World War one occasionally heard it said that "war is a school of virtue." We never hear such talk now. We know it is a school of vice—a school of vices. Men used to say that a little blood-letting did a nation good. It led to a spiritual rebirth. No one talks after that fashion now. We have found out how deep our modern weapons cut. The old weapons cut the veins, our new weapons cut the arteries. There is danger now of the victim bleeding to death. We cannot have a little blood-letting. The blood comes leaping out with a deadly gush. We know what war is. The World War stripped off the plumes and gold braid and we saw war naked. We beheld its innermost nature, and we now know what a dirty, ghastly, hellish thing it is. We all despise war and shudder at the thought of it.

Now let us face another fact. The governments of the world are thinking war, preparing for war, manufacturing instruments of war. There is no questioning this fact. There are more men under arms today than there were in 1913. More money is spent every year on armies and navies than was spent in any year before the great catastrophe. We Americans are preparing for war. We are spending three hundred and twenty million dollars a year on our navy and three hundred and sixty million dollars a year on our army, a total of six hundred and eighty million dollars a year on our engines of war. Great Britain is spending eight hundred and sixty-four million dollars a year on her army and navy. She and the United States will spend fifteen billion dollars this decade on their armies and navies.

One-half of all the money spent in the world on armies and navies is being spent by the two leading Christian nations. When I think of the poverty of the world, the immeasurable, unimaginable suffering, when I think of the ignorance of the world, the vast and appalling ignorance of millions of human beings, and when in the presence of all these I see the two foremost Christian nations pouring fifteen billion dollars in ten years into the equipment of war, my mind goes back to a parable spoken long ago by a man who understood the kind of world we are living in, the parable of the wicked husbandman. And the question which comes to me again and again is the piercing and unescapable question of Jesus of Nazareth, "What will the owner of the vineyard do unto those husbandmen?" Somebody owns this earth. He has a plan for the human race. If the two most favored nations squander their treasure on the instruments of slaughter, what will the owner of the vineyard do?

The governments are preparing for war and because they are thinking war the world is drifting again toward war. Here, then, is a second fact to put down by the side of our first fact. The peoples of the earth abhor war and long for peace, but the leading governments of the world are thinking war and preparing for it.

In every case a government is a small group of men. That small group of men is in the grip of the war tradition, held tight in the clutches of the war system. Every government is the victim of a small group of military and naval experts, who have been trained to think war, and whose first business is to teach other men to think war. They see everything through the bore of a gun. To them there is no defense but guns. To them there is no effective force but physical force. To them every foreigner is a possible enemy. Because they are always thinking war, they adopt a program which inevitably arouses suspicion and fear and ill-will. Out of these three moods comes war.

We are drifting toward war because our government officials think wrong. The root cause of our trouble is wrong thinking. We are in the grip of the war thought habit. Until that thought habit can be broken, there is no hope for us. Jesus of Nazareth began His work with the passionate exhortation, "Repent." By repent He meant "Change your mind! You are thinking wrong. You must think right. Until you think right a better world cannot come." He saw that men were mistaken in their thinking down to the foundation. "You must be born again. The current of your thinking is polluted at the very sources. You must start all over. You must have a different spirit, entirely different from the spirit you now have. You must be born from above." That is what He said, that is what He says. We must cease to think war.

We must get rid of the militarized mind. The militarized mind always sees "peril." It sees perils because every human being is a possible enemy. But suppose that we look on every foreign nation as a possible friend, there is no longer danger anywhere. Look upon every Chinese as a possible enemy and the future is black indeed. Who can be safe if he has four hundred million enemies? But look upon the Chinese as possible friends, and what a safe world it is to live in. With four hundred million friends in the Far East, who could ever do us harm? The supreme business of nations is the making of friends, and that cannot be done by the multiplication of guns.

My sermon is a plea for thinking people. We are cursed by the habit of thinking war. Why do we think war? We are trained to do it. Let me introduce you to some of our teachers.

First of all come the officers of the army and navy. They are supposed to be a fighting, but first of all they are a teaching, body. Their first duty is to teach Congress to think war. Unless Congress thinks war there is no chance of huge military and naval appropriations.

Many of our army and navy officers are able men. Some of them are forceful writers and a few are eloquent speakers. They are always speaking and writing. They retire early from active service and spend the remainder of their days in teaching. Their ambition is to teach their country how to think war. Keep your eyes on the magazines and note what a lot of things our military and naval officers have to say. And then pay attention to the after-dinner speakers at the big banquets, and especially the banquets of Chambers of Commerce and women's organizations, and you will find that the army and navy have something to say and know how to say it. The business men of the country must be trained to think war. Without their support what would become of the appropriations? The women must be carefully trained to think war, for without their support the future of the war system is dark.

In this work of training, the press takes a conspicuous part. Mr. J. A. Spender, one of the outstanding British journalists of our day, who visited our country recently, said some interesting things to his fellow-journalists here. He confessed that the press of Europe had not a little to do with bringing on the World War. It created the war atmosphere. It trained men to think war. Our press is working along the same line. It makes a specialty of pictures. We are all children in our love of pictures. We are educated largely through the eyes. The things we see make the deepest impression on us. War is wonderfully picturesque. Everything connected with it can be grasped by the camera. Even a bloody battle is thrilling on canvas. A battleship makes a beautiful picture, so also does a cruiser, a torpedo boat, a submarine, a bomb-dropping airplane, all these sit for their photograph, and the photographs are distributed all over the country in the pictorial supplements of our Sunday newspapers. In this way our people, especially our boys and girls, are being trained to think war.

Another feature in the educational program is the holding of military and naval exhibitions. We have already reached the point at which it seems difficult to celebrate anything without a military parade. A military parade is full of color. It is a feast for the eye. We like it. We all like it. Every year both navy and army play war games. They call them "maneuvers and target practice." All the games are photographed and elaborately reported by the newspapers throughout the land. This is an excellent way of teaching the people to think war. It helps to keep up the appropriations.

If a nation is to be trained to think war, the college students must be coralled. The men in college today will be the leaders of the nation tomorrow, and therefore must be taught to think war. We have already one hundred and twelve thousand under military training in our schools, and if some of our military experts could have their way, we would have compulsory military training not only in our universities and colleges, but in all our high schools, too. It is the ambition of the hundred per cent militarist to train the entire American people to think war.

As an important step in the good work we have our summer military training camps. Tremendous efforts are put forth to sweep our boys into them. Many persons believe in them. Many peace-lovers and even peace-workers believe in them. They believe they accomplish many desirable results and do no great harm. The argument in their favor is a plausible one. They give men exercise in the open air. They train men to stand erect. They get men out of their slovenly habits of standing and walking. They teach the principle of obedience. Our young men do not know how to obey. Family discipline in many homes has broken down. It has broken down in many schools. Pupils, instead of the teachers, have taken the school into their own hands. What we need is discipline. Send the boys into the army. Put them under a captain or a major. Let them learn how to toe the mark, how to obey with alacrity and swiftness. It is a plausible argument. Let us teach them patriotism. Let us bring them close to the flag, keeping them in contact with it through the summer months. Our young men must be taught patriotism if the republic is to endure. It is a persuasive argument. Surely a man who opposes a summer military training camp is a fanatic! What harm does it do? Let me suggest an answer. This is the harm which it does: It trains our young men to think war. It fastens in their minds the idea of war. It deepens in them the conviction that every nation must prepare for war. It strengthens the superstition that the war system gives us our only protection.

The argument for a finer physique does not move me. I always think of the million French boys with fine physiques who sleep under the soil, and of the million German boys who were trained to stand erect, and who now lie flat under the ground. What does it profit a nation to train its boys to stand straight if it is perfecting them in an art which will roll them into bloody graves? Obedience is a beautiful thing, but the obedience which this world needs is not the mechanical obedience to a military officer, but the obedience to the conscience and to the voice of God. Let us train our boys to love their country, but let us cease to wrap the flag around a gun. Let us train our boys to wrap the flag around a ballot. The future of America depends not on the use of bullets, but on the [illegible] lots. Let us train them not how to shoot, but how to vote. In that direction only lies the promised land. It is dangerous, mischief-making patriotism which cannot live and flourish except in the presence of a gun.

Let us think peace. We have a neighbor on the north with which we have squabbled off and on for one hundred and fifty years. We are always at loggerheads over something or other with Canada. Sometimes we have quarreled over boundary lines, and sometimes we have a mess of fishery disputes and again and again we struggle furiously over the tariff, but we never think war—not with Canada. Canada never thinks war with us. When we get into our disputes we appoint a commission and Canada does the same, and the two commissions sit down together and thresh the matter out. Why do we do this? We have nothing to fight with along the Canadian border. We have no battleships on the Great Lakes. We have no forts or guns along that extended border line. We have not prepared for war. We have prepared for peace. We do not think war. We think peace. Thinking peace, we have peace. We have had it for a century and a half, and please God, we are going to have it always.

Let us make a new vow to God. Let us promise Him that by His grace we are going from this time onward to think peace, seeing in every foreigner a possible friend, and in every human being an actual brother, a member of the great family which embraces all races and nations, and whose Head is our Heavenly Father.

MID-SUMMER CHRISTIANITY

No, Brother Barnabas, mid-summer Christianity does not differ in the slightest degree from all-the-year-round Christianity! Indeed, what we are about to emphasize is the importance of living the Christian life, as a practical experience and as a constant influence, every day and every hour, without reference to the seasons; and without reference to social functions in the one season or revival meetings in the other.

Christian churches throughout the world grant their pastors a summer vacation, and all faithful pastors certainly earn a greater number of vacation periods than they are ever enabled to enjoy. The purpose of a vacation, indeed, to every true apostle of the Kingdom and to every true disciple of the Lord, is not primarily to gain opportunity for personal relaxation, but rather to recuperate his physical and intellectual powers in preparation for the arduous work of the next annual conference year.

Very happily complementing this plan is the habit of the churches to renovate and repair the house of worship and the parsonage, this season falling uniformly with the period when the lay membership, in large proportions, is also having a mid-summer vacation.

The mid-summer Christianity which holds the believer when the doors of the church are closed, is the kind without which he cannot be kept safely at any hour or any day of the whole round year. St. Paul's injunction is: "I will, therefore, that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands." And the efficacy of prayer depends not only upon its being the same in every place but also the same at all times. And companionship with God's Word is also a constant necessity. If, therefore, the Christian has everyday communion with God, through prayer, and is also a habitual reader of the Bible every day, he is living close to the true perennial springs which flow from the mountain peaks of faith and love.

The only danger to the Christian in vacation time is found in the new environment with which he surrounds himself, in the new atmosphere which he breathes and the new companions with whom he is associated, in the new impulses and passions which may be engendered through these unusual associations and experiences.

The real truth is that if the miracle of regeneration has taken place in the soul of the believer; if he has really found peace with God through the atoning merits of Jesus Christ; if he has come into the worldwide fellowship of believing souls; if the Spirit itself bears witness with his spirit that he is one of the children of God—if this succession of blessed experiences has come to any one, then he has established himself not only beside the still waters of peace but beside the everflowing river of love. For "there is a river whose streams thereof make glad the city of God." And if we live in the city of God beside this never-failing river, we shall never pause to think of the difference between mid-winter Christianity at the revival season, and mid-summer Christianity at vacation time. It is good for all Christian workers in every zone of service to break away from the over-burdening cares of life for a season, and find rest and recuperation, wide apart from the claims of the daily task. The Christian, therefore, who breaks away from the environment of a faithful career, and refreshes himself for a period of relaxation, will have all the greater joy of service on his return to the active mission of life to which God has called him.

There is another blessing which may come to every church by the absence of the minister through summer vacations, because, if the church services are kept up throughout the vacation season, or even a part of that season, a providential opportunity is given to the laity of the church to exercise their spiritual gifts and to develop those functions of helpful leadership which will enable them all the better to be coworkers with their minister and other experienced toilers in the Lord's vineyard.

One of our experiences in this direction happened in connection with the first year of a new church organization. The officers of this church were either young converts, or Christians of larger experience whose gifts, graces and acquirements had been dulled by lack of use. We were called to a former parish for a ministerial function on a Wednesday; and, missing connections for the ferry boat across the Hudson, we found that we could not be back home in time for the mid-week prayer service. It suddenly occurred to us that this situation might be made a special providence to the new church organization, and we therefore telegraphed to one of the leaders of the official board requesting the members of the board to conduct the prayer meeting for the evening. It was, of course, a great surprise to them, and led to hurried and wavering counsel on the question of their ability to perform this service. But they finally agreed with the greatest unanimity; and the service thus put in commission proved to be one not soon to be forgotten. For men who had never led in public prayer before were pressed into service by the emergency of the hour; and from that moment onward these men stood close to the pastor, always ready for every function of a genuine lay minister, including not only teaching of the Sunday school and leading a prayer meeting but also in a willingness to take part in visitation evangelism and in calling upon strangers of the city, persuading them to become worshipers in the Lord's house.

When Christian experience flows from springs eternal and never-failing, then will Christian constancy be but as the fruit of the vine, as the light of the sun. In a word we live in communion with our heavenly Father keeping the avenues of approach forever open, through prayer and service. Then will every season of the year be beautifully rich with the graces and virtues of the Christian life. One of the old

Children's Day Service

Gratifying indeed have been the orders for the Children's Day services and pageants this year, and some of the fine commendations by those who have heard the rendition of the programs. And the orders are still coming.

Not Too Late

Well, it is never too late to do good and to help out in a needy cause. So, while June is generally considered and observed as the month for Children's Day services, yet they can be held later just as well. It is just as acceptable to the Board of Missions as long as the educational feature of the service can be given to our people and an offering received for the extension of the work. And as long, also, that it is not held so late as to encroach upon the time for holding the Rally Day services, for now, you know, we are all enlisted to work, pay and pray for the whole program of the whole church and thus have just as vital an interest in every phase of our denominational program as in one particular phase. But there is still time to order the Children's Day programs and to hold the service without such encroachment.

S. O. S. Call

Our prayers now are for a real worthwhile offering and that the offering be sent to your conference treasurer immediately and he to Dr. J. H. Straughn, Treasurer, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

This is an S. O. S. call for funds. It is perfectly natural for some shrinkage of funds in the moments of adjustments of the new order of things, especially when the order is so new as was made at our last General Conference. But if we will all pull and pray together these adjustments will soon be made. And, I a msure, we will all be the happier and our boards the richer, for with unity of effort it will all work out to the enlargement of our denominational borders through the increased offerings of our people to a common cause and a unified program. Just now, however, we are greatly in need of more funds to "carry on." So please do not hold back the Children's Day offerings. Send them on at once.

And may I extend this S. O. S. call, also, to the treasurers of the Woman's Foreign and the Woman's Home Missionary Societies. Please send your moneys direct to the treasurer of the General Conference so that these moneys may be used immediately to care for the monthly salaries and appropriations for your work. A receipt will be sent direct to you by the treasurer of the General Conference.

Now shall we not all join heartily in the new program set up by our General Conference, give largely and freely of our time, our talents and bring our whole tithe into the storehouse and see what great things the Lord will do for the Methodist Protestant Church during this first quadrennium of our second century.

The Historical Poster

If any Sunday school has used the Children's Day service, or any part of it, and has not received a copy of the historical poster, giving the picture, name and time of going out of every missionary serving under the Board of Foreign Missions or the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church, kindly let me know and I shall be glad to mail a copy immediately. The board does not want a single church or Sunday school to miss seeing our fine group of missionaries.

Those churches or Sunday schools that desire to have this poster framed please let me know and I will send you a copy unfolded. Then there are still other copies for free distribution to any church or organization that should desire a copy. They are yours for the asking.

Yours to serve,

S. W. Rosenberger, Exec. Sec.

WHAT ONE MAN DID

Protestantism leads with faith the fight for the outlawry of war. This struggle is made in the face of the skepticism, the pessimism of non-Nordic, that is to say, non-Protestant Europe. War eventually will be outlawed just as dueling went down under Protestant pressure. There is probably no better example of the wisdom of settling disputes by understanding instead of by force than the example of George Robinson, Tasmanian Protestant.

This devout bricklayer was dismayed at the ruthless methods of the early colonial authorities in dealing with the natives. He had learned their language. He had a warm-hearted sympathy with them. His proposition seemed to the authorities to mark him out as a lunatic. He actually proposed to go among the aborigines unarmed, as a friend, to reason with them. He declared he could explain to them that, however some settlers and convicts might treat them, the object of the government was to better their condition. His one stipulation was that the hunting of the blacks should cease, that it should be prohibited even to carry firearms in their presence.

This little obscure man did wonderful things. He tramped hundreds of miles. He endured extraordinary hardships. He dared anything to accomplish his mission. Most wonderful of all the things he did was to show that these hunted black people had the souls of human beings, and to bring their souls into grateful communion with his own. He took a few blacks, whom he knew well, as companions and, guided by them, visited the far-off hiding places where the tribes had taken refuge. Often he was in grave danger, but his cool confidence always saved him. He would walk fearlessly up to a group of warriors who had their spears poised to hurl at him. Soon he would be shaking hands with them. He led the remnant of one of the most savage tribes to Government House in Hobart, where, to welcome them, the brass band was ordered to play. The natives, screaming with terror, clustered around Robinson for protection.

The Tasmanians, the last living examples of paleolithic man, are unfortunately now extinct. Diseases contracted from the whites completed their elimination. That their final disappearance was not a bloody one is due to this almost forgotten Christian bricklayer.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Concord

June 17. This is Concord church on Saxapahaw charge. We were here in an all-day circuit rally. The weather was favorable and the attendance large. The program opened with the Sunday school and continued through the day, with Bro. L. W. Gerringer as the principal speaker in the afternoon. It was our privilege to preach in the morning and to present the conference programs after the noon intermission. An immediate response was $50 pledged for the Gratitude Gift. This was very heartening and highly appreciated. A rally day offering was taken by the pastor in the morning service. All the churches on the charge were represented and all, we believe, shared by special assignments in the program of the day. We were sorry to have to leave before Bro. Gerringer had spoken and the other parts of the afternoon program had been rendered. We are sure the day was fruitful of good results, and we trust that many other charges will plan like assemblies. Bro. Loy is liked by his people and is doing good work.

Haw River Mission

June 17. We were here at night with Bro. Holmes, and had the pleasure of preaching to a goodly number, though this was not the regular appointment. We found the people hopeful and active, and the work in good condition. Bro. Holmes has the esteem of his people, and is encouraged by the sympathetic co-operation he is receiving from them. We have a loyal band here, and we doubt not that they will have a worthy report of the year's work.

Committee Meeting

June 22. A meeting of the Gratitude Gift Committee was held at the parsonage Friday night. Two matters were considered. First, raising the unpledged balance of $2,000 to make up our complete allotment of $1,200; second, a centennial program for our coming annual conference. That we might not go to the General Conference with a deficit in our Gratitude Gift allotment, we borrowed $2,000. This was done on the faith that our people would pay it later, since we did not have time to raise it by the 16th of May, when the General Conference met. The committee decided to take this matter at once to our people, and raise it at an early date. The conference centennial program will be arranged by a committee appointed for that purpose. The calling of a Gratitude Honor Roll has been suggested as a feature of this program. Many churches are already entitled to places on that roll; many others will yet be added; and none, we would think, will want to be omitted. We most earnestly plead for the full support of pastors and people in completing this Gratitude Gift undertaking.

Gibsonville

June 24. We were here at the morning hour, arriving in time to share a part of the Sunday school lesson, as it was enthusiastically taught by Bro. Jennings. His teaching indicated preparation. It was a pleasure to us to preach and present the conference interests at the eleven o'clock hour. The attendance was encouraging and the people attentive. The pastor read our emergency letter and urged an immediate response to the pressing need for funds. Industrial conditions are not favorable just now for the Gibsonville church, but we are confident that some way will be found by our faithful people there to help us. The pastor announced a pageant for the evening hour. He called attention, also, to the Y. P. T. S., and urged the people to register. No conference interest escapes the attention of Bro. Johnson, or fails of his support. He is a wise and zealous leader, and under his direction the church is prospering. We are hopeful of a good year at Gibsonville.

Glen Raven

June 24. We were here at night, and had the pleasure and opportunity of preaching to a house full of people. A revival meeting had been in progress for some days, we found, though it was interrupted by the pastor's help, Bro. R. S. Troxler, being called home on account of sickness in his family. However, the evangelistic spirit was still present, and one man came forward for prayer. Considering all matters involved, the pastor thought best to close the meeting with this service. Our emergency letter had arrived there also, and was read by the pastor to the congregation. The immediate response was the raising of $10.00 on the A. C. B. Industrial conditions are discouraging here, but we believe an earnest effort will be made to meet financial obligations. They have reduced the parsonage debt this year to a balance of $150. They have desirable parsonage property, and it is gratifying to know that it is so nearly paid for. Bro. Williams is earnest in his work, and has the esteem of his people, as his long pastorate here testifies. We hope that this may prove to be one of the best and happiest years on this charge.

We are grateful to all who contributed to our welfare and comfort while we were laboring on these various fields.

Budgets

We must begin now to press the budgets with vigor. Only four months remain of this conference year, and there is much to be done yet in raising our budgets. Up to our report last week there were 40 charges that had paid nothing on the A. C. B. The report this week does not change the standing. Brethren, we beseech you—by all the needs of our conference and our denominational work—we beseech you to press these budget collections.

Expense of Representatives

Only a little more than half of this has been paid, according to report of Bro. Auman. The representatives who attended the General Conference had to advance the money necessary for their expenses, and it is not right that they should be kept out of this money. The allotment to each charge was small, and we hope that pastors and stewards will see that it is paid promptly.

District Rallies

In the early spring we urged that all charges hold centennial celebrations in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of our church. Some charges did this. Others did not. It was our idea then that this would take the place of our former district rally. We hope that all districts that did not hold the centennial celebration will arrange for a district rally. Such assemblies of our people, with well chosen and well executed programs, should revive new interest and quicken new zeal along all lines of work. I am hereby asking all chairmen of districts to communicate with me in regard to this matter.

Deceased

The passing of Bro. Dosier removes from us another of our old and honored ministers. The funeral service, which was held at Lebanon church, Randleman, last Saturday at 2 p. m., was attended by a large number of his brethren in the ministry, thus attesting the high regard they had for him. His body was laid to rest at Level Cross, where he was converted in early life. Bro. Dosier had a virile mind and a good heart. He will be missed in bodily presence, but he will not fade from our memories. An obituary committee will be promptly appointed. Our loving sympathy is extended to the family.

NO PLACE FOR GLOOM

God does not, and probably cannot, use a discouraged man. Elijah, even, was an unprofitable servant while subject to a fit of despondency. There is nothing in a pessimistic attitude of mind and spirit to attract and inspire. Not the croaking of a frog but the blast of a bugle tends to quicken the steps of men. A frog in a pond is not so bad but a master croaker in the pulpit is to be deplored. It is tragic. It is worse than tragic, it is fatal.

One of the striking features of the Bible is the voice of conquest and victory that runs through it. The Hebrew historians and prophets were men of vision and hope, and the Hebrew psalmists were pre-eminent in their optimistic outlook upon the future. And the Christian apostles were equally outspoken in their confidence that the cause of God and His anointed must win.

The same may be said of Carey in India, Livingstone in Africa, and Morrison in China. Can it be said of us?—N. C. Christian Advocate.

No Church Edifices

There is a religious denomination mainly in Pennsylvania which has no church edifices, though it has been in existence since 1843. They lay principal stress on nonconformity to the wordl. They won't dress like worldly people and they seem to think it is worldly to have houses built for worship. They frequently hold their services in large barns. They are known as the "Old Order or Yorker Brethren." They have ten local congregations with a total membership of 472. Their expenditures for 1926 averaged $53 per congregation. They are taking very easily the task of converting the world to their way of thinking and acting.

THE CROSS

To many this seems a hard saying, Deny thyself; take up thy cross and follow Jesus. But the Cross will be the sign in heaven, when the Lord shall come to judgment.

Why then fear to take up the Cross, through which lies the road to the Kingdom? In the Cross is salvation, in the Cross is life, in the Cross is strength of mind, in the Cross joy of spirit, in the Cross the sun of virtue.

Take up, therefore, thy cross and follow Jesus. He went before bearing his Cross and died for thee on the Cross, that thou also mayest bear thy cross.

Walk where thou wilt, seek what thou wilt, thou wilt find no higher way above, no safer way below, than the way of the Cross. Dispose and order all things as thou wilt and seest, yet thou shall only learn that thou must always suffer, willingly or unwillingly, and so thou shalt always find the Cross.

The Cross, therefore, is always ready and everywhere waits for thee. Thou canst not escape it whithersoever thou runnest, for go where thou wilt thou carriest thyself with thee and shall ever find thyself. Turn thyself upwards, turn thyself downwards, turn thyself outwards, turn thyself inwards; everywhere thou shalt find the Cross.

And how dost thou seek any other way than this, the King's way, which is the way of the Cross?—Thomas A. Kempis.

SUMMER CONFERENCE TIDINGS

The summer conference program is about all complete and it is believed that it is to be a good conference. It was thought that the program would appear in the HERALD before now, but a few things have held it up. It is now quite certain that it will appear next week. Those who have been asked to take part are responding nicely. Indeed no one has refused. This is very much appreciated. Thanks! Now for a good attendance. It is hoped that every pastor will register from the beginning. Laymen, please see to it that your pastor is there. It will be a good investment for you to pay the little expense and thus encourage your pastor. The books are still open for registrations.

Yours for a good conference,

GEO. L. CURRY.

A MOTHER'S DAY TRIBUTE

One of the most important chapters of history will be entitled "A Mother's Influence." Who will write that wonderful story? The two brightest names in modern history are Lincoln and Cromwell. Linconl affirmed, "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my angel mother." Of Cromwell, the historian says: "No other member of his family, neither his wife nor father, influenced him as did his mother. He followed her advice when young, he established her in the royal palace of Whitehall when he came to greatness, and when she died he buried her in Westminster Abbey." A plain, robust, substantial character she must have been, for the historian adds, "She cared nothing for her son's grandeur." Her only thought seemed to be for his welfare and comfort and the honor of his name and reputation.—Selected.

It makes no difference how rich a country may be, or how well fed are its people, if the people have not the bread of life. The worst famine is a famine of the Word of God.

OUR STORY PAGE

PHIL'S CAPTIVE

Phil Fenton was sloshing along in his hip boots carrying a large covered basket. He was going for eggs because a weasel or skunk had visited his mother's henhouse and sucked most of the eggs.

The Goodwins, who had extra eggs, lived on a farm only half a mile away, but Phil was taking a roundabout way through the marshes. Spring had touched the lonely marsh with her magic wand. Birds were there and frogs and green shoots and buds. Phil waded along, taking it all in with his eyes and ears and nose. A strong breeze came from the bay, and he fancied he smelt the sea ever so far away.

He was making a good deal of noise as he pushed his way over the soggy ground. He knew his way or he would never have gone there; it was a mean place in which to get lost. Suddenly he stopped short. There was a rustling sound and a rabbit came into view, running full tilt toward him. In fact, it ran right over his foot.

Phil, almost before he knew what he was about, stepped behind a bush and squatted down. Something must be chasing that rabbit and Phil wanted to know what it was. He was not kept waiting long for a dog raced past. He was about to rise when he heard more sounds and a man appeared with a gun.

"It isn't hunting season," thought the boy, indignantly.

He looked closely at the man who was a stranger, a rough-looking person, very dark, who walked stooping a little like an ape, and he had very long arms which made him look more apish than ever. Phil did not like him.

Think of the boy's feeling when he saw the man stop and look down at the ground. Just at that place the earth was not soft enough to close over a footprint. The man was examining Phil's. Then he began to follow the telltale marks, holding his gun in both hands.

Phil knew that the game was up for him; that is, as far as hiding from the man was concerned. He could have run, but if the man shot and was a good marksman, running wouldn't pay.

There was a place nearby where there was a pool with quicksand in the bottom, a pool which told no tales. Phil knew every inch of the marsh as it was one of his favorite spots at all seasons, and he thought of the pool. The man drew nearer and nearer, and Phil's muscles tightened. Well, he found himself distrusting the man more the nearer view of him he got. His front face was worse than his profile. He looked plenty mean enough to shoot at a fleeing boy if the boy happened to be in his way.

"Mom will be waiting for those eggs," thought Phil.

When the stranger was within a few steps, Phil suddenly sprang up and threw his large basket with deadly aim square into the man's evil face. Then he ran.

He heard a loud explosion, a gun going off, and the echoes resounded over the lonesome marsh. He ran faster and made straight for the hidden pool.

The man began to run after him. Not one word was said; no calling to halt, or anything like that. Just a thump, slush, thump, of a heavy body crashing in his wake. It was awful!

As they neared the pond, Phil noticed how spring-like it was, with the close margin of pale green trees and bushes. When he felt the wicked cave of the ground near the pool, he veered to one side and darted behind some rushes and crouched like a rabbit.

The man soon came to the place, running fast, and before he realized it he was up to his knees in the quicksand. One more step and he would be in the pool. He stopped and turned, struggling in vain. Phil smiled. He knew the man was caught as tightly as if he were in a steel trap.

As bold as brass, the boy strolled out of his hiding place and stood on the firm ground. The man saw him and raising his gun took a steady aim.

"All right," said Phil, "shoot away. If you kill me, you'll never get out. You'll sink, slowly, slowly. In three hours you'll be in up to your eyebrows."

"Unless you help me out at once, I'll shoot!" shouted the man hoarsely, but Phil saw he was scared stiff.

"If you shoot me, you'll certainly be out of luck," said Phil calmly.

The man lowered his weapon and began to struggle once more. All in vain. His face became gray with terror. He looked up at the boy.

"Kid," he gasped, "have a heart. Don't let me die like this!"

"Throw your gun to me," ordered Phil.

The man hesitated.

"It isn't helping you," argued the boy. "It is only pushing you down faster."

The man tossed over the gun. It fell near Phil and he eagerly picked it up. Now he had the advantage!

He went quickly to a thick wild grape vine and began to cut it. There was no time to lose. Next he dragged himself, the vine and gun into a tree nearby. One branch hung over the place where the man was. Phil crawled out on the limb and hung the vine over it. The man could barely reach it, but Phil pressed down the branch until the man had a good grip.

"Now haul hard and hitch along this way at the same time," Phil ordered.

The man obeyed and by slow degrees freed himself from the quicksand. Just as he reached the firm ground, the vine gave way and he nearly fell back.

Meanwhile Phil held the gun and gruffly ordered the man to hold up his hands and march ahead. They heard the dog barking in the distance and Phil hoped he would not have to shoot it.

The man marched along in silence, and Phil shouted which way to turn and kept him moving straight for the Goodwin farm. He knew there were three men on the place and they could handle the tough prisoner, who, Phil had decided, was a bootlegger.

Rum had been smuggled and hidden all along the shore thereabouts, and Phil was sure he had caught one of the gang.

As they filed into the Goodwin farmyard, Mrs. Goodwin met them with a look of alarm and surprise.

"Why, Phil," she exclaimed, "what are you doing? Why, Mr. Nicola, what's the matter?"

Phil lowered the gun, feeling kind of worried.

"Do you know this guy?" he asked.

"Why, yes," said the lady, "he boards here."

Mr. Goodwin and his two sons came over with questioning looks.

"It's all right," said Phil's captive. "We were both fooled. I'm a prohibition agent after smugglers, and I guess you thought I was a bootlegger. The truth is, my lad, I thought you were one yourself."

Phil handed him his gun, with shamefaced apology.

"Not at all!" exclaimed Nicola. "I owe you an apology, too. But you're a fine fellow. Nervy! Say, I never saw anything so cool as the way you squinted down my gun barrel and grinned. I'll make a proposition to you, maybe. How'd you like to be my assistant?"

There was much talk, laughter and excitement, in the midst of which Phil asked timidly for some eggs.

"Sis is giving a party and Mom wants to bake some cakes for her," said Phil.

"Looks like April Fools' Day," observed Mrs. Goodwin. "Did you bring a basket along?"

"Yes'm," said Phil, glancing at Mr. Nicola, "but—er—er—I lost it. Maybe you'll lend me another. It does look like April Fools' Day, but, as Mom often says, 'Appearances are often deceitful.'"

COMMUNITY CENTERS

The public is more and more demanding a wider use of the school building, at the same time not losing sight of the fact that the main purpose of the school is education. It is pointed out by the Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior, that the average school house may be converted into a community center and made the agency which will provide facilities for organizing and directing the spare-time activities of the old and young. This has been accomplished in hundreds of communities. Local boards of education are more and more making provision for the supervision of civic, recreational and social activities. By comparatively small expenditure of money the schools may be made adaptable for uses other than purely educational, thus becoming focal points of the neighborhood from a civic and community standpoint.

Among the activities engaged in by the various community centers are classes in sewing, cooking, manual training, gymnastics, dramatics, etc. Of greater importance, however, is the splendid Americanization work that underlies these activities, and the literary and debating classes, as well as the bands, orchestras, choruses and library reading, which play no small part in this constructive and commendable work.

Let the community center be the common meeting ground for parents and children alike, and a greater interest and respect for our free, educational institutions will assuredly result.—W.

WHEN WE THINK OF OTHERS

An old man who had met life serenely and tranquilly for more than eighty years was asked the secret of his cheerfulness. He answered in four words: "Thinking of other folks."

"You can't travel very far in this world," he explained, "without finding that your path is all tangled up with other folks' paths. Some people think that if they can only travel their paths without getting hurt themselves, they're going to be happy.

"But there's more to it than that. When you've learned to dodge a collision, not because you're afraid of getting hurt yourself, but because you're afraid of hurting the other fellow, you're getting near to happiness. But when you arrive at a point where it's a genuine pleasure never to cause grief to another living soul, you're still closer. In other words, when you get so far it's a joy to you just to make others happy, you're about there yourself."—Forward.

LEARN TO LOVE

Learn to love! It is not yet too late to capture "the greatest thing in the world." How long will it take us to learn this principle that overshadows all other principles in importance? We may not be able to master many of the teachings of the world's prophets and seers, or achieve positions of marked influence in the unfolding of history, but every man and woman from the greatest to the humblest can learn the hidden secret of the universe and employ the magic power of love in his everyday relationships. The center of all history is Calvary. The heart of all meanings is the cross. For here we catch a blinding glimpse of the glory of Eternal Love. Nothing else matters much if only we can grasp in our soul of souls the significance of the life and death of Christ and appropriate His determining principle of love. Life may be made glorious with a strange new light for every one of us if only we are willing to live with Christ until we have made His secret our own.—Zion's Herald.

TO BE GUARDED AGAINST

But whatever others do, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, hear this, all ye that are called Methodists! However importuned or tempted thereto, have no friendship with the world. Look around, and see the melancholy effects it has produced among your brethren! How many have fallen by this very thing! They would take no warning; they would converse, and that intimately, with earthly-minded men, till they "measured back their steps to earth again!" Oh, "come out from among them!" from all unholy men, however harmless they may appear; "and be ye separate," at least, so far as to have no intimacy with them. As your "fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ," so let it be with those, and those only, who at least seek the Lord Jesus in sincerity. So "shall ye be," in a peculiar sense, "my sons and my daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."—John Wesley.

THE BIBLE

"It lives on the ear like music that can never be forgotten, like the sound of church bells which the convert hardly knows how he can forego. It felicities often seem to be almost things rather than mere words. It is a part of the national mind, and the anchor of national seriousness—the memory of the dead passes into it. The potent traditions of childhood are stereotyped in its phrases. The power of all the grief and trials of a man is hidden in its words. It is the representative of his best moments; and all that there has been about him of soft, and gentle, and pure, and penitent, and good, speaks to him forever out of his English Bible."—Faber.

Thine forever may we be,

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

July 8: Saul and Stephen

Scripture Basis: Acts 7:54-8:3; 22:3, 4, 19, 20; 26:4, 5, 9-11; Gal. 1:13, 14.

Golden Text: Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life. Rev. 2:10.

Stephen

Perhaps all that we may learn about Stephen from the Holy Writ is found between Acts 6:5 and 8:12. At the beginning of this account, we find that he was one of seven chosen as deacons, because he was "a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost." The work of these devout men, as the word in the Greek implies, was to serve the poor and widows.

Stephen was a Hellenist or Greek-speaking Jew. This class differed from the orthodox Jew in that they usually dwelt without the borders of Palestine and were more liberal-minded because of better education. Nevertheless, they were Jews. When this man was converted to Christianity is not known, but tradition has it that he was one of the 70 whom Jesus sent out to preach to the Gentiles.

Not only did Stephen minister to the poor and widows, but he availed himself of opportunities to teach and preach Christ to the rebellious and wayward Jews. For such preaching, he was arraigned before that august body, the Sanhedrin, where he was falsely accused by hired witnesses. Fearlessly he made his defense, and as he defeated those learned men by presenting the gospel in exposition of the Scriptures that they knew so well, their anger increased and rage incensed them with murderous intent.

The spirit of God was with him to give wisdom to his mind, strength to his body, and peace to his spirit. So real was He that Stephen's face shone in the presence of the council like unto an angel. But that had no effect upon these enraged rulers. They rushed upon him as he declared unto them the vision of the Father and Son which was his joy to see at that moment, pushed him from the council chamber into the street and out of the city, where they cruelly stoned him to death.

What a death that must have been! Can we not see him emulating the example of his Lord and Master, who "was oppressed and was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth" Can we not picture him as he kneeled to receive the fatal rock that sent his soul to his Father who was waiting to welcome him, and hear him say, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." What devotion, what love, what a true witness! O God, if thy professed children would witness for thee today with only half the degree of courage and devotion, how soon would the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our God and his Christ!

Saul

The last half of the 58th verse of the 7th chapter of Acts and the first sentence in the first verse of the 8th chapter have great significance. Saul guarded the outer garments of those who threw them aside that they might have more freedom to cast the stones. He may have been assigned the job by the Sanhedrin, of which he was doubtless a member. Thus, he consented unto the death of this righteous man.

In passing: Is this applicable today? Are we consenting unto the crimes, divorce evil, rebelliousness of law, etc., by countenancing such things without protest? Do we ever stop to consider whether or not our Lord holds us guilty of some of these sins because we do not raise our voices against them or use our influence to suppress them? Is it not true that not infrequently we wink at crime, laugh at sin, and consent unto unrighteousness? If so, God forgive!

Read the third verse of the 8th chapter and observe what effect the stoning of Stephen seemed to have upon Saul. Apparently it encouraged him to continue the persecution of all the Christians he could apprehend. However, we may give him credit for two characteristics which prevailed after his conversion, i. e., zeal and conscientiousness, much of the former the outcome of the latter. He honestly thought he was doing the right thing by persecuting the followers of the Lord Jesus, and because he was conscientious in the matter, he was zealous for it.

This doubtless raises the question in our minds: Is it right to continue zealously in a practice or occupation just because one is conscientious about it? Alsa, is conscience a safe guide? If we answer the first question affirmatively, we may observe that many people are bound for the promised land who are living contrary to God's known laws. In reply to the second question, we may say that conscience is a safe guide only as it is controlled by the Spirit of God.

DIGEST OF PASTORS' REPORTS FOR SECOND QUARTER

The number of charges reporting, 74.

Forty-one pastors report conditions encouraging on their charges.

Twenty-five pastors think there will be an increase in budget receipts on their charges this year.

Thirty-nine charges report good prospects for paying college assessment in full.

All pastors subscribe to one or more of our church papers. In addition to the Herald, nearly all take one or both of the general organs of the church.

Most pastors report ample time for study.

Some pastors say it is their practice to have prayer in the homes they visit; others only with the sick and the aged, or where there is trouble; still others only when it is requested or convenient.

Nearly all pastors are giving full time service. A few are not because salary is not sufficient to provide a support.

The total number of visits reported by 57 pastors is 10,713—an average of 188 per pastor. The largest number is 761, made by a city pastor. In the group of the next highest is a rural pastor who reports 552. Many report less than 200, and quite a few fall below 125. A small number do not report their visits.

The total salary paid to date, as reported by 72 charges is $33,299; average per charge, $462; the smallest amount reported is $95; largest, $2,000; eleven charges are under $300, 27 are between $300 and $500.

The total number of additions to churches during the quarter is 294, ranging from 1 to 43 to the church. The churches leading are, Burlington First, with 43; Charlotte First, 23; Bess Chapel, 23; Denton, 22; and three others —Calvary, Community, and State Street, are in the teens. Quite a number range from four to nine.

Churches being repaired, painted, carpeted, etc., or where this work has just been completed, 22.

New churches under construction, 3.

New churches and S. S. additions in contemplation, 7.

Parsonages being improved, 2.

New parsonages in contemplation, 3.

The number of churches that need painting, 24; repairing, 15.

The number of parsonage that need repairing and painting, 4.

How to promote whole-time evangelism is variously answered, as would be expected. Some think it is to be done through an organization in the local church, definitely committed to this work; some through a deepened passion for souls on the part of the ministry; some by giving it continual emphasis in the programs of the church; others say through a deepened consecration of the church; others think it will come about by preaching the old-time gospel and personal work; still others are working through the Sunday schools, organized classes, Christian Endeavor, etc.

Whatever may be the merit in these answers, the cheering thing about them is that they reveal an interest in this all-important problem of the church. And the answer to this problem is assured when this interest is sufficiently intensified and expanded.

We fully appreciate the hearty co-operation on the part of pastors in filling out these report blanks, and we are giving this digest for the benefit of the conference.

We wonder if we inadvertenrly failed to mail report blanks to pastors that have not yet reported. For fear we did, we are sending blanks to all pastors whose reports have not yet come in.

With love and esteem for every pastor and every charge, and earnest prayers that grace may abound for all problems, I am,

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

EFLAND CHURCH RE-OPENING

Dear Mr. Editor:

It was my privilege to attend the re-opening of the Efland Methodist Protestant church Sunday, June 17.

The day was bright and fine, all that could be desired as a day of worship. A large congregation assembled for the 11 o'clock service. Rev. O. B. Williams conducted the devotional service, after which Mr. S. C. Forrest, treasurer of the church, made his report showing the amounts subscribed, paid in, and spent on the new building. After this report the writer preached a short sermon and this was followed by a very impressive communion service.

Dinner was served on the church lawn, and then another service followed in the church. This service consisted of addresses by the pastor, Revs. O. B. Williams, Ivey Crutchfield, and a number of laymen. This also was an impressive service, calling to mind the labors of Rev. W. D. Fogleman and the few faithful church members who built the original church, and other pastors and workers who have kept the work going to the present time.

The old church has been made practically new. They turned it around to front the new highway, brickveneered it, built Sunday school rooms on the rear, and also built an attractive tower. The walls of the auditorium were plastered and a new ceiling put in, new pulpit and choir stall; also new carpet for pulpit and aisles, making it a very beautiful place in which to worship God.

This was all done at a cost of $7,500.

All honor and more power to Rev. B. M. Williams, the consecrated pastor, and his faithful band of workers at Efland.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Alleghany, Davidson Charge. — Brother Ridge preached a good sermon the fourth Sunday in June. We are always glad when the time comes for him to preach for us. He hits us hard sometimes, but the harder the better. It is for our good to preach the truth, let it hit whom it may.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Alleghany on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July at 2 o'clock.

Our protracted meeting begins the second Sunday in August. We ask the prayers of all Christians for the success of the meeting.

Preaching the second Sunday in July at 11 o'clock. ABIGAIL COGGIN.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Just a few notes to let you know of our progress:

Last Sunday was another red letter day in the Sunday school attendance, 253 present, eight more than the previous high mark, made the Sunday before. The average attendance for the month is the best in the history of the school.

Attendance at church services was good. At the night service we had five accessions, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Coble, Joseph, Rebecca and Mary Elenor Coble, coming to us by letter from Moriah church. We welcome them to our fellowship. This makes 19 additions to the membership so far this year, with the prospect of a number more before the close of the Conference year.

A number of improvements are in evidence: A Sunday school register board, donated by Brother J. A. Cox, adds materially to the interest in the report. It's good to see the fine increase in attendance over the previous Sunday, and over the report of a year ago. Another improvement is the Bulletin Board, the materials for which have been received. The carpenter-members are to meet tonight to make the frame. We expect to have one of the best, if not the best, bulletin boards in the city, and at a cost not exceeding $50. The money to pay for it was raised by the Christian Endeavor Society. Last Sunday money was raised for the purchase of 100 new song books, which we hope to have in use shortly.

Last Friday night the Junior Philathea class held its business meeting at the parsonage, and, after the business session, gave a shower to the president of the class, Mrs. Myrtle Cox Hewitt, a recent bride.

The new parsonage is coming nearer to being a reality. The plans and specifications have been drawn. Bids will be asked for next week, and the sound of the hammer will soon be heard. This is the kind of knocking we like to hear about the church.

This Thursday night a lawn party is to be held on the church grounds. We are looking forward to a fine get acquainted social.

Calvary Sunday school joined in a Daily Vacation Bible School with three other churches in South Greensboro, the Friends, Centenary M. E., and Westminster Presbyterian, the sessions being held in the latter. The school was very successful. The total enrollment was 334; average attendance, 224; Calvary enrollment, 57. The cost to each school was $9.98. We are hoping to put on a Vacation Bible School later on in the summer at Calvary so the children who could not go to the other sessions may have an opportunity to attend.

The Children's Day exercises held last Sunday week were very interesting. We had a fine attendance and a good offering: $32.00, which is $11.00 better than last year. Great credit is due those who got up the exercise.

All this sounds, and is, very encouraging. Our greatest difficulty now is our finances. Collections are slow, and the demands are as great and insistent as ever. But we are hoping, and working, for better days.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Circuit.—We are having a good Sunday school, though it could be better. There are some grown-up young people that are hard to get to Sunday school. They would be a power for good if they would launch out in the work. We are holding most all the children in reach of us, but we want the grown-ups, too, young people, too, for they are the ones, or should be the ones, for the younger generation to look to and expect instruction on the pathway of life.

We had a good Children's Day services, The children did well.

It was a pleasure that I esteem very highly to be with the good people of New Hope church on Why Not circuit recently. We love to be with God's people; we do not feel that we are among strangers with them.

Brother Pegg is filling all his appointments at our church and brings a good message every time and we like him and his good wife very much.

We are having our special meeting the first Sunday in July. Pray for us and come in person and be with us.

Yours for Christ,
F. J. L., Reporter.

Spring Church.—We have a very good Sunday school. Our attendance has increased for the last month. Each class has been asked to conduct Sunday school one Sunday. We are hoping that this will help our Sunday school. We are planning to have Children's Day the fourth Sunday morning in July.

Our pastor, Rev. A. D. Shelton, brings us splendid messages every preaching Sunday. At yesterday morning's service the Lord's Supper was observed.

Our special meeting is to begin the fourth Sunday in August. Pray that we may have a great revival.

Since the appointment has been changed at Lebanon church our pastor can be with us every Sunday in the Sunday school and prayer meetings. He is a great help in each.
VIRGINIA MASSEY.

Chatham Charge.—The third Sunday in June was the date of the Children's Day and Memorial Day services at Hickory Grove church. A splendid program was rendered by the children. The memorial sermon was preached by Rev. D. I. Garner at 2 p. m., and was heard by a large audience.

Memorial services will be held at Flint Ridge Sunday, June 24, at the morning hour. Mr. J. B. Turner, of Burlington, will have charge of the service, speaking at this time. At 2 p. m. Rev. H. L. Isley will preach. Every one is invited to attend. Revival services will begin here the fourth Sunday in July with Rev. W. M. Loy as pulpit help.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Hope church at Bonlee will give a general birthday supper at the Bonlee school Saturday, June 30, at 6 p. m. Let every one come and enjoy the celebration of his birthday. C. G. ISLEY.

Liberty, Davidson Charge.—It has been some time since we have made any report. Lots of things have happened, some good has been accomplished, and there have been some sad occurrences. The church lost one of its members a few months ago, Mr. W. M. Cranford. He has been greatly missed in the church and in the home. Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, preached for us on the third Sunday a real interesting sermon, as always. Our Sunday school reorganized some few Sundays ago; people seem to take right good interest, a very good attendance. Our township Sunday school convention will be held at New Hope church on the fourth Sunday. Preaching will be held at our church on every third Sunday; Sunday school at 2 p. m. Everybody is invited to attend.
ANNIE HILL.

Glen Raven.—Our revival meeting began the third Sunday in June with Rev. R. S. Troxler as pulpit help. He brought us some wonderful messages. The meeting closed last night (Sunday). Brother Troxler had to leave us Saturday morning on account of sickness at home. Pastor preached Sunday morning and Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the N. C. Conference, at night. We enjoyed these services very much. There were 16 reclamations and conversions. One joined the church. Others may join later.

Our nominees to next Annual Conference are Mr. G. G. Shaw, from Fairview, and Mr. P. E. Troxler, from here. REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—Attendance at Sunday school yesterday, June 24th, 335; offering, $34.66.

At 11 o'clock our pastor brought us a forceful message on "Individual Responsibility," and the congregation was good from attendance viewpoint. Children's Day service was observed at the evening hour. The program was interesting and enjoyed by those present. Seating space 'most taken at this time.

Offering was taken at the close of both the Sunday school and preaching services for the China famine relief. Our pastor made a strong appeal for these suffering people and it makes one shudder to think of the horrible condition that now prevails in the famine-stricken country.

Our Senior Christian Endeavor Society is making some progress with Miss Hall McPherson as president. We are hoping that the society will grow considerably during the summer.

The Vacation Church School is now open with a large attendance. Miss Mary Wills McCulloch, of Greensboro, is supervisor, with Miss Maxine Taylor, our young people's worker, assisting. This school promises to be a great help to the children and will run through July 6th.

On June 17th we were delighted to have as visitors in the congregation Mrs. S. W. Taylar and children. Also Mrs. E. J. Garrett and daughter, Miss Cynthia, who have arrived to spend the summer in this community.

Mr. L. L. Wilson, who has been very sick for some time, has gone to Oteen Hospital at Asheville, N. C., for treatment and we pray that he will be benefited by this treatment.

The N. C. Branch of Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary Societies of First M. P. church held its regular monthly meeting in the Hut Monday evening, June 18th, at 8 o'clock. The Clyde Auman circle was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. O. L. Smith opened the meeting with scripture reading and prayer, followed with good readings by Mesdames B. M. Fowler, Fred G. Holt, and G. W. Bennett. Misses Carleen Crutchfield and Tula Paul then sang a beautiful duet.

Reports from all the circles were heard in regular order. Each report was very good. The circles made pledges for the coming year's work, and some of the groups have already raised one-fourth of their quota for the year.

The president, Mrs. C. C. Durham, offered her resignation owing to bad health and Mrs. L. W. Gerringer (our pastor's wife) was elected to the office made vacant by Mrs. Durham, and Mrs. O. L. Smith was elected to the place of vice-president. Mrs. Dave DeMoss also resigned as secretary and Mrs. L. R. Pickard was honored by being elected to this office.

No other business to claim the attention of this body the meeting adjourned, after which refreshments were served, consisting of iced tea, pickles and sandwiches. The meeting was enjoyed by all.

L. A. BRAXTON, Ass't Reporter.

Bessemer City Church.—Yesterday, Sunday, June 24th, was a good day for us. We had a goodly number at C. E. meeting. We have several new members in our society and are glad to have them work with us in endeavoring to do something for the upbuilding of God's kingdom. Prayer meeting in several homes, also service each Wednesday evening at the church with extra good attendance.

So far, 34 members have been received in the church this year, some of them young folks. May God's richest blessings rest on each one and may we as professed followers of Christ Jesus strive in every way to hold them up.

Our revival meeting closed Sunday night, June 24th, with Brother Hendry, from Concord, as pulpit help. We enjoyed his discourses very much and were glad to have his good wife and little daughter with us at the closing service Sunday night. We feel strengthened by Brother Hendry coming and his earnest endeavors to bring the messages to us from time to time.

We had 200 in Sunday school Sunday before last. We have a hustling school and are proud of it. Brother Francis Lutz is superintendent and he does not fail to see that everything is in working order. He is overseer in one of our mills here in the spinning department and he knows how to get in behind us and boss in Sunday school, too.

Pray for us. May God bless each one as He sees best, is the earnest prayer of one who is trying to do something for the Master. Praise and honor and glory be unto Him who giveth every good and perfect gift. As the poet said:

"Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Stilling achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

LUCY BLANTON, Reporter.

Concord.—Sunday was a great day in our Sunday school and church services. It was Children's Day. Goals set for the day were: An offering of $200.00 and an attendance in S. S. of 400. The offering amounted to $208, and there were 376 in S. S.

Rev. R. M. Andrews, D. D., was present in the S. S. and made a splendid talk to the Young People's Class, of which D. A. McLaurin is teacher. Dr. Andrews also preached at the morning hour. We were delighted to have Dr. Andrews and listen to his inspiring messages.

At night the Children's Day service was held.

We are beginning the second week of our Daily Vacation Bible School. We have about 160 enrolled, notwithstanding the fact that one other school has just closed and two others are in session in our city now. Miss Mary Wills McCulloch, of Greensboro, very ably assisted us last week, but had to leave on Friday, owing to a previous engagement she had with our Burlington church.

On next Sunday a Children's baptismal service, the reception of several new members and Holy Communion service will be held at the 11 o'clock hour.

Several of our members are sick. Mr. L. C. Little, Mrs. S. C. Denny, and Mrs. Vera Bost are among the worst sufferers.

Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence Little, Mrs. H. C. Little, mother of Mr. Little, and children left last week for Louisiana and Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Litaker are spending several weeks at Lake Waccamaw.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Piney Grove.—Last Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock the Piney Grove Sunday school gave a very interesting Children's Day exercise. The church was about filled to its seating capacity. Mrs. Joe Delk, daughter of Rev. J. B. Trogdon, is due the thanks of the church for her faithful leadership in getting up the exercise. We appreciate the presence of the many visitors. E. A. BINGHAM.

Enfield.—Since my last report our community has been saddened by the death of Mr. Frank White. Although Mr. White was a member of Eden church, he attended our church and was a member of our Sunday school. The church and Sunday school will miss him as well as the town and county. May God's great love comfort each member of the famiy which sustains such a great loss.

Rev. J. Clyde Auman has been preaching splendid sermons and is seeking to build up the church in many lines. We did not have services Sunday evening on account of the revival at the Banner warehouse.

On Friday evening, June 15th, from about 6 to 8 o'clock the Senior C. E. had a fish fry out at the lake. Plans were made for entertaining 50 guests; however, there was not quite that number present. The C. E. and those visiting are indebted to Mr. Claude Kimbal and Mr. Theodore Harrison for the delicious fish, coffee and bread. They are certainly experts in the art of cooking those things mentioned. This was a very enjoyable affair. The truck load which Mr. E. I. Bellamy took enjoyed the hay ride as much as the feast after getting out there.

The Ladies' Aid met Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the home of Mrs. McGwigan. The assisting hostesses were Misses Elizabeth and Ruby McGwigan and Miss Ruth Bellamy. The meeting was presided over by our very efficient president, Mrs. R. C. Rives. Miss Ruth Bellamy conducted the devotional, reading the 61st Psalm and all prayed together the Lord's Prayer.

Many visits to see the sick were reported; some had made as many as 15 visits. The sick mentioned were Mrs. Reuben Jorden, Mrs. Frank White, Mrs. J. R. Powers, Mrs. Egbert Barnhill and Miss Nina Wallace. We hope each of these will soon be well again. The committee to keep flowers at church was Mrs. Cecille Matthews, Mrs. Immitt Marshall and Mrs. E. I. Bellamy. They reported that flowers were kept at church each Sunday in June. The flower committee for July is Mrs. Sam Pierson, Mrs. McGwigan, and Mrs. Walter Moon. The visiting committee is Mrs. P. S. Bellamy, Mrs. R. C. Rives and Mrs. J. R. Locke.

Many items of business were taken up and passed on. It was decided to take up the study of some good book on missions and have this reported on as a part of the devotional period each meeting. Rev. J. Clyde Auman and Mrs. George Parker were appointed to give a history of Children's Home next meeting. It was decided that the secretary write notes of condolence to Mrs. Frank White and family and to Mrs. Reuben Jordan. Plans were made for serving the Kiwanis Club during July. Another supply of "Skidoo" has come. The committee for disposing of this is Mrs. Hubert Whitaker, Mrs. Jimmie Neville and Mrs. Loyd Matthews. Arrangements were made for cleaning the "hut." Since last meeting an oil cook stove has been placed in the parsonage.

The hostesses for next time are Mrs. W. L. Fleming, Miss Selma Fleming and Miss Gladys White. Due to Mrs. Fleming being out of town this group exchanged times with Mrs. McGwigan and her group. The meeting was closed with prayer by Pastor Auman.

The hostesses served cake and cream which was enjoyed very much by all present.

REPORTER.

High Point.—Last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock service Dr. Spahr delivered a very practical and timely discourse on the subject, "The Old Paths," basing this sermon on the text as contained in Jeremiah 6:16, "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein." Dr. Spahr said that modern Americans, like the Israelites, have wandered from the old paths, and have become a covetous people; they are accused of loving to make money, and to hold it for their own gratification and pleasure. The man who has been given the talent for amassing wealth owes much to God and His service. Then like the Jews we are an idolatrous people, and God will punish us for our idolatry. There is an idea abroad today that it makes no difference what a man believes, but this is wrong. There is safety in the old paths of doctrine and of practice. In modern times there is a breaking down of the sacredness of home and family life. There is a feeling in the heart of every father and mother which deplores this state. Then there is a breaking down of authority over the children in the home, which endangers the very foundations of our civilization. A young Jew, who had become the leader and outstanding member of his class in college, upon being asked the secret of his success, replied that there was nothing strange about it, that he had always hearkened to the advice of his parents. Dr. Spahr entreated his hearers to get back into the old path of the family altar, which is being sadly neglected today. In the first years of his ministry it was the custom when the minister made a call on a family of his flock, the old Bible was brought out, and he held a prayer service with all the family present. It is greatly deplored that this beautiful old custom has fallen into disuse, and we like to think that it is not so much the fault of the people as the result of changed conditions under which the modern American family must live. Just before Dr. Spahr's sermon the lovely old favorite, "Face to Face," was beautifully sung by young C. L. Gray, Jr.

The evening message was delivered by Prof. J. D. Hardy, of High Point College.

The Junior Mission Circle, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, superintendent, met Monday morning at 9 o'clock just before the Vacation Bible School opened.

Children's Day was fittingly observed by the Sabbath school last Sunday morning at 10 o'clock with appropriate exercises in the assembly room. There was a good attendance and a good collection.

We are glad to announce that Mr. Ernest L. Auman, who has been quite ill with grippe, is improving.

The closing exercises of the Vacation Bible School, which has been conducted so successfully for the past three weeks by the associate pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, and his group of faithful teachers and helpers, will be held Wednesday evening, at which time an entertaining program will be rendered. There will also be a display of handwork made by the boys and girls.

We are peased to know that the young sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gray, Alson and Joe, who have been afflicted with mumps, have recovered and are able to be out again.

Judge Lewis E. Teague and Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Pickens, Jr., went to Chapel Hill last Sunday to attend the funeral services of Mrs. Robert S. MacRae, mother of ex-Judge Don C. MacRae, a prominent attorney of High Point.

Pleasant Grove Brotherhood.—Saturday evening, June 23, the Brotherhood met in the home of Bro. J. E. Veach. The meeting was well attended by the members. We all look forward to the time of our meeting when we can work together for the betterment of our church and community. Although we have not been organized so long, we feel sure a great good has been accomplished.

We had with us for a visitor Bro. Ivey Rothruck. We are always glad to have all the visitors with us we can.

After our meeting delightful refreshments were served by Mrs. Veach, Mrs. G. L. Hilton and Mrs. Ivey Rothruck.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—A good day yesterday. A good quarterly conference. G. M. Foster elected delegate to annual conference. Miss McIntire slightly better. Waco Miller still in hospital.

REPORTER.

Spencer.—Our special meeting closed on Friday evening, June 22. Rev. G. W. Andrew assisted us in the meeting and every one who heard him was very greatly pleased with his well-prepared and inspiring messages. We are sorry that some of our members were unable to attend on account of sickness and for that reason our congregations were smaller than they would otherwise have been; however, it was encouraging to see that our attendance increased as the meeting progress and we had the largest congregation on the last night of the meeting we had at all.

Due to the fact that few unsaved people attended, we are not able to report a large number of confessions nor any great outward manifestation of good done, but we feel highly repaid for all our efforts by the two boys who confessed Christ and united with the church, the young man who was reclaimed, and the fact that our members were lifted to higher planes of Christian living. We are also glad to have Bro. R. L. Small unite with us. He comes to us from Friendship church, Haw River Charge. Mrs. Small and their daughter, Miss Margaret, joined us last year.

T. GLENN MADISON, Pastor.

Harmony, Yarborough Charge.—The Woman's Missionary Society met last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Balentine. After business was over, a pleasant social hour was spent and refreshments were served.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely. The attendance is increasing but is not yet what we would like for it to be.

Our pastor, Rev. W. B. Surratt, was with us yesterday. There were not very many present last night, due to weather conditions, but nevertheless our pastor gave us one of his best sermons, on "The Value of the Soul." Every one enjoys Bro. Surratt's sermons and are glad to say that he does not merely read as he would an essay, as so many do nowadays.

THE PERIL OF FOUNTAIN PENS

A sage, in leisured olden day,
Removed his ink two yards away;
And thus, whene'er he charged his pen,
He walked six feet—and back again.

But now—no meditative quill—
A three-day reservoir we fill,
And race our too-convenient ink
With not a pause to rest and think.

Back to your quills, ye author folk,
When next the muses you invoke,
And set your ink, with prudent guile,
At least the distance of a mile.

—Amos R. Wells.

—Less meat and more fresh, crisp vegetables and fruit, together with milk, eggs and cheese, should be served during the hot summer months.

MARRIED

Auman-Bingham

A pretty but simple wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Bingham when their daughter, Lyde, became the bride of Euclid Wills Auman, of Seagrove. Rev. J. Clyde Auman, brother of the groom, assisted by Rev. E. A. Bingham, performed the ceremony.

Prior to the ceremony, Mrs. Joseph R. Wham sang "Because" by O'Hartlot. She was accompanied by Miss Jewel Hughes, of Randleman.

At the first strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin the flower girls entered in pairs. They were Hazel Wright, Myrle Johnson, Miriam Wham, Gertrude Bingham, Josephine Hill and Marcella Wright. Next came little Mary Ella Beecher, daintily dressed as a fairy, carrying the ring in the heart of a white rose.

The bride entered with the groom. She carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

The wedding music was rendered by Miss Jewel Hughes. "To a Wild Rose" by McDowell was played during the ceremony, and Mendelssohn's wedding march as a recessional.

Mr. and Mrs. Auman left immediatey for a motor trip through western North Carolina. They will be at home after June 25 at Seagrove.

Mrs. Auman has been teaching in the Denton high school. She is a graduate of Elon College and a member of Denton M. P. church.

Mr. Auman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Auman, of Seagrove, is also a graduate of Elon College. He is principal of Mary Stewart School, near Dunn.

PROGRESS OF WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE

Following the conferring of degrees came some very interesting announcements by President Ward. The first was that commencement will be held hereafter on Monday instead of on Tuesday. Then it was announced that next year those of the freshmen and sophomores who wish will be permitted to leave college immediately after examinations, and their rooms occupied by visiting alumni and former students.

Two bequests were announced, one of $10,000.00 by Miss Grace Lee, of Baltimore, as an endowment for scholarship to help worthy students, and one by Mrs. Harriett Brooks Jones, a former student of W. M. C., in memory of her husband, Dr. H. C. Jones, of Johns Hopkins University, of $15,000.00 for scholarships in chemistry and in physics.

A new building for the dining hall and biological department will be built this summer, with, it is hoped, two new dormitories, one for men and one for women soon thereafter.

Dr. Ward then announced the beginning of a ten years' campaign for the raising of four million dollars, and displayed the new plans for the W. M. C. to be, with an appeal to friends everywhere to put into their hearts and to write into their wills, the remembrance of this great objective.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Kirkman

The home of Mr. Edward Kirkman was made intensely sad when death entered on May 2nd at 6:30 p. m. and claimed his own precious wife, Pearl Ethel. She leaves a husband, father, three sisters and three brothers to mourn her loss.

We can't ese why one just in the prime of life is taken away, but "sometime we'll understand."

To know Mrs. Kirkman was to love her, for she always met her friends with a loving smile and a cheerful greeting.

She professed in the faith of Jesus Christ at the age of 12 and then joined the Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church. From that time on until death she was a true and loyal Christian, a faithful member to her Sunday school and church.

Just as God conveyed her sweet spirit away, and as we stood by and saw the pulsing heart cease beating, her eyes close to the things of this world, we knew they were in only a second to be open in heaven.

Her kindly manner and sympathizing spirit many times were an inspiration to many of us to live better and more noble lives.

It was seldom that the writer was in her presence without going away feeling encouraged to live closer to God. She often spoke of heaven and what a great day that will be when we all get there. She always was delighted in speaking of our Savior and of the great blessings He had given and of what joy there will be for us in His mansion if we only live for Him while we are here on this earth.

We feel assured that Pearl is there with Him and enjoying "Heaven's Blessings."

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

White

Mr. W. Frank White, of Enfield, N. C., a member of the Methodist Protestant church at Eden, on Halifax charge, departed this life on Sunday morning, June 17.

Mr. White had been in ill health for a few weeks, but none of us realized that the end was so near until he had passed into eternity. He had been a member of Eden church for many years, having united with this church soon after he came to Halifax County. He had held different offices in his church. For some time he was steward and would often pay liberally to help bring up the budget after he had paid his part. He told his family before taking his departure that he was ready to go.

In the passing of Mr. White the church has lost one of its best members, the town of Enfield hast lost a good citizen and business man, and the board of education of Halifax County has lost one of its long time, faithful members, and the family has lost a good father and husband.

He leaves to mourn their loss his wife and the following children: Mrs. R. A. Jourdan, F. R. White, of Enfield, N. C., Mrs. Annie White Parks, of Richmond, Va., Franklin, Miss Gladys and Waverly White, of Enfield, N. C., and one brother, Columbus White, of Asheville, N. C.

The funeral services were conducted in the home by the writer in the presence of a large congregation on Tuesday, June 19, after which he was laid to rest in the cemetery in Enfield with Masonic honors by the lodge of Enfield, of which he was a member.

The large crowd and the many beautiful floral designs attest the high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him.

His kind words and pleasant smile will be missed, but let us take due warning and prepare to meet him in the kingdom above.

C. L. SPENCER.

Hackett

Joseph A. Hackett was born October 18, 1854, and passed from this life June 4, 1928. Brother Hackett was twice married. His first marriage was to Nancy R. Hanner, and to this union two sons were born, W. E. and A. B. Hackett, who still survive. On December 11, 1913, he was married the second time to Miss Isabella Hardin, who cared for him so tenderly and lovingly during his last illness.

Brother Hackett was a loyal member of Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church, having joined when a young man. As long as health permitted he was active in the work of the church, serving as steward for a number of years. In time of trouble or need he was always ready to lend a helping hand. He has now gone to enjoy the good things that God has in store for those who serve Him.

The writer conducted the funeral at Tabernacle, June 6, in the presence of a crowded house of sorrowing friends and loved ones. His body was laid to rest in Tabernacle cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Payne

Mrs. J. C. Payne (Fannie Jane Holt) born in Alamance County, North Carolina, June 30, 1856, departed this life June 22, 1928. The remains were laid to rest at Cedar Cliff church Sunday afternoon, June 24.

About 53 years ago she was united in marriage to John C. Payne, who survives. To this union were born ten children, seven of whom are now living, namely: Mrs. W. H. Gilliam, Saxapahaw, N. C.; Mrs. A. A. Clarke, Greensboro, N. C.; John D. Payne, Graham, N. C.; H. C. Payne and W. L. Payne, R. F. D. 1, Graham, N. C.; Mrs. B. C. Rogers and Edgar C. Payne, Burlington, N. C. She is also survived by 19 grandchildren, nine great-grandchildren and four brothers, as follows: Sterling R. Holt and Edward Holt, Indianapolis, Ind.; Isaac Holt and Charlie Holt, Graham, N. C., and a great host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss.

Rev. D. V. Pike, assisted by Rev. D. R. Williams, conducted a brief service in the home at Graham. Rev. J. A. Burgess, Alamance M. P. circuit, conducted the sevrice at Cedar Cliff church. He was assisted by Revs. D. V. Pike, Graham Friends church, D. R. Williams, Graham M. P. church, and J. Elwood Carroll, Mt. Hermon M. P. circuit. A large company gathered to pay their respects to the deceased. The service was held in the church yard so the gathering could be accommodated. The body was interred in Cedar Cliff cemetery.

In early youth Mrs. Payne was converted and joined Mt. Hermon church, later moving her membership to Cedar Cliff church where it remained until her death, except for an interval when she removed it to Burlington where she was then living. She was always deeply interested in all things spiritual, and often spoke of going home to be with her Saviour. Her prayer and thought in her latter days were for her children and friends that they all might be saved.

Lewis

John Stanback Lewis was born in Montgomery County, N. C., September 12, 1869, and fell asleep in Christ June 19, 1928. He was educated in the public schools of his county and at Chapel Hill. While a comparatively young man he was elected clerk of the Superior Court of Montgomery County, which office he held for four years. On March 19, 1894, he was united in marriage to Miss Lula Spencer, daughter of the late Addison Spencer and Mrs. Spencer, of Randolph County. Brother Lewis first united with the Presbyterian church at Troy, N. C., but later moved his membership to the Asheboro Methodist Protestant church where his membership remained until he was called home. In 1899 he moved to Mississippi where he engaged in the turpentine industry, later moving to Alabama. In 1906 he returned to Asheboro where he became identified in a large way with the business interests of the town and county. He organized the First National Bank of Asheboro and was its president until during his last illness, when he resigned because of his health. As a business man and adviser he will be greatly missed. It is said that a great many men had sought his advice on business propositions and also a great many men had been assisted in getting started in business by him. As a church member and Christian gentleman he will be greatly missed. He was devoted to his church and was very regular in attendance. Even though he had been in failing health for two or three years, yet he kept right on going to church, usually attending both morning and evening. During the revival services in the church the last of April he was taken ill in the church on Tuesday evening of the second week of the meeting and had to leave before the service started. This was the ast time he was off the premises of his home. He was seriously ill for weeks, yet he bore it all with resignation. His last night on earth was the best that he had had during his illness until about five o'clock in the morning when he was suddenly relieved of his suffering and called to his reward.

Brother Lewis was a man of large resources and in his last days he did not forget his church. In his will he left $1,000 to help pay off the remaining indebtedness of the Asheboro M. P. church. He also left $500 to High Point College and $500 to the M. P. Children's Home.

The funeral was held in the Asheboro M. P. church on June 20, at 3 o'clock, and was conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. H. F. Fogleman, L. W. Gerringer and S. W. Taylor, and burial was in the city cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, by one son, Lacy; one daughter, Mrs. N. M. Harrison; two brothers, W. P. Lewis, of Mobile, Ala., and David Lewis, of Texas; one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Batton, of Candor, and three grandchildren, Lacy Lewis, Jr., John Stanback Lewis, and Nathanael Macon Harrison, Jr.

MRS. E. F. ALLMAN.

—A most distressing accident occurred near Tabernacle church last Saturday morning. Bro. Roscoe Causey was coming to Greensboro in his car, which collided with that driven by Mr. Claud Hanner, containing himself and family. Mrs. Hanner and one daughter were so badly hurt that they died and another child was seriously hurt, though there is now hope of its recovery. It is reported that Mr. Hanner looked back to speak to some of his children and unwittingly allowed his car to swerve to the wrong side of the road. Mr. Causey, seeing that a collision was inevitable, turned to the left to avoid it. At the same instant Mr. Hanner probably turned to the right. There was not time enough for a second turn, and the result was a well-nigh head-on collision. In addition to the personal injuries, both cars were badly damaged. Mr. Causey if of course much distressed, but he is doing what he can to help Mr. Hanner bear the terrible blow that has come to him. The funeral of the daughter, Viola, was held on Sunday afternoon and that of Mrs. Hanner on Monday afternoon at Tabernacle church, attended by an immense throng of friends and neighbors.

The Two Ways of Education and Evangelism

We have in the world both educators and evangelists. And we have both by divine appointment. Neither class of workers can make the other class unnecessary. Neither should despise or underrate the work of the other. Neither class should undertake to get along without the help of the other. The two classes of workers are mutually dependent. Each will be more successful in conjunction with the other than apart from the other. The two works of education and evangelization are not identical but they are closely allied. They have a common purpose, the perfection of the individual subjected to them. Both are meant to bring into realization a purpose of God—the production of a perfect manhood. In the beginning man is far from what God would have him become. In this becoming, this progress toward perfection, both the teacher and the evangelist are God's agents. Both are doing a work of God.

And not only do the educator and the evangelist have a common purpose, they have also in large measure a common method. Both make impressions on mind through environment. That is the only way of approach and impression. The culture of souls is like the culture of plants. We have no way of making plants grow. We cannot directly affect the vital processes. All we can do is to provide a favorable environment. For the plants we provide a suitable soil, sufficient warmth and moisture. That is all we can do. If the plants have life in them, when these conditions are met they will grow. Both the educator and the evangelist are limited to the environment of a human being in exerting influence upon the growth of that human being in mind and soul.

The work of the evangelist differs from the work of the teacher mainly in the material employed. The teacher employs the environment of the natural world, the great aggregation of educating materials that God has spread out before us in the world about us. Here all the natural sciences have their domain. Here the mind is started upon the wonderful number processes recognized in mathematics. The human mind itself as it becomes active is an environment to itself, and becomes the ground of the sciences of the inner realm, psychology, logic, philosophy. It is the work of the educator to bring to the attention of the pupil in proper order the impressions of the world by which God seeks to develop the powers of mind. How infinitely much is involved in all this! The work of the true teacher can scarcely be magnified beyond its real proportions. It is a great thing to lead a mind through the University of God in such a way that he will develop in appreciation of what the Creator has provided for his eyes to see and his ears to hear and his mind to comprehend and his soul to feel.

Yet, great and important as is the effect of the teacher's work, it is not sufficient. There is still a great lack. The teacher has been ministering to the receptivity of the pupil. There is needed some one to come along and minister to his activity. This is the work of the evangelist. The pupil must be made an actor of the highest order. His will must be directed. But the evangelist no more than the teacher has direct access to the will. He must rely upon environment. How can he change the pupil's environment? What can he present to the pupil's view that he did not see before? The teacher had God's universe at his back to help him make his impression. The evangelist has at his back something more wonderful than the wonderful material universe. He has the Wonderful Life and the Wonderful Death: he has the marvelous story of the Perfect Man and His Marvelous Self-Sacrifice. This story has proved itself the power of God to stir men to the most energetic and the most beneficent living. It has made many philanthropitsts out of men who would have been idlers or evil-doers.

Both the teacher and the evangelist have offices of inestimable importance. The greatest being in the world is man and the greatest question concerning man is, What will he become? The work of teachers and evangelists cannot be postponed. Character is setting and hardening. It needs to be rightly formed quickly.

"An Honest Effort"

The Houston convention adopted a plank in favor of an honest effort to enforce prohibition. If people do not question the honesty, they will have some doubts as to the keenness of the intelligence of a body that selects a wet candidate to enforce a dry law. Possibly they presumed that the candidate would have respect for the dry plank and dry himself up. If so, he set them right on that point by his speech of acceptance. He acknowledges that he is wet and declares that he expects to stay wet. He puts it up to the voters to decide what they should do about it. Voters who realize the importance of the issue will think twice before they decide to vote for a man so morally stunted that he does not appreciate the importance of opposing the liquor traffic with the strong arm of the law. Let all the people make an honest effort to keep the liquor traffic under and finally exterminate it. The defeat of a candidate is a small matter. The defeat of a great moral issue is a very serious matter. Let not the people be deceived by office-hungry politicians.

Prohibition to Suit

Al Smith presumes that he could frame and suggest to the people of the country a better prohibition amendment than the one the people have adopted. From the hints he has given, the law he has in mind seems to be of the adjustible order, made to suit varying conditions. For communities of heavy drinkers the law might read: "Thou shalt not drink over a barrel a day." For communities of moderate drinkers the law might read: "Thou shalt not drink over a gallon a day." For communities of total abstainers the law might read: "Thou shalt not drink a drop." Very accommodating law, isn't it?

SUMMER CONFERENCE TIDINGS

The time for the Summer Conference is rapidly approaching. Two more weeks and we are to be there. The program that follows has been prepared with the hope that it might prove to be one that will be very practical and of interest to our pastors and others. We hope it will prove to be of such interest to our laymen that it will be seen to that the expense of pastor will be provided for by the laymen. The college management is making expenses just as small as possible, $1.25 per day and 50 cents per meal. This is indeed reasonable. Any charge could well afford to raise that much to give their pastor a chance to attend this conference. There will be an additional $1.00 for platform fee.

The president wishes to thank all who have been asked to take part in the program for their splendid response. Only one has failed to accept the part assigned and that was because the brother had another engagement. It seems to me that it is unfortunate that any of our pastors would have an engagement to keep them away from the Summer Conference, but possibly this could not at times be helped. Then it is possible that some one made an engagement before the time of the conference was announced. This announcement should have been made sooner. Here the president takes his share of the blame.

There has been some misunderstanding about who are officers of the Summer Conference and for the benefit of whoever might be concerned the following is taken from the minutes of the secretary as recorded during the business session of last conference when officers were elected: President, George L. Curry; first vice-president, R. C. Stubbins; second vice-president, B. M. Williams; secretary, J. L. Trollinger; treasurer, H. L. Isley; librarian, W. H. Loy.

It is very important that we all be present on Monday night for the first joint services. Vesper at 6:45, conducted by Rev. T. M. Johnson, D.D., and the sermon by President Taylor at 8 o'clock. President Taylor has been asked to take this first address for two reasons. We think he will be equal to the occasion and it has been thought wise to give this opening part to our president.

It is important that all who are to be present on Monday night notify President Andrews so that he may know how many to prepare for. It is very undesirable and many times inconvenient and expensive to attempt to prepare for the comfort of a number of people and not know how many to prepare for. Drop Dr. Andrews a card and tell him you are to be for dinner on Monday evening.

Don't forget to take your own bed linen, towels, comb, brush, etc., for your own room. The college does not furnish these articles and there might not be some one there to share with you or to loan to the one who forgot. Go prepared.

The program follows:

HIGH POINT COLLEGE ITEMS

Summer school has been progressing nicely with a registration much larger than we had expected. We are now in the fifth week of it.

Registrations for next year are coming in nicely and if all come who are signifying their intention to come, we will have more than we registered last year.

Educational Rally

You will observe in the program of the Pastor's Conference and the Young People's Conference that Wednesday, July 18, has been set apart as the day when the interests of High Point College will be stressed. The program is to have as many of the Sunday schools as possibly can to picnic at the college on that date. Mr. Charles F. Finch, of Thomasville, has kindly offered to serve ice-cold lemonade to all who come. I think it would be a fine thing to make him dig deep down in his jeans to pay this bill, don't you? Let's do it!

At 2 o'clock Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, will speak on some phase of education, and his address will be preceded by speeches by some prominent laymen in this vicinity.

We sincerely hope that all the friends of High Point College who are close enough to be with us that day shall join us in having a good time.

R. M. ANDREWS, President.

THE NEXT STEP

The General Conference has adjourned and by this time the constituency of the Methodist Protestant church is acquainted with the legislation passed. General Conference action touching those matters of a closer formation of our denominational agencies is of the greatest interest. Whatever our individual judgment concerning the legislation passed we all accept what was done as final and now give ourselves to making effective and efficient the working organizations of our denomination. One Board of Christian Education, one great church paper, one Board of Missions, seem to indicate a growing spirit of unity and a truer spirit of co-operation.

Our particular interest just now is in the bringing together of the four missionary units. The meeting of the new Board of Missions, consisting of ten women and ten men, held recently in the city of Pittsburgh, was characterized by a fine spirit of harmony and an evident determination to make effective this new plan of missionary supervision. Nothing is to be lost, all the old values are to be conserved, and the impotrance of each unit of missionary service is to be emphasized. The whole purpose of this new organization is to increase the spirit of co-operation and unity and to get a true perspective of the whole missionary task.

The next step in this program of missionary co-operation is the bringing together of the units in Annual Conferences and local churches. The Board of Missions in its meeting in Pittsburgh passed a resolution calling upon the branches of the W. H. M. S. and the W. F. M. S. in the several Annual Conferences to unite into one branch of missions before January 1, 1929. This action of the board has been accepted in good faith and already this union has been brought about in the Onondaga and the Indiana conferences, and marked progress toward this end has been made in the Pittsburgh and Maryland conferences. There is every reason to believe that this desirable union will be brought about at an early date in all our conferences. The local auxiliaries are requested also to unite as soon as this can be done without prejudice to any interest.

A committee consisting of the women members of the Board of Missions has prepared a model constitution for Annual Conference branches and for local auxiliaries which will be given publicity after the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions in Baltimore July 17.

GEORGE H. MILLER,
President of the Board of Missions.

IS IT NOTHING TO YOU?

Is it nothing to you who build God's shrines
And array them with golden glow,
That millions are dying without the light
Because we have failed to know?

Is it nothing to you who have the keys
To the kingdom of light and love,
That the door is bolted and all is dark
And the Savior pleads above?

Is it nothing to you, since faith and hope
Have mantled your earthly way,
That others are kept in the darkest night
And you have the blaze of day?

Is it nothing to you that the Bible stays
A precious but sealed-up book,
And you with the light of the Father's face
Could brighten the darkest nook?

BELIEF IN GOD

An incident is related of an eminent astronomer which shows how men, in the name of reason, are guilty often of the most irrational conduct. The great scientist had a friend who strenuously denied the existence and power of God. The astronomer had with much care constructed a concave in miniature, upon which he represented all the planets and stars in their places, together with their evolutions and courses. One day this friend came to see him, and noticing the ingenious piece of work, asked, "Who made that?"

"Who made it?" repeated the astronomer. "Why, nobody; it came by chance."

"Nonsense!" said his friend. "Really, who made it?"

"Nobody," came the reply again. "It came by chance, I tell you."

"Don't be absurd," was now the response, in irritation. "Someone must have made it. Why don't you tell me who it was?"

Then the astronomer, turning to his friend, said: "This poor miniature which I have made to represent what God has created in the universe, you say cannot have arisen from an irresponsible cause; and yet you tell me that the wonderful and mighty works around and above us are a mere fortuitous combination of atoms. How do you explain your inconsistency?"—Bishop Fiske, in The Faith By Which We Live (Morehouse).

OUR STORY PAGE

BIRDS OF A FEATHER

In the family records, her name appeared as Mildred Joan, but her family and friends had clipped the name to Millie Joe, and usually she was the sunniest little lady who could be found in a long day's journey.

Millie Joe helped her mother in many, many ways to take care of her baby brother Bobbie, and Bobbie would coo with delight and creep after her whenever she played with him.

But this morning, Bobbie found himself almost unnoticed, and he couldn't imagine what was the trouble with this wonderful sister of his. Even when he whimpered a little, she paid no attention.

To tell the truth, Millie Joe had got out on the wrong side of the bed in the morning, and that is quite a serious thing to do. She had eaten too much cake for her supper the evening before, and when she awoke her head did not feel clear, nor was she fresh and rested. She got up slowly instead of in her usual happy mood.

Millie Joe's mother used to tell her that there were two sides to the bed—a smiling side and a frowning side. So you see this morning she did get out on the wrong side, and her frown deepened when she saw that it was sprinkling outside. This meant that she would have to stay indoors.

Millie Joe ate her breakfast almost in silence, and it was a good breakfast too. Bobbie kept watching his sister, and after a while the happy smile faded from his pink and white face, and he looked almost grieved about something.

After breakfast Millie Joe wandered into the kitchen. Nora gave her a cheerful "Good morning," but Millie Joe didn't answer.

"Dear me," muttered Nora, half to herself, "there's a crosspatch around here this morning," and Nora frowned.

Millie Joe went back to the living room and threw herself into a chair. Suddenly she heard something making a moaning sound, as if in pain. She listened and then got up and looked into the next room. There was no one there except Bobbie, who promptly came creeping after her.

There wasn't any one else in sight, but standing very close together just outside the window on the branch of a tree were two birds. They looked like pigeons only they were a lighter color—a soft, grayish shade, and when they bobbed their heads or moved a bit, she could see lovely, jewel-like shades of a rich, peacock blue, and maroon and green.

As she watched them, she discovered that they were responsible for the mourning sounds she had heard, for they kept on making those little signals of distress. Millie Joe wished they would stop and sing a nice song of some kind. It would be much more cheerful.

Just then Millie Joe's mother came into the living room with her sewing basket and sat down to do some mending.

"What are those queer birds, Mummy?" she asked. "They look like pigeons only they are a different color, and they make such a queer noise. Where do you suppose they came from, and will they stay here?"

"My! My! My!" laughed Mrs. Bryant, "what a lot of questions! Those birds belong to the pigeon family but they are known as doves. Some doves are pure white, and others are white or cream-colored with a few black feathers. But this kind of a dove is always dressed in very sober gray, with perhaps a few brighter feathers in its plumage.

"They make this cooing or very mournful noise, and so they are called 'mourning doves.' Sometimes they are described as 'turtle doves.' People do not like to have them around, for while they are pretty enough, that mournful sound as of someone in trouble is annoying to most people. 'Handsome is as handsome does.'

"Lots of folks drive them away and do not allow them to build nests so that they will not keep up that dismal sound, especially in the early morning. Perhaps the mourning doves may have been able to sing a cheerful song once, but one thing is certain, they have kept up this doleful noise so long that it has become a habit with them. Notice that the birds on the branch are fat and well-fed-looking, yet to hear them you would think they were in great trouble.

"There are some people like that who have plenty to be thankful for, but they forget those things and pick out the unpleasant ones and keep on talking about them, and dwelling on them until no one wants to have such unpleasant company, and folks keep as far away from them as they can."

Millie Joe looked around quickly. Nora passed through the room with a broom and duster, but instead of some jolly little remark, she did not look at Millie Joe at all, and even her mother had subsided into silence and was saying nothing more.

Millie Joe thought about this for several minutes. There was one question her mother had not answered, so she repeated it.

"What do you suppose they came here for?" she asked again.

"Course I can't be sure," returned Mrs. Bryant, "but if they have been driven away from somewhere else, they may have been looking for a place to live, and you know, birds of a feather, or of the same kind or disposition, are said to flock together. It is possible that they saw a dismal-faced little girl looking out of a window and thought they would feel at home in her company, or near her. But really I think the mourning doves are mistaken, for usually that little girl is happy and sunny, and climbs out of bed in the morning on the right or smiling side.

"I know your Daddy would not like to have the mourning doves stay here. He would much prefer birds which awaken us with beautiful songs and which act as though they were enjoying life. Cheerfulness is catching.

"It has stopped sprinkling, dear, and if you like, you may go out to play."

Millie Joe was off like a flash, for she hadn't even noticed that the sun was coming out. She went out into the yard. The doves let her come quite near to them, and then with a scolding sound they flew down to the ground and began to walk about, bobbing their heads as they walked, eyeing Millie Joe suspiciously, and still acting as if each one had a pain.

Millie Joe flirted the short skirt of her full little dress at them.

"Go way," she said, "and learn to get out of the right side of your nest in the morning."

Perhaps it was just a happen-so, but the birds fluttered along near the ground and cocked their heads at Millie Joe, and then they lifted their wings and flew across the road where they disappeared behind a hedge.

Millie Joe laughed.

"I believe they understood what I said," she exclaimed, "and I hope they don't come back."

Just then a canary, swaying on a rose bush, burst into a golden melody, and Millie Joe smiled.

"I'm going in," she said softly to herself, "and say something nice to Nora, and give Mummy a kiss, and ask her if I can bring Bobbie out here in his cart."

That night supper was a more cheerful affair than breakfast had been, and as Millie Joe took her dish of strawberries from her father's hand, she said:

"Daddy, I'm only going to eat one little piece of cake tonight, so I'll be sure and get out of bed on the right side tomorrow morning, for it's lots nicer when I feel good and everybody's happy."

"Of course it is," agreed her father, although he didn't know anything about the visitors Millie Joe had had in the morning.

CHARITY

There are many kinds of charity as well as many different ways to give. Gifts can be harmful as well as helpful; actuated by selfishness as well as by generosity. Ofttimes a donation is made because the donor knows that his action will be given a large amount of publicity, and a good deal of pleasure obtained from the fact that many people will look upon him as generous, charitable, and unselfish. Thus hospitals are founded, schools endowed, with the stipulation that they be named after the person contributing the money. Too often when the making of a gift is considered it is from the standpoint of "how much good will I get out of it" rather than how much benefit will it be. Of course, money given in this way is beneficial, but how much more laudable if the spirit of unselfishness and generosity were present. What a wonderful state when one can enjoy giving because he sees others made happy and not because his conscience dictates that it shall be done, or that a certain amount of publicity and material gain is to be derived from the act.

Then, too, it is not necessary, as is sometimes thought, to have financial means in order to be charitable. The best gift is often just a little brotherly and personal interest—a word of advice and encouragement, a smile or a slap on the back. In many cases where a man has gotten into the rough of life's course and considers himself to be out of the game, the knowledge that someone has confidence in his ability, is taking a personal interest and backing him for a winner, renews his confidence in himself and he starts down the fairway with renewed ambition, whereas an impersonal donation of money, while it might help, may further deprive him of his feeling of independence and confidence. A personal visit to the sick helps much more than a bunch of flowers; a word of cheer from a friend is often the most efficacious medicine.

In the modern-day rush for wealth and material gain the meaning of the word "brother" is fast being forgotten. The tendency is to become a group of mechanical beings, devoid of all but selfish thoughts, striving for wealth and display. One might well pause a moment and remember that, after all, life is short; it is better to have one's memory perpetuated by friends and kind deeds than by hoarded treasures. Along this line it has been said:

> The thing that in this life is most worthwhile,
> That costs the least and counts the most,
> Is just a friendly smile.

MOTHERS WITH LITTLE SONS

O mothers with little sons
And burning hearts to teach,
You are the chosen ones—
Give hearing, I beseech!
The world is a ghastly place
Since war has slain our men;
But yours is the gift
And yours the grace
To bring love back again.

Mothers, I beg you, heed
What hate's dark hand has done;
How the hearts of people bleed
Till peace and right are won.
How the maimed and halt and blind
And the dread ones hidden away
Are a challenge to all mankind
To fashion a better way.

Mothers with little sons,
As you hold them to your breast,
Teach them to hate the guns,
That love and faith are best.
Show how the tyrant War
Destroys but does not win;
How the goals men battle for
Are lost with the world's sin.

Strip from the monster's frame
His glittering robe of lies,
Show him in all his shame
To your children's visioning eyes.
Show how the lust of kill
Is the jungle's law of might,
And shells dropped down on a helpless town
Are murder in God's sight.

O mothers with little sons
Who stand with lifted faces,
All of earth's helpless ones
Cry from the lonely places.
And the dead men plead their cause,
And the crippled men implore:
"Go, fashion the future's laws
That war shall be no more."

For war is a knave's design,
And a coward's brutal scheme,
And men whose courage is divine
Shall foster a nobler dream.
O mothers with little sons,
The years lie in your hands.
You are the chosen ones,
Men wait for your commands.
Not till your lips declare:
"Our sons no more shall fight!"
Shall the crimson soil be fair
And the ravaged earth be right.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

July 15—The Conversion of Saul

Scripture Basis—Acts 9:1-19; 22:6-16; I Cor. 15:8.

Golden Text—Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. I Tim. 1:15.

Misdirected Zeal

One of the closing thoughts in the exposition of last Sunday's lesson was that Saul was zealously and conscientiously persecuting the Christians. The first verse of the lesson this week reveals the persistence with which he strove to apprehend Christ's followers. "Breathing out threatenings and slaughter" reminds us of pictures we have seen of fabled dragons, out of whose nostrils came hot vapor and fire. Furthermore, he obtained search warrants from the high priest, who gladly gave them, granting him the privilege of bringing the Christians bound to Jerusalem for punishment. What an abundance of misdirected zeal this man possessed! And so today some of the opponents to moral uplift, to law and order, to organized Christianity—though not all by any means—have had their zeal misdirected by agencies of the devil against the plans and purposes of an omniscient and righteous God.

Phenomenal Experience

"Man proposes and God disposes" often when he sees a good man "going wrong." On his way to Damascus, Saul was stricken with a supernal light, above the brightness of the noon-day sun, which suddenly arrested in his journey. He became prostrate. More than this, a voice called unto him saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" It was different from the voices of the men who journeyed with him. It was a clear, appealing, convicting voice. It sounded like unto the voice of Stephen as he was being stoned, when he lovingly called upon the Lord to forgive his persecutors. In his consternation he asked, "Who art thou, Lord?" and the answer came, "I am Jesus." His conviction was complete; Jesus had spoken to him. Then came in natural sequence the submissive question, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" This is what every new-born soul asks after he has come to himself and experienced the Lord speaking to his sinful heart.

Three-Day Blindness

Jesus did not change Saul's plans to go to Damascus, but He changed his purposes, and he went a different man. The light like unto a lightning flash out of a clear sky had struck him with blindness, and when he arose from the road he found that he was deprived of his sight. This condition continued three days, during which time he fasted. What do you suppose Saul thought about during this trying period? Did not his past transgressions loom up before him in bold relief? Did he not wonder what his old companions-in-persecutions would say and do when they learned of his conversion? Did he not plan great things for his new Lord and Master as he had planned great things against Him? Was it not during these memorable three days that he came to know Jesus personally as never before? Ah, we can only imagine the sacred experiences that were his at this juncture of his life.

Ananias' Special Service

Little is known of Ananias. "In late tradition he is placed in the list of the seventy disciples of Jesus, and represented as bishop of Damascus, and having died a martyr's death." Paul (Saul) speaks of him as "a devout man according to the law, having a good report of all the Jews which dwelt there." (Acts 22:12.) Many men, women and children are mentioned in the Bible only once or twice—just enough to record a good deed done. What a privilege it was to Ananias to be used of his Lord to restore sight to a new disciple of the Lord Jesus and introduce him into the circle of disciples there! He was fearful at first, because Saul's reputation had spread, but when God said, "Behold, he prayeth," Ananias need have no further fears. He did the Lord's bidding, to the blessing of his own as well as the soul of Saul.

Saul's Great Commission

Ananias was informed that Saul was to be a chosen vessel of God to bear His name before Gentiles, rulers and Jews, and was to suffer much for the sake of the Christ whom he once persecuted. No doubt the pious disciple communicated this message to Saul. Was he ready to retract? Not at all; it only fired him with new zeal, and he was glad to suffer shame and persecution with the rest of the apostles. As we proceed with the study of this great apostle and martyr of our Lord Jesus Christ, we shall see how his commission was actually carried out.

Agents and pastors, there are only two more weeks. I am counting on you to boost this campaign and put it across in fine shape. I believe that you will do it. We can do it. So let's make an intensive drive and reach our goal.

In the information leaflets sent out a few days ago something was said about an age limit and this seems to have caused confusion. I am very sorry that this has happened and trust that no one will stay away from the school because they do not feel free to attend. Certain courses are offered to those who are under 18 years of age and there are courses offered to those who have passed their 18th birthday. So there are courses for every one and no one need stay away because an age limit has been mentioned. The Standard Courses are offered to those above 18 years of age and one above this age may take these courses.

Pastors, will you please urge your people to attend this school? To get them to do this is well worth your effort and time. I ask your earnest co-operation in this matter and I do not believe that you will fail me.

Will every member of the church pray for this school? Pray for the success of the school. Pray that it may be a mountain top experience. Pray that those who attend may be drawn nearer to Him and better fitted for Kingdom service. Pray that His name may be glorified and that His Kingdom may be advanced in and through it all.

Send your fees to and get your information from Fred W. Paschall, Box 311, Asheville, N. C.

Ted—Apples are very high at the grocery stores.

Ned—Yes, because they are scarce in the wholesale market.

Ted—But I read that the crop was enormous—that heavy laden trees were left untouched in the orchards.

Ned—Yes, with such a big crop it doesn't pay to pick them.

Smart-Aleck—How many legs has a dog, calling the tail a leg?

Sweet Innocence—Five.

Smart-Aleck—No, four. Calling the tail a leg doesn't make it one.

Twelve charges remit this week, with High Point First church leading in amount. None of the charges reported are new. There are still 40 charges with no A. C. B. credits, and 13 with no credits on any budget. During the past ten days we have been under the necessity of sending out emergency calls to all pastors, and to several laymen, and surely there will not be a charge, when the reports are in next week, that is not in the paying list. We MUST put these budgets on the main line NOW, and insist that every pastor see that his charge is on the paying roll.

State Street, as usual, is in the forefront of "paid in full" charges. They go out on the A. C. B. this week, and according to our records, they lack but little in having the G. C. B. paid in full. They have been out on the college assessment for some time—in fact, long enough to pay it again. "May their tribe increase."

Now, brethren, both ministry and laity, I know your problems, and I know that what we are asking you to do is not an easy task. But you are not looking for easy tasks; those with less faith and zeal and courage do that. Our task is difficult, but our God is great, and we can do all things through the strength that He gives.

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

LEGEND OF ST. CHRISTOPHER

The following legend of St. Christopher will show why this saint has been chosen patron of automobiles and of travelers in general:

St. Christopher, who was of huge proportions and immense strength, went about seeking the greatest king and willing to obey no other. After serving various masters, whom in turn he deserted because each recognized by some sign or word one greater than himself, he heard by chance of Christ the king of heaven and earth, and asked a holy hermit where Christ might be found and how he could serve Him.

The hermit told him he must fast and pray; but the giant replied that if he fasted he would lose his strength and that he did not know how to pray. Then the hermit told him to take up his abode on the banks of a mountain torrent where travelers were often drowned in crossing and to rescue any that might be in peril.

The giant obeyed. He took his station by the river's side and saved many lives.

One night he heard the voice of a child crying in the darkness and saying, "Come and bear me over the river."

The giant went out and found the child sitting alone on the bank of the stream and taking him upon his shoulders he waded into the water. Then the wind began to roar and the waves to rise higher and higher about him, and his little burden which at first seemed so light, grew heavier and heavier as he advanced and bent his huge shoulders down and put his life in peril; so when he reached the shore he said, "Who art thou, O child, that hast weighed upon me with a weight as if I had borne the whole world upon my shoulders?"

The little child answered, "Thou hast borne the whole world upon thy shoulders and him that created it. I am Christ whom thou by deeds of charity would serve. Henceforth thou shalt be called Christopher, which means Christ Bearer."—Mrs. P. McCafferty, Samuels, Ky., in Pathfinder.

OUR FRIEND—THE FOE

There are said to be two sides to every question. The No-Tobacco League is composed of people who are of the conviction that the Lord did not make tobacco for human beings to smoke and chew habitually.

If we are mistaken and unreasonable in our contention, we want to find it out and quit. We do not wish to spend our time, energy and means in an unrighteous cause. We are ready to hear "the other side"—if there be such a thing. If we are wrong, we should cease making "a pestiferous nuisance" of ourselves.

So we have sent a courteous open letter to "The Trade" engaged in manufacturing and selling tobacco, requesting them to furnish a speaker for our annual convention. We want him to tell us why they believe our nation should spend more than three and one-half billion dollars annually to support the traffic in tobacco.

As yet, we have not been notified as to whom the tobacco folks will choose as their representative on our program. But whoever he may be, it will be worth coming to Winona just to hear what such a representative will say in defense of tobacco using. Such a speech will be interesting, to say the least.

NO-TOBACCO LEAGUE CONVENTION

The No-Tobacco League of America will hold its Annual Convention at Winona Lake, Indiana, August 27 and 28. Churches and welfare organizations are invited to send delegates. A hearty welcome will be given to all who are interested in the solution of this vital problem. A special invitation has been extended to the tobacconists to send a representative to present their side of the case. This will be an interesting address.

The fiscal year just closing has been the best in the history of the league. A large part of this is credited to the publicity given by the press. Religious and welfare periodicals have been particularly sympathetic. They have given generously of their space in reporting the work of the league from time to time.

The union of the No-Tobacco Army with the league during the past year was an encouraging achievement. Other such unions are in prospect. Widespread distribution of literature has been another outstanding feature of the year's work.

Any one desiring further information will obtain it by writing the General Secretary, Charles M. Filmore, 820 Occidental Building, Indianapolis, Indiana.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Piney Grove, Denton Charge.—Sunday afternoon was very pleasant to us, as we gave our Children's Day program, which was enjoyed by all, I think. The children did fine for the practice they had.

We were glad to have Pastor Bingham in our home, and to give us a fine talk on the training of the children just after the program which was very helpful, as his talks usually are. Sorry Mrs. Bingham was kept at home, her little daughter having the mumps.

We were glad to have so many of our friends with us Sunday. Come again.

Mrs. Whit Wood, who has been with her mother-in-law the past week sick, is improving and expects to return home soon. Very glad to see Rev.. Mr. and Mrs Robert Short in the community this week visiting their daughter, Mrs. Whit Wood, at J. B. Delk's. We learned to love them when he was our pastor and we still like to see them come our way. Come again. REPORTER.

Canaan, Denton Charge.—We are having a nice Sunday school, but not as good as we hope to have. We are hoping to have better attendance.

Brother Bingham preached a fine sermon Sunday morning.

We were very glad indeed to have Bro. Allman and children from High Point. Woud be glad to have them come again any time.

Pray for our meeting which will start the third Sunday in August.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
REPORTER.

Knob Creek, Fallston Circuit.—We have been having an interesting Sunday school with a very good attendance. We have curtained off our class rooms which helps a great deal in holding the attention of the classes. We have also furnished our pulpit with chairs and a rug.

Sunday was our regular preaching day. Bro. Morgan delivered his sermon as usual in a very forceful way.

We had a very small congregation Sunday but we are hoping by next fourth Sunday to have a larger congregation. Bro. Morgan always has something in store for us. So come and let us worship together. There is but one way—by way of Jesus and the cross. Let us all march together towards that city whose builder and maker is God.

With best wishes to the Herald and all of its readers. REPORTER.

Forsyth Charge.—Our young people are planning to attend the Training School at High Point College, and a large number of our Sunday school folks are expecting to attend the "big picnic" there on the 18th of July.

This charge is doing very well spiritually, we hope, but some of the churches are not up to date financially. Hickory Ridge must be given credit for keeping at the front.

The revival at Maple Springs has been held. Dr. T. M. Johnson was our evangelist and did excellent work. The people enjoyed his fine sermons. We enjoyed having Dr. Johnson's daughter, Mary Ward, come with him.

Many useful gifts have come to us from our own people and from those of other denominations. We cannot mention all the givers, for we might overlook someone. Some of the latest gifts for the parsonage are: A specially made walnut telephone table, from Miss Lula Cox of the Moravian church; a linoleum rug from "a friend;" a first payment of $35 toward installing a water system in parsonage from Mr. R. M. Cox; a nice refrigerator from Miss Daisy Cox, and excellent kitchen cabinet from Miss Flora Kiger. While the above mentioned gifts are not for the present pastor alone, we deeply appreciate the thoughtful and unselfish spirit manifested and are glad that we have those who can understand and appreciate such needs. It goes a long way toward helping a pastor and wife do a better work.

We are still trying to do an extensive work on this five-church charge, but are hoping for better arrangements in the near future when we shall be able to do a more intensive work.

Mrs. Jennie Hunter has lately been given a big birthday party by relatives and friends. She is 91 years of age and one of our most loyal and faithful members at Maple Springs. She reads her church paper and is keenly interested in the whole church.

Another of our members, Mr. Ira W. Baity, was recently elected to attend a National Bankers' Convention in Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. R. M. Cox has again been nominated representative of this district to help make the laws of our state.

It is worth stating that the above honored men are just as much interested in the church as they are in business and State. Too many, when blessed by material wealth or honored by position, forget the church that opened the door of their opportunity.

We have recently lost one of our best members at Oak Grove church, Mr. Lewis M. Brown. An obituary will appear later.

I must close, for "Layman" may score me for being too lengthy. I'm not afraid much, though, for I figured after him and found the articles by lay writers averaged a little longer than those of the cloth. But there's no kick—we like it. By the way, we once heard one of the state's best lawyers criticize a minister for "spouting a 45-minute sermon." We went to the courthouse next week and heard the same good lawyer repeat a speech to a congregation of 12 tired men for two hours and a half by a slow watch. He won his case and I congratulated him.

Hoping to meet you at the Training School and Summer Conference, I am,
R. C. STUBBINS.

Asheboro.—Sunday school is moving along very nicely and the attendance is good for this time of the year, as this is the season people want to take their vacations and this cuts our attendance to some extent.

It is a little late, but perhaps not too late to mention that we had three to graduate from the Asheboro High School this spring; they are Miss Pauline Styres and Messrs. Joseph Ross, Jr., and Elmer Calicott.

A splendid Children's Day program was given at the 11 o'clock hour and the children did their parts fine and were so happy because they had a part in the program. Miss Kate Bulla had charge of getting up this program and we feel she has done a good piece of work. A large congregation was present to hear these young boys and girls render their pieces.

Another thing we are very proud of, and that is the beautiful new windows placed in the auditorium of the church by the Ladies' Aid Society. The windows are made of opal antique glass with various shades and combination of coolrs and give a very pleasing effect.

The Philathea class held a business meeting and social at the home of Mrs. Mac Ridge with Mrs. Ridge and Mrs. G. P. Pritchard joint hostesses. Officers were elected for the next year. This is one of the busiest classes in our Sunday school and we are proud of it.

Last Wednesday evening the third quarterly conference was held and Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the N. C. Conference, was present. Several items of business were transacted. Mr. James C. Bunch was declared as delegate to Annual Conference.

Next Sunday is known as New-Comers' Day at our church and we hope to have a large number of people present, including the people who have recently moved to our city and have not lined up with any church.

Chestnut Ridge, the fourth Sunday in September and through the fifth Sunday; Rev. G. F. Millaway to help.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Tabernacle Charge.—Children's Day services were held at Tabernacle and Julian last Sunday. The children rendered their parts well, the offerings were good and everybody seemed happy. Bros. Trogdon and Hanner, superintendents at Tabernacle and Julian, and their splendid helpers deserve much credit for arranging such interesting programs. We were pleased to have a number of visitors present from Greensboro at both Julian and Tabernacle.

Miss Elizabeth Hanner, of Julian, recently gave us a very interesting account of her trip to the Young People's Conference at Baltimore, giving a synopsis of the principal addresses.

Our hearts go out in sympathy to Brother Claud Hanner in the loss of his wife and little girl. May the Lord comfort him.

The pastor of this charge is grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Jones for some fine peaches.

High Point.—The Vacation Church School, which has been in session for nearly three weeks, closed last Wednesday evening with interesting exercises, which were attended by a large number of parents and friends of the children. The little tots in the Beginners' Department gave a dramatization of the story of Moses, the children of the Primary Department dramatized the story of Joseph in a charming manner, while the older children of the Junior Department sang a number of pleasing songs, recited Bible verses, gave the names of books of the Bible, and many other interesting features which showed careful and painstaking training. There was on display in one of the Primary rooms in the basement a number of articles of handiwork made by the children, including several dresses and useful articles for the children of the Home. An interesting feature was the announcement that the prize given by Mrs. E. M. Brower of the city for the best dressed doll was won by little Miss Sue Everhart, with honorable mention going to Miss Mary Agnes Crooks. Much praise and appreciation are due to Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard and their faithful band of teachers and assistants for their efficient work in this vacation school, which is the second one conducted by our church. It was indeed a labor of love and unselfish service.

The Missionary Circles met Monday afternoon at the following homes: Circle No. 1, with the chairman, Mrs. L. J. Diffee; at this meeting 13 members were present and after the conclusion of business delightful refreshments were served and the hostess invited us into her beautiful flower-garden, where there is a wonderful display of gorgeous hollyhocks, larkspur, phlox, sweet peas, and a great variety of other summer flowers; Circle No. 2, Mrs. J. H. Walker, chairman, met with Mrs. S. P. Montgomery on Steele street with ten members in attendance, while Circle No. 3, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, chairman, held its meeting in the home of Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., on North Main street with an attendance of nine.

The Home Society has raised the sum of its quota for High Point College loan fund for students, which amounts to $56.00.

Dr. P. E. Lindley will continue his helpful and interesting course in teacher-training on Wednesday evening.

On Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service Dr. Spahr delivered a strong sermon on "Comparative Values." Eight ladies sang "A Vision of Angels" in a very charming manner—Mesdames Andrews, Hinshaw, Allred, Walker, Whitesell, Rankin, and Miss Elizabeth Welch, and Mrs. Clarence Schultheiss. At the evening service Dr. Percy E. Lindley delivered the sermon.

Miss Mary Lyndon has gone to Lynchburg, Va., to visit friends.

Mrs. John S. Pickett left last week for Trenton, N. J., for a visit to her mother, Mrs. R. B. Sams.

Miss Lucille Pickens left Sunday evening for Baltimore, Md., where she will be the guest of Mrs. May Mason Dixon and other friends for a few days. From there she will go to New York to take a course in Library Science in Columbia University, and will be away from the city until September 1. In her absence Miss Martha Kendrick, of Beaumont, Texas, will be in charge of the City Library.

The session of Young People's Summer Conference will convene at High Point College Saturday, July 14, to continue one week.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. J. H. Everhart had a very painful accident last week. She fell down some steps in her home and two toes were broken. We trust that she will soon recover, and be able to get out again.

News has been received by relatives here of the safe arrival in Havre, France, of Miss Vera Idol, who is touring Europe. She will also attend summer school at Oxford University, England.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Circuit.—Our pastor, Brother Ashburn, always brings us such helpful and inspiring messages that we look forward to his coming again with gladness.

Our Sunday school is doing good work and is growing in number. We are planning to have Children's Day the second Sunday in July; will have an all-day service. The public is cordially invited to come and enjoy the day with us.

The Ladies' Home Missionary Society met in June with Mrs. Clarence Gray with a very good attendance. The president of the society read an article about Pine Ridge work, which was very encouraging and was enjoyed by all present. We had three new members join our society: Mrs. Clarence Gray, Mrs. W. M. Petrows and Mrs. David Pleasant. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Gray served cake, and ice cream and lemonade. We are hoping our society may grow in interest and also in number.

MARTHA PARSONS.

Winston.—The Philathea Class of the First Methodist Protestant church held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening at the church with 16 members and two visitors present. Mrs. W. C. Tise conducted the devotionals, and last month's minutes were read and various business matters were discussed and new committees appointed.

During the social hour the members of the class having a birthday in this month were delightfully showered. A delicious ice course was served, which was enjoyed by all present.

Charlotte, First Church.—The Daily Vacation Bible School closed June 22 with a program of memory work and an exhibition of hand-work by the children. A good number of children attended and were very much interested in the work.

We are very grateful to Miss Mary Coe, of Greensboro, for the splendid work of assisting in teaching in the Daily Vacation Bible School while visiting her aunt, Mrs. Surratt.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Coe visited Mr. and Mrs. Surratt Sunday, June 24, and worshipped with us at the morning hour. Miss Mary accompanied them back to Greensboro.

On the night of June 10 Rev. S. W. Taylor was with us and preached a splendid sermon and commended the growth and work of the church.

The Sunday school will go on their annual picnic the Fourth of July. The contest which is on in the Sunday school is proving very interesting and will soon come to a close. It has greatly helped the attendance of all services, the highest number attending mid-week prayer service being 74.

We are expecting several of our young people to go to High Point to the Young People's Training School.

The Ladies' Aid Society met Monday with the president, Mrs. J. A. Pressley, at her new home on Thomas Avenue.

The W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. held a joint meeting the evening of June 26 at the home of Mrs. C. H. Daughtry.

A number of our members have been sick and some in hospitals. Most of them are very much improved. REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The attendance at Sunday school Sunday was very good. Each class is asked to have charge of the devotional service one Sunday. We hope to increase the interest in Sunday school by having a special program each Sunday. Last Sunday the little Misses Mary Glenn Lee and Evelyn Knight sang very impressively, "In the Garden."

We will have our Children's Day service next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. We hope to have a good program and a large offering.

We are busy now putting on the registration campaign for the Young People's Conference. Misses Sallie Wood and Kathleen Shearin are the agents for Hollister.

The June meeting of our Missionary Society met with Mrs. Tidwell. Our July meeting will be at the home of Mrs. W. A. Ellington. Hope to have all the members present.

Our third quarterly conference will convene at Hollister church on Friday, July 13, at 2 o'clock. All official members are urged to be present. REPORTER.

First Church, Burlington.—The Vacation Church School is going at full blast. One hundred and sixty-seven have enrolled. We will have our closing exercises next Friday evening at eight o'clock.

L. W. GERRINGER.

State Street.—Our special meeting began the first Sunday in June. Bro. Millaway came on Monday and did the preaching till the second Wednesday night, June 13. To say he did his work well is only saying what every one knows who knows Bro. Millaway and his work. I could not tell but what he preached with his old-time vigor and fire. We had more different people to attend the services than any heretofore held. The unsaved did not attend much. Most of those who came were reached. There were five additions to the church as a result of these efforts. Mrs. W. L. Oakley made the one hundredth member to be enrolled since the organization of the church here. Have lost some by removals to other places, but none have left us who live in Lexington and we have been blest in that we have lost none by death. With those who joined during the meeting we have enrolled 18 new members this year. We are hoping to receive more yet as a result of the meeting.

Our folks were highly pleased with Bro. Millaway's work. All our church work is going well. A. C. B., College Assessment, Gratitude Gift—overpaid and less than ten dollars to raies on G. C. B. and we will have met all our regular claims besides G. C. delegate's expenses. We had 143 of our regular Sunday school members present on a recent Sunday and at a special service some time ago the visitors present ran the number up to 181. All this is encouraging when we think of starting with the "Original Thirteen" just a little while ago.

We enjoy our services at Yadkin College once each month with that loyal little band. Pray for us. Sincerely,

N. G. BETHEA.

Grace Church.—The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society met Monday afternoon in the church parlor. The devotional service was led by Dr. S. K. Spahr, former pastor of Grace church. Mrs. Brown, of Reidsville spoke about the union of all Mission Boards. A short business meeting followed. The meeting was closed by a short prayer by Mrs. J. M. Stone.

The Senior C. E. Society has been having very progressive summer meetings. The meetings have been changed to Monday evening. A large crowd attends. The society is planning a picnic for Friday evening. The society will raise its quota for the convention to be held in Greensboro this August by presenting two short one-act plays. These will be given sometime in the near future. Ernest Scarborough, president of the society, has been ill with appendicitis, but he is now rapidly recovering from the effects of the operation. We miss him greatly in our meetings but his work is being carried on admirably by the vice-president, Miss Margaret Terrell.

Sunday afternoon the society went to the convict camp to present a program. Mr. Hollingsworth, co-pastor of the Church of the Covenant, spoke. Several hymns were sung in which the negro convicts joined with great zest.

The church mourns the death of Miss Pauline Haltom, who died Monday morning at St. Leo's hospital. She had been ill for over a year. For three months she had been in the hospital. She had been living here six years and was a member of this church. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock from the church. Dr. S. K. Spahr was in charge of the services. Interment was made in Green Hill cemetery. The pallbearers were Warren McCulloch, Dr. A. H. Johnston, J. R. Stout, W. A. Fox, I. L. Hiatt and H. A. Helms.

Surviving are two brothers, W. H. Haltom, of Greensboro, and Colon Haltom, of Charleston, S. C., and one sister, Miss Dorothy Haltom, also of Greensboro.

She was widely known and Grace church will feel the loss of one of its most beloved members.

Dean Lindley, of High Point College, filled the pulpit again Sunday, preaching a splendid sermon to a large audience, using as his subject, "Kingly Kindness."

Yarborough's Chapel.—Children's Day services were held Sunday evening. A large crowd enjoyed the program rendered so well by the children. The children were trained by Lizzie Belle Tossett, Mrs. Bobo, and Mrs. Surratt.

Due to the efforts of our former pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, we have completed painting our church and are planning further improvements soon.

The Christian Endeavor Society is planning an ice cream supper Saturday evening, the proceeds to go for equipment of the Sunday school rooms. REPORTER.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our Sunday school and preaching services are not attended as we would like for them to be, but we are thankful that we have a faithful few. Bro. Hall has filled all of his appointments. His sermons are very interesting and helpful to us all. The third quarterly conference will convene at Zoar on Saturday before the third Sunday in this month. Dinner will be served on the grounds. Hope all churches will be well represented and will have a good meeting.

Our revival meeting will begin the fifth Sunday in July. Mr. J. W. Hulin will be our pulpit help.

Was glad to have Mrs. Hall and children with us Sunday, wish for them to come again.

English Street.—We are having a good Sunday school, although it could be better. The young folks and children are faithful but it seems the grown-ups are hard to get to Sunday school. We feel if more of these would come with their children instead of sending them alone, lots more would be accomplished.

Last Sunday Rev. T. E. Pierce, pastor of the Welch church, and our pastor exchanged pulpits. It was a pleasure to hear him in his earnest way preach from the subject, "An evidence of our love towards God." Mr. Pierce says it's not material things but spiritual things that satisfy the human soul. We hope Mr. and Mrs. Pierce will come our way again.

Our pastor promised to give us seven sermons on the life of Moses and we who have already heard six of them have enjoyed his discourses very much. In a plain, simple way he has told many things connected with this wonderful old Bible character.

The Junior Philathea class held their business meeting Monday night at the home of their new teacher, Mrs. J. A. Lee. This class of girls are willing to work, and have planned some important things to do for the next month. After the business was over, all went out into the yard and played games for girls only. Then they were sent into the back yard where Mr. Lee served ice cream in the old-time way. Ice cream, innocent fun and plenty of work are good for young folks these summer nights.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. Milton Boswell, one of our faithful Sunday school teachers, is sick at her home on Adam Street. The entire Sunday school misses her presence each Sunday morning and we hope she will soon be in her place again.

The Christian Endeavor is coming along nicely, but the girls seem to be the only workers, and we wish some one would tell us how to get the young men interested in this kind of service. May God bless each one as He sees best. MRS. J. A. LEE.

Randleman Charge.—The loss in the passing of Bro. Dosier is keenly felt by his many friends and admirers. Being of a modest disposition, his value was not adequately appraised. His adherence to the "faith once delivered to the saints" projected him into a realm unreached by the masses. The immortal words of Gray suggest themselves as applying to Bro. Dosier:

"Many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

Our meeting at Worthville, with Bro. Suits as help, closed last Friday night. Interest and attendance were fairly good. Bro. Suits was at his best and was highly commended by all.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Worthville Saturday, July 14, at 2:30 p. m.

The Ladies' Aid placed in the parsonage recently furniture costing $145. An effort is being made to furnish the parsonage completely.

Two of our members are in the hospital: Miss Maria Briles, at High Point, and Mrs. Maude Vickory, at Greensboro. Both have received surgical treatment.

W. H. NEESE.

Greer's Chapel.—We, the little band of co-laborers, are still striving and doing everything that we can in order to make our church a larger and a more beneficial place to worship God.

Our Sunday school is growing larger and better every Sunday. As the Sunday school convention is nearing us, we think after this which will happen July 22, 1928, we will still have a better Sunday school if you good people will come and join with us that day. Everybody is cordially invited to come and worship with us.

The prayer services we have every Wednesday night are very good indeed; large crowds gather with us.

Rev. R. S. Troxler delivered a wonderful sermon Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, which was understood by a large crowd.

May the richest blessing come to us all.

REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge.—We are now having the prayer meeting at the church every Saturday night. We had a good service Saturday night.

Rev. E. A. Bingham filled his appointment Sunday at 2:30 and delivered a fine sermon. Our congregation was lots more than usual. Mr. and Mrs. Jenning Wood and three children, of Jerusalem, Mrs. Bynum Wright, of Thomasville, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Dick and two children, of near Piney Grove, worshiped with us at Cid Sunday. We are now practicing for a Children's Day on the fourth Sunday, when our special meeting begins; pray for us, brethren. We are very sorry we got defeated in getting Rev. C. E. Ridge to help in our meeting. We are very fond of reading the good reports in the Herald.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Short and three children, of Roberta, were pleasant visitors at N. W. Lanier's on last Monday afternoon.

REPORTER.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, preached a splendid sermon yesterday at 2:30 p. m. He stressed the thought of influence, that every one influenced some one else.

The special meeting here will embrace the first Sunday in August.

The Richland Township singing convention will hold its first singing here the fifth Sunday in July.

Our Sunday school seems to be improving. More middle-aged women are attending. We have organized a woman's Bible class, also a young men's class.

MRS. C. E. STEED.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Kirkman

The first rays of the morning sun, as they usher in a new day, bring gladness and inspiration, but the sun, sinking in the west at the close of the day, is the time that fills us with joyful reverence. The beauty and radiance of its rays are reflected upon the fleecy clouds that linger here and there upon the horizon and present to us a most glorious picture.

And so it is in the Christian's life—the beautiful thoughts, the good deeds, the clouds of sorrow and disappointments in life—all these blend together into the beautiful sunset of the Christian's earthly day.

We think this a fitting picture in the life of our friend and former neighbor, Pearl Reynolds Kirkman.

Yes, hers was a beautiful Christian life. Converted in early childhood, she joined Tabernacle M. P. church, in which church she remained a consistent member until God called her to Himself.

Pearl was never happier than when attending her church and Sunday school. Her life was one of quiet activity in the church and community, doing the things that her heart prompted her to do, considering this service not only a duty, but a blessed privilege.

We cannot understand why one who was so much needed in her home and in her church was taken thus early in life. The husband, the father, the sister sand the brothers, the church and community at large have lost her presence, but her influence still lives in the lives of those with whom she came in contact, and her life, though short here, has only begun anew in the life beyond, where she still lives, forming a connecting link from earth to heaven.

Her life should be, and is, an inspiration to us, and her influence will continue to live in the hearts of her loved ones who feel their loss most keenly.

"I cannot say, and I will not say
That she is dead. She is just away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since she lingers there.

"And you—oh, you—who the wildest yearn
For the old time stop and the glad return,
Think of her faring on as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here—
Think of her still as the same, I say,
She is not dead. She is just away."

BY ONE WHO KNEW HER.

Lowdermilk

Stephen Franklin Lowdermilk, son of the late Reuben and Nancy Jane Lowdermilk, was born in Randolph County, N. C., on March 18, 1866, and passed to his heavenly rest on June 17, 1928. The first 21 years of his life were spent in Randolph County, but at about the age of 21 he went to Texas and stayed for seven years. He then returned to North Carolina and spent the remainder of his life in Randolph County, the last 20 years being spent on his farm just outside the corporate limits of Asheboro. On September 11, 1897, he was united in marriage to Miss Emma Allen, who survives.

About 25 years ago Brother Lowdermilk made a profession of religion but did not unite with any church at that time; however, on October 2, 1921, during the pastorate of Rev. L. W. Gerringer, he united with the Asheboro Methodist Protestant church where he continued to be a faithful member the remainder of his days on earth. As a church member and Christian he was loyal and true. Even though he had been suffering with high blood pressure for the past year or two, yet he was regular in attendance at church, sometimes attending when perhaps it would have been better for him to have remained at home. As a citizen of his county he was a valuable one and was held in high esteem.

He was at church on Sunday morning, the day of his death, went home and spent the afternoon with his family, retired as usual and in a short while was taken violently ill and lived about 30 minutes. The funeral was held in the Asheboro Methodist Protestant church on Tuesday morning, June 19, at 10 o'clock, and was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. L. W. Gerringer. Burial was at Flag Springs M. P. church about eight miles from Asheboro. A good man is gone, one whom we loved but we sorrow not as those who have no hope.

He is survived by his widow, by four daughters, Iola, Nan, Esther and Lucile, and by three sons, Glendon, Talton and Idyl, and by one sister, Mrs. C. F. Smith, of Asheboro; two brothers, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, of Kernersville, and John Lowdermilk, of Phoenix, Ariz., and by one half-sister, Mrs. Maud Allred, of Cedar Falls, N. C.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Dixon

John Franklin, son of Robert and Dorcas Williams Dixon, was born January 2, 1842, near Flat Rock Methodist Protestant church, and passed on to his eternal home on March 22, 1928.

On December 26, 1866, he was united in marriage with Miss Lucinda E. Harrison, and to this union nine children were born. One son died when about one year old, and another son, C. H., died when about 27 years of age. Seven children, six sons and one daughter survive, and were present at the funeral. They are: J. M., of Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. A. G., of Liberty, N. C.; J. W., of Summerfield, N. C.; J. A., of Reidsville, N. C.; R. P., of Greensboro, N. C.; C. T., of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Mrs. A. O. McCollum, of Reidsville, N. C. He leaves, also, a sister, Mrs. Sallie Smothers, of Winston-Salem; five half-brothers, a half-sister, 26 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

On October 7, 1907, his devoted wife, who had been his constant companion for more than forty years, passed over the river.

On December 22, 1917, he was united in marriage with Mrs. Mattie Trent, of Reidsville, and they lived very happily to the day of his death.

In 1862 Brother Dixon enlisted in the war between the states under Captain Andrew J. Boyd, and for three years he remained in the service, during which time he was in twenty-three battles. He was loyal and brave, a patriot of the old school, and was honored by all who knew him.

But there was another phase of his life of which I desire to speak. In 1852 he enlisted in another army—the army of the Lord—and for about seventy-six years he followed the Captain of his salvation with undying zeal and with marked consistency. He was gloriously converted at Double Springs Camp Ground, and almost immediately united with Flat Rock Methodist Protestant church. At a later date he moved his church membership to Midway on the Haw River Circuit, where he was actively engaged in the work of the church for more than twenty-five years. He took great interest in the young people of the church and community, as was evidenced by the fact that he spent about twenty-five years of his eventful life superintending Sunday schools. Moving from the Midway community to Reidsville, he identified himself with the church here, and remained in its fellowship until he was called to the Church Triumphant.

Owing to the infirmities of old age, Brother Dixon was not permitted to attend church very often, and it worried him no little; but he never lost interest in the work of the Kingdom. Whenever his pastor visited him, which was often, he always asked about the local and general church work. He never failed to ask: "Have you heard from Arminius?" This query did not mean that he thought more of this son than he thought of his other children; but he knew that this boy was devoting all his time and energy and ability to the gospel ministry, and he was anxious to hear how he was succeeding. Just a day or two before he passed over the river he asked his pastor how the contributions for the Gratitude Gift were coming in, and added, "I hope the amount will be raised."

We may be pardoned, I hope, for referring to one incident in Brother Dixon's life that came to our attention a few months before he was taken down with his last sickness, an incident that ought to teach a very valuable lesson to the church members of this generation. One day he drove over to the parsonage, and with no little difficulty got out of his buggy and called for his pastor. After talking about the church and its mission in the world, he said: "I have come to pay my church assessment. I will give the money to you and you can hand it to the steward." He had put himself out of his way to meet his obligation to his church. He might have excused himself on the ground that he was not physically able to attend to the matter, or he might have asked to be relieved of the obligation on the ground that he was not able to spare the money. Either excuse would have been cheerfully accepted by his brethren; but he did not offer them. He never dreamed of doing such a thing. He wanted the joy that always comes to the man who makes some sacrifice for his Lord, and we are sure he received it. Would that every Methodist Protestant in North Carolina possessed the spirit of this grand old Christian soldier.

The funeral services were conducted in the church at Reidsville by his pastor, assisted by Dr. J. D. Williams and Rev. L. W. Gerringer, former pastors, and the body was buried in the cemetery at Midway church. A host of friends were present to express their sympathies to the bereaved family, and to show their love and appreciation for a good man.

HIS PASTOR.

Baskett

On June 23, 1928, our hearts were crushed and made sad when the death angel called to his heavenly home our beloved friend and brother, Walter P. Baskett.

Brother Baskett had gone fishing with a party of friends near Warrenton, N. C., and about 2:30 o'clock was drowned. All efforts were made to rescue him, but of no avail. Two more of the party came very near drowning in trying to save Walter. His death was learned with deep regret by a large number of relatives and friends and cast a gloom of sadness throughout the entire county.

Walter was near 27 years of age, born and reared in Vance County, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baskett. He had only been married about 11 months, and leaves to mourn their loss his wife and infant son, his mother, Mrs. Lucy Baskett, four brothers, James, Perry, Charlie, and Joe, and three sisters, Mrs. G. B. Harris, Mrs. H. B. Houghtaling, and Mrs. M. H. Matthews.

The funeral service was conducted from Spring Valley M. P. church, of which he was a member, also a trustee, with Rev. M. P. Chambliss in charge, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter, Rev. J. A. Boyd, and Rev. Mr. Wooddall. The service was attended by a large number of relatives and friends of the deceased and bereaved family. The floral designs sent as a last tribute of esteem by loving friends were beautiful and many.

As a husband he was good and true, a father kind and affectionate; as a neighbor he was always ready to lend a helping hand; as a citizen he was law-abiding and peace-making. A truer and more faithful one could not be found. Walter was loved and esteemed by all who knew him, black and white.

Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved, but this cannot heal the wound made by his death, but in Christ there is consolation. Through Him we look beyond the grave to that glorious resurrection morn when we shall rise from the grave and meet our loved ones to part no more.

'Twas sad to see a father leave
His child and wife so dear,
In confidence to him she went
With every wish or care.

A loving wife's heart is crushed,
Her mate no more is heard,
Death on him rushed and his voice hushed
Without one parting word.

While in the silent grave he lies,
Beneath the crumbling sod,
The angel with his spirit flies,
To bear it home to God.

Bright mansions fair He will prepare
For those who in Him trust,
And come again and take them there
To live among the just.

We'll praise the Lord for blessings given,
And grant His judgment just,
And hope to meet again in Heaven,
When dust returns to dust.

His brother,
C. B. BASKETT.

WINNING AND LOSING

Perhaps this may seem a quaint paradox,
That united with winning, losing is near,
Winning by losing, or losing to win.
From this, we shrink back with a fear.

Now why should I lose and what should I lose
In order that life may be gain?
Is it friends, or career, money or health,
And why should my spirit know pain?

He who would win his life must lose.
This truth is pronounced clear and strong,
As the wheat seeds lying buried bring forth
A bountiful harvest ere long.

The life that is spending and being spent
In service that others may live,
Like the buried grain, the reward is sure,
For he who would gain must give.

Winning and losing, how closely they stand,
So linked up with joy and pain.
And we cry, Oh why and oh why should we lose
In order that life may be gain?

To the one who is willing to give up self
And all that to self is most dear,
A fulness of life comes back with the years,
A faith, too, that casteth out fear.

Then give to me, Lord, the courage to lose,
In order that life may be gain.
Give to my soul the spirit to learn
The healing value of pain.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

What would you do if you were told
That you couldn't live to be very old?
What would you do? What would you say?
Would you live the same as you're living today?

Or would you change and listen to God,
And yield to His pleadings as onward you trod?
Would you give God your heart and say to Him then—
"O God, I have sinned against Thee and against men.

"Take now my life and use it each day,
To show other sinners who cross my way
The cure of that path that leads into the night,
And takes us afar from heaven's bright light?"

Oh! would you do that? I pray that you would.
But maybe you won't be warned so you could.
Maybe you will die suddenly as so many do.
What then do you think would become of you?

We never know when our time will come,
But oh! I pray God that I may be one
Who can say when God calls me, "It's all right, I'm ready to go, I've fought a good fight."

—The Eskimos believe in spirits inhabiting animals and inanimate objects, but their chief deity is an old woman who resides in the ocean and may cause storms or withhold seals and other marine animals if any of her taboos are infringed. Her power over these animals, says the U. S. Bureau of Ethnology, arises from the fact that they are sections of her fingers cut off by her father at the time when she first took up her abode in the sea. The chief duty of the shamans or medicine men is to find who has infringed the taboos and thus bring down the wrath of the supernatural beings and to compel the offender to make atonement by public confession. The central Eskimos suppose two spirits to reside in man's body, one of which stays with it when it dies and may temporarily enter the body of some child, who is then named after the departed, while the other spirit goes to one of several lands of souls. Some of the lands of souls lie above the earth's surface and some beneath it. The latter are generally more desirable, according to the Eskimo beliefs.

MARRIED

Bundy-York

A wedding of unusual interest and beauty was solemnized last Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York, on Montlieu Avenue, when their daughter, Miss Blanche York, and Mr. R. Mayne Bundy, of Jamestown, plighted their troth in the presence of a large number of relatives and close friends. The impressive ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, before an improvised altar of palms and ferns in the midst of which candelabras softly glowed. The house was beautifully and effectively decorated with summer flowers in profusion. Prior to the ceremony a program of delightful wedding music was rendered by Mrs. John C. Whitesell, contralto; Mrs. Walter Kester, violinist, and Miss Lucille Pickens, pianist. Mrs. Whitesell sang "Because" and "All for You," and Mrs. Kester played "At Dawning" on the violin. As Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus sounded, Miss Daisy Lee York, sister of the bride and maid of honor, entered. The groom entered next, and was attended by his best man, Mr. Joseph Ragsdale, of Leaksville-Spray, N. C. The bride was given in marriage by her father, who accompanied her to the altar. Miss Pickens played the wedding march by Mendelssohn as a recessional.

Immediately after the ceremony an informal reception was held.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York, of this city, and granddaughter of the late Rev. I. I. York. She attended Salem College and taught a few years. Since moving to High Point she has been the superintendent of the primary department of the First Church Sabbath school and has made a host of friends in the church and city. She is a splendid girl of winning personality and great charm of manner. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Bundy, of Jamestown, where he was born and reared, and is a young man of many sterling qualities and much promise. He holds a responsible position with the Adams-Millis Corporation of this city. After a honeymoon trip through the Shenandoah Valley to Washington, the young couple will make their home in High Point. The congratulations and good wishes of a large circle of relatives and friends are extended to this happy and highly esteemed young pair as they begin life's journey together.

Richmond-Brown

W. B. Richmond and Mary Brown were married by the writer at the bride's home in Efland, N. C., June 28th.

We wish for them much happiness through life.

Ellison-Coble

On June the 27th Mrs. Swannie Coble and Mr. Arthur Ellison were united in marriage. Mrs. Ellison is a member of Fair Grove M. P. church and for some time has been the efficient teacher of the Senior S. S. Class. In spite of her youthfulness, she has the distinction of having read the Bible through nine times and is the most conversant with Scripture of any lady we know.

Mr. Ellison is a prominent business man of Greensboro and is a young man of fine qualities.

Their many friends predict for them a happy volage over life's sea.

Gerringer-Bennett

A quiet marriage took place in the parsonage of the First Methodist Protestant church of Burlington on June 21 when Mr. Clarence W. Gerringer and Miss Mabel Bennett were united in matrimony by the pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer. Miss Mittie Jeffries, Miss Annie Bennett and Mr. R. L. Lovell accompanied the young couple and witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Gerringer is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bennett, of Burlington. She is a member of First church. Mr. Gerringer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gerringer, of Gibsonville. He is now employed in Wilson where they will make their home.

The good wishes of relatives and many friends go with these young people.

Dear child of God,
Be still and know
He walks with you
Where'er you go.

Dear child of God,
You need not fear;
His power to help
Is always near.

Dear child of God,
Know all is well,
Since in His love
You safely dwell.

Dear child of God,
Trust Him today;
If dark the path
He lights the way.

Dear child of God,
From worry cease;
He is right here,
Rest now in peace.

"A SOLITARY WAY"

There is a mystery in human hearts,
And though we be encircled by a host
Of those who love us well, and are beloved,
To every one of us, from time to time,
There comes a sense of utter loneliness.
Our dearest friend is "stranger" to our joy,
And cannot realize our bitterness.
"There is not one who really understands,
Not one to enter into all I feel;"
Such is the cry of each of us in turn,
We wander in a "solitry way,"
No matter what or where our lot may be;
Each heart, mysterious even to itself,
Must live its inner life in solitude.

And would you know the reason why this is?
It is because the Lord desires our love.
In every heart he wishes to be first.
He therefore keeps the secret key Himself,
To open all its chambers, and to bless
With perfect sympathy and holy peace,
Each solitary soul which comes to Him.
The voice of Jesus saying, "Come to Me;"
And every time we are "not understood,"
It is a call to us to come again;
For Christ alone can satisfy the soul,
And those who walk with Him from day to day
Can never have a "solitary way."

And when beneath some heavy cross you faint,
And say, "I cannot bear this load alone,"
You say the truth. Christ made it purposely
So heavy that you must return to Him.
The bitter grief, which "no one understands,"
Conveys a secret message from the King,
Entreating you to come to Him again.
The Man of Sorrows understands it well,
In all points tempted He can feel with you.
You cannot come too often, or too near,
The Son of God is infinite in grace.
His presence satisfies the longing soul,
And those who walk with Him from day to day
Can never have a "solitary way."

LAUGHTER AND SUNLIGHT *

Fill up your life with sunlight,
Put tears and dark shadows to flight,
Radiate love, joy and sweetness,
Make every day cheerful and bright.

Fill up your life with laughter,
Banish all fear-thought and gloom,
Spread golden gleams of gladness,
Like a candle brought into a room.

Your life full of laughter and sunlight,
And speech full of wisdom and praise,
Will scatter a message of freedom,
Make this the happiest of days.

GOLDEN RULE SUNDAY

General James G. Harbord presided at a meeting of the American section of the International Golden Rule Committee, at the Bankers' Club in New York City on June 27th, at which time plans were made for the observance of Golden Rule Sunday on December 2, this date being selected in conjunction with the international committee, which will hold its annual meeting in Geneva.

Charles V. Vickrey, secretary of the internationa committee, reported that Golden Rule Sunday was observed last year by probably a million people representing 50 different countries, and that in the two months following that observance the offerings made for the underprivileged children of Bible lands amounted to $820,591. Strong endorsements of the movement were read from friends who could not be present, including Governors Dan Moody of Teas, Austin Peay of Tennessee, and Victor Donahey of Ohio, and from ex-Governor Lowden of Illinois and ex-Governor Allen of Kansas. A message from President Coolidge states: "I hope the voluntary observance of Golden Rule Sunday may become increasingly prevalent in America and throughout the world. Its practical help is the best expression of friendship."

Stephen's Influence Over Paul

Saul's contact with Stephen was such as to leave an indelible impression on the mind of the young man. He heard Stephen's speech of defense before the Sanhedrin, he witnessed Stephen's extraordinary demeanor in the hands of his slayers. It is supposed that Luke, author of the Acts, received through Paul an account of Stephen's trial, including a report of his lengthy speech. Paul, being a student of the Scriptures, would listen with critical interest to what Stephen had to say about Jewish history and Jewish prospects. Stephen's mind was more advanced than his own in grasping the larger purposes of God, but probably Paul had a more precise knowledge of Jewish history than Stephen had. It is a common thing for men of vision and large view to be somewhat deficient in knowledge of detail. Probably Paul noticed that Stephen made a slip or two in historical references. It is not surprising if he got Jacob's burial place wrong and substituted one city for another in his quotation of one of the prophecies. Stephen was speaking extemporaneously in a time of high excitement. He had no time to wait for the slow processes of memory. But Paul would notice and be impressed by these departures from strict accuracy. He would say to himself: If he is mistaken about these details, he may be wrong in the more important matters he is presenting. But there was something about the spirit and manner of Stephen that would tend to bring conviction that in his main contention he was presenting most important truth. Certainly he was not actuated by hatred against the party he was opposing. Love for mankind radiated from his face, and sounded out in his words. His vision of what Paul could not see in the heavens must have excited wonder in the mind of the young student. He could not dismiss from his mind the vivid picture of the courageous man going so calmly to his violent death. The witness of Stephen must have been working its way through all the mind of Saul, preparing him for the vision that was to come to him on the highway with such appeal that he could no longer doubt or resist. The witness of Stephen led to the greater witness of the great apostle to the Gentiles. God uses the weak things of the world not only to confound the mighy, but sometimes to arouse and spur on the mighty to great and good achievement.

Gratitude Not Fully Expressed

Our centennial came upon us and our Conference joined with the other conferences in celebrating it with a gift to the denomination of $100,000. Our part was figured out to be $12,000, and a committee was appointed by the Annual Conference to make appeal for it. When the time approached for report to the General Conference the committee found that the amount then contributed or pledged fell short about $2,000. The committee had a meeting and considered what to do. Should they report that North Carolina had failed to measure up? They were loath to do that. They felt that many of our people would be unwilling to have such a report made. There were many of our people who had not been reached by the earnest appeal of the committee. There were many who had contributed who had not satisfied themselves in giving, who gave with the desire to give more if more were needed. The committee had faith that these people would yet contribute the missing $2,000. In this faith they borrowed what was lacking and sent the full $12,000 to the General Conference. The committee hopes this will be made up in the next few weeks.

If you did not contribute before, thank God that you still have an opportunity to take your place among the thankful Methodist Protestants who appreciate the good providence of God in leading our church safely through all the perils of its childhood and bringing it on toward vigorous manhood.

If you did contribute before, thank God that you had the gratitude to express in your gift and then give again that the grace of thankfulness may abound in you more and more. Original thank-offerings and supplementary thank-offerings are both in order. The committee will wait upon you for your offering, but it will be more pleasing if you will send it without being waited on. Send to Joseph D. Ross, Treasurer, Asheboro, N. C.

The Terrible Pangs of Hunger

In this land of plenty few of us have ever been without food long enough really to know what it is to be very hungry. We cannot appreciate the suffering that famine is bringing to parts of China today. Rev. William R. Johnson, a missionary of the M. E. Church, pronounces this famine the worst calamity that has come since the world war. The Japanese earthquake and the Mississippi flood do not compare with it as causes of distress. "With all food resources gone, the population of whole villages and towns is deserting the homes and struggling forth along the highways toward other regions, in desperate search of food. . . . Yet other millions, dazed and stupefied, remain in or near their homes, peeling the bark from the trees, gathering straw and chaff, and digging out the fragments of grass roots from the parched land; yes, even digging up the clay itself to satisfy their hunger which ever remains unsatisfied."

Burlignton church (First) and Mt. Pleasant church and perhaps others have made offerings to relieve these poor suffering fellowmen of ours in China. Are there not others who wish to help while it is possible to help—while life still remains? Offerings of money may be sent to National Committee, China Famine Relief, Fourth Ave., New York City.

—What earnestness should be put into the revival efforts of the churches! The harvest of grain does not begin to compare with the harvest of souls. Let us pray the Lord of this harvest to send laborers into the field, and let us do what we can to answer the prayer.

THE REFERENDUM IN NOVEMBER

A positive declaration of the fight of the temperance forces of the United States against Governor Smith for president is announced in the statement made at Westerville, Ohio, by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, who has just returned from Houston where he attended the Democratic national convention as a special representative of the united temperance organizations, 34 in number, of the United States. Dr. Cherrington's statement is as follows:

"Those who have been anxious for a national referendum on prohibition are to be accommodated. The telegram of Governor Smith to the Democratic convention at Houston after his nomination has made such a referendum inevitable. Moreover, the issues are clear. Governor Smith has not only re-stated his well-known position but he has served notice in no uncertain terms to the effect that if elected he will unquestionably use the office of president to secure the modification of prohibition. He declares that he would consider it his duty as the chosen leader of the people to point the way to a solution of the problem in harmony with his own opinion, which as repeatedly expressed is to let each state be its own judge as to alcoholic content, and for each state to interpret the 18th Amendment to the national constitution to suit itself.

"If this does not mean nullification of the constitution, then Calhoun did not know the meaning of that word and the Supreme Court of the United States will need to revise its own definitions covering that ground.

"Hence, the national referendum in November is to be a referendum not only on prohibition but also upon the right of a president to use his office to secure practical nullification of the constitution and the right of a state to interpret a provision of the constitution to suit itself.

"In other words, the voters of the nation at a single stroke are to decide not simply the one but the three questions. Governor Smith in his telegram, moreover, declares that if he takes the oath as president, he will execute that oath to the limit of his ability without reservation or evasion. Whatever else may be said of Governor Smith, he is consistent and by virtue of his consistency and sincerity, and in the light of his past record and known views, everybody should know what his interpretation of his oath of office will mean to him in case he should be elected to the presidency.

"When he was elected governor of New York, he took an oath to uphold the constitution, which was similar to the oath he would take as president. Under his interpretation of the meaning of that oath, he performed the act which repealed the state prohibition enforcement code which had previously been enacted to secure the proper enforcement of the 18th Amendment in New York, thus leaving that state since that time practically helpless in the matter of adequate prohibition enforcement. Certainly, therefore, if he should take the oath as president, he would be entirely consistent in interpreting that oath as permitting him to use his office to secure either the repeal or the practical nullification of national prohibition.

"Assuming, as we do, that Governor Smith is absolutely honest and sincere in his convictions on the liquor question and his conception of his obligations as a chief executive of a state or nation, there can be no doubt as to what his attitude will be and as to what he will do so far as national prohibition is concerned, if he should be elected president.

"It is, therefore, certain that the referendum in November will be the most solemn, the most far-reaching, and the most vitally significant and important to the people of any such referendum for the last sixty-eight years."

J. H. Larimore.

STANDING IN THE GAP

"And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none." Read Ezekiel 22:23-30.

As it was in the days of Ezekiel, so it is today in the church. The people (church members), the prophets (pastors and teachers), the priests (intercessors), and the princes (church officials) have neglected the things of God and turned aside to the things of the world. Love of money, love of pleasure, love of praise, love of ease, and love of self have crowded out the love of God. As a result the church on the whole is void of the presence and power of God. "A gap —a breach" has been made and the enemy is coming in like a flood.

Who Will Stand in the Gap?

Abraham stood in the gap when God revealed His purpose to destroy Sodom and Gomorrah because their sin was very grievous. Every prayer was answered. When Abraham stopped praying the judgment of God fell upon the city. Even then God remembered Abraham and delivered Lot. In judgment God remembers mercy because His children pray.

Moses stood in the gap at a time when God's wrath was kindled against Israel because of their idolatry, and again when they murmured against God's servants. As a result "the Lord repented of the evil which He thought to do unto the people," and again the Lord said, "I have pardoned according to thy word."

Samuel stood in the gap many years when the people lost the ark of Jehovah; and afterwards turned away from God and desired a king like the nations round about them; and again when King Saul disobeyed God, and spared Agag and the best of the sheep. It was then that Samuel "cried unto the Lord all night."

Elijah stood in the gap caused by the worship of Baal on the part of King Ahab, his wife and the people. For three and a half years Elijah stood alone in the breach until God answered by fire and His enemies were destroyed. Then His people fell on their faces, crying out: "The Lord, He is God; the Lord, He is God."

Job stood in the gap for his whole family when they spent their time feasting. He rose up early in the morning and offered burnt-offerings unto the Lord according to the number of them all; for Job said, "It may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts. Thus did Job continually."

Where is an Abraham, or a Moses; a Samuel, or an Elijah, or a Job who will stand in the gap today? "The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show Himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward Him."

Battling in the Gap

In Ezekiel's day God said of His foolish prophets: "Ye have not gone up into the gaps, neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle in the day of the Lord" (Ezek. 13:5). Shall He say the same today? The battle is on—the battle between truth and error, between the right and the wrong, between God and Satan. Who among us will stand against the wiles of the devil and withstand in this evil day? God is taking out a people for His name (Acts 15:14), and therefore is looking for those who will firmly stand with Christ in the midst of Jordan (the victory of Calvary) until all the people are passed over (Joshua 3:1-17).

The Holy Spirit helpeth our infirmity. He takes the faintest prayer of the humblest saint and amplifies it, like a radio broadcasting station, until all heaven hears nothing else. The Holy Spirit so operates in and through the true church on earth that He is restraining the mystery of iniquity and the manifestation of the lawless one, the man of sin, until the body of Christ is made ready for His glorious coming (2 Thess. 2:5-10). This restraining power of the Holy Spirit depends upon God's armour-clad servants who are "praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit" (Eph. 6:10-18).

May God Depend on You?

The great majority of professing Christians in our churches today cannot be counted upon for this "fight of faith" against the powers of darkness. They are not able to "stand in the gap." Says the Watchman-Examiner of New York: "J. Campbell White declares that Protestantism in North America, judged by fair tests, is not more than ten or fifteen per cent efficient. What are fair tests? The following have been agreed on by groups of pastors and laymen: (1) Supernatural living—living a life that only Christ makes possible; (2) personal work—individual effort to make new disciples; (3) stewardship of life and property, acting as trustees of life and possessions instead of as owners; (4) prayer-power, illustrating the reality of prayer as the mightiest force outside omnipotence itself; (5) world vision and purpose, sharing Christ's passion to save the lost everywhere."

If this statement is substantially true, and we believe it is, it shows the imperative need that every soldier of Christ Jesus should stand boldly in the gap, clad in the whole armour of God, and wrestle against the powers of darkness until we all hear the shout, the voice of the archangel and the trump of God. This may mean the greatest revival the world has ever seen.

Therefore continue to pray for a revival.—Great Commission Prayer League.

WHY THE WETS WANT THE NEXT PRESIDENT

Do you think that a wet president, who has forty thousand appointments to office in his gift will appoint forty thousand undoubted friends of prohibition—or forty thousand men who will follow their wet leader?

Fifteen voluntary committees of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment met in New York October 19, 1927, and heard Captain William H. Stayton, president of the association, claim that it is a fallacy to believe that thirty-six states must act to repeal the 18th Amendment; that the thing needed is merely one more "liberal" justice on the Supreme Court of the United States.

In making this explanation Captain Stayton let the cat out of the bag.

He told why the wets want to elect the next president. They are grooming a series of powerful leaders as candidates for the presidential nomination. There is political reason on their side for this canvass of the country to elect a wet president; but there is mystery in their methods and poison in their political propaganda.

Fallacious Propaganda

Nominating time is approaching; the booms are booming and the wets are trying to fool the drys into voting for a wet, because evidently there are not enough wet votes in the country to elect a president. One of their tricks is the spread of the fallacious propaganda that it takes more than a mere president to change the prohibition laws or weaken the 18th Amendment.

"A president," they say, "can only enforce the laws, not change them."

If so, why are the wets so dead set on placing a wet in the White House?

Looking again at Captain Stayton's escaped cat, we learn that the wets want a wet president because of the enormous advantage they will have in the kind of men he will appoint to office.

Power of the Courts

As the organized friends of the liquor interests indicate, a wet president could appoint to the next vacancies on the Supreme Court jurists who could undo the strong support given to the 18th Amendment by the court in the past eight years. Whether prohibition will stay depends in large measure on the interpretation of the courts, a fact clearly stated by Assistant Attorney General Mabel Walker Willebrant at the Washington conference of the National W. C. T. U. It is almost literally true to say that every wet argument against prohibition has been answered by the Supreme Court, as constituted at present, in its decisions; and if the public were not ignorant of this the wet propaganda would not get so far. Many decisions have been by a vote of five to four, a very narrow margin.

Justices of this court have been appointed for life and may retire at the age of seventy. It is to be expected there will be vacancies on that high bench in the next administration.

That is one reason why the wets want to elect the next president; they want a man whose views are all against prohibition; a man who favors liquor. The public expects such a man to appoint to courts and other offices men of his own views.—W. C. T. U.

"HOWEVER LITTLE STRENGTH, ROUSE THAT LITTLE"

"If I were asked," said an American bishop recently, "how a parish, however small or poor, would be most likely to flourish, I would say: let it begin to exert itself in the great work of the propagation of the Faith. However meager its resources or little its strength, let it rouse that little, such as it is, and, zealous for souls, let it strive by fervent prayer for the missionaries and by methodical contributions to relieve the poverty of the missions; these very efforts will react upon the parish by unifying and enlarging it."

Many ministers are finding this out by experience. Living strictly to itself, a parish soon "goes to seed." It loses that sense of Catholicity and solidarity which belongs to it by right. Isolated it ceases, in a sense, to be part of that divine body of Christ, each member of which is in the closest sympathy with every other.—Exchange.

THE BOARD OF MISSIONS
The Women Co-operating

The unifying process of our missionary work is going forward in a very satisfactory and harmonious way. Word has been sent out to each branch president of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies asking them to arrange for a joint meeting of their branches to bring about the merger at the earliest possible moment. Some of the branches have already met and, without exception, have voted for the merger.

While the first meeting of the new Board of Missions was in session a telegram from the two branches in the Onondaga Conference came with the pledge of 100 per cent co-operation in the new plan.

The Indiana branches have met and voted, almost unanimously, for the merger. Enthusiastically they are planning and arranging for the merger of the two auxiliaries in the local communities.

Under date of June 22, Mrs. E. A. Craig, president of the Home Missionary Branch, of Maryland, writes, "I received your letter this morning and have conferred with Mrs. Armstrong, the president of the Foreign Society. We have decided to call a session of the Maryland branches of the Woman's Home and Foreign Societies, Wednesday, July 11, to consider the merging of the two societies."

On June 23, Mrs. Minnie H. Hammer, of Asheboro, N. C., wrote, "At a meeting of the joint Missionary Societies, Thursday, it was decided that we would have a joint branch meeting in October. An executive meeting will be held in September when we hope to have the Constitution and By-Laws so that the present leaders can acquaint themselves with the new program that they can intelligently arrange for the called meeting. The outlook is fine in our state."

On July 2, Mrs. J. A. Harp, former president of the Iowa-Missouri Home Missionary Branch, wrote, "In reply to your letter of June 21, I am happy to report that on June 28, at Osceola, Iowa, the W. H. M. S. Branch and the W. F. M. S. Branch completed the merger of the two branches, according to the request of the Board of Missions.

"Our new president is Mrs. W. H. Betz, of New London, Iowa, and our new corresponding secretary is Miss Amanda Haas, Rhodes, Iowa."

Other places have been heard from indirectly, with the same good news coming from every quarter of our church. The women have been waiting and are ready for this merging of our forces for greater efficiency, closer fellowship and large raccomplishments. All hail to our loyal and devoted women!

Two of our Home Missionary fields, First Church, Detroit, Mich., and Mt. Lookout, Cincinnati, Ohio, were visited on June 26 and 27, by Dr. J. C. Broomfield, Dr. J. M. Sheridan and the writer. Both of these churches have the basement units completed. The work of completing the upper unit of the First Church, Detroit, has begun and provision was made, by joint co-operation of the Home Department of the Board of Missions and the local church, for the completion of this church at an early date.

The Mt. Lookout Church has property valuations of $42,000, with an indebtedness of only $13,000. Of this amount about $4,000 is now due on the appropriation of the Board of Church Extension of the Ohio Conference to the church and $1,000 is available from the membership of the church. As soon as these two sums can be paid, the indebtedness will be reduced to $8,000. This indebtedness is on the parsonage property. The Board of Church Extension of the Ohio Conference has made an appropriation of $3,000 per year for five years. Four thousand dollars has been paid, $4,000 is now due, another $1,000 will be due at conference time, and $6,000 due in the next two years.

The membership of the church are now very anxious to complete their church edifice. They feel able to finance the additional cost of the other unit provided the Board of Church Extension of the Ohio Conference pays its appropriation in full and the Home Department of the Board of Missions meets its provisional appropriations of $10,000 to be paid in four years. The work on the completion of the second unit of the church will probably begin next spring.

Urgent are the appeals and numerous are the open fields of opportunity for our church to preach the gospel and to lift the people into the fellowship of Christ. By a unified effort, a consecration of our money, and an harmonious fellowship wit hone another and with our Christ, great things for the Kingdom may be accomplished. Men, as the women, in their fine co-operation are not only willing to but actually are merging their societies and organizations. Let us join hearts and hands with them and as a great undivided army for righteousness go forward "attempting great things for God and expecting great things from God."

S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

The new Board of Christian Education, in response to the call of the president of the General Conference, held its first meeting in the publishing house at Pittsburgh June 6th. Every member was present, including President J. C. Broomfield, and the two executive secretaries, F. W. Stephenson and Lawrence Little.

In opening the meeting Dr. Broomfield stressed three things which should make for the success of the board in its work during the quadrennium. The first, the need of fostering the spirit of harmony and fellowship which characterized the sessions of the General Conference; second, keep the whole program of the church before us; third, all play the game, being always on the job.

Rev. G. I. Humphreys, D.D., Salisbury, Md., was elected president of the board and Rev. C. J. Morton, Steubenville, Ohio, recording secretary. The president and recording secretary, together with Mrs. H. W. Maier and the two executive secretaries, were made the Executive Committee. Two departments were recognized, one the Department of Colleges and Student Training, and the other the Department of Religious Education.

It was voted to co-operate with the Board of Publication relative to the Advisory Council on Correlations, and Dr. Humphreys, Dr. Stephenson and Mr. Little were constituted a committee to represent the board on the council.

The board supported the plan of placing the income from the special days in the budget, the sum to be made available to all the boards on the basis of the percentage allowed by the General Conference.

To stimulate a larger interest in the plans for their school it was voted to give the colored people $500 each year toward their educational work, provided they raise an equal amount, all the funds to be retained by the Board of Christian Education for a school building.

The trustees of Adrian College were instructed to place in trust the funds raised in the churches of the Adrian area.

In view of the changes being made due to the action of the General Conference, the matter of appropriations to the college and seminary was deferred.

The new application blanks proposed by the executive secretary of the Department of Colleges and Student Training were approved. The secretary was instructed to notify the annual conference presidents of the rule requiring them to withhold letters of standing to those indebted to the board.

The Sunday before Thanksgiving was chosen as "Men for the Ministry" Sunday.

It was voted to encourage our colleges to employ student pastors as soon as practicable, such pastors to have faculty standing.

The Department of Religious Education was advised to build its program of activities within a budget of $12,000.00 for the current year, with the understanding that, if the regular income from the budget does not reach that figure, they shall be permitted to draw from their invested fund sufficient to equal this amount. The budget proposed by the executive secretary of the Department of Religious Education was modified in accordance with this action and adopted.

It was deemed unadvisable at this time to employ a full-time director for children's work.

The "Crusade for Christ" movement was endorsed and the Department of Religious Education instructed to co-operate in it.

It was decided that in the Leadership Training Schools and other meetings of the young people that prominence be given to the budget and the program of the church.

Each department was instructed to add necessary office equipment up to specified amounts.

Provision was made for securing a new charter by the appointment of a committee to take the matter in charge.

The General Conference Treasurer and Executive Secretary of Promotion, Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., was present throughout the session of the board, as was the president of the General Conference, J. C. Broomfield. The meeting was marked by an earnestness and harmony which promise gratifying results in the cause of Christian education.

A CREED FOR MOTHERS

Helping to make good mothers is one of the finest services that can be rendered to this needy world. A group of mothers in one of our eastern states prepared a Creed for Mothers which sets a fine ideal before every mother. We are glad to reproduce it here. Use it on Mother's Day.

I believe in little children as the most precious gift of heaven to earth.

I believe they have immortal souls created in the image of God.

I believe that in every child there are infinite possibilities for good or evil, and that the kind of influences with which we surround their early childhood largely determines their future character.

I believe in play as the child's normal effort to understand himself through free self-expression.

I believe, too, in work suitable to childhood, and that the joy in doing such work should come to the child very largely from the doing of it well.

I believe in wisely directing, rather than stifling activity.

I believe in inspiring the child to choose the good, the true, and the beautiful, and to contribute to the happiness of others by word and deed and gift.

I believe that in all things my example counts for more than my precept.

I believe in cultivating the intellect and the will, but I believe, too, in soul culture, and that out of this cultivation comes the more abundatn life, bringing forth the fruits of the Spirit—kindness, gentleness, joy, peace, truth, hope, faith, love, reverence for God, respect for age, consideration for each other and thoughtfulness for all God's lowly creatures.

I believe that the calling of Motherhood is the holiest and should be the happiest of all earth's tasks.

I believe that the Christ, who was once Himself a child, born of a human mother, is the one never-failing source of help for perplexed, discouraged or wearied motherhood.

Since to this work, Father, thou hast called me, help me to give to it all that thou hast given me of insight and strength and love and gentleness and patience and forgiveness!—The Expositor.

MEN OR MACHINERY?

Dr. W. H. Griffith Thomas once said: "The church is looking for better methods; God is looking for better men."

The question naturally arises, do good men and good methods mutually exclude each other? By no means. And yet we had better have consecrated men than the best methods that can be suggested. Methods mean machinery. The best machines are the simplest. The best organizations are those that work smoothly and efficiently. Thus do they serve a good purpose. A machine is worth little apart from the man who directs it. God give us men! When the right man appears he will call into being such methods as are necessary and join them to Him who said, "Apart from me ye can do nothing."—Watchman Examiner.

HARD WORK COUNTS

We have never been a believer in the affirmation, sometimes heard, that hard work is the sum total of genius; but it undoubtedly can accomplish wonders, and is an important factor in the making of men. As an illustration of this we quote the following statement made by Paderewski as to how he attained proficiency in music: "I played with an orchestra in Vienna. My work lasted four hours a day. After I was through with my regular work, I practiced on the piano twelve hours every day. Often my arms and shoulders were stiff and numb, but I did this for fourteen years. The other musicians laughed at me and called me a fool. Now people applaud me and call me a genius."—Selected.

CHRIST'S WAY

He died for the humblest. All the treasures of His love and power were poured out upon blind beggars and outcast lepers. George Frederick Watts' favorite saying was: "The utmost for the highest"—a splendid motto for an artist. Somebody has Christianized this motto to make it read: "The utmost for the lowest." This is Christ's way. Unto the least of His little ones He gave a love beyond man's power to conceive. Fortunes are for successful men; universities for brainy men; sports for strong men, and churches—shall we say?—for holy men. But Christ is for sinners, weak, unworthy and undone. In Him the last shall be first.—Selected.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Mocksville

July 7.—On this date the third quarterly conference was held on the Mocksville charge. We preached at 11 a. m. and held the conference in the afternoon. All churches were represented except two—Union Chapel and Byerly's. The count of the ballot showed that Bro. C. S. Summers was elected to represent the charge at the next Annual Conference. The conference arranged for a meeting of the charge to be held at Mocksville, Saturday, July 21, to discuss improvements on the parsonage. The trustees were authorized to act after receiving instructions at this meeting. The hour of the meeting is 3 p. m. All regular business of the conference was promptly transacted. The indications are that a hopeful spirit prevails on the charge. Pastor Braxton is full of zeal for the work, and is winning his way to the hearts of his people. We were glad to note improvements at Dulins. Cement steps had been built and the yard plowed in preparation for seeding. We trust that they will continue this improvement, and paint the church. We expect Mocksville to have a good report when the year ends.

Randolph

July 8.—We were here on this date, in three services with Bro. Lindley and his people. At 11 a. m. we were at Shiloh, arriving in time for part of the Sunday school. This seems to be a well located church, and is one of the oldest in the denomination, being about 90 years old. The present well constructed and well kept building is not, of course, the original one—perhaps the third, though I am not quite clear on this. The congregation was encouraging in numbers and helpful in attention. Pastor Lindley spoke of our emergency letter, and an offering was taken for the A. C. B. The vote was taken, also, for delegate to represent the church at the next Annual Conference.

In the afternoon we were at Gray's Chapel. Here again we found an encouraging congregation. This is one of the best known churches of that section. We were told that thousands of people assemble there on the fourth Sunday in September—the opeinng day of the annual revival. The church was founded, we believe, by the Rev. Alson Gray, D.D., and named as a memorial to him. The building is well kept, and makes an attractive appearance on the hill among the oaks. It is the sort of church that travelers will notice in passing over the hard surface road nearby. An attractive marker, well placed, should say to all such travelers, "Gray's Chapel Methodist Protestant Church." The vote for delegate was taken here also, and an offering for the A. C. B. We found but few readers of our church papers in the congregation. Methodist Protestants should not fail to read our church papers. A reading church is a church of increasing interest and responsiveness.

The night appointment was at Bethel. Here we were pleased again with the attendance and the attention. After preaching we presented the conference interests, and were greatly gratified to find a hearty response to these matters. One interested member said at the close of the service, "If you had asked us to do so, we would have all stood to pledge our interest in having our church an "Honor Roll" church at the next conference. This was heartening, and we shall look forward to the full realization of that good desire.

The conference programs were presented at all the churches and the people urged to make a full response. Special emphasis was put on the spiritual needs of the church, and the people were asked to pray for the coming of a deepened spirit of evangelism throughout the conference. During the day Pastor Lindley made announcements of the Y. P. T. S., the educational rally at the college, July 18, and the district rally at Pleasant Union, July 28-29, and urged his people to attend these gatherings.

Our impressions of the charge, as gathered from the day's work, are favorable. We found a promising group of young people on the field to inspire hope for the future, and at each church there is a circle of interested and earnest adult leaders. We doubt, however, if this charge has ever discovered its strength. Persistent effort toward larger things would call forth latent powers and resources that have not yet been discovered. We trust that the charge will test this out, and experience the joy and the satisfaction of really discovering itself. A good way of doing this is for some church on the charge to take the lead. Shall it be ——, Well, let some church on the charge fill in the blank. Bro. Lindley is closing his fourth year on the charge. He is popular with his people. We enjoyed the day.

Song Book

The recent General Conference authorized the publication of a song book for revival purposes. The book is to contain not less than 200 songs and is to cost not over 45 cents per copy. We trust that none of our churches will buy song books until this one is ready, which we hope will be soon. But when it is ready, please buy it, and in sufficient numbers to supply the church. This means about four books to every pew. Our observation is that but very few of our churches are supplied with song books. About all that most of them have are the few that the choir uses. The result is that the congregation does not sing. It is well to have a choir, but a choir can never do the singing for the congregation. When this is done, the interest and the effectiveness of the service is lowered. We can not say it with too much emphasis: Let our churches be supplied with our own church song books, and let the people be urged to sing.

Honor Roll

"No charge without an honor roll church." This is our slogan for these remaining four months. We shall work persistently and prayerfully to realize it. Let's get in step for this, and march on to a happy realization of this good end. Please ring it out, pastors, until it gets in the ears of your people, and on their hearts. The shouting, then, is just ahead.

Near East Relief and Famine in China

Repeated calls are being made for these dependent and stricken people. I trust that our churches will give the people an opportunity to make a free-will offering for these causes.

"Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"

Y. P. T. S.—P. S. C.

By the time this reaches our readers, we will be assembling at High Point College for these meetings. We trust that many of our young people and pastors—and others—may attend. The presidents—Paschall and Curry—have each worked faithfully and well for the success of their respective organizations, and each for the success of both. We most earnestly hope and pray that their fondest desires may be fully realized in these gatherings.

Isms

Of the making of many isms there is yet no end, and when a new one arises we do well to "bear a wary eye" toward it, lest we be led from the truth. The "old paths" are not to be readily forsaken. However, it is not the "ism" of some teaching that we want to warn against now, as prevalent and as dangerous as that is. The one that we are alarmed about just now is a very subtle "ism," because it appears most plausible, and our yielding to it is often unconsciously done. In fact, like Paul, we think we are doing God service when we do yield to it. It is an "ism" that we find deeply rooted in some parts of the world. And the alarming thing about it is that it has found its way into our own conference and has become well established in some of our churches, so much so that it is an exceedingly difficult matter to root it up. It is designated by a powerful prefix. You will easily recognize it when it is named. Perhaps you have already anticipated us, and know what is coming. Anyway, here it is: "L-O-C-A-L—ism." This is the "ism" that we need just now to get rid of. No, maybe I am mistaken. Perhaps we do not need to get rid of "Local-ism," but to have it balanced by Conference-ism and Denominational-ism.

DID NOT READ TRASH

The English people in the reign of Elizabeth did not read trash. They read a great Book—the Book. Therefore, they thought great thoughts and became a great people. The rise of the English dates from that period. As coal feeds a fire the Bible has fed the spirit of our race. The foundations of the United States were laid by Bible readers—the Pilgrim Fathers. And today there is a British commonwealth of nations and a great English-speaking republic, which, together, dominate the world. How? By the sword? No! By cleverness? No! They dominate by the force of character, and their character has been built up by three centuries of close communion with the great thoughts and principles of the Bible. The civilization and Christianization of the world depend today upon American and the British commonwealth of nations—English-speaking people who have risen to greatness through contact with the mighty spirit which surges through the Bible.—Rev. Thomas Tiplady.

DO THIS TODAY

There is no greater need today than for an old-fashioned revival of family religion. It used to be the rule, now it is the exception, to have family prayers. And the present generation is suffering sorely from the loss that neglect of that means of grace has occasioned. Not long ago a man who has recently moved to the city said to us: "When we were married, I said to my wife, 'We have always been accustomed to have family prayers in our home, and I want to start our new home out right.' And we have never missed a day since then."

At this time when so many young people have united with the church it is especially important that they be trained in the Christian life. They are babes in Christ and babies take a lot of care and a good atmosphere and healthful surroundings if they are to grow into strong men and women. It is a terrible thing to chill an infant, or to give it poisoned food, or even improper food. Family prayers will help these babes in Christ to grow.

There are also a number of families who have renewed their vows, who have begun a new page in their lives. It will help to keep them going right if the family altar will be established in every home.

And the more mature Christians—if you haven't a family altar in your home, establish one today. Have a definite time of the morning or evening when you and your loved ones can gather about the Book, read a portion from it for the nourishment of your souls, and then, kneeling, place yourself and your loved ones in the care of Him who careth for you.

Let different members of the family read, unite in some common prayer if you are afraid of your own voice; but by all means secure God's aid in making your boy, your girl, what God wants them to be.—Selected.

WHEN HELP IS YOUR DUE

The small girl was wrestling with a button at the back of her pinafore. "Don't you want help?" someone asked; but the tow-colored head shook a solemn negative. "I can do it myself if I keep a-tryin," she replied. After a time, her face very pink and moist from her exertions, she came up to show that the obstinate button had been forced through the unyielding buttonhole.

"But why wouldn't you let me help you?" questioned the friend, puzzled by this display of independence. "It took you so long to do it; I could have buttoned it for you in half a minute.

The big blue eyes met hers gravely. "Helping is for folks that can't," said the small philosopher, not for folks that can."

It is a pity that other girls—yes, and thousands of grown people, too—cannot be as wise. The girl who carries home her algebra example for her big brother to work out for her would do well to think of this sensible saying. Sometimes a girl wants a musical education, but gives up the hope because Aunt Sue or Uncle Frank does not offer to pay her bills at the conservatory. The world is full of people sighing over what they have got, and waiting for somebody to come along and give it to them.

"Help is for the folks that can't," but you are one of the ones that can. All you need is a little more energy, a little more patience. It is easy, of course, to have things done for you, but it is poor training. Such help is not for you. You are one of those who can.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

BILLY GOES FOR A RIDE

Billy loved animals. He lived in a big city, and so it was only when he went out to his grandfather's in the country that he had a chance to ride on the backs of the horses and to play with the little lambs, and feed the chickens, and help drive the cows up from the pasture to be milked.

On the morning that Billy was five years old, he opened his eyes to find the sun streaming in at his bedroom window and, Oh joy! a splendid hobby horse standing right beside of his bed looking at him out of glassy, brown eyes.

Billy was out of bed in a trice, and it didn't take him long to hop up on the back of the rocking horse, to slip his feet into the stirrups, and to begin a most enthusiastic ride.

"Giddyap!" he cried again and again, just as though he were not riding fast enough.

And whether it was Billy's voice or the sound of the rockers on the polished hardwood floor, he soon heard someone coming up the stairs. He knew by the sound of the step that it was his daddy.

"Many happy returns of the day," his father greeted heartily, as he stood in the bedroom door smiling to see Billy riding on horseback in his pajama suit.

"So you like your Grandfather's birthday present, do you?" inquired Mr. Squires. "We thought you would, and we have had quite a time keeping Dobbin hidden out in the garage, for he came two days ago. He is a great horse, isn't he? Listen," and Mr. Squires pressed a little button in the back of Dobbin's neck and the horse made a funny neighing sound.

Billy was delighted.

"Now," he said, "the automobiles needn't honk for me to get out of the way, for Dobbin can neigh at them and make them keep where they belong."

"That's true, too," smiled Mr. Squires, "but you must keep on the porch or on the cement walk inside of our hedge. If you don't he might run away!"

Billy was hustling into his little blue and white linen suit while his father carried the hobby horse downstairs. It was all the little chap could do to keep his mind on his breakfast, he was so anxious to be out enjoying his new treasure.

He was riding fast and furiously, and liked the feel of the moving air on his cheeks, when little Ruthie Hill came over from her house carrying her doll, Betsy Bobbitt.

"Where are you goin'?" demanded Ruthie. "If I had a horse, I'd go somewhere."

"Oh, I'm going, all right," sung back Billy. "I'm off to Banbury Cross. I don't know when I'll get back, but I think I'll go around and make a call on Mother Hubbard."

Ruthie looked indignant.

"You know you're not going to do any such thing," she contradicted, "and it's naughty to tell stories."

"I am going, too," shouted Billy, "an' I wouldn't be s'prised if I ran through a bramble bush an' scratched out both my eyes."

Ruthie rocked with laughter.

"I hope you do," she said, when she could get her breath. "That would pay you back for breaking Betsy Bobbitt's beautiful house."

"Beautiful house, nothing!" contradicted Billy. "It was nothing but a soap box, an' how did I know the roof was going to cave in when I jumped on it?"

"Let me have a ride," entreated Ruthie, coming a little nearer.

"No siree! This is my horse Dobbin, an' he doesn't know you, an' he might run an' run an' never come back, just like the man with the wooden leg that had a clock work in it. You know about him, don't you? He wound up the clock work an' the leg would keep walking until he stopped it with a key. But the poor fellow lost the key, an' he has had to walk on an' on ever since, over hills an' dales an' through bid old woods, an' right through creeks."

"I don't believe that, either," again contradicted Ruthie, "for some day he would get into the ocean and get drowned."

As long as Ruthie wasn't going to get a ride, she decided to go on to the candy store and spend her penny. She planned to get two sticks of candy, one for Betsy and one for herself, only she was going to eat Betsy's for her.

After Ruthie got the candy, she went on to play with her friend, Sally Speed, and then it was time to go home for lunch. After lunch she started out again with Betsy in her arms, and wandered across the lawn to Billy's house.

There she found a very much excited and angry little boy. He was examining Dobbin carefully from head to foot and crying.

"Ruthie Hill, I believe you did it," he declared angrily, "just because I wouldn't let you ride this morning. You know, you said it would serve me right if I scratched my eyes out. And now look at Dobbin. His tail's all gone. Boo-hoo-hoo-hoo!"

Certainly Dobbin's beauty was greatly lessened. He looked like a chicken with its tail feathers pulled out, for only a few strands of hair were left. The lovely cream-colored tail had disappeared.

"I did not pull out your horse's tail," frowned Ruthie. "I wouldn't do such a thing!"

"Well, who did then. Tell me who did!" demanded Dobbin's master.

"I don't know," replied Ruthie instantly. "How should I know?"

"Here, here!" exclaimed a voice behind them, and there stood Billy's daddy looking very grave and distressed. "Why, Billy! How can you accuse Ruthie of anything like that? And what's happened to your horse?"

"I don't know, Daddy," said Billy, his lips quivering. "He was all right when I went in to eat my lunch, and now just look at him. He's spoiled!"

"I am not so sure about that," returned Mr. Squires. "I think a hobby horse without a tail is more beautiful than a boy who has lost his temper. My, my, my! Your face is like a thunder cloud, but Dobbin's face is juts as pleasant as it was this morning. And I think you ought to apologize to Ruthie for accusing her of such a mean thing. I'm sure she wouldn't do anything so naughty as to pull out Dobbin's tail."

Billy stood and scowled. He wasn't ready to say a word.

"At least," Mr. Squires remarked, "I am sorry, Ruthie, that Billy should have accused you like that, and I hope he'll be manly enough soon to tell you so."

There was a sharp "Woof! Woof!" behind them, and who should come bounding across the lawn with a long, cream-colored, plume-like thing in his mouth, but a funny black and white puppy. He seemed highly delighted with himself, for every time he stepped on the long hairs, he jerked the tail out of his mouth, and then he would stop, give a couple of "Yips," grab the tail again and go on.

Billy's eyes were open very wide.

"That's Freddie Speed's new dog," he burst out. "The very one that tore the sheets on Mrs. Speed's line yesterday."

Billy was off after the puppy and succeeded in rescuing Dobbin's tail. It really wasn't so very much the worse for wear, and Billy's daddy said he could fasten it in with some glue and tacks so the hobby horse would be just as nice as ever.

Ruthie stood by, as interested as the puppy. Suddenly Billy turned around.

"Say, Ruthie," he remarked cordially. "I'm awful sorry that I said what I did an' I hope you'll forget it. I was all wrong."

Ruthie smiled in her cheerful, friendly way.

"All right," she said. "I was sorry, too, Billy, to have the horse spoiled."

"Say," Billy added a little shyly, "don't you want to ride on Dobbin? I'll help you up."

Ruthie's face was wreathed in smiles.

"Oh, I'd just love to," she said, "and Betsy Bobbitt is going, too."

And sure enough, she did!—Selected.

THE PRESENT MOMENT

"Mother, why do they call it 'Thanksgiving'?" asked five-year-old Billy who with his brother Bob stood watching Mother make pumpkin pies.

Mrs. Horton felt very much tempted to send her boys to their playthings, promising a Thanksgiving story in the evening—she had so much to do—but she resisted.

"Many years ago," she began, "when our country was very young, the people often did not have enough to eat."

"That was the Pilgrims, wasn't it, Mother?" broke in nine-year-old Bob.

"Why didn't they go to the store and buy something?" asked Billy.

"Weren't any stores, were there, Mother?"

"Only one storehouse, and that was about empty," said Mother. "So in the spring the governor appointed a fast day. The people were not to eat at all that day but were to go to church and pray that the seeds which they planted would yield a good harvest. Their prayers were answered; they had a wonderful harvest. So then the governor appointed a day of Thanksgiving. On that day, the people went to church and thanked God for His goodness and then they had a great feast."

"They invited the Indians, too, Mother, didn't they?" said Bob.

"Yes, the Indians had been very kind to them. In those hungry days they had shown them how to fish through the ice and, later, how to use the fish as a fertilizer for their corn and how to girdle the trees to let the sunlight in on their crops. So the Pilgrims invited the Indians to feast with them and to help them thank God for the harvest."

"What is a harvest?" asked Billy.

"Don't you remember," said Bob, "when we planted the nasturtium seeds? They sprouted and grew, and grew, until they had lovely flowers."

"And after the flowers came seeds, just like the ones you planted," added Mother. "That was the harvest."

"And did the Pilgrims eat the seeds?" asked Billy. "I wouldn't like to eat seeds."

"But you do eat seeds," said Bob. "Cereals and beans and corn are seeds, aren't they, Mother?"

"Cereals don't grow," said Billy laughing, "Mother buys them in boxes at the store."

"But they had to grow before they could be put in boxes," responded Bob, "so we have to depend on the harvest just as much as the Pilgrims did; my teacher said so."

"We wouldn't be hungry without them though," said Billy. "We could eat pumpkin pie. It would be fun to have to eat pumpkin pie for breakfast."

As I said before, Mother was very busy. It didn't seem as if she could take time to stop and explain. Her housekeeper urge said, "Put it off." A pedagogical warning said, "The situation will not recur." Her mother-wisdom decided the matter: "I cannot use ten minutes to better advantage."

So while the pies were baking she got out some pictures and showed the boys the history of a grain of wheat. She could not find a picture of growing pumpkins but she did find squashes, which answered the purpose.

She was obliged to leave one of the bedrooms undusted, but she felt fully repaid when Billy finished his evening prayer taht night by saying, "And thank you very much for the harvest."—Selected.

THE KING'S FACE

After Absalom's great sin, he fled to Geshur and there remained for three years. But all of that time his father, King David, mourned for his son, even though he had been a rebellious son. General Joab was a very wise man, and knew that he could not get David to consent to his return until he had repented, but yet he knew that the king would never be satisfied until the boy was back home again. He fixed up a ruse that worked well, and brought Absalom back to Jerusalem; but he was not allowed yet to see the king's face. For two more years he dwelt in the city where the king was, but was not allowed to see the king's face. After several attempts to get the ear of Joab to intercede for him, he finally succeeded in getting this message to him: "Wherefore am I come from Geshur? It were better for me to be there still. Now therefore let me see the king's face."

How many of us are dwelling in Jerusalem, and do not see the King's face! Oh, yes, we are in the church, but we are not dwelling in the same part of the city where the King dwells, and do not see the King's face. Yes, we are busy at business, and when we get in trouble, we run to the door looking towards the King's house and cry out for help and wisdom; we would like the King to send us reinforcements, to aid us in what we are trying to accomplish—all of which may be very respectable and right. But it is just like telephoning to the police, or the firemen, or the grocer, or the doctor; we do not see the King's face!

Ah, but there are some rare souls in Jerusalem—and maybe this is what makes the difference between them and others who are in the city—who take time every day to go to see the King and look right into His face; who love to associate with Him, to talk with Him, especially about Himself and His problems, and not spend the whole time they are in His presence asking for something for themselves or their own immediate kin. Just to look in the King's face is joy enough for them. And when they come out of His presence, somehow they seem to bear a closer resemblance to Him than they did when they went into the presence of the King.

How long have you been in Jerusalem, and yet have not seen the King's face?—North Avenue News, Atlanta.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SENIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

July 15: "Getting a Thrill Out of Christian Living"

Phil. 3:1-16

Pointograph

Does your religion make you uncomfortable? If so, examine it and see if you have the real thing. Paul had the right kind and he wrote: "Rejoice! in the Lord!!"

Points for the Leader

Youth loves thrills! But one must learn to distinguish between false and true thrills. There is the thrill that comes from situations that harm a life. That lowers one's ideals and encourages the mean and base in a life. On the other hand, there is the joy of the real thrill that inspires us to the good, the noble, the strong, the pure and the best.

We can take Paul as the example of a Christian that had the right kind of thrills. He exhorted Christians to rejoice. He had the thrill of a great enterprise. "I am pressing on toward a goal." He had the thrill of taking a great part, "straining every nerve toward that which lies ahead." He possessed the thrill of immortality, "the power of His resurrection." He experienced the joy of sacrifice, "What was once gained I have counted lost." He knew the thrill of service, "for His sake I have suffered." He searched for Jesus and had the joy of finding. "I long to know him." "Then face to face," etc.

Suggestions for Songs

In My Heart There Rings a Melody.

Sweet Peace the Gift of God's Love.
He's a Wonderful Savior to Me.
Sunshine in the Soul.
He Keeps Me Singing.

For Debate

Resolved: "That the Christian has a more joyous life than the non-Christian."

Integration With S. S. Lesson for July 15

The Sunday school lesson is "How Paul Became a Christian." Have some one tell how Paul got his enjoyment before he became a follower of Christ and how he got his thrills after he was a Christian.

For the Pastor

Have the pastor use five minutes telling of the "Joys of the Christian Life."

Poetry to the Point

Do all the good you can,
By all the means you can,
In all the ways you can,
In all the places you can,
At all the times you can,
To all the people you can,
As long as ever you can.

OUR LEADERSHIP TRAINING OUT WEST

"Leadership Training School"
Pawnee Station, Kansas

The Kansas Leadership Training School held under the auspices of the Board of Young People's Work of the Kansas Conference, and the Department of Religious Education of the Methodist Protestant Church, met at Pawnee Station, Kansas, June 18-24.

Rev. L. E. Dixon, pastor of the local church, and his helpers made every provision for our entertainment. The school was the first one for the Kansas Conference, and was small in enrollment. The group that did attend made up in efficiency and eagerness to learn for the lack in numbers.

Rev. Wilbur M. Snuder, pastor of one of our Kansas City churches, was dean, and conducted the school in an efficient way. The following faculty offered the following courses: The Principles of Teaching, F. L. Gibbs; Vocational Guidance, Rev. Youmans; Stewardship, Rev. T. L. Garrison; Life of Christ, Rev. Charles H. Reed. Never has the writer witnessed a more studious group. The work was of the best and the future looks bright for the loyal group in Kansas.

Those attending took part in various forms of wholesome recreation. Volley-ball, games and group yells, etc., were enjoyed by all. One afternoon the whole school was taken on a sight-seeing tour of Fort Scott and other points. Fort Scott is one of the oldest cities of the Middle-West.

Inspiring vesper services were held each evening prior to the night services. In God's "out-of-doors" we listened prayerfully to His voice and heard Him speak anew to our lives. The following spoke in the evening services: Rev. C. H. Reed, F. L. Gibbs, Rev. and Mrs. T. L. Garrison, and Rev. Lawrence Little. After the decision services conducted by Rev. Lawrence Little the entire student body, joined by others, signed the Methodist Protestant Life Service League card, giving themselves in part time and all time religious service.

The ones present adopted the name, "Pioneers," and the writer is convinced that the school, with such a fine group of young people and alert leaders, have blazed the way, to even a greater leadership training for their conference.—F. L. Gibbs, Assistant Secretary, Board of Christian Education, Methodist Protestant Church.

MISSION WORK WITH YOUNG PEOPLE

At the W. H. M. S. Board meeting in Washington, North Carolina received the Mission Club and Home Circle Banners. I was very proud of our young people and hope these banners will help the young people to do better work this year than they did last. If there have been any new societies organized please report to me. Nearly four months of the missionary year are gone. Let's not forget that we have a budget this year. The Branch is expecting us to raise it. I am sure we will not fail. If there is a district chairman who would like to have the banners to display at her district meeting please let me hear from you.

VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL AT FIRST CHURCH, BURLINGTON, GREAT SUCCESS

Last Friday evening at 8 o'clock the closing exercises of the Vacation Church School were held in the First Methodist Protestant Church of Burlington. This school was the first attempt of its kind by this church, but all who observed the school in operation, we believe, were convinced that such a work is very much worth while.

Miss Mary Wills McCulloch, of Greensboro, who is employed by the North Carolina Conference Board of Young People's Work, was with us and supervised the school. She was ably assisted by Miss Maxine Taylor, of Enfield. The line-up of teachers was as follows:

Miss Mary Wills McCulloch, Supervisor.
Miss Maxine Taylor, Assistant.
Miss Elizabeth Rogers, Pianist and Secretary.

Teachers in Beginners' Department: Miss Ila Stafford, Miss Margaret Rogers and Miss Kathrine Dixon.

In the Primary Department: Miss Mildred McPherson, Miss Margaret Hinshaw, Miss Alyse Dixon, Miss Grace Thompson, and Miss Margaret Cole.

In the Junior Department: Miss Mary Wills McCulloch and Miss Mabel Thornburgh.

In the Intermediate Department: Miss Maxine Taylor.

Director of Boys' Craft Work: L. W. Gerringer.

On the closing night each department gave a demonstration of the kind of work that had been done for the two weeks, and a good size audience seemed pleased with what they saw. The boys and girls also had a fine exhibit of hand-work on display in the hut. The hand-work done by the larger girls is to be sent to the Children's Home, I believe.

The total enrollment for the two weeks was 167.

The average daily attendance was 130.

Eighty-two received certificates for perfect attendance and for satisfactory work.

As pastor of the church, after this, my first experience with a Vacation Church School, I am thoroughly convinced that this is one of our best ways to help solve the problem of religious education of the children of our church.

A very fine picture of the school was made and we may possibly let you see it in the Herald later. L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

SIXTH DISTRICT NOTICE

There will be a District Rally for the charges of the Sixth District at Charlotte M. P. Church, Richland Charge, on Sunday, July 29, this being the fifth Sunday. The meeting will begin at 11 o'clock and will adjourn in time for the people to get home by night. Those who come are urged to come for the entire day and to bring a basket so the meeting will not be a burden to any church. The program will be announced next week; however, we have the definite promise of President Taylor for the afternoon service and Mrs. W. C. Hammer will be one of the speakers for the morning service. All churches in the district are invited to send their choirs, quartettes or any individual singers.

The charges in the sixth district are: Randleman, Richland, Why Not, Davidson, Denton and Asheboro.

Charlotte Church is three and one-half miles west of Asheboro on Route 60, leading from Asheboro to Lexington. A hard surface road leads from Asheboro right by the church.

Let the people of these charges get together on that day, get better acquainted and hear things that are vital to he church and kingdom. J. E. PRITCHARD, Sixth District Chairman.

—November 11, 1928, will mark the tenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice and will give occasion throughout the world for a new consideration of the causes of war, the results of the ten-year struggle for the continuance of peace, and an appraisement of the unfinished tasks for the complete abolition of war as a method for composing international and interracial misunderstandings.

—The World's Sunday School Association met for its tenth convention in Los Angeles July 11th.

—George Butler, of Atlanta, lost his life while in bathing at Wrightsville Beach. Heart-failure. He was a guest of C. E. McCulloch.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Yarborough Chapel.—Our third quarterly conference will be held at Harmony fourth Sunday at 3 o'clock. We ask all of the officials to be present and look after the interests of the church.

Our revival meeting will be held at Yarborough Chapel first Sunday in August, Rev. G. L. Reynolds as help. We are praying for a great revival.

Yarborough church has been recently painted, which adds greatly to its appearance. We are going to make cement steps which will add more beauty to the church.

Let the work of God move on, for He says, I will be with you.

W. B. SURRATT.

State Street.—Bro. Bethea was back in his place Sunday after having spent a week preaching at Pleasant Grove. A large audience enjoyed the fine sermons our pastor gave us Sunday morning and night.

We had a gain of about 15 in Sunday school attendance over the previous Sunday. The attendance has been good all summer.

We were pleased to have with us in all the services Sunday Mrs. Evans, of High Point, and Miss Juanita Hammer, also of High Point, who is spending a few days visiting at the parsonage.

A week ago last Wednesday night the Junior C. E. Society gave the program for the Senior meeting. It was a good program and was splendidly presented, reflecting credit on the efficient leader, Miss Pauline Lowe.

The children of the Sunshine Circle gave a program for the ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society at their monthly meeting last Thursday. These children also gave evidence of the fine training they are receiving from the leader, Mrs. Curtis Koonts.

About three months ago Dr. Brannock, teacher of the Men's Bible Class, divided his class into two sections and put on a contest to see which side would bring in the most new members. The losing side was to pay a forfeit, so they decided to give a supper, as men are always being highly entertained when they are eating. This pleasant affair will be in the dining room of the church next Thursday night. REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—We were very glad indeed to have Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Allman bring some of the children from our Children's Home the first Sunday. The children gave their program at 11 o'clock to a large congregation which, I feel sure, enjoyed it very much. We always like to hear these exercises; each child renders his part so well. We feel that Dr. and Mrs. Allman are giving these children splendid training. The children from the Home also furnished the music for the afternoon service at which time Rev. N. G. Bethea preached the first sermon of our special meeting. He preached an excellent sermon. The meeting will continue this week. We are hoping and praying that much good may be accomplished.

We were very sorry Brother Reynolds and family could not be with us Sunday. The death of a near relative called them away.

REPORTER.

Whitakers, Whitakers Charge.—Some may think we have ceased to exist because we have no pastor, but not so by any means. Our work is moving along nicely. We have a fine attendance at Sunday school. Our Ladies' Aid and Missionary societies are going well; C. E. societies moving on, and taking everything into consideration, we are doing well. Our own Mr. Auman preaches for us every first Sunday night and the second Sundays have been supplied with good men. We tender to all these brethren our gratitude and appreciation.

We've just closed a glorious revival in our town. The M. E., Baptist and our folks united and had a tent meeting with Dr. J. O. VanMeter, of Asheville, doing the preaching. Mr. J. C. Coston, leading the singing, and Miss Pitello as pianist, both these last from Hendersonville, N. C. It was indeed a glorious success. God came into our town as He never has before. Dr. Van Meter is a great man of God. I want to say to any of our pastors who need someone to hold such a meeting, be sure to get him if you can. If you desire any information concerning him, write Rev. J. S. Williams at Asheville. He doesn't bother the sinners till he helps the dead church members to find God. He never preached but one sermon to sinners while here. He just preached Jesus and Him crucified and the power of the Holy Spirit when it gets into the human heart. That was the only subject he used while here. His one desire is to get folks to fall in love with his Saviour. I don't see how he has the strength to do the work he does in a meeting. His preaching, great as it was, is a small part of his work. We all thank God for sending Dr. Van Meter to us and sincerely hope he may be able to come to us again.

We were fortunate in having Dr. George R. Brown to fill our pulpit yesterday and he gave us just the messages we needed to follow the revival. I am not able to tell the results of the meeting. It will take the years to come to reveal that.

You will please pardon a lengthy report, but we haven't said anything in so long I guess we are entitled to this much space.

Best wishes to all the readers.

MAMIE JOHNSTON, Reporter.

July 9, 1928.

High Point.—Dr. Spahr delivered a very helpful sermon Sunday morning from the text, "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." A quartette sang "Sun of My Soul" with beautiful effect. Dr. P. E. Lindley is very kindly filling the pulpit on Sunday evenings during the month of July in his usual effective manner.

The third quarterly conference is called to meet this (Tuesday) evening. At this time the associate pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, will preside, and reports will be heard from all the organizations of the church from February to July, inclusive. Written reports from officers are requested.

The Christian Endeavorers held a delightful camp supper and out-door meeting at the historic old Quaker church, Springfield, Monday evening. The meeting was led by Miss Mary Adams, on the topic, "What Can We Do to Help Improve Our Community?" after which the camp supper was served. The rainstorm interfered somewhat with the attendance.

On Wednesday evening the Teacher-Training Class will resume its work under the able leadership of Rev. P. E. Lindley.

The name, Young People's Summer Conference, has been changed to Leadership Training School, and it will be held at High Point College July 14-21. Several splendid speakers have been secured for the sessions, and it is hoped that a large number of young people will register and be present for the various classes.

The many friends of Congressman and Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, were shocked and grieved to hear the sad news of the sudden and untimely death of their son-in-law, Mr. Hal W. Walker. Much sympathy is extended to them, the young wife, and two small children in this severe, unexpected bereavement.

Miss Mary Lyndon has returned from a visit to friends in Lynchburg, Va.

Miss Pauline Elkins, of Liberty, spent the last week-end with her friend, Miss Gertrude Teague.

Theodore Ballard, of Charlotte, spent Sunday here as the guest of friends. He was a former faithful member and is always gladly welcomed home.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Bundy, who were married June 30, returned from their honeymoon trip through the Shenandoah Valley to Washington last Friday evening, and are spending a few days with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York. In a few days they expect to move to Mrs. G. W. Clark's in Oakwood Court.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy, as usual, gave us another one of his splendid sermons last Sunday evening, July 1st. His sermon was enjoyed by everyone present. We want to congratulate him for the splendid sermons which he has given us during the past eight months. I would to God that every citizen in the world could have heard them.

We are very sorry indeed that Mrs. W. M. Ferguson has been very ill for several months, not able to attend church. She is greatly missed in our church and community. Mrs. Charlie Crawford has been very ill, too. She went to McPherson's Hospital at Durham, stayed there a few days, but is back home now. We hope they may soon be with us again. Herbert Williams is able to attend church now.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. LEONE WILLIAMS.

Enfield.—The first Sunday in this month the writer and Rev. C. L. Spencer, pastor of the Halifax charge, exchanged pulpits at the Whitakers Chapel and Eden churches. Our people at Whitakers Chapel were delighted to have Brother Spencer, and especially spoke in very complimentary terms regarding the message he brought. In the afternoon the writer filled his appointment at Roseneath church as usual. Our membership here is small, but they seem to have a mind to hold together and hope for greater things.

The Whitakers Church has been one of three churches in that town participating in a series of union revival services. It was the privilege of the writer to attend a few times. From impressions and reports they have had a wonderful revival. Dr. Van Meter, of Asheville, was the evangelist.

Recently, the Ladies' Aid of the Enfield church has placed a new oil stove in the parsonage.

On account of special revival services goin on here there have been no evening services for the last two appointments and will continue thus until the clost of the revival, I presume. A Rev. Mr. Gaddy, of the Baptist church, is the evangelist.

Friday afternoon of this week the third quarterly conference will convene at the Enfield church at three o'clock.

Next Sunday morning the Children's Day program will be rendered at the regular worship hour.

We still are the object of our people's good will. Recently Bro. Wm. B. Baker supplied the parsonage with a lot of nice vegetables.

Siler City.—June, being the last of the first six months of Christian Endeavor work, Mr. Cletus Whitehead delightfully entertained the C. E. Society at the Chatham Inn Friday evening, June 30. In a brief business meeting practically all the old officers were re-elected.

During the social hour, directed by Miss Minnie Cooper, music, games and contests were enjoyed. Misses Magdaline Smith and Pearlie Moore won the first prize, a box of mints, in a flower contest. The host, assisted by Mrs. D. L. Johnson, served delicious sandwiches and grapejuice. Those enjoying Mr. Whitehead's hospitality numbered twenty, which included five new members.

On Sunday morning, July 1, we were very glad to have worship with us Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Moore, of Darlington, S. C.

Last Sunday morning the Junior Philathea class was re-organized. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Elmer Holt; vice-president, Miss Zabel Pickett; secretary, Mrs. E. Brady; treasurer, Miss Annie Mae Ellington; reporter, Miss Minnie Cooper.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon are still filling their appointments with splendid messages. However, Mrs. Dixon will not be able to be with us during the month of August because of the Bible schools, Summer Conference, etc.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—The attendance last Sunday at Sunday school and church was the best yet. Pastor Paschall's messages were of the same high order—spiritual and sincere. Next Friday he leaves for High Point for a week, having charge of the Young People's Conference.

Two Sundays ago our pastor, assisted by Rev. J. S. Williams, conducted the funeral of Bro. LeRoy Bates, of Philadelphia. He was the son of our Mrs. Martha Bates, on the Swannanoa. We extend to his wife and mother and sister and brothers our deepest sympathy.

Miss Novella McIntyre is gradually improving and may leave the hospital this Wednesday.

Bro. R. R. Ray was kept from church last Sunday by illness.

Recently a number of visitors have worshipped with us: Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Leonard, of New Brunswick, N. J.; Mrs. C. W. Bates and Miss Mary Margaret Bates, of Greensboro, N. C.; Miss Myrtle Stack and Miss Wheaton, of the Eastern Shore of Maryland; a young lady from Dover, Del.; Mrs. E. C. Fawcett's sister from California.

Rev. Mr. Higby, from the Illinois Conference, is here with his mother. He may reside here permanently.

Miss Gladys Boling is visiting her parents here. She has been in New York several months.

REPORTER.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—Our revival services, which began on Sunday, July 1st, closed on Friday night, July 6. Rev. C. M. Compher, of Winston-Salem, ably assisted our pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, in conducting these services. The attendance was unusually good, both in the afternoon and evening. There were a number of confessions and re-consecrations, and the whole membership of our church and others seemed to be drawn closer to our Heavenly Father as a result of these simple Gospel messages brought to us by Mr. Compher. The doors of the church will be opened next Sunday to receive any who may wish to unite with us.

The last Missionary meeting was held with Mrs. John Wrenn. The attendance was very good. After the program and Bible lesson Mrs. Wrenn served cream and cake.

The young people are preparing to organize a Christian Endeavor Society. The meeting will be held every Sunday evening.

Our Children's Day service will be held next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

Rev. R. A. Hunter, of Henderson, is assisting Mr. Fogleman in the meeting at Mount Carmel this week.

Little Miss Julia Brent and Master Leo Byrum, of Greensboro, are visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Greenway.

Mr. John Monday, Sr., of Henderson is very ill. We hope for him an early recovery.

REPORTER.

Yarborough Chapel.—We held our Children's Day program on the first Sunday night. The children rendered the program in a most excellent way. They were trained by Mrs. Surratt and Mrs. Ophelia Bobo. The congregation was the largest of the year.

Pastor Surratt gave us an excellent talk on Missions.

At the second quarterly conference a committee was appointed composed of our pastor, Rev. W. B. Surratt, L. B. Gossett and R. G. Watson to look after the painting of our church. They at once bought the paint and one of our members, Mr. Owens, did the painting. He did good work and the church is greatly beautified by the painting. We want to get cement steps made before our meeting the first Sunday in August.

On last Saturday night our Sunday school gave a supper to raise money to buy new curtains for our Sunday school roms. A neat sum was raised. We wish to thank Mrs. Ophelia Bobo and Mrs. Surratt for their faithful work; also collecting the different things for the supper.

The work here is moving along nicely. Our congregations improve from time to time. We are hoping and praying for a good revival. Pray for us.

A MEMBER.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Rev. C. G. Isley filled his appointment at Hope last Sunday and, as usual, brought us a good message. At this service two new members were received into our church—Mrs. Mary Hester and Mr. Charlie Southern, both moving their membership from an M. E. church near Winston.

Home-Coming Day will be observed the second Sunday in August. Our revival also begins on that day. We hope to have a large number of our members who live away from this community present on that day. Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon will be the pulpit help during the meeting. We hope to have Bro. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, direct the choir.

We are well pleased with the work our Ladies' Auxiliary is doing. At our lawn party and supper, which was held June 30, we realized the neat little sum of $40.16.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We are planning to add classrooms to the church in the near future. Work will probably begin this week.

Since our last report, Miss Gladys White, of Bonlee, and Mr. Roland Rieves, of Washington, D. C., have been united in marriage. They will make their home in Washington.

REPORTER.

Porter Church.—Our work has been going on about as usual. Last Sunday, July 8, we had all-day service with dinner on the grounds. In the morning at 10:30 we had our Children's Day exercise. The program was not very long but interesting, and the children all did well. After this we had an old folks' service. A number of old people sang old songs in the old-time way; two made short talks, rendering a very beautiful service, which was enjoyed by every one present. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Albemarle, preached for us. This service was enjoyed also, as he brought a helpful message to both young and old. We extend Bro. Anderson a cordial invitation to come again.

Our revival meeting will begin the third Sunday in August.

Our pastor, Rev. C. H. Hill, has been giving us two services a month now for quite a while. This we appreciate very much, as we always look forward to the Sundays when he and his wife will be with us. He continues to bring us good messages from time to time.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. W. T. BRASWELL.

Asheboro.—Seven new members were received into the church yesterday morning. There are: Allene Lamb, Elizabeth and Louise Hammond on profession of faith, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Craven and Miss Moline Bulla and Xannie Hamilton by letter. Mr. and Mrs. Craven came to us from the Asheboro Friends church, Miss Bulla from the First M. P. church at High Point, and Miss Hamilton from the Christian church at High Point. We are expecting some others to join next Sunday.

We observed Newcomers' Day at the morning service yesterday and had a goodly number of people present who had not lived in Asheboro for more than two years. We called off the evening service on account of the funeral at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Brother Hal Walker, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hammer.

Thursday afternoon of this week our Sunday school will picnic at Ritter's Lake, near Greensboro.

Frances, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lloyd, has been critically ill for the past two weeks but seems better now. We are hoping for her a complete recovery.

Beginning with Wednesday evening of this week all three of the C. E. societies will try having their meetings on Wednesday evening.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—Fourth Sunday in June was a good day for us. Children's Day service was held at 1 a. m. The children rendered their parts well. Much credit is due to Mrs. Mary and Addie Sykes and Mrs. Irean Hastens, who trained the children. Offering was then taken for foreign missions, which amounted to $55.00.

Before the service in the afternoon Mr. W. A. Davies, of Union Grove, gave a short but interesting talk on the annual and quarterly conferences. In connection with this our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, delivered one of his splendid sermons, which was enjoyed by all.

Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers. ANNIE SQUIRES, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—On the second Sunday night in June our Children's Day service was held. The children did their parts well, the pageant, "The Wings of the Morning," was good, and the collection which was taken by four small children, was very impressive, though the collection was not what we had hoped for. Much credit is due to Miss Sallie Dobbs for this good program.

We are feeling good in our nice new church and we hope to do more for our Heavenly Father in the future than we have in the past.

Our pastor preached for us yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock after preaching twice at Fairgrove. This was very much appreciated. The sermon was good.

The fourth Sunday in this month we will have all-day services, Home-Coming Day. Come, everybody, and let's have a good time.

MRS. G. W. APPLE.

July 9, 1928.

Brower's Shapel, Richland Circuit.—We held our Children's Day service yesterday morning. Quite a number of people were present. The collection was very good.

We have put new carpet on our church floor. The cemetery has been cleaned off, and put in much better shape.

People who have been staying away from our church on account of bad roads, will soon have to find some other excuse; the people of our community have decided to build a gravel road. Work will begin right away.

We expect to hold our special meeting the fourth Sunday in August.

Mrs. Love, our pastor's wife, has been indisposed for several weeks. We hope she will soon be out again. MRS. M. C. HENLEY.

July 9, 1928.

Bessemer City Church.—As I am visiting in Bessemer City, I wish to write a report to our church paper. I have been away for some time, and am glad to see our church growing so fast in number and interest. Our ladies' class has increased in number so that we are building a larger classroom; hope to have it completed by Sunday.

Our Home-Coming Day will be the first Sunday in August and we wish to invite all former pastors and members who are away.

On June 27, 1928, our organist, Miss Lucy Blanton, and Mr. J. M. Brackett motored to York, S. C., and were married. We wish them a long life and much happiness.

MRS. J. E. STEWARD.

Monro, N. C.

Liberty-Siler City.—The work goes on about as usual on this charge. These hot days are very busy days for the pastor and his wife. We are now in the last week of our second Daily Vacation Bible School, and this school will hold its closing exercises in the Siler City church on Friday evening of this week.

Our first school was held in Liberty, and here it was made a Community School. Prof. C. D. Holt, who is superintendent of our public schools here, agreed to head up this Community Bible School for us, and we secured our departmental workers from among the church workers of the five churches in this community. Our church furnished six of those workers. The pastor thought he would not have to teach, but it fell to his lot and that of the pastor of the M. E. church together to direct the class of Intermediate boys. We had a good time with the boys, but it kept us from putting in two weeks of pastoral visiting we had hoped to do. We commend the Community School to small towns and country communities. It certainly worked well here. There were about 145 children enrolled, and they were well directed.

In Siler City we had to put on our own individual Bible School, and there is an epidemic of whooping cough in the community, but even then we have enrolled 35 children and there are seven of us who are doing our best to direct them properly. It is a splendid school. It is wonderful how much work can be done for and with the children in these Bible Schools.

Next week will be Summer Conference at High Point. This pastor hasn't time to go; but if well enough he will go for his own good and for the good of the charge. Serving this charge is like serving two stations; each church needs the whole time of a pastor, and yet under present conditions one can only give half time to each church. And he must hold two Bible schools and two meetings.

The plans for our revival services for Liberty are already worked out. The five churches of our town are co-operating in a plan to hold one meeting, and this meeting will begin on July 22nd and will continue up to and through Sunday, August 5th. We are holding union prayer services and working and praying for and expecting great results from these meetings. Pray for us that we may have a great meeting.

The meeting in Siler City will probably begin the fourth Sunday in August, and we will likely do our own preaching there.

Praying God's richest blessings upon all the brethren and all the church through this, our revival season for the Conference, and with love and good wishes for all, I am,

Faithfully yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

Eighteen (18) charges report this week, but only one (1) new one—Melton's Grove. Ten (10) remit on A. C. B.; nine (9) on G. C. B., and four (4) on college. Graham charge, Rev. D. R. Williams, pastor, leads in the amount of remittance. They send $60 to pay college assessment in full. Thank you, Graham. Now what charge will be next to do this nice, pleasing act? It's not half as hard as you think, and there's lots of pleasure in it when you get it done. We are glad to add Melton's Grove, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, pastor, to our paying list. Just a little more—$11.75—and this charge will find its way to the "Honor Roll." Watch them go there! Three (3) charges—Weaverville, Kernersville, and Melton's Grove—get their first credit on the A. C. B. this week. This still leaves many charges—37, to be exact—that have no credit on this budget. And twelve (12) charges have not paid anything on any budget. It has been said, "All things come to those who wait." Well, we are waiting—but how long! How long!

"FOURTH OF JULY"

Here at King Baptists had preaching at 11 o'clock, and also at night, in connection with a revival meeting. However there was not any "4th" reference made in the preaching. It was a safe way of preaching and the day's meetings were good. Numbers were absent who could have been there, as it seems. People talk that they "do not want any politics served in the church," and such persons try to stay out of the church on the Fourth of July. Men and women who are really patriotic need not be afraid of the preaching on the "4th" The Bible plan for the patriotic is safe, and it is needed for any day, week and Sunday.

Temperance people are in shape for hearing and cherishing the politics on patriotism.

It is safe for the preacher to not "preach politics." However, it is a nice thing, on this day to worship in the church and preach on vital things that belong to our national affairs. A great national matter, for our consideration, is temperance and prohibition. All rulers should be strictly in favor of temperance and prohibition. Prohibition belongs to patriotism, and the patriotic is so peculiar that we can only have all of it by having all of prohibition. It is certainly a strange thing to see intelligent people deliberately prejudiced against prohibition. It is very interesting to think about the many lively things that belong to patriotism. For the "4th of July" a community could do well to have preaching, and in connection, have short talks on the national patriotic side of life. It belongs to the patriotic to talk for peace, and in time of peace is when we should talk it. W. F. GRABS.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Haltom

Miss Jewel Pauline Haltom passed away on July 2, 1928, at St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro, N. C. She was in her 23rd year at the time of her death, and had been an invalid for nearly a year.

Pauline was in an especial way a child of the Methodist Protestant Church, having been reared, along with two brothers and one sister, in the Children's Home at High Point. Since leaving the Home some years ago she had made her residence in Greensboro and had been closely identified with Grace Church, being active in the work of her various organizations. Her loveliness of character and sweetness of disposition won for her a host of friends who feel keenly her loss.

The case of Miss Haltom has been peculiarly a sad one. During last August she suffered a sprained ankle which stubbornly refused to yield to treatment. An affection of the heart became apparent and she was compelled to take to her bed. Last January she was removed to St. Leo's Hospital, where her physicians entertained hope for her recovery. After some months of treatment she was permitted to return to her home, to the delight of her sister, brothers and friends. Their happiness, however, was short-lived, for new complications arose and she was rushed back to the hospital. For a short time she seemed to rally, but then her condition changed for the worse, and she slowly sank until the Death Angel came and released her from her bodily suffering.

Throughout her long months of illness and pain she stubbornly resisted the hand of disease, and her patience and fortitude were marveled at by all that visited her. Not until the last few days of life, when she was swept into semi-consciousness, did her friends realize that in spite of her cheerfulness of spirit and her matchless courage, she was fighting a battle against overwhelming odds.

While her friends and relatives mourn her departure, they realize that she has passed from death to life everlasting, and that her spirit has departed from the house of mortal clay to be with her Lord whom she loved and served.

Funeral services were held at Grace Church, and interment was made at Greene Hill Cemetery, Greensboro. Dr. S. K. Spahr conducted the last sad rites. Many beautiful floral tributes spoke eloquently of the esteem in which she was held by her friends. Surviving are one sister, Dorothy, and two brothers, Colon and Herbert Haltom. May the God of Love bring them consolation in their bereavement, and guide their footsteps till they lead to that happy land wher Pauline and the loved ones gone before await their coming. A FRIEND.

—Henry I. Brooks, a member of Calvary church, Greensboro, died unexpectedly on Tuesday night of heart failure. He seemed to be in his usual health when he retired for the night, but death came to him before the morning.

MISSES BRO. DOSIER

I was very sorry to learn of Rev. J. F. Dosier's death, while I fully believe he, like Stephen as he passed beyond, saw Jesus standing on the right hand of the Father to welcome him to the mansion prepared for him. We will miss him. I considered him one of our best preachers, sound in his expounding of the Word, a good thinker, a fine writer and stood for the right. I will miss his writings, which I was always anxious to read. I hope some day to meet him in the skies. E. C. HARRIS.

Politicians Telling Preachers What to Preach

Back in the days of agitation against the saloon, when preachers were outspoken against the liquor traffic, they were rebuked by liquor men and told to "preach the gospel." It is much the same way in these days. Of course ministers see what a tragedy it would be for the nation to bring back the legalized liquor traffic or any system that would supply people who wanted it with alcoholic drink, and many of them feel impelled to protest with all earnestness of soul against it. And the pro-liquor men of today are trying to administer a rebuke to the preacher that would dare open his mouth against the monstrous proposal of the wets. He is told to preach the gospel and keep out of politics and keep church and state separate.

But the point of the wets is not well taken. It does not seem reasonable that the religious and moral portion of the population who are qualified to make the best citizens should keep hands off and have nothing to do with the state. A man loses none of the rights of citizenship when he becomes a Christian or even a Christian minister. The objection of the wets springs out of their desire to have a monopoly in the making and execution of laws. On their principle the framing of the law against murder would be turned over to the murderers and against theft to the thieves.

Of course preachers and other Christians should oppose wrongdoing in a Christian temper and a Christian way, but they should and must oppose it. He that is not for the right is for the wrong. The rebuke of the politicians return upon their own heads.

God's Interaction With the World

The Book of Genesis tells us that God created the world and then rested from His labors. This may lead the loose thinker to the conception that God has left the world to pursue its own course without influence from Him. But this same Book of Genesis represents God as inquiring into the conduct of men, passing judgment and meting out punishment in the banishment from Eden and in the great cataclysm which destroyed almost all the race.

The Book of Exodus represents God as acting on men through the insect world. Later books represent God as moving the nations against each other, as acting on men through men in the matter of punishment. Through His chosen prophets God is represented as acting on men to instruct them. In almost all the Scriptures God is represented as acting on the minds and hearts of men directly by His Spirit. The impression made by the Bible is that God is in powerful interaction with the world. Our own experience confirms this view. Imperfect as we must confess our lives have been and still are, we realize that if we had allowed God to have His way with us, if we had kept step with the Spiirt of God as He sought to lead us forward, we would today be far ahead on the highway of holiness. This interaction of God with men is the great redeeming feature of our life on earth. How vain and unprofitable life would be without this divine touch and influence. If God should withdraw Himself from the world, Perdition would be here.

Moderation in Politics

Our human system of government is important, yet it is not the most important system of government over us. It does not have to do with our most important interests, it cannot be perfectly devised or perfectly administered. It is only a bungling attempt at the administration of justice. But we are under another system that is perfectly devised and that will be thoroughly executed. Of the two systems, the latter is the one about which we should be most concerned. We should seek first and constantly and most earnestly the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. There our principal citizenship lies. It should be our highest ambition to be good citizens there.

In our earthly citizenship we have to do with our fellowmen who have some power over us but not supreme power. We should not fear what man can do unto us and be indifferent as to what God can do unto us. We may have the favor of our fellowmen and be promoted to the highest office they can bestow; but this will be a small matter in comparison with the rewards of faithfulness in the everlasting kingdom of God.

How puerile and foolish it is to allow ourselves to be wrought up to a furious indignation against those who seem to stand in the way of our advancement to some goal set by the world and at the same time overlook the mark of the prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus.

Support the Seminary

There are some institutions so essential to the success of the church that we are likely to imagine that their existence and work are assured. It does not occur to us that they are dependent on the good will and good efforts of church members for their very lives. One of these institutions is Westminster Theological Seminary at Westminster, Md. It has done its work so quietly that we have imagined that its wheels were in no danger of running down. President Elderdice in an article in another column would undeceive us. He would have us recognize that the institution exists primarily for the education of Methodist Protestant ministers and that, in order that it may continue to do this work it must have the loyal support and patronage of Methodist Protestants, both ministers and laymen. It is the best seminary for our candidates for the ministry. It is best for the churches to be served and it is best for the men who are preparing to serve the Methodist Protestant Church. Read Dr. Elderdice's article and see how you may help.

"WHY TROUBLE YE THE WOMAN? FOR SHE HATH WROUGHT A GOOD WORK"

By Lee Anna Starr

The last General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, which convened in Baltimore May 16th, appointed a committee on "The Work of Our Women in the Church." It consisted of six women and two ministers. Its chairman was Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, N. C. Much time and labor were expended in the preparation of the report. Lack of space forbids its insertion here, but we quote the preamble and the first article. We have here the most important features:

"Believing that closer unification of all the phases of the work of our women will make for deeper spirituality, a broader vision, and a more effective service in the carrying out of the program of our denomination, we, your Committee on the Work of Our Women in the Church, submit the following report:

"First: We do not at this time deem it wise to unite the home and the foreign societies of our church into one missionary society in such a way as to lose the identity of either society, but we would recommend that the General Conference approve the federation of the two societies, and that said societies unite their organizations and activities in the local churches and conference branches as rapidly as local conditions will allow, and the interests of the work will justify—this to be done looking toward and hastening the time when these two societies will be known as the Board of Woman's Work of the Methodist Protestant Church."

The Woman's Home Missionary Society and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society are organized on the same plan. Both have dues-paying members, auxiliaries, Conference Branches, Executive Committee, General Executive Board, one or more field workers. Both hold monthly, quarterly, and annual meetings, and both keep the overhead expenses down to the minimum. It is otherwise with the Men's Board of Missions. It consists of five members and an executive secretary. It has no auxiliaries, no branches, no dues-paying members. It is a board and not a society.

The merger of Women's Missionary Societies and Men's Mission Boards are almost invariably effectuated in ecclesiastical conclaves, such as general assemblies or general conferences, where women are rarely, if ever, seated. These megrers—often submergers—are satisfactory to the Men's Boards because they permit access to the funds of the women's societies. As a rule Men's Boards are in debt; as a rule Women's Societies are solvent. The result is friction. The writer has never known of a case where two Women's Boards have federated but the results have been gratifying; has never known of a case where a Woman's Society was coerced into union with a Men's Board where the results have not been most unfortunate.

In due time the Committee on the Work of Our Women in the Church made its report. Immediately after the reading a delegate from the Pittsburgh Conference sprang to his feet and moved that it be laid on the table. After all the time and labor given to its preparation, not a moment was allowed for discussion. The mover stated that another report would be submitted which would be in conflict with the one just read. In a short time Dr. G. H. Miller presented the report of the Committee on Foreign Missions. It recommended the merger of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society with the Men's Board of Foreign Missions. He asked that the president of the General Conference, who also was president of the Men's Board, be allowed to address the conference first on the subject. The request was granted. The applause accorded the speaker indicated very clearly the sentiment of the delegates. As Dr. F. W. Stephenson expressed it in an article published in the Recorder, "The General Conference had reached a point where it was bound to make a trial of a unified plan, in spite of the earnest and conscientious opposition of some of our good women."

From the opening of the General Conference it was evident that the stage was set for the merger. Dr. Thomas Hamilton Lewis addressed the representatives. He counseled stringent measures. Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, of the Southern Presbyterian Church, was brought to the General Conference to speak in favor of the merger. She was assigned an entire evening. No complaint would be made if a speaker had been allowed for the other side, but that was not the program. To restrict the discussion to the affirmative, to the exclusion of the negative, could not do otherwise than prejudice the Conference. In addition to this the persons appointed on the committee to consider this question were almost to an individual in favor of the merger.

The week preceding the General Conference the General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society met in annual session. As expressive of the will of the organization, it prepared and forwarded to the General Conference the following petition:

"In view of the fact that the vote on the referendum showed 2,464 against and 1,578 for union, we recommend that the tentative union now existing between the W. F. M. S. and the Board of Foreign Missions be dissolved and that the W. F. M. S. be permitted to function as formerly, as a separate organization."

This was an official appeal, addressed to the General Conference, and should have had a formal reading in open session. Instead of this, the General Conference secretary passed it to the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Missions and, so far as the writer could ascertain, no public reference was made to the matter, except a partial quotation in the preamble of the committee's report.

After Dr. Broomfield had addressed the conference in favor of the union, the writer spoke briefly, pointing to the fact that the sentiment of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was overwhelmingly against the merger. Over 4,000 women had voted on the referendum and the majority was almost two to one against union. Seventeen conference branches had balloted, 3 for and 14 against. Of the 13 members of the Executive Committee, 10 were averse to the merger. Of the six women who sat in the so-called "Union Board" four were eager for the dissolution.

With all these facts before it, the General Conference voted by a large majority for the consolidation of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Men's Board. It rode "roughshod" over our organization. In an article published in the Methodist Recorder, Dr. Stephenson says: "The vehemence with which the vote in favor of the report was given indicated the determination of the conference to do the thing right as they saw it." He could have added, It counted for little with those solons what the women thought about it.

A few years ago the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the United Presbyterian Church appeared before its General Assembly and asked for severance from the Men's Board of Foreign Missions. After a warm debate, the request was granted. The work that society is doing today is simply marvelous. A few years before the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church made a like request of its General Conference. This too was allowed. The annual receipts and disbursements of that society at the present time are over two and a half million dollars. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church also went before its General Conference and petitioned for release from a pseudo merger with the Men's Board of Foreign Missions, and received for its answer a peremptory No!

The Methodist Protestant Church boasts loud and long about its democracy, and its strict regard for the rights of the laity. Two months ago it celebrated its centennial anniversary and lauded its founders because they rebelled against the obligarchy of the mother church, and then proceeded to outdo the arbitrariness complained of, by trampling on the moral and legal rights of its most devoted, most self-sacrificing members.

Immediately after the General Conference adopted the report of the Committee on Foreign Missions, a motion was made to include the two Home Boards in the merger. This was agreed to and a committee of 16 men and four women was appointed to arrange the terms of union. The report of this committee can be found on page 17 of the June 2nd issue of the Methodist Recorder.

The Committee on the Work of Our Women in the Church, having its hopes for the federation of the two women's societies blasted, withdrew the report which had been so precipitantly laid on the table, and offered a substitute. This second report is found in the Methodist Recorder of June 9th, page 24. It embodies a complete surrender on the part of the women. One member of the committee expressed her disappointment to the writer in these words: "How could we help it?" Notwithstanding the blasted hopes of the women, this second report gave great satisfaction to delegates who were solicitous for the merger. A standing vote was called for and the report was adopted amid applause and congratulations to the chairman.

We turn now to the report of the committee appointed to arrange the terms of the merger of the four missionary organizations, found on page 17 of the Methodist Recorder, June 2nd. Lack of space precludes a thorough analysis, but we note the following:

1. The reporting committee reserved to itself the privilege of nominating the members of the new Mission Board—the General Conference to elect said nominees. In this way it shut out all persons objectional to the committee.

2. This picked board is empowered to elect its own officers and the Executive Committee. The point here is that the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, which are supposed to be merged in this new board, have no voice or vote in the choice of the men and women who are to rule over them. Heretofore the supreme power in these two societies has lodged in the membership. They elected their officers, determined the makeup of the branches, from which the General Executive Board was chosen. From the first to the last the power was in the membership. All this is changed under the new regime. The authority is lodged in the hands of an obligarchy—eleven men and ten women elected by the General Conference. The membership of the women's societies may elect their minor officers and raise the funds, but that is as far as they can go.

3. Section 11 of the committee's report claims our attention. It provides that "the present method of organization and work of the local auxiliaries and branches of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's Home Missionary Society" shall not be interfered with. Cetraintly not! These are the sources of supply. Interrupt here, and you stop the inflow of money. The chief incentive in forcing the merger was to gain access to these funds. For more than 45 years the Men's Board of Missions has planned and struggled with this end in view.

4. The most interesting portion of the committee's report is section 10. It provides that this new Board of Missions shall be authorized to immediately affect a change in the charters of the Board of Foreign Missions, Board of Home Missions, Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's Home Missionary Society. We make no comment on the change of the charters of the Board of Foreign Missions and the Board of Home Missions. Both these boards are creatures of the General Conference and subjects of its will. As to the Woman's Home Missionary Society, its charter was procured in Baltimore and the writer has not had access to it. Moreover the Woman's Home Missionary Society had no referendum on the question of a merger. It is entirely different with the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. It is a corporation—a self-administrative body. It is protected by its charter, and this charter cannot be surrendered, altered or amended without a majority vote of the membership. As to the new Mission Board making alterations, we invite the venture.

For the gratification of the women who voted against the union—almost two-thirds of the membership—allow the writer to say the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has not been merged. It is not a constituent part of the new Mission Board. There are a number of important preliminaries that must be adjusted before this misfortune can overtake us.

We now ask the reader to turn to page 10 of the June 16th issue of the Methodist Recorder. Here we find a resume of the business transacted by the new Mission Board at Pittsburgh June 7th and 8th. There are some interesting items:

1. We notice on the roster of this board of 21 members the names of four women who hold office in the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. What are they doing here? The society has declared through its referendum vote that it will not merge. Are these women flouting that decision? It is the duty of an officer of any organization to exemplify its policy. To stand by its principles. An officer is an executive and is in duty bound to execute the will of the organization that elevates her to position. When she cannot conscientiously do this, when she is not in sympathy with that policy, she should surrender her office to some one who is. This is the only honorable course to pursue. No man or woman can serve two masters. "Either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to one and despise the other." These women, and some of them are splendid women who have served our society long and well, must themselves recognize the anomaly of their position. They ought to choose between these two organizations and choose now. "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

In a further study of this resume we find this new board presuming to negotiate the affairs of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society: How long the editor of the Missionary Record may function and the salary she is to receive; notifies our treasurer and corresponding secretary when their term of office will terminate; marks out a program for our branches and auxiliaries; instructs the branch treasurers when and where to send their moneys, etc., etc.

Who gave them authority to administrate the affairs of our corporation? Last May our General Executive Board attended to these matters. It provided us with an executive treasurer, a corresponding secretary and an editor for our official organ, the Missionary Record, and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is not contemplating any displacement.

As to interference in our monetary matters, the new board had best be wary here. There is a possibility of going too far. The Constitution and By-Laws of the Woman's Foreign Missioanyr Society are explicit here. (See Article VII, Constitution and By-Laws of Branches). The charter of our organization guarantees our right to make our own Constitution and By-Laws. The greater part of the money received by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is for specified interests. To expend these funds for other purposes is a legal offense. There are more than 25 of these designated interests—17 in heathen lands, and the others in this country. It takes an expert to handle these matters. To dump these funds into a common treasury is to work inextricable confusion, and makes the party who is responsible amenable to law.

Another item in this resume claims our strict attention. We are told that this new Mission Board has appointed 19 representatives—six men and thirteen women—"to present the work of this board to the conference auxiliaries." There are over two hundred thousand men and women in the Methodist Protestant Church who are not affiliated with any missionary organization. Here is a wide field. Why does not the new Mission Board send its representatives to these men and women and win them to the mission cause? Why should it invade the Woman's Foreign Missionary fold? There can be but one purpose –to induce our members to repudiate the policy of their mother society and pledge allegiance to the new board. It congratulates itself that it has succeeded in having two branches take a vow of fidelity to the new regime. Is it honorable? Ornithologists tell us there is a bird that never builds its own nest. It seeks the nest of some other bird, pushes out the eggs and deposits its own, then flies away and leaves it to the builder-bird to hatch and rear an alien brood.

A few months ago the Onondaga branch voted 27 for the merger and 155 against. The Indiana branch voted 138 for the merger, and 203 against. The writer does not believe there has been such a remarkable reversal of opinion in two and a half months. These propagandists plead with our women to stand loyal to the church. There is something higher and nobler than loyalty to a denomination, and that is loyalty to a principle, loyalty to a cause, loyalty to Christ. The founders of the Methodist Protestant Church were not loyal to the mother church when they would not submit to the hierarchy, but they were loyal to a principle.

We note but one other item in the resume—the election of an associate secretary and the fixing of salaries. The Joint Committee provided for two executive secretaries, one a man and the other a woman. Later the General Conference allowed for two men and one woman. The men to have special care of the affairs of the two Men's Boards, Home and Foreign. The salary of one was fixed at $3,300 per annum and the other at $250 per month, or $3,000 per annum. To the woman is assigned the work heretofore performed by six women—the two corresponding secretaries and the two treasurers of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies; the editor of the Missionary Record; and the secretary of scholarships and native workers. During leisure hours she is to engage in promotional work. Her salary is to be $2,000 per annum. The expense of the woman secretary is apportioned to the two Women's Societies. The new board has not reckoned with the fact that the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is under no obligation to accept a secretary not of its own choosing, nor to assist in the payment of her salary. It is already well provided. Nothing is said as to how the men's salaries are to be raised. In all probability the women will be privileged to share this expense. Each of the three secretaries is allowed a stenographer, the salary not to exceed $100 per month. Sum this up and we have $1,,900 per annum. But this is only the beginning. There is the rent and incidentals for three offices; there is the traveling expenses of a board of 21 members, including dining coaches, Pullman sleepers; expenses of the Executive Committee, meeting monthly the first six months and quarterly thereafter; expenses of the 19 representatives visiting the auxiliaries in eight states. In addition there will be the expenses of the two executive secretaries who will visit the Annual Conferences. There will be printing, telegrams, stationery, telephones, etc., etc. Now estimate, if you can, the overhead expenses of this new regime. How much will be left for the Home and Foreign field? The overhead expenses of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, before it entered the "tentative union" with the Men's Board of Missions, was seven cents on the dollar. Ninety-three cents went to the foreign field.

The new Mission Board is only an experiment, and a doubtful one at that. Already it is at a loss to know what to do with the problems that confront it. It has laid out a program too bulky to handle. Its chief executive secretary has handed in his resignation because of the perplexities.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is standing on vantage ground. Its $165,000 worth of property is safely vested in the corporation. Its money is bonded; it is the sole proprietary of its official organ, the Missionary Record; it is custodian of its records and is under neither moral nor legal obligation to transfer or loan them to another organization and, in and through it all, it is protected by its charter.

HIS GIFT AND MINE

Over against the treasury
He sits who gave Himself for me.
He sees the coppers that I give
Who gave His life that I might live.
He sees the silver I withhold
Who kept for me His throne of gold,
Who found a manger for His bed,
Who had nowhere to lay His head;
He sees the gold I clasp so tight,
And I am debtor in His sight.

BOARD OF MISSIONS

Deputation of Reverend J. F. Minnis

In accordance with plans made between Rev. Frank S. Hemmingway, treasurer of the Michigan Conference, and myself, at the General Conference, Rev. J. F. Minnis spent three weeks in deputation work in that conference, closing his work in Detroit Sunday, July 8.

While there Bro. Minnis spoke eight times over radio station W. M. P. C. and spoke at nineteen church, young people's and banquet gatherings.

Of Bro. Minnis' work Rev. Hemmingway writes:

"The addresses have been a great blesisng to us, and have greatly helped to increase interest in our mission work."

I have not seen Bro. Minnis since his visit to the Detroit churches, but the method of financing the expense of his tour by small free will offerings has been very successful.

While these mission meetings were conducted along the line of presenting "Information and Inspiration," I have already received inquiries which lead me to believe there will be good financial response in time to come.

This undertaking has been so successful and has met with so much encouragement that we hope to arrange a similar tour for Rev. J. C. Auman sometime during the month of October.

I believe that it would be a wise plan to keep Bro. Minnis at work in our conferences in some similar way as much as possible during his stay in the homeland.

Both Bro. Minnis and Miss Mildred Miskimen are now on furlough from India and willing to do deputation work. Soon Rev. E. I. Obee and Miss Evelyn Wolfe will be home from Japan and, after a few weeks' rest, will be ready also for deputation work. Why not more of our conferences plan for these missionaries, fresh from the fields and filfiled with missionary zeal and enthusiasm, to come to their churches and inspire their people with first hand information?

No offerings are taken for the work. The only expense is travel and entertainment. How our churches need the messages and personal contacts of these consecrated men and women!

Good News from the Soderboms

Word has just been received from Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Soderbom announcing their safe arrival in Sweden.

The following interesting extracts are taken from the letter:

"We had a good voyage and arrived at our destination on June 15th. We had to stay one night in Gotenburg because of taking so long time through the customs.

"There has been a great church gathering here in Stockholm. We got here for the last two days. The Swedish Missionary Society, which is very similar to our new Board of Missions, celebrated their 50th anniversary. They had an attendance of about 10,000 and got about $250,000 for their Jubilee fund.

"The king celebrated, also, his seventieth birthday and we arrived in time to see his parade."

Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom's address, while in Sweden, is Missionshemmet, Duvbo, Sundbyberg, Sweden.

S. W. Rosenberger, Executive Secretary.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church met in the Methodist Protestant building at 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Maryland, at 9:30 o'clock on Tuesday, July 10th, 1928.

The following members were present: Dr. John Calvin Broomfield, president of the General Conference; Dr. E. C. Makosky, Dr. A. J. Allen, Mr. J. A. Pugh, and Dr. Charles H. Beck. Dr. J. M. Sheridan, of the Board of Missions, and Dr. F. W. Stephenson, of the Board of Christian Education, and Dr. J. H. Straughn, secretary for Promotion and Stewardship, were also present.

Telegrams of regret were received from Mrs. W. C. Hammer, a member of the Executive Committee, and from Dr. S. W. Rosenberger, of the board. Mrs. Hammer was detained by the death of her son-in-law, and Dr. Rosenberger by the death of Mrs. Rosenberger's father.

After the call to order devotions were conducted by Dr. E. C. Makosky.

Charles H. Beck was elected secretary of the Executive Committee. The secretary was directed to send expressions of sympathy to Mrs. Hammer and Dr. and Mrs. Rosenberger.

The secretary was directed to read sections 13 and 16, pages 68 and 69, of the discipline, these paragraphs defining the duties of the Executive Committee.

The report of President Broomfield was presented and carefully considered. This report indicated that the president had been busy since his election to the office. His report was approved by the unanimous vote of the committee.

A communication from Mr. D. H. Davis, a layman from the South Carolina Conference, was read and considered. It was noted that this conference was included in the territory which the General Conference had referred to the Board of Missions, and President Broomfield was requested by the committee to bring this communication to the attention of the Board of Missions.

A communication from Rev. J. W. Gilbert, president of the Georgia Colored Conference, was also referred to the Board of Missions.

A communication from a leading minister in the Primitive Methodist Church, suggesting possible negotiations looking toward union with that body, was referred to President Broomfield for further investigation.

A question was raised as to the number of copies of the General Conference Journal to be published, and the Executive Committee advised the publication of an edition of 1,000 copies. Dr. Frank W. Stephenson was requested to take charge of the distribution of the Journal, and directed to appoint an agent in each conference to have charge of its sale. It is hoped in this way to secure a wider distribution of the report of the centennial session of the General Conference.

The report of the treasurer of the General Conference, Dr. James H. Straughn, was presented and discussed. Dr. Straughn was requested to prepare both the report of the current funds and the report of the Centennial Gratitude Gift fund for publication in the official papers of the church.

In a discussion of methods of procedure it was decided to continue the voucher method of payment with such adjustments and modifications as might seem to be wise.

It was decided that all salaries of General Conference officers shall begin as of June 1 and that in cases where increases or decreases in salaries have been made by the respective boards, the changes in the rate of payment shall be in effect from the same date.

The matter of the expense of board meetings being presented, it was decided that such expense shall be apportioned equally to the several departments whose interests are involved.

Recess was taken at 12:30 and the committee reassembled for business at 2 o'clock.

The report of Dr. Straughn, secretary of Promotion and Stewardship, with a brief outline of his program, was presented to the committee and carefully considered. Items of this report and outline will appear in communications from the secretary, and need not be presented in this connection.

In a discussion of the relation of the secretary for Promotion and Stewardship to the special days, it was decided that executive secretaries of the boards should take the initiative, calling upon the secretary for promotion for assistance in carrying forward the work as they might desire.

The secretary for Promotion and Stewardship was given some liberty in the equipment for his office, and in the arrangement for advertising, and the purchase and publication of literature to be used in his department.

The apportionment of the budget to the Annual Conferences was approved, leaving certain details to be completed by President Broomfield and Secretary Straughn. This apportionment will be published in an early issue of the church papers.

The entire missionary situation was given very careful consideration by the Executive Committee, and the president of the General Conference was requested to express their judgment in reference to plans being developed by the Board of Missions in completing the mergers of our missionary interests.

The assignment of the secretaries to the several conferences was arranged in consultation. This list will also appear in an early issue of the church papers.

This completed the business of a busy day, and the Executive Committee adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

CHARLES H. BECK, Secretary.

GENERAL CONFERENCE PRESIDENT'S REPORT

To the Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, in session at Baltimore, July 10, 1928.

Dear Co-Workers:

Nearly seven weeks have passed since the adjournment of the General Conference. The following sets forth in outline my official activities during that period.

On Friday, May 25, the day after the General Conference adjourned, I called together the Budget Council at 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, for organization, and counselled with them concerning our new program.

Pursuant to the directions of the General Conference, I convened the Board of Christian Education at Pittsburgh on Wednesday, June 6, and the Board of Missions at the same place on Thursday and Friday, June 7 and 8. On Monday, June 18, I met with the Pittsburgh Directory.

In keeping with the request of the Board of Missions, I accompanied Doctors Rosenberger and Sheridan to Detroit, where on Tuesday, June 26, we met with the pastor of the First Church, Rev. F. J. Hescott, and his official board, and reviewed with them their new building program.

The former Board of Home Missions had agreed to give to this church the sum of $3,000 toward its new building. This was paid, and at a later meeting it was decided to give $7,000 more when certain conditions were met by the local church. To this the congregation agreed. The conditions have not been met. Because of the urgency of the need, however, the committee from the board, which had been given power to act, agreed to secure for them by July 10 the sum of $2,000. In addition thereto the committee agreed to recommend to the board the payment to this church of monies due the former Board of Home Missions from the Michigan Conference.

In company with these same brethren on Wednesday, June 17, I met with the pastor, Rev. McVey, and the Quarterly Conference of the Mr. Lookout Church, Cincinnati, Ohio. We reviewed with them the problem and program incident to the completion of their church building. Dr. Stover, representing the Board of Church Extension of the Ohio Conference, met with us.

On Monday, July 1, in company with Dr. Sheridan, I went to Rochester, New York, and met with the pastor of our church in that city, Rev. Charles Weaver, and also with the Board of Church Extension of the Onondaga Conference. There was submitted to the meeting the plans of a new church building, calling for at least $50,000. Of this amount the Board of Missions had agreed to give $10,000, provided the local church would give $10,000 and the conference $5,000. After viewing the situation from many angles, the Board of Church Extension decided to report to the conference that the project was entirely too large for them to undertake.

On Sunday, June 17, I preached in our church in Washington, Pa., in connection with their 75th anniversary exercises. On Sunday, June 24, I preached in the Sheridan Church, in the Pittsburgh Conference; and on Sunday, July 8, I preached in both services in our Salisbury Church in the Maryland Conference.

On Monday, July 9, I met with our brethren of the Lower Peninsula Ministerial Association in their annual meeting at Sharptown, Md., and delivered an address. I was graciously received and enjoyed my visit.

My official correspondence has been quite voluminous and if it continues it may necessitate part time services of a stenographer.

No special problems were incurred in the merging of the Board of Education and the Board of Young People's Work.

Grave problems, however, are confronting us as the result of the merging of our missionary agencies. I am optimistic as to the outcome but in this transition period it is going to require much patience and prayer and unselfish counselling and effort to get our new plan operating smoothly and efficiently. It can be done and will be done.

Our special responsibility today, in addition to the apportionment of the budget, and the assignment of the secretaries to the Annual Conferences, is the adoption of a promotional program in keeping with the thought of the General Conference in creating the new office, to which Dr. Straughn was elected. I have asked Dr. Straughn to submit to you today such a program.

In answer to a request for an interpretation of the law of the church relating to who shall preside at congregational meetings, I answered that with two exceptions, the one where a charter provides who shall preside at the election of trustees, and the other where an annual conference specifies who shall have charge of the congregational meeting in which the delegates to the conference are elected—with these two exceptions the pastor presides at all congregational meetings. This is set forth in section V of the Constitution, page 21; and section III of the Discipline, page 47.

In answer to the question as to the right of an individual church on a circuit requesting the Quarterly Conference of the circuit to petition the Annual Conference to change the name of the circuit, I answered that the individual church was within its right in making such a request; but in the interest of harmony on the circuit, I advised the church in question to notify the other churches on the circuit that they would present such a request at the next Quarterly Conference.

J. C. Broomfield.

P. S.—These answers were approved by the Executive Committee.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

A Warning to Methodist Protestants

In these modern days of rapid transit along our denominational lines, I post a danger signal. The Centennial General Conference last May went into "high gear" from start to finish. The swiftness with which our ecclesiastical chauffeurs sped past the "filling stations" of Federation and Affiliation and rushed to the terminal of Consolidation leaves the passengers still dizzy. One Board of Christian Education, one great church paper, and one Board of Missions arose upon our startled vision like Jonah's gourd which grew up in a single night.

A trinity of church interests vast and vital! But not all-inclusive; for in our hot or holy haste (there may be a difference of opinion as to the proper adjective) we did not consider the wisdom of another triune consolidation: the Aged People's Home, the Children's Home, and the Westminster Theological Seminary. The first two are abundantly able to make known their own requests, so I appeal only for the last-named institution.

The Westminster Theological Seminary

Prospective Students! The Westminster Theological Seminary has never sought nor does it now desire union with any college, university, seminary or any other kind of organization. There is need of a strictly denominational school in which to train our ministers, missionaries, and leaders in religious education. Our seminary is highly esteemed outside our own fold—so highly esteemed that it is drawing students from the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South, the Presbyterian, the Episcopal, the Reformed, and the United Brethren churches.

I appeal to all young men and young women who are contemplating a theological course not to decide in favor of another institution until after they shall have communicated with me. Unless our school has the preference in their decision, there faces our church the twofold danger: loss of students trained in other schools and the closing of our own seminary.

Loyal Laymen! I appeal to you for the establishment of scholarships. The amount ranges from $100 to $300 per year. The gift may continue annually so long as you live and then be perpetuated by a legacy in your will. Or it may be discontinued any year you so desire. The highly endowed theological schools of other denominations are in a position to practically bribe our poor students to turn their backs upon their own seminary and follow the lure of lucre to their centers of learning. It may be urged that all truly loyal students will turn a deaf ear to such entreaties and that those who yield would be no serious loss to our church. But such an argument does an injustice to many genuine Methodist Protestants. When scholarships are offered which will pay all current expenses, carfare to and from home at the beginning of semester and at its close, as well as at Christmas time, and in addition employment part or even full time, a man or woman without means may feel forced to accept.

But it is within the power of you well-to-do laymen to prevent this disaster. You, as well as the laymen of sister denominations, have the ability and disposition to give money to help educate such needy persons in our seminaries. And you are doing it more and more. Last year we received for our scholarship fund over $3,000 for distribution. In addition to the annual donations, an increasing number are providing permanent scholarships. Only this week a $5,000 scholarship has been provided. If you write me that you are willing to help, I will either write or visit you personally and present the names and needs of more than a score of worthy and needy prospective students.

Well-organized churches! My final appeal is to you. Since we cannot find enough individuals to provide scholarships, we have always depended on local churches. There are those who have not failed for many years but we need many more such. I do not recall that I ever appealed to a church for a specific case that was not met cheerfully. If any pastor or official board will notify me that I may present this department of our work in their local church, I shall be happy to do so. It would not require many moments to convince them that if they are to have the high type of a thoroughly trained minister such as they constantly desire—and frequently demand—there is only one way to this royal road to success—and that is to provide the money which will educate the minister in the Westminster Theological Seminary.

Unless we train our own sons and daughters in our own institutions, our pulpits will be occupied by untrained ministers or by those so trained in other schools that they never sound our denominational notes but sometimes seduce the flock into a community fold. "A word to the wise is sufficient." So sure am I of the co-operation of prospective students, laymen, and churches, that I now repeat the challenge I have sounded for 32 years: No worthy and needy student has reason to fear being turned away from the Westminster Theological Seminary for lack of funds.

Write for a catalogue and any other information to President Hugh Latimer Elderdice, Westminster, Maryland.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Sunday

June 15.—We were with the Young People's Training School in two services, worshiping in the First Church, High Point, at 11 a. m., and in the college auditorium at night. Dr. P. E. Lindley was the speaker at each service. His messages were timely and helpful.

Summer Conference—Training School

We are giving this week to the Pastors' Conference and the Young People's Training School. These two assemblies provide a varied program that is full and helpful. Quite a group of young people from various parts of the church are in attendance, and a considerable number of pastors came in last night and today.

We are confident that these gatherings are potential of great good, and we trust that their full benefit may be realized by youth and age alike.

Under the auspices of the college, an educational rally is to be held tomorrow, with a picnic dinner on the campus. Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, is to be the principal speaker. We trust that many of our people will attend and enjoy the fellowship and inspiration of this day.

Special Edition of Herald

It is our hope to run such edition in the near future for the purpose of giving to the conference "in bird's eye view" what has been done during the year in building and repairing, both of churches and parsonages. It is our purpose to run a picture of all such churches and parsonages in this special number, with a brief word about each. The editor has very kindly consented to allow space for this, and we shall begin very soon to gather the material for this edition.

Thank You

For the ready and generous response to the urgent appeal that we were forced to make recently for annual conference funds. Through the generosity of a goodly number of charges our needs were met. And now we urge upon you the assurances of our grateful appreciation, as afore time we urged upon you our needs. And since "one good turn deserves another," we may ask you some time to do this again.

The Sands Are Running Rapidly

Let us "stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance" that the sands are running rapidly, and that this conference year is nearly ended. Just three and a half months remain, and two-thirds of the work, in some phases at least, is yet to be done. Surely we must "seize the day," and press the work along every line, that we may be able to give a good account when the time of reckoning comes.

Our Slogan

Did you get it last week? Here it is: "No charge without an Honor Roll church." As a help to this good end, we suggest that pastors give to each church an itemized statement of budget assessments, including everything, and then urge each church to go to work for this goal. It is our confident opinion that surprising and gratifying results will follow if this is done. And in all of our urging and planning, let us not forget to pray much, that God will provide the means that His church needs to carry on His work.

Attitudes

A boy friend once said to me, "Dreading a thing is always harder than doing it." That was years ago, but his words are still with me, and they have my full endorsement. When the remark was made I, of course, did not know anything about the psychology of what the boy was saying—not then, and not a great deal now. I suppose I felt then, though I do not recall my immediate impressions, as I have all along since, that what he said was true. But why? I think I know now. Dreading a thing we have to do means that we have a certain attitude toward it; and it is the attitude, and not the dread, that makes the thing hard. Were the attitude different, then there would be no dread. All of which means that the most important factor in success or failure is attitude. And nowhere is this fact more dominant than in the life of a minister. With him it ranks next to piety. Starting with piety as the first essential, the minister wins or fails according to his attitudes—his attitude towards himself, his calling, his charge, his denomination, his neighbors. Of course I can not go into a discussion here, but this, I think, may be said: a hopeful, buoyant, agreeable, and persevering attitude is the one that wins. Paul puts it well: "Cast down, but not in despair."

Assigned

On June 14, Rev. N. M. Harrison was assigned to Littleton charge to fill out the unexpired term of Bro. M. Ivey Crutchfield, who was released from the work June 7. We are gratified at this arrangement, and we predict results that will fully justify the assignment. We shall pray that God's blessings may attend the programs and the labors of this charge.

Sick

It will be regrettable to the brethren that Rev. C. H. Whitaker is sick, and must discontinue his labors at least for the present. His physician has ordered a complete rest, for at least a month. He seems not to have now any serious affliction, but the physician warns that his condition will become serious unless he takes a complete rest. I am sure that he will be in our thoughts and in our prayers.

He says, "The growth of complexity, high speed, and involved dangers of modern machinery absolutely bar out the use of alcoholic drink."

OUR STORY PAGE

NO BREAKUM INDIAN VOW

"You're not serious—you don't mean—you're going?" I gasped, trying to keep abreast of Pluggy Hale, my pal.

"I do mean it!"

"But we can't visit an Indian village after the sun goes down!"

"Why not?"

"There's a tribal law against it. They'll kidnap us!"

"The San Blas chief wouldn't kidnap us," assured Pluggy. "He is our friend, and if we enter his village at midnight, he will give us shelter until morning."

"But you are forgetting the San Blas vow!"

"Pooh!" scoffed Pluggy. "That oath is three hundred years old. I'll bet even the Indians have forgotten it."

The San Blas were savages who lived on the coast not far from the Panama Canal, and it was said of them that no white man had ever entered their village after dark and come out alive. Pluggy's father was a naval officer, and they were there trying to find a grade of sand that would make good cement for the locks of the Canal.

"But how are you going to let the village know that we are just on a peaceful visit?" I asked.

"By walking into it and asking the first squaw we meet where the Chief is. We'll pretend we came to give him the trinkets that he was so pleased with this afternoon when he visited our camp. When he accepts them, we'll tell him we would like to stay in the village all night. He'll forget tribal laws, vows to the sun and everything. That's simple, isn't it?"

I didn't have chance to answer, because just then three long, wicked spears shot through the air and buried themselves in the ground not ten feet of us!

"That means keep out, I guess," said Pluggy, grimly.

"L—let's go b-back," I stuttered.

"No. We can't lose our nerve now. We're going to march right into the center of that village!"

And we did!

I could have dropped at every step, but Pluggy was acting just as if the Indians had thrown flowers at us instead of spears. Glow Face, the Chief, was waiting for us near his hut. He stood tall and erect, frowning at the two white boys who had dared to break his laws by coming to his village at night. Pluggy was the first to speak.

"Don't you know me, Glow Face? I am your friend. You are my friend."

"I am friend of White Captain's boy when sun shine. When moon or star shine, I am San Blas Indian Chief."

"You are my friend, too," insisted Pluggy. "Glow Face, if white boy come to stay with San Blas, he show great trust to friend. You understand trust?"

"Trust is white man's palm."

"I come to stay all night with Glow Face."

"White boy no can stay all night."

"I have gifts."

"Glow Face swear by Great Spirit that no white boy stay same place as San Blas at night. Gifts no take."

"Look," said Pluggy, opening up a small case of trinkets. "Look, Glow Face. Here are combs, mirrors, beads and music stick. All for you if you give white boys hut to sleep."

Glow Face shook his head.

"No can take."

But the San Blas braves were not so stern as their Chief was. Pointing at the mirror and beads, sparkling in the moonlight like diamonds, one of them asked:

"What price?"

"Price sleep in San Blas village," answered Glow Face.

"Price cheap," grunted the warrior.

"Do not forget promise to Great Spirit."

"Call Council."

Luckily for us, the rest of the Indians were in favor of this last idea. There was a short pow-wow, after which Glow Face held up his hand for silence and said to Pluggy:

"How sound music stick?"

Pluggy saw that the Chief was weakening, so he dug down in the box and took the best harmonica he could find. He played one verse of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" better than I had ever heard him play it before.

"Good!" announced Glow Face.

He held out his hands and Pluggy gave him the harmonica. He held out his hands again and Pluggy gave him the whole box of trinkets.

"Wait," directed the Chief. "Wise men decide take or no take."

And with that remark he turned away and marched into his hut, followed by all of his braves. We were left alone in the middle of the large clearing. It was our chance to get away, and I told Pluggy so.

"Nope," he said. "Glow Face wants the harmonica and I want to stay in a San Blas village all night. Fair exchange is no robbery."

So we stood there until Glow Face reappeared at the door of his hut.

"White Captain's son," he said. "My Indians make vow to Great Spirit that when sun goes, San Blas be with San Blas, and no stranger be with them. No can break vow to Great Spirits, but medicine man say white boys sleep San Blas village because of great gifts.

I felt better right away, and Pluggy wanted to get sociable. But the Chief held up his hand.

"But where stranger is, there can be no San Blas also," he went on. "Glow Face go play music stick on hillside all night. San Blas squaws look in white boy's mirror and papoose play hunt in moonlight. Good. Price cheap for great gifts."

He grunted something to his braves and they scattered at once for the wood. The squaws came out of the huts and followed them. The children looked at us curiously and then disappeared between the trees. In two short minutes not even a dog was left in the village!

I looked at Pluggy and Pluggy looked at me. Then he laughed.

"You've got to give that medicine man credit for a lot of sense," he said. "Come on, let's go."

"Where?" I gasped.

"Back where we belong. There's no fun sleeping all night in a deserted village, is there?"—Selected.

HONEST, NOW—

Am I really and truly interested in my church—in helping it achieve its objects and ideals—or do I just think I am? What do I do to prove my interest—that it's half as vital, for example, as I think it is?

Am I a good example for anybody to follow, or do I just think I am? Or do I think about my responsibility in this connection at all?

Do I attend church services as often as I think I do?

How often do I speak a word of encouragement or praise to the minister, or have a pleasant word and smile for his wife? Do I as often as I think I do?

How would the minister classify me? As interested, indifferent, cold? As a friend and helper, or just as—one of the congregation? Would he be justified by what I do?

Do I really give as the Lord hath prospered me, or do I just think I do? If I should add up my contributions to local church support and to missions, would they represent as large a part of my total income as I think they do?

Would a stranger think me as liberal as I think I am, even if he had all the facts of my other responsibilities?

What kind of church member am I anyhow? Am I the kind I think I am, or do I just think I am?

I am going to try a little introspection along these lines.—Selected.

——?	——?

The receipts on A. C. B. are the largest in the number of charges remitting, and perhaps in amount, of any week during the year. Thirteen charges remit, and the amount of payments is $197.32. Asheboro leads with $50; Why Not is a close second with $35, and Forsyth follows with $25.

Mount Pleasant leads on the G. C. B. with $58.74; Enfield and Randolph follow with $28 and $25.58 in the order named. Flat Rock is the only charge remitting on the college.

Porter sends $1.70 for Superannuates and takes the distinction of being the FIRST charge to pay all claims in full. Hats off to Porter. I felt confident on my visit to this church that we would hear from them before the year was up.

Now that we are in the last lap of the race, and the home gong has already sounded, we will expect others to be coming in soon. Look at the list of "Charges Paying All Claims in Full." We have put a blank there with a question-mark after it. That blank is not like the laws of the Medes and Persians; it can be changed. Prove it, somebody! Won't you? And let me tell you how: Just a little note to Mr. Idol will do it. Come on now, brethren, and let's make this list grow.

TWELVE CHARGES STILL HAVE NO CREDIT ON ANY BUDGET. "My brethren, these things ought not so to be."

We pray that the great Head of the church may give us grace for the financial problems.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Orange Charge.—The third quarterly conference met with the Union Grove church Saturday, July 14th. The churches were all represented except Hebron. The conference business was transacted harmoniously.

The votes were counted and J. G. Jobe, of Hebron, was declared elected delegate to the next Annual Conference.

Conference adjourned to meet next at Chestnut Ridge church. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Pleasant Union, Mt. Pleasant Charge.—Some may think we are not doing very much because we are not heard from very often, but we are working and feel that much is being accomplished. We have a fine attendance at Sunday school and church services.

Sunday, July 8, we had our memorial and Children's Day exercises. The morning was given to the children and they rendered a splendid program. The children all did well. The collection at this time for foreign missions was $38.64. In the afternoon we had our memorial service, which was very impressive. During the past year we have lost two of our members.

We are delighted that the District Rally is to be held at Pleasant Union Church on Saturday and Sunday, July 28 and 29. We hope a goodly number will attend. From the outline program published in last week's Herald we feel sure that the rally will be inspirational and helpful.

We are glad to say that Mrs. G. F. Millaway, who has been ill for sometime is improving. On Tuesday, July 10th, Mrs. J. T. Bowman and Miss Callie Shepard, two of our members, underwent appendicitis operations at Wesley Long Hospital, Greensboro, N. C. Mrs. Bowman seems to be improving rapidly but at the present writing Miss Shepard's progress is slow. READER.

Midway Church.—Members of our church are encouraged by our larger congregations recently and we have a real treat in store for all those interest in a good sermon and lecture combined. On the fourth Sunday evening at 8 o'clock (July) Dr. Wilkerson, the returned missionary, will speak at our church. He will illustrate his lecture with motion picture slides of his work in Africa. Those who heard him speak before are waiting eagerly to hear him again. He is an able speaker and we are hoping he will have a large audience. Every one is invited. He comes at the invitation of the Missionary Society of Midway church.

In June the Sunday school gave a Children's Day exercise, which was well attended.

At the regular June Missionary meeting a missionary pageant was presented which was very favorably received.

Just now a movement is on foot to put a new piano in our church. It is badly needed, particularly since our revival is to begin the first week in August. Every great evangelist realizes the real value of good music, so he carries a trained singer with him in every meeting and gets the best piana available.

On the fifth Sunday we will have an evening service in preparation for the revival.

MRS. LEO PALMER, Reporter.

Eden, Halifax Charge.—We are glad to report that three of our members attended the convention in Baltimore. They were Mrs. R. C. Rives, Miss Blanche Hardee and Miss Winnie Burt. They gave a most glowing report at our services the first Sunday in June of the proceedings of the convention.

On the first Sunday in July we had our Children's Day service. It was the most interesting Children's day program we have ever had. In addition to the exercises by the children the Aurelian Springs quartette sang several numbers. Rev. J. C. Auman gave us some first-hand information concerning the mission work in Japan. This was greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

We are now looking forward to our revival which will begin on the first Sunday in August. Our pastor assures us that he has secured very able help for this meeting, but of course the success of the meeting rests largely on us. So let's give our time, co-operation and earnest prayers to this cause. We are asking the Christian people everywhere to pray for us that we may be much benefited by this meeting. REPORTER.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—On last Saturday night Bro. Curry met with us in our congregational meeting and we selected songs and made other arrangements for our Home-Coming Day, which will be next Sunday, July 22. We are expecting a large crowd. Come, everybody, and bring a dollar to help pay off the debt on our new church.

We had a nice crowd at Sunday school and prayer meeting yesterday.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Concord.—Since our last report, the following have been received into the church: Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hughes, coming from Mount Lebanon, Randleman charge, and daughter, Miss Edith Hughes, on profession of faith; Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hollyfield and children, Cecil and Elizabeth, coming from the M. E. church, Charlotte, N. C., and Mrs. S. O. Bundy, from the Presbyterian church, this city.

The work is moving along nicely, with good attendance at all services.

On next Sunday we are putting on a special effort to pay off an indebtedness of $4,000 on the Sunday school building. Most of this has been pledged already and if we can wipe out this debt next Sunday we are planning to get to work on a new auditorium, which is badly needed.

On Friday evening, July 6, the Baraca class entertained the Young People's class at a chicken supper in the dining room of the Sunday school building. The supper was the result of a contest between the two classes, the Young People's class winning. A splendid program was carried out and altogether it was an enjoyable occasion.

On next Friday evening the women of the Adult Bible class are entertaining the men of the class at a supper.

Mrs. B. F. Waddell and son, Paul, both underwent operations at the Concord Hospital last week, and are getting along nicely.

Rev. D. D. Nash and family, of Hopewell, Va., are visiting relatives here. Mr. Nash is new pastor of Hopewell Christian church, but was formerly one of our boys. He will occupy the pulpit at the night service next Sunday at our church.

Mrs. W. B. Perkins and Miss Kizzie Lou Simmons, of Tallahassee, Florida, nieces of Rev. G. H. Hendry, are visiting at the parsonage.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Luther Davis, a son, on June 24th, and to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cline, a daughter, on June 28.

Our pastor has been given a four weeks' vacation by the church, which he plans to take beginning July 23.

On next Sunday votes will be taken on our delegate to Annual Conference. Messrs. J. Shuford Polk and L. M. Williams are the nominees. MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Asheville.—Sunday was a very good day with us, although we missed Pastor Paschall in our services, he being in High Point to direct the Leadership Training School. Our good friend, Fred Willis, spoke at the morning service. His text was, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." Every one present felt that the message was for his special comfort. Mr. Willis is a consecrated business man. What he says is from his daily experience.

Sunday night the Christian Endeavor Society had charge of the services. The subject was, "Getting a Kick Out of Life." Bro. E. H. Pratt presided. The program was well carried out, many taking part. Bro. E. C. Fawcett will conduct the prayer meeting this Wednesday night.

Children's Day will be observed next Sunday.

We are very happy for the prospect of Miss Novella McIntyre's recovery. She is steadily improving.

Mrs. Ernest Bellamy and two small children, of Enfield, N. C., are visiting Bro. L. S. Neville for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Bosworth, of Florida, are attending our services. There are other visitors at every service.

Pastor Paschall attended the conference at the Asheville School last week. He was greeted by about 20 men from Whitakers, N. C., who came from the Van Meter meetings to share with the leaders and delegates of the Asheville School Conference.

Denton Church.—We are still going forward in our work. Our Sunday school is growing, and much interest being maniested. The Baraca class has purchased a new rug for their room, which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the room.

Our C. E. Society also is largely attended. The society recently had an outing picnic which was much enjoyed, and we understand that we will soon have another. We all welcome these trips, as it increases interest in the work aside from being a means to draw the society more closely together as a group.

The revival meeting which has been in session at Denton for the past ten days, closed on Tuesday night. The pastor, Rev. A. E. Bingham, who did his own preaching, delivered some good sermons during the series of services. On last Sunday morning 16 new members were received into the church, as follows: Wayne Morris, Robert Johnson,

Ames, Sexton, Edna Morris, Violet Cranford, Pauline Sexton, Inza Hill, Lillian Elliott, Allene Gallimore, Golden Morris, Dorthea Morris, Gertrude Bingham, Josephine Hill, Annabel Bingham, Alta Varner, Max Hill.

Rev. C. E. Ridge, of Handy, has just returned from Democrat where he has closed a successful revival meeting.

W. M. SEXTON.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—It has been some time since we sent in a report from this place, but we are making some progress in the Master's work. We are planning to hold our Children's Day service the fourth Sunday night. The pageant, "Wings of the Morning," will be given.

Our revival meeting will begin the second Sunday in August. Rev. G. H. Hendry, of Concord, will be our pastor's help. We are praying for a great revival.

The third quarterly conference was held yesterday, July 14th, at Fairview church. Mrs. Stella Connelly was elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

ROMAINE POOLE, Reporter.

Mt. Ebal.—Last Sunday was a red letter day for Mt. Ebal church. It was an all-day homecoming memorial day. Many from the different churches on the charge and community were present. Special music was rendered by the Mt. Ebal members, members of Denton church, and the Surratt quartette from Pleasant Grove. We appreciate all who took part and welcome them to come again. The writer preached in the morning, and Rev. N. G. Bethea in the afternoon. Brother Bethea brought us a fine message. We thank him for his message, and hope he will have the chance to be with us again. A large, full table was spread at the noon hour. The cemetery had been put in first class condition. All seemed to work together for a good day in the Lord's service. E. A. BINGHAM.

Kernersville.—The third quarterly conference of this charge will convene at the warehouse in Kernersville at 2:30 p. m. Saturday before the fifth Sunday in July. A full attendance of all official members is very much desired. Remember at this time the ballots are to be counted to find out who is elected to represent this charge at the next Annual Conference. E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Bess Chapel.—It has been some time since we have made any report, but it has been said, "Still water runs deepest." Under the guidance of Rev. M. C. Henderson our Sunday school and church work has been steadily growing until instead of just special occasions being our "big days" every Sunday is a "big day" for us.

Our Sunday school attendance and offering has more than tripled that of a year ago. One thing which we are especially proud of is the fact that so many young people, aside from the children, are attending church. The Sunday school is giving a lawn party July 21. Also, the Sunday school is going on a mountain trip sometime this month.

Our pastor brings us splendid messages every preaching Sunday.

We are going to have a Home-Coming Day August 12. We cordially invite all the former ministers and members of the church or any others. Our special meeting begins August 13, also. May we have the prayers of every one. N. E. B., Reporter.

Warehouse Meeting. A two weeks' revival service will begin at the warehouse in Kernersville the fourth Sunday in July at 10:30 a. m. The members of the three country churches of Kernersville charge and their friends are especially requested to take part in the meeting. Rev. N. G. Bethea, pastor of the M. P. church of Lexington, N. C., will be the pulpit help. Rev. J. L. Trollinger, of the First M. P. church, Thomasville, will lead the choir. E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—We held our Children's Day service the second Sunday night in July. The children did their parts well considering the time they had practiced. We had a large congregation but the offering was not what we had hoped for.

The Missionary Societies held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday afternoon, July 10, at the home of Mrs. Tidwell. Miss Kathleen Shearin conducted the devotional service and last month's minutes were read by the secretary, Rev. C. L. Spencer. Our pastor is a splendid secretary as well as a preacher. Various business matters were discussed and the following members were appointed as a committee by the president to increase the attendance and interest in our Missionary Society: Mrs. E. T. Ellington, Mrs. Ed Wood and Miss Kathleen Shearin. During the social hour Mrs. Tidwell served delicious refreshments.

The third quarterly conference convened at Hollister church on last Friday afternoon. All the churches were represented except Harmony. The usual transaction of business was held in a spirit of love and harmony. Mrs. T. C. Williams was declared our delegate to represent us at Annual Conference.

Several of our people attended the Warren County Sunday School Convention at Arcola the second Sunday in July. REPORTER.

High Point.—At the quarterly conference last Tuesday evening it was decided to call a membership meeting on Sunday morning, August 12th, to vote on the disposal by sale or trade of the parsonage property at 609 North Main street. The property is in the business zone of the city, and the lot, which is 80 feet in width, has become very valuable and it is thought that it will be best to sell and build a new parsonage on another location.

The Leadership Training School of the N. C. Conference met at High Point College last Saturday. An interesting service for these young people was held Sunday morning in First church. Rev. Fred W. Paschall, Dr. S. K. Spahr, President S. W. Taylor, Dr. P. E. Lindley and Rev. F. L. Gibbs occupied seats in the pulpit. Dr. P. E. Lindley brought the message and spoke on the subject, "Staggering at the Promises of God," and urged the young people to get out of the habit of thinking little thoughts. Those who come from homes of small achievement need not think that they are debarred from success in life. Have an ambition and live up to it faithfully and persistently. "He who serves his country well has no need of ancestors." God expects more of you than you expect of yourself. Ask yourself this question, "Does the future have any promise for me?" Dr. Lindley said that a few weeks ago as he and a friend stood at the foundation of old Jamestown Female College examining the bricks that remain there since it was destroyed by fire in 1861, an airplane flew over their heads, and he could but think that a teacher or pupil in the school had looked out of a window and beheld an airplane he would have been awe-stricken and incapacitated for any more work. We must close our ears to the fallacy that "God loves common people since He made so many of them." This is only a sop handed out to lazy folks, and is undue praise to the poor, ignorant, and shiftless. Then he begged the young people to honor their own originality. We can be what we will in this world, and whatsoever we desire or set our mind on, that will happen. "What I aspired to be and was not, it comforts me." The greatest poem is yet to be written, the most beautiful picture to be painted, the sweetest song to be sung. Perhaps you are the one who will do it. Steer by the stars of God, and look unto Him and trust in "thine own untried capacity." There was no evening service at the church but Dr. Lindley spoke again in the College auditorium.

The formal program of the Training School got under way Monday morning. There are more than 100 young people in attendance, and a faculty of 15 members. Officers of the school are the following: President, Rev. F. W. Paschall, of Asheville; director of music, Rev. E. L. Ballard, of High Point; pianist, Miss Ruth Vuncannon; recreation director, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, counselor for women, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, and counselor for men, Rev. R. C. Stubbins. Courses are being offered in vocational guidance, stewardship, Christian living, citizenship, denominational history, and evangelism. Monday evening the Pastors' Conference held its first session with President S. W. Taylor speaking. About 50 ministers were present. A rally and basket picnic will be held at the college on Wednesday, and at 2 o'clock p. m., Dr. J. C. Bromfield, president of the General Conference, will deliver an address.

The general monthly meeting of the Missionary Societies was held Monday afternoon at the church, and Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington, came and gave a beautiful address on "Service." He urged the members to tithe their time and talents as well as their material wealth. He spoke truly when he said that of all God's creatures women ought to be the most grateful, for Christianity has elevated them from the plane of mere slaves and beasts of burden to the high pedestal of honor on which they sit enthroned today. His trip two years ago with Rev. E. Lester Ballard through Palestine and the Orient greatly impressed him with this fact, as he noted the degraded position occupied by Moslem women in their native countries. He said as a boy he longed to be a preacher with a long-tailed, broadcloth coat and high silk hat, but he has gotten bravely over that idea long ago. He begged us not to lose heart if we cannot accomplish great things and occupy the seats of the mighty, but remember that "a cup of cold water given in my name" and "inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these" shall have their reward.

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—Our Children's Day program was given the fourth Sunday morning. Miss Gladys Stone trained the children and the service was a very good one. The offering amounted to $25.00.

Our Missionary Societies met at the church Friday night, June 29. Mrs. R. M. Edwards, chairman of Circle No. 3, had charge of the service. Miss Lois Huff gave the introduction to the new study-book, "Africa." The questions were then asked and the business transacted.

Friday night, June 23, the Mission Band met at the home of Mary Eliza Floyd. Sixteen members were present and they put on a very interesting program. After the meeting we enjoyed a social hour and the hostess served ice cream and we also toasted marshmallows out on the lawn.

Our revival meeting will begin the fourth Sunday. Rev. C. W. Bates, of Calvary church, Greensboro, is to be our help and we will be very glad to have him with us again.

Mr. H. A. Finch is very much improved after having been ill and confined to his room for several weeks.

We regret to report that Mr. J. M. Harris suffered a stroke of paralysis a week ago and since that time there has been very little change in his condition. His son, Bruce Lancaster, of Pine Grove, Pa., is at his bedside. REPORTER.

Randleman Charge.—Our third quarterly conference was held last Saturday in the new church at Worthville. A good attendance was noted. Since the second quarterly conference the above-named church was completed. Bro. A. R. Groce reported $200 paid on debt, note renewed, and insurance in good shape. On recommendation by the pastor the parsonage trustees were authorized to increase the insurance on parsonage furniture from $250 to $500, if on investigating they think proper to do so. Mount Lebanon reported their church newly painted. This church was re-covered on one side during the meeting of the Annual Conference at Asheboro. New Salem is about ready to re-roof.

Bro. A. S. Barker was declared delegate-elect to the ensuing Annual Conference.

The pastor was voted a two weeks' vacation, beginning the first of August.

Randleman, N. C., July 17, 1928.

Enfield.—Sunday morning we had Children's Day. The children with the aid of the young ladies of the Sunday school in the choir rendered a very pretty, entertaining and beneficial program. The committee in charge and that worked faithfully to get up the program consisted of Mrs. Cecille Matthews, Miss Ruby McGwigan, Miss Mae Bellamy and Mrs. Sam Pierson. The church was prettily decorated with ferns and daisies.

Our pastor left yesterday for High Point where he will attend the Leadership Training School. Miss Alma Sykes had charge of the registrations from our members.

Mr. Shields, one of our members who has been in bad health for some time, but had been confined to his bed for about ten days, was called to his reward last Friday morning. May God's great comforting love be with the loved ones he leaves.

We were gled to see Mrs. Powers at church Sunday morning. She is just out from a long spell of sickness.

Both C. E.'s are doing good work. The Intermediates went on a hike and wienie roast week before last. They had a jolly good time, hiking, making the fire for the roast, eating sandwiches, pickles, etc. After the feast on the things named every one joined in lively out-of-door games. All thought they would have to hike back to town in spite of feeling pretty tired but, to the surprise of all, a good friend of the C. E. came up in his truck and took all back to town.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Since our last report Rev. N. M. Harrison has been assigned to Littleton Circuit for the remainder of this Conference year. We are very glad to have Mr. Harrison with us and wish him such success. He will preach for us at this church the first Sunday in August at 11 o'clock, but he has promised to be with us in Sunday school one Sunday before then. We extend to him a hearty welcome to attend Sunday school any Sunday he can; be glad to have him. He is away this week attending the Young People's Summer Conference.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Littleton M. P. Church Saturday, July 28, at 2 p. m. All members please take notice and come.

Mrs. B. C. Barbee and children, of Farmville, and Mrs. B. H. Browning and children, of Richmond, Va., are spending some time with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Morris.

Our hearts were made sad by the death of Mrs. Jessie Carter, who died at Rosemary on July 13 and was brought to the "old home place" near this church yesterday for burial. She was not a member of this church but for several years lived right near and always attended services here, and she and her family always made the pastors of this church feel welcome in their home at any time. A large number of friends and relatives gathered to pay their last tribute of respect and honor to this good woman. She was 80 years old last November. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones.

Rockingham.—Our Sunday school is fine. We have a fine enrollment, good attendance and collection. The interest of all seems to be good.

Our good pastor, Bro. Trollinger, has been giving us the best of his service. He has met all of his appointments here since we last wrote. He delivered a very helpful and inspiring sermon to the Christians on the night of June 15. His message, we believe, will help us to think on the way.

Our prayer meetings are good, indeed. One of our new members, Bro. John Jenkins, is a great help in these meetings. We highly appreciate him and also others.

The pastor is holding the Wednesday afternoon services for the children. These meetings are very interesting and are well attended by the little ones. We like to see the little ones begin training now for life.

We held our third quarterly conference on Saturday night, July 14. The reports from the officials were good. We had an excellent report from the Sunday school. The votes for the delegate to Annual Conference were counted at this meeting. Miss Nettie McLean was elected as delegate and Mr. J. H. Collins as alternate.

We want to make this year count in the service of the Lord. Pray for us.

CHILDREN'S VIEWS

Calvary Sunday school contributes its collection the first Sunday in every month to the Children's Home at High Point. To remind all to be prepared for the offering a large card is exhibited on the preceding Sunday bearing the words: "Next Sunday is Children's Home Day." Mary Wood Swain, who is just learning to read, read this card the last time it was displayed. After she went home she said to her little brother: "We won't have to go to Sunday school next Sunday." "Why?" he asked with great interest. "'Cause it said in the church, 'Next Sunday is children's home-day!'"

—General Obregon, recently elected as Mexico's next president, has been assassinated. The assassin is in jail, but refuses to make any statement to justify or explain his deed.

—High Point College has just closed its first summer school. Prof. C. R. Hinshaw was at the head of it. There was an attendance gratifying in number—68.

—Next Sunday morning Calvary church people will worship with Grace church and hear a sermon by Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference.

—Rev. C. W. Bates goes to Union Chapel, Granville, to preach in a series of meetings next week. He was formerly pastor there and the people wish to see him and hear him again.

—Mebane is to have a milk condensery, the first in North Carolina. It will condense 50,000 pounds of raw milk per day. The quantity is said to be assured by contracts with farmers. Mr. W. E. White has taken the lead.

—Mr. Willard Harris, son of Bro. S. R. Harris, of Henderson, was married on June 30 to Miss Edith Bain, of Durham. They will live in Greenville, S. C., where Mr. Harris is in business.

LEADERCHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Missouri Conference of M. P. Church

The second Tarining School of the Missouri Conference in the Fordland Methodist Protestant Church, Fordland, Mo., June 1, under the direction of the Young People's Board of the Missouri Conference and the Department of Religious Education of the Board of Christian Education of the Methodist Protestant Church.

On Monday evening Rev. L. A. Smith, president of the Missouri Conference, opened the first service with appropriate scripture and prayer. He then introduced Rev. Lawrence Little, secretary of the Board of Christian Education, who brought a challenging message to the large group in attendance.

Mrs. J. W. Rhodes, president of the Board, and her helpers had everything ready for the 108 students, plus a number of visitors, that arrived for the occasion. Thorough preparation was made for the comfort and joy of each one attending.

The daily program was a busy one. The following courses were offered:

"Principles of Teaching," Mrs. Leslie M. Wheeler.

"Training in Worship," Rev. Lawrence Little.

"Evangelism, and Life of Christ," Dr. G. O. McMillan.

"Vocational Guidance," and "Science of Leadership," Rev. F. L. Gibbs.

Mr. A. C. Crouch, secretary of the Missouri Christian Endeavor Union, and Rev. Lawrence Little gave a joint course in Christian Endeavor methods.

The afternoons were given over to study, rest, and recreation. The writer never saw such an eager group to study and learn the things that would make for better service. Never has he seen a group in which every one seemed interested in the recreational activities. The school was divided into four groups, namely: Kola Akita, searchers for helpfulness and friendship to others; Onspe Akita, searchers of unattained heights; Iye Akita, searchers for my inner best self; Teca Akita, a searcher for new discoveries.

Competitive games were played in baseball, tennis, volley-ball, etc. Each group was called upon for a stunt on stunt afternoon. Points were given for the best stunt, winners of games, etc. 'Didn't we have lots of fun?" All groups contributed much to the program and received much commendation, but the Kola Akitas won the prize by obtaining the largest number of points.

The worship service came in the morning, 10:30-11:00 o'clock, and in the evening, preceding the evening services. The class in worship led by Rev. L. C. Little led the school in impressive services each morning while various faculty members and others brought us in close fellowship with God in the well-planned vesper services.

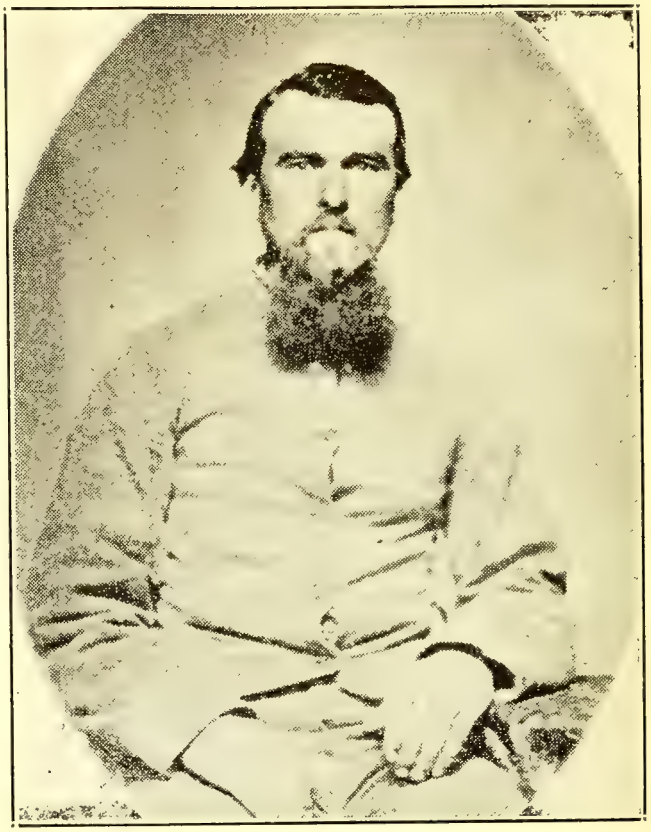
The evening services were well attended. Each evening some helpful message was brought to the students and visitors. Those giving evening addresses were: Rev. Lawrence Little, secretary Methodist Protestant Church; Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assistant secretary; Dr. G. O. McMillan, president Westminster College, Texas, and Rev. A. C. Crougch, field secretary, Missouri Christian Endeavor Union. These were helpful and inspiring. The most beautiful sight took place Thursday evening when 25 of the students came forward and signed the Methodist Protestant Life Service League Covenant to give their lives to the Kingdom in whatever vocation they may find themselves. Rev. Lawrence Little conducted this service, and delivered a challenging message to those present.

The people of the community gave the delegates lodging and breakfast. The other meals were provided by the church for the small sum of $4.50 for the week. One hundred and eight students took the courses and the following pastors attended from the Missouri Conference: O. M. Ennis, W. M. Goodnight, W. S. Mitchell, S. A. Gardner, W. M. Hines, L. A. Smith, Walter Saye, A. Greene, Irl Cox, Mrs. Hallie Cox, and E. R. Stribling. There was nothing that Rev. and Mrs. Irl Cox left undone for making the school members feel at home in the church and community. Mrs. Leslie M. Wheeler, one of the faculty, taught the delegates and Dr. G. O. McMillan delivered the morning message to a large gathering. Following the wonderful service, a basket dinner was served on the church lawn, which, as usual, was enjoyed by all.

May God bless and direct the ones who made the school possible.

F. L. GIBBS,
Assistant Secretary.

GEORGE W. SURRATT, 1835-1912



The above picture of the late George W. Surratt, in Confederate uniform, was made in Richmond, Va., in the year 1864, while he was serving as a soldier in the War Between the States. Mr. Surratt was a member of Company B, 48th Regiment, Davidson County troops, under command of Captain A. A. Hill and Lieutenant W. B. Hamner. He was never in the front line trenches at any time during the struggle, his duty being that of drummer. He beat the drum while the soldiers were forming in line of battle, also beat the charge when the lines were advancing against the enemy. While the battle was going on he fell back to the rear and helped take care of the wounded soldiers on the battlefield and in the field hospital, being very efficient in beating the drum and in his work among the wounded. He was never wounded during the war, being able to continue his duties without a break throughout the four years.

He received an honorable discharge at the end of the struggle, returning to his home in the Jackson Hill community of Davidson County, where he spent the remainder of his life on his farm, being very successful in his vocation and enjoying the confidence and good will of all who knew him.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Tribute of Love

We, the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Salem Methodist Protestant Church of Graham, N. C., Route 2, wish to offer a tribute of love to the memory of Mrs. Lavina Thompson, who died June 18th, 1928.

She was ever faithful in the Master's service, even though she had been in declining health for some time. Her church affairs were always first with her.

Whereas we recognize God's mercy and we know that "He doeth all things well," therefore, be it resolved, that we extend our sympathy to the members of her family and that a copy be put on the minutes of our society, and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

MRS. L. F. DURHAM,
MISS MINNIE THOMPSON,
MISS ILENE THOMPSON,
Committee.

Horney

Catherine Causey Horney was born Morch 25, 1853, and departed this life June 17, 1928. She was married in 1874 to Joseph A. Horney, who preceded her to the grave some years ago. When just a young girl she accepted Christ as her personal Saviour and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant Church. To this church she was loyal until death. Mrs. Horney was afflicted for a number of years, being a great sufferer, but was seriously ill only a few days. Just as the Sabbath day was drawing to a close, she quietly slipped away to wake in the home-land toward which her thoughts had been turned for many months.

The writer visited her frequently during her last illness, and during his visits she desired to talk about heavenly things, leaving one of the best testimonies that the writer ever heard. She has left an example of character, sympathy and devotion more valuable than spectacular achievement. Her memory will ever be revered by the children, her friends and neighbors. We may truly say of her:

"To live in hearts we leave behind,
Is not to die."

The funeral was conducted by Dr. T. M. Johnson, Rev. T. F. McCulloch and the pastor. Her tired body was then laid to rest in Tabernacle cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Morris

Joicy Loflin Morris died July 9, 1928, aged 76 years, 10 months and 24 days. About 55 years ago she was united in marriage with William T. Morris and to this union six children were born; a son died in infancy; five children survive. They are Mrs. Tom Peters, of Lexington; Mrs. J. R. Lanier, of Thomasville; Mrs. S. A. Lanier, of Handy; Mrs. John Frank Cranford, of near New Hope, and Mrs. Robert Skeen, of Handy. She also leaves a sister, Mrs. Hosea Harrison, of Handy; a brother, John Loflin, of near Thomasville; 17 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. On December 7, 1927, her devoted husband, who had been her constant companion for 55 years, passed over the river, since which time she has made her home with her children.

"Aunt Joicy," as she was familiarly known in later life, had a host of friends and was loved by all who knew her. She was converted and united with the Methodist Protesta church when a young girl, and remained a faithful member until death. She believed in the old-fashioned religion. Owing to the infirmities of health and old age, Sister Morris was not permitted to attend church very often. But she never lost interest in the work of the Kingdom, and her desire was to help her pastor in every way she could, realizing that a preacher's responsibility was great. Her life should be and is an inspiration to us, and her influence will continue to live in the hearts of her loved ones, who feel their loss most keenly. We can recall the time when Aunt Joicy's words were so true that it doesn't seem that she is gone, but she is. Why do we know? Because we can't see her in the old home place any more.

She was a mother to all children. She has filled the hands of a number of children many times with bread and meat; therefore, she had the love of all the little children as well as older ones.

BY A NEIGHBOR.

Phillips

On June 3rd, 1928, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to take from our midst Mrs. John Phillips, a loving member of our Philathea class. Before her marriage she was Miss Lizzie Sutton. She is survived by her husband and two small children, her parents and one sister.

Though quiet and unassuming in her manner, she was interested in the work of the class and was present when health would permit.

Be it Resolved, that, we as individual members, hold in loving remembrance her Christ-like spirit and that we extend to the bereaved family our heart-felt sympathy in this great sorrow.

Also, that a copy of these resolutions be placed on the miniutes of our class.

Walker

Hal Worth Walker, son of the late Dr. J. O. and Kate Scroggs Walker, was born June 26, 1895, and departed this life while on the way to the Sanford Hospital, following an automobile accident on July 7, 1928.

While a young man he enlisted in the U. S. Navy and served as Quartermaster on the U. S. S. Utah for three years. At the outbreak of the World War he volunteered for service and was a member of Company K, 120th Infantry, 60th Brigade, and was wounded in France. He also spent almost a year on the Mexican border.

On April 7, 1917, he was united in marriage to Miss Harriet Hammer, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro.

On March 31, 1918, he united with the Asheboro Methodist Protestant Church by letter, where his membership continued for the remainder of his life.

The funeral was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hammer on Sunday afternoon, July 8, at 4 o'clock and was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. L. W. Gerringer, a former pastor. A great throng of people were present to extend their sympathy to the living and to pay their respects to the dead. The floral offerings were immense.

He is survived by his wife and two children, Hal Hammer Walker and Jean Page Walker, one brother, James Walker, of Charlotte, N. C., one sister, Mrs. Charles Broadfoot, of Fayetteville, N. C., and his grandfather, Col. J. E. Walker, and many other more distant relatives. To all of these who feel this loss most keenly the writer extends his sympathy.

J. E. JRITCHARD.

Hendrix

Sarah R. Hendrix was born December 18, 1848, and departed this life July 8, 1928.

She was married to Franklin Hendrix May 30, 1867, who preceded her to the grave July 2nd, 1904. To this union nine children were born, four of whom preceded her to the grave. Surviving are five children and ten grandchildren. The children are: Mrs. C. V. Kirkman, of Salisbury; Mrs. E. E. Hester, of Greensboro; John C. Hendrix, of Pleasant Garden; Henry Hendrix, of Winston-Salem; one sister, Miss Angeline Causey, of Greensboro, who is 93, and one brother, Cicero Causey, of Liberty, also survive.

Mrs. Hendrix had been a member of the Methodist Protestant church at Tabernacle for more than 60 years.

The funeral was held at Tabernacle July 9, conducted by Rev. G. F. Millaway, assisted by Revs. S. K. Spahr, J. D. Williams, C. W. Bates, H. L. Isley, T. F. and J. F. McCulloch. The Tabernacle choir and four singers from Grace church sang. The floral offerings were beautiful and elaborate.

Mrs. Hendrix lived a quiet, peaceful life, and has now entered into the rest that remains for the people of God.

Hendrix

Little Annie Ruth, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Hendrix, died July 1, 1928, aged one year, one month and 16 days. Her mother died May 24, 1928, after an illness of measles. Little Annie Ruth soon contracted measles and a complication of diseases followed. She lingered between life and death for about five weeks and has now gone to be with Him who said: "Suffer the little children to come and forbid them not."

The funeral service was conducted in the Advance M. E. Church Monday, July 2, 1928, by Rev. J. W. Braxton, assisted by Rev. T. A. Williams.

Fletcher

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society and Missionary Society, offer a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. James R. Fletcher, who was a loving member of both societies.

Although quiet and unassuming in her manner, she was always interested in the work of the societies and was present when health would permit.

Resolved, that we, as individual members, hold in loving remembrance her Christ-like

Isley

Mrs. Polly Isley went to her final rest on July 4, 1928. She would have been 85 years old had she lived 11 more days. For several years she had lived with her daughter, Mrs. T. W. Booker, Graham, N. C.

The deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. T. W. Booker; two sons, J. M. Isley and G. M. Isley, Graham, N. C., Route 1; one brother, Joel Sharpe, Burlington, N. C., Route 1; seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Besides these relatives there remain a host of friends to mourn the loss.

Funeral services for the deceased were conducted at Mt. Hermon Church July 5 at 3 o'clock. Revs. D. R. Williams, D. I. Offman, and J. Elwood Carroll were in charge. The body was interred in the church cemetery.

Truly, Mount Hermon Church has lost a "Mother in Israel." Mrs. Isley had been a member of this church for nearly three-quarters of a century. We find in her progeny the same Christian spirit as was in her. Her love for the Master is even expressed in the second generation. When we see these descendants following Christ we know that Mrs. Isley was a mother in the Word.

A Protest

"My Dear Mr. McCulloch:

"I am so impressed by the action of our clergy at High Point Conference going into politics by public announcement, condemning a candidate that thousands of us laity will support at the polls. This of course will cause bickerings and dissension and withal much harm to effectual work in advancing Christianity. I am a Prohibitionist myself and have voted for it repeatedly, and am just as dry as any minister who voted for the resolutions at High Point, but cannot endorse such conduct of our clergy. I think it unconstitutional to mix church and state. In fact, it is contrary to the written law, which should be obeyed by all men as well as the clergy. I am afraid that intolerance had more weight in that resolution than the wet issue.

"I have been a Methodist Protestant for 54 years, but this is the worst shock from the clergy that has ever come my way.

"I think a preacher has a perfect right to his opinion in politics and a right to express it privately and vote it, but when he makes public in the church service such opinion the effect is bad on every man who thinks differently.

"This brief missive is simply my feeble protest against such action as outlined in the foregoing.

"Hoping the editor will publish it, I beg to remain

"Fraternally and truly yours,

"A. H. Redding.

"Cedar Falls, N. C., July 18, 1928."

"P. S.—Please read Bishop Candler's opinion on this line as published in the newspapers some days since.

"A. H. R."

We have known and highly esteemed Dr. Redding for years and believe that he is entirely sincere in what he here says. The incident reveals the need of a more discriminating study of the relation between church and state in our country. Evidently there is confusion on the subject. We have read what Bishop Candler said, and recall that in the last year or two he had long articles in the newspapers concerning evolution, which is no more intimately connected with religion than is an election about prohibition. We also remember that three bishops of the same church to which Bishop Candler belongs are taking a prominent part in the political agitation of the time. So you see, Bro. Redding, that our ministers in High Point Conference could plead that they had good precedents.

The editor of the Herald was not present when the action complained of was taken, but we have read the report of it in the daily paper. The gist of it was that the ministers pledged themselves to oppose the election of wet candidates for political office from the presidency down. This shocks you, Doctor, but it would have shocked me greatly if they had pledged themselves to vote for any wet candidate. Your position is that they should not have expressed themselves on the subject at all in any public way. Well, Doctor, I think you are honest in this opinion, but I also think you are mistaken. It is the business of ministers to study religious and moral questions and to instruct the people in the ways of righteousness. Christianity applies to man's social life as well as to his individual life. The minister of the church cannot speak with authority to compel obedience as can the minister of the state, but he can speak as an adviser and counselor. He feels that he must so speak. He feels not only woe is me if I preach not the Gospel, but also woe is me if I discharge not my duty to society by warning against imminent dangers. He is a watchman set upon the wall. When he sees the enemy approaching he must cry out and sound the alarm.

Conscience is to some degree a creature of education. Your conscience tells you that the ministers erred in doing what they did. Their consciences tell them not only that they had a right to do what they did, but that they were morally bound to do it, that they discharged a duty in doing it.

A crisis has come to the nation. After long years of great and agonizing effort, after much suffering and earnest prayer to God, the liquor traffic was finally outlawed. It still exists but to a greatly reduced extent and with far less power to hurt and can in the course of time be exterminated if it remain an outlaw. But there is a conspiracy among lovers of strong drink to give the traffic legal standing again, to throw about it the protection of law and government. That conspiracy is expressing itself in movements of this presidential election. It hopes to win by a combination of forces. It hopes to bring together in one group as voters the wets of both parties and the regular party voters of one of the great parties and elect for president a man whose record leaves no doubt that he would lend himself to the scheme to bring liquor back into good standing.

With such a situation confronting us it seems to us that every voter has reason to be profoundly grateful to anyone who will help him to see that his party regularity and his loyalty are being used to lead him to help put over a scheme that would horrify him if he saw it in all its naked ugliness.

Yet we agree with you, Doctor, that the minister's office is so high and so holy that it must never be desecrated by turning aside to engage in personal controversies and party disputes. While the minister must be free to express his moral conviction at proper time and place, he must never take advantage of his high position to urge his personal preferences.

An Apostle's Charge to a Young Minister

Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry. —Paul to Timothy.

THE PASTOR AND HIS PUBLIC WORSHIP

By Rev. C. W. Bates

(Read at the Ministers' Summer Conference)

The minister of the gospel in his relation to the services of the sanctuary occupies a two-fold office. He is both a prophet and a priest. As prophet it is his business to proclaim the unsearchable riches of God, to declare the whole counsel of God, to reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and patience. As priest he is to direct the people in their worship, to lead them to a throne of grace, to help them to tune their hearts to sing God's praise, to behold wondrous things out of His Law.

Perhaps we have put too much emphasis as Methodists upon the minister as a prophet. We have come to think of the priesthood of the minister as a secondary matter. They are, I think, of equal importance if our people are to find a well-developed and a well-rounded helpfulness in the church service. I am persuaded that that is not now the case in a great many of our churches, especially in our rural churches.

I do not know who is to blame, but I rather suspect the fault lies with our preachers. Like priest, like people. In our reaction to ritual, we have thought the preaching of the gospel is to be the main thing. And we have swung to the extreme. We need a balance. The result of that over-emphasis has created in the minds of the people who attend the church service the idea that about all there is to it is the sermon. I protest that that is not all there is to it, as important as that may be. We call the rest of the service "the preliminaries," the folks say they are "going to preaching." So the prophet is exalted in his own estimation and in that of the folks who listen to him, and the priest is forgotten.

Now, it is my purpose in this paper to put the emphasis on the worship of the sanctuary. I shall not minimize the preaching, I shall ask you to think of it as part of worship, as one of the items in the order of service.

To emphasize my position, let us imagine this is Sunday morning and that we are going to church at the Zebulon appointment on Jerusalem circuit. It is time for service when we arrive, but nobody seems disposed to start. The women are in the church talking over their domestic affairs, the small talk of the community, which may be good or bad. But not much is being said of holy things on the holy day. The men are outside, talking about the crops, the weather, politics, and so forth. But nobody says, Let us go into the house of the Lord, and nobody rejoices to have somebody say it. But, presently, the bell is rung, and we go in. The preacher mounts the pulpit, turns in the direction of the choir, or what is supposed to be a choir, and says, "Will somebody make a selection?" A selection, which only one time in ten has the remotest resemblance to a hymn of praise, is made, and a few folks over in one corner attempt to sing it. They sing half-heartedly, as if it were somewhat of a burden. The others, some standing and some sitting, endure to the end in silence. Perhaps another hymn is sung in the same manner. And then the preacher prays himself or calls on some one else. If he prays himself he may say something new; if he calls on some one else, it will probably be the same prayer that the folks have heard since time began. But whoever prays, the prayer is so often not the united petition voiced by the preacher or the one who prays, of the needs and the desires of the congregation. It may not have the slightest relation to the matter in hand. Following the prayer is the reading of the Scripture, chosen frequently in a haphazard manner, and read without much understanding either on the part of him who reads or of those who hear. Then the choir makes another selection. The offering is omitted, the people are not accustomed to bring an offering into the courts of the Lord's house to lay upon His altars. And then comes the great moment of the service. The preacher announces his text, and for the next forty-five minutes or an hour proceeds to expound, to pound, to exhort and to exhaust his audience. And, having finished, prayer is made, a song is sung, the benediction is pronounced, and the folks proceed to take up the thread of gossip that was cut off when the service began. The folks congratulate the preacher on his fine talk, and immediately proceed to forget what he talked about. They have been in church an hour and a half, but they haven't worshiped.

Now, I suppose some of you are saying, "We don't do it that way in any of the churches I serve." I sincerely hope they don't. But I do know they do it that way in a good many churches. And I do protest against it. And because there may be some of the brethren here this morning from churches where they do do it that way, I wish to show unto you a more excellent way.

But I want to say first that I am not a ritualist. I do not believe in too much of the forms of worship. I know a certain church where forty-five minutes is taken up in the items of the order of service and fifteen minutes, or twenty, given to the sermon. I do not like that. The great themes of the gospel can't be declared in fifteen minutes. That program is as much out of balance as the one I have imagined, which gives fifteen minutes to the items of the order of service and forty-five to the sermon. There is a happy medium, and I think we can find it and use it to the glory of God and the edification of his saints. That happy medium, with certain changes to suit local conditions, can be found in the "Order of Public Worship" in our Church Hymnal. I should like to take up some of the items of this "Order."

By way of parenthesis, perhaps you are objecting that your churches do not use the Church Hymnal. They should, but it is not absolutely necessary in the carrying out of this order of service. Any song book that has responsive readings in it, and most of them do, will serve the purpose, provided it has the right kind of hymns in it. But let us consider these items:

1. "Organ Prelude." This is a song without words played as a signal to be quiet and to prepare the hearts of the people for the further exercises. It is not a place for the organist to show her ability at the instrument. It is rather her opportunity to contribute to the success of the service from a worship standpoint. Much depends upon the manner in which it is played, and upon the matter. It may bring up old memories and change the attitude of the audience. It ought not to be omitted.

2. The Doxology. How many of you have ever heard it in the average church service? Why not "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," every Sunday, at the ending of every week, at the begininng of every service? Perhaps you are saying, But the people don't know it. More's the pity! They have forgotten how to praise! But it isn't a difficult piece to learn, and it will do the people good to sing it.

3. The Invocation. Just a word of blessing, of thanksgiving, of praise, for the mercies of the past, for the privileges of the present.

4. The first hymn. It ought to be a hymn of praise. "Let the people praise him; yea, let all the people praise him." They ought to have a chance to express their gratitude through song for all the Lord hath done for them. When we sing something else, we deprive them of the privilege of praise.

5. The Responsive Reading, the Apostles' Creed, and the Gloria. These are somewhat related, and can be mentioned in one paragraph. The responsive reading serves two purposes: It gives the congregation a chance to take part in the service; it helps them to express some of the thoughts of their hearts. The Psalms from which the readings are taken are not the expression of the writer of them in the long ago. They are the expression of the universal heart in every age and every clime. The Apostles' Creed is our declaration of faith as it has been the declaration of the saints in all the past. We have not outgrown it, we haven't outlived it. We need it today. "I believe, help thou mine unbelief!" And if, perchance, you falter when you come to declaring your faith in "the Holy Catholic Church," either change that word Catholic to universal, or remember that it hasn't the remotest reference to a denomination but includes all those who worship God and accept Jesus Christ as the Divine Lord and Master of us all. And the Gloria, shall we leave it out?

6. The Scripture Lesson. Some preachers select it after they get in the pulpit. Some select it before but do not read it over. Some take great care to find a scripture that will give emphasis to the sermon they are to preach. Which is the best way? The Scripture lesson ought to be selected with care, it ought to be read with care, both before the preacher goes into the pulpit, and when he stands before the people. If he is not familiar with the meaning of it, if he does not know how to pronounce the words in it, if he cannot read it intelligently, he has not edified his people in the reading of it. Let the preacher understand two things: First, he is reading his people part of a letter from God. Second, they probably haven't read it before. There are any number of Bibles in the homes of our folks. But many of them never hear it read except from the pulpit. How carefully, therefore, ought the preacher read it that the people may hear it, and their hearts burn within them as the Lord talks with them out of His Book.

7. The Prayer. It is here that the priesthood of the minister is shown. In the days of the Levitic priesthood the man of God went into the holy place, and into the holy of holies, to place upon the altars of the sanctuary the offerings of the people, the thank-offering and the offering for sin. This he did for himself as well as for the worshipers. He represented the people before the Lord. What he offered was the expression of the united heart of Israel. We wear no vestments, we bear no offerings of sheaves or sheep, the altar is gone with its bloody sacrifice. But the priesthood still remains. It is our supreme privilege to make vocal the desires of those who gather in the house of God. They know not what to pray for as they ought, perhaps they do not pray at all except as they are led in prayer by the man in the pulpit. Their thanksgivings, their aspirations, their sorrows, their sins—all of these we may bear for them to a throne of grace. We are to make supplication for all the saints.

I am more and more impressed with the importance and the opportunity that this season of prayer affords us to minister to our congregation in holy things. Here they are before us, and before the Lord; many of them are sinsick, many of them are overborne with sorrow, many of them have anxieties that they hardly dare express, many of them are tempted overmuch. Their sins, their struggles, their sorrows—how much they need some one who can in some adequate way present them before God! I confess to a great inadequacy in this respect, and my prayer is the prayer of those who must have heard Jesus pray in some such way as this: "Lord, teach us how to pray."

8. Announcements, Offering, Offertory, Anthem. Some of these are not especially important, and can hardly be called essentials to worship. Announcements are frequently far from conducive to a devout spirit. If made at all, they ought to be as brief as it is possible to make them. The anthem and the offertory are, of course, musical numbers that are supposed to prepare the hearts of the worshipers for the sermon to follow. Sometimes they do, and sometimes they don't. In most places a hymn would be of more benefit than an anthem. And the offertory need not be an elaborate display of musical technique.

But I would not omit the offering. The ancient Israelites brought an offering as a necessary part of worship, and even the widow cast in two mites as she entered into the courts of the temple. We miss something worth infinitely more than what we give when we fail to worship God with our gifts. "Bring an offering, and come into his courts." Some time ago, Conference passed a law requiring pastors to take an offering at each regular service, and to answer the question on the Pastor's Personal Report Blank, "Have you taken an offering at every regular service on your charge?" I do not see the necessity of making any such requirement. Rather we should look upon it as an act of worship, and be glad, not only to do so ourselves, but to allow our people to do so.

It is not simply a matter of money, which may add more or less to our finances. That will be a result. It is primarily a matter of worship, which will add greatly to our spiritual good. We ought to insist upon it because it is a means by which we grow in grace. We cannot omit it from public worship, any more than we can omit the prayer, the hymn, the Scripture, the sermon, without being the poorer for the omission. It is a significant thing that Paul follows his great chapter on the resurrection with directions concerning the collection for the saints, and urges that it be taken on the first day of the week. The fact of the resurrection ought to get hold of our hearts. It ought also to get hold of our pocketbooks.

9. The Sermon. It is not in the province of this paper to discuss the sermon, and I shall leave that for some one else.

10. The Prayer. Just as the first prayer was a combination of thanksgiving, petition, intercession, so this prayer ought to take the sermon and the hearers up to the throne of God that he might bless his preached word, and fasten its truths in the hearts of the hearers. The seed is the word, the ground is the hearts of men. We ought to ask God's blessing upon the seed, the sower and the soil, that out of it all there may come the harvest of souls reborn, of lives rededicated.

11. The closing hymn. This hymn ought to be chosen with as much if not more care than either of the others. It ought to be a hymn of consecration, a message to the hearts of those who sing to put the sermon into practice. It ought to clinch the argument of the sermon, and be a mighty urge to go out and live it. And it ought to fit the sermon theme. Some of the most incongruous blunders, blunders that have destroyed the effect of the sermon, have come because the sermon and the song didn't fit. Any old hymn won't do for a closing hymn. Choose one that will drive your message home.

12. It isn't in the order of service, but I am going to suggest another item—the reception of members. A place where any who may be disposed can make their confession of faith, can find Christ as their savior, and can unite with the church. There will be many services, perhaps, when no one will avail himself of the opportunity presented by this item in the order of service; but there will be occasions when we will be glad it was there. Some will find Christ as a result of the sermon or of the service, and will make his decision for him and for his church. We ought not to have it appear that the only time men can find Christ is during the special meeting. They ought to know that in every service there is a place to bring that decision to a head, a time when they may unite with the church. For one, I propose that that shall always be an item in my order of service.

13. The Benediction. It is not a perfunctory sign that the service is ended. It is a bene-diction, a "word of blessing." The minister as priest, as the priest of the long ago, holds out his hands in blessing upon his people, his flock. Following that blessing they will scatter, each to his own place. As a flock he will see them no more for a week, for a month; and perhaps, when he meets them again, some will have gone astray, some will have gone away. And so a word of blessing before they go. And how beautiful is that word: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit, be with you all." Grace, love, communion—how the flock of God does need them all. And the blessing is old, the Apostolic Benediction. The saints have heard it in every tongue, and if they heard it aright, it has brought them peace and power as they have gone out of the house of God. Don't try to improve on it, don't try any substitute for it. Let them have it as it is.

The folks who have engaged in such a service as this order calls for have not simply come to preaching, they have come to worship. If they have entered into it in the right spirit, not merely as a form of worship, but as a means of grace, the things that have led up to the sermon have not been mere preliminaries. They have been, rather, steps to the altar, each a nearer approach to that spiritual attitude which is most conducive to a right hearing of the message. I beg of you, brethren, exalt the order of public worship in your churches, and give the people whom you serve an opportunity through this activity to grow in grace. It will enrich their lives; it will help you as you minister to them in holy things.

—The Pastors' Summer Conference was pronounced one of the most practically helpful sessions yet held. Rev. G. L. Curry was re-elected president, Rev. R. C. Stubbins vice-president, Rev. J. L. Trollinger secretary, and Rev. H. L. Isley treasurer. The time of meeting next year was left to the determination of joint committees representing the Pastors' Conference and the Young People's Training School.

TOO TIRED TO GO TO CHURCH

You are "too tired to go to church?" That's sheer nonsense. There isn't a place on the continent so restful as the church. You are going to lie around the house all day in a hammock; loll in a big rocking chair; go to sleep over a book. Tell yourself honestly—did you ever see a loafer who didn't look tired all the time.

A group of laborers had worked all the morning digging a sewer excavation. They had eaten their dinners from the little tin pails and now were "resting." Some of them were pitching quoits. They were workmen "resting." And sitting on the curbstone watching them—too lazy to even stand up and look up and out at them—were the loafers, who had been watching them work all the morning. These fellows were too tired even to join the games by which the workers rested themselves.

You have no need to loaf all day. An hour in church, an hour of the quiet, the sermon, the reading, the uplift which comes from the new channels into which your thought, your mind, is led, will rest you more physically, morally, intellectually, than all the day spent in trying to "rest."—Bulletin, First Baptist Church, Knoxville.

WHAT PRAYER IS WORTH

Hudson Taylor was a man of great faith in God as well as a great missionary. When he first went to China it was a sailing vessel. Very close to the shores of a cannibal island the ship was becalmed and it was slowly drifting shoreward, unable to go about. The savages were eagerly anticipating a feast. The captain came to Mr. Taylor and he sought him to pray for help of God.

"I will," said Taylor, "provided you set your sails to catch the breeze."

The captain declined to make himself a laughing stock by unfurling sails in dead calm.

Taylor said: "I will not undertake to pray for the vessel unless you will prepare the sails."

And it was done. While engaged in prayer there was a knock at the door of his stateroom.

"Who is there?"

The captain's voice responded, "Are you still praying for wind?"

"Yes."

"Well," said the captain, "you'd better stop praying, for we have more wind than we can well manage."

And, sure enough, when but a hundred yards from shore, a strong wind had struck the sails of the boat, so that the cannibals were cheated out of their pray.—Selected.

—The visit of Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, to North Carolina was enjoyed by those permitted to hear him speak. He spoke in the pastors' summer conference, in Burlington on Thursday night, in Grace church on Sunday morning, and in Calvary church Sunday night, besides attending to some church business in Lexington. He left the state Sunday night, but promised to come back. He is interested in the Methodist Protestant Church everywhere and we believe will quicken the interest of many in the work given our denomination in the providence of God.

A STATEMENT FROM THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS

The last General Conference gave the Board of Missions a very difficult task to perform. In carrying out that mission the Board pledges itself to act with fairness and justice toward all the interests of the church, according to its best judgment. We have nothing to conceal, and shall follow a policy of utmost publicity. Through the church papers your Board of Missions will take the whole church into its confidence.

We trust that, in the long run, the new policy of the General Conference will prove a great benefit to all our work by uniting the entire force of the church back of the whole program of the church. In working out the details of this program it will be impossible to please every one in every particular, but Paul says "we are all one body fitly joined together, and one member cannot say to another, I have no need of thee," therefore we pray for your patience and co-operation in this new and highly important venture of the church.

Many questions have been asked by those who are deeply interested in this work, and most of them are answered in the new Constitution and By-Laws and the report of the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions, however, there are a few other things you will be interested to know. Beginning September 1, 1928, all monies raised by the women for missionary purposes should be sent to Mrs. Marie Thompson, 516 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md. Until that time it sohuld be forwarded to Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., at the same address.

A complete record of all funds raised by the women of the church will be kept by the Associate Executive Secretary, and all designated funds will be used for the purpose for which they are designated, providing they are not used by the local church as a credit upon its assessments for General Conference benevolences. The General Conference apportioned 35 per cent of its budget to the two women's missionary societies. Therefore, a credit for 35 per cent of the amount which the local church counts on its General Conference assessments may be taken from the money which the women raise for missionary work. All other monies raised by the women will be used as they direct, but will not be credited on the local church assessments for General Conference Benevolences. Any other distribution would be a misappropriation of funds, and would give to one Board money which the General Conference had apportioned to another.

All the present officers of branches and auxiliaries, in both Home and Foreign work, are expected to continue their work as usual until such time as a union can be effected by a joint meeting of these branches or auxiliaries and new officers elected as provided for in the new constitution and by-laws.

Mrs. Marie Thompson, Associate Executive Secretry, begins her duties August 1, 1928. For the month of August she will share the office with S. W. Rosenberger at 2525 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio. On September 1, 1928, she will move to 615 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., and have her office in conjunction with Dr. G. H. Haddaway who will at that time assume the duties of Executive Secretary of the Board of Missions.

The General Conference Executive Committee has decided that the expenses of the meetings of the Board of Missions shall be shared equally by the four departments of the Mission Board.

The salary of the Executive Secretary and his stenographer will be charged against the percentage allowed the Board of Home Missions and the Board of Foreign Missions. The salary of the Associate Executive Secretary and her stenographer will be charged against the percentage allowed the W. H. M. S. and the W. F. M. S. The division of this expense, which was left with the General Conference Eexecutive Committee, has not yet been decided.

The new Constitution and By-Laws for auxiliaries, providing for a division of the women of the church into circles, is flexible and may be adapted to local conditions. In small churches the women may combine all their work in one auxiliary meeting during the month, and eliminate the idea of circles. It is hoped that all the women of the church will become interested in the work, and that in order to give them something to do it will become advisable to divide them into circles, where more women can develop their qualities of leadership, use their initiative and express themselves in service. In such cases the circles are expected to include the whole work of the auxiliary in their activities. In case the women of the church desire to raise money for local church purposes the amount they wish to raise can be added to the budget handed down from the branch. The total then will represent the auxiliary budget for the year, which, in case the women are organized into circles, will be apportioned among these circles. The amount raised for local church purposes will be retained by the local auxiliary treasurer and the amount raised for Home and Foreign missions sent to the branch treasurer.

Certain churches may find it somewhat difficult to introduce this new program; it is never easy to change our fixed methods, but we sincerely hope that no one will become easily discouraged, and allow the great cause of missions to suffer because of a change in the method by which the work is accomplished. It will take time to change our plans and become adjusted to the new system, but we feel sure that the new methods will enlist the help of many more people, distribute responsibility and greatly increase the work of the women in our church. If we all try to surrender personal preferences for the sake of Kingdom interests, and manifest a spirit of true Christian co-operation, most of the difficulties will be overcome with comparative ease. And, after all, this is the only course which a Christian conscience will justify us in following.

The Board of Missions will go forward with its divinely appointed task; it will carry out its commission, under the General Conference, to the best of its ability; it will leave the success of our great mission work to the Christian loyalty and co-operation of our people.

A RESUME OF THE WORK OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS

Which Met in Baltimore, Md., July 17-18, 1928

The meeting was called to order by President G. H. Miller with every member present.

After the devotional service, and the reading of the minutes, the committee considered the resignation of Dr. S. W. Rosenberger. His attitude being unchanged upon the matter, the resignation was accepted with regret and expressions of appreciation for the valuable service he has rendered. Dr. G. H. Haddaway was elected to the office of Executive Secretary and will assume his duties September 1, 1928. The office will be in Baltimore.

Rev. Minnis was granted permission to arrange for work in the North Carolina Conference during the coming year.

The President and Recording Secretary of the Board of Missions in conjunction with the Treasurer of the General Conference were authorized to borrow such monies as the occasion may demand.

Dr. Woodford presented the interests of Pine Ridge, and asked permission to build a dam in gratitude for the recovery of his son, who was seriously injured in an accident, with the understanding that the Board of Missions would complete a necessary water system at a later date. This permission was granted and Dr. Woodford directed to proceed with the entire work as soon as the necessary funds become available. He was also asked to secure estimates and plans for the new boys' dormitory and submit them to this Board.

Dr. Broomfield, being in the South, was asked to visit Albemarle, N. C., and ascertain the needs of that field.

The committee then took up the revision of the proposed constitution and by-laws for branches and auxiliaries. A copy will be published soon.

Dr. J. M. Sheridan was asked to advise with the Eastern Conference concerning a traveling president.

A request from Florida for an appropriation was laid on the table for further investigation.

Calvary Church, Washington, D. C., was given $2,500 and loaned $2,500.

Dr. Broomfield was asked to visit the church at Lexington, N. C., and report his recommendations at the August meeting.

Dr. J. M. Sheridan was asked to make efforts to prevail upon the Stephens Memorial Church, Kansas City, to assume a larger share of their pastor's salary. He was also asked to investigate the needs of Gordon Place, Kansas City.

An immediate gift of $2,000 was made to First Church, Detroit, and the General Conference Treasurer ordered to pay no more on a previous appropriation of $7,000 until such time as a satisfactory settlement of the obligation of the Michigan Conference to the General Conference budget be made with the General Conference Treasurer.

The building operations at Mt. Lookout, Ohio, have been suspended for the present.

The church at Meridian, Miss., was loaned $6,000 for a period of three years.

Action on an appeal from West End Church, Greensboro, N. C., was deferred one month.

Dr. J. M. Sheridan was asked to visit Paris, Texas.

Seaview Church, Seattle, Wash., was asked to increase the share of the pastor's salary which it pays, beginning November 1, 1928.

J. W. Hawley and J. M. Sheridan were asked to visit the Onondaga Conference in the interest of the work.

J. M. Sheridan, S. W. Rosenberger and G. H. Haddaway were asked to visit Logansport, Ind., Chatham, Chicago, Ill., and Grace Church, Indianapolis, Ind., in the interest of the work.

G. H. Haddaway was asked to co-operate with the Church Extension Board of the Maryland Conference concerning Emmanuel Church, Philadelphia.

The sum of $750 was appropriated to the work in Newton, Iowa.

Churches seeking help from this Board will be required to use our own denominational supplies.

Mrs. Ely D. Miller was requested to have a supply of 25,000 Thank-Offering boxes prepared for the Board of Missions.

Mrs. Marie Thompson, the Associate Executive Secretary, was asked to locate at 2525 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio, for the month of August. After September 1, 1928, her office will be with that of Dr. G. H. Haddaway, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Pettet was asked to represent the Board of Misisons at the Federated Board of Woman's Missionary Work in New York City.

Beginning September 1, 1928, all funds from the women's societies shall, according to the General Conference order, be sent through the branch treasurer to the Associate Executive Secretary, Mrs. Marie Thompson, who shall keep an itemized record of all accounts and forward the money to the General Conference treasurer.

Upon Dr. J. M. Sheridan's request his relations with the board will cease October 1, 1928. The Board granted this request with deepest regrets. Dr. Sheridan has brought wisdom and mature judgment to the work of the Board of Home Missions which has been of inestimable value.

All monies raised for any local enterprise, for which credit is taken on the local church assessments for General Conference interests, must pass through the hands of the General Conference Treasurer, and be distributed upon the percentage basis established by the General Conference.

The treasurer was ordered to pay the transportation charges on memorial windows being provided by Mrs. F. C. Klein for a church in Japan.

For the sake of historical accuracy, and in justice to the new officers of the Board of Missions as well as the old officers, the treasurers of the four boards making up the present Board of Missions are instructed to have their accounts for the last four years audited by a certified public accountant.

S. W. Rosenberger and J. M. Sheridan were requested to mail copies of their General Conference reports to all pastors.

Miss Annie Forrest is employed to work under the direction of Mrs. Henry Hupfield, President of the W. F. M. S., until September 1, 1928, after which time her work will come under the direction of the Associate Executive Secretary.

The Executive Committee will secure 5,000 copies of the new Constitution and By-Laws for distribution in branches and auxiliaries.

The next meeting of the Executive Committee will be held in Pittsburgh, Pa., August 14, 1928.

WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE—AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

To the Presidents of the Annual Conferences of the Methodist Protestant Church:

I make the following announcement by faith. I believe that the denomination, through its Board of Christian Education, and churches and individuals will back me up and come to our assistance. We need a trained ministry if we are to meet successfully the challenge of a challenging situation. The future of the Methodist Protestant Church, and of all churches, must have a ministry trained and equipped to meet the demands of a new day. God has given us through a hundred years men and women of heroic mould. Their places must be taken by men and women of like character and of like consecration, men and women even better trained than they were, because a new age demands it. God will raise up workmen for us who need not to be ashamed as they face the new age, and who will be able to rightly divide the word of truth.

Western Maryland College wants to serve the Methodist Protestant Church in an ever-enlarging capacity. She is a child of the church, and the child has come now to a place where she can more fully meet her obligations to the church that has sponsored her through the years, and to which she owes a lasting obligation.

A full scholarship, good for $500, and including board, room and tuition (but not including fees and books, which are inconsiderable items), is offered to each of the 26 conferences of the Methodist Protestant Church, the appointments to be made by the presidents of the several conferences to young men or women who are candidates for the ministry of the Methodist Protestant Church, and upon the following conditions.

1. The candidate must be of approved mental and moral character, a graduate of an accredited high school, and must qualify to meet the entrance requirements of the college. Graduates of accredited high schools, with 15 approved units, are admitted without examination.

2. The candidate must agree to spend four years in College, unless providentially hindered from doing so. At the end of the four years in college, and upon graduation, he will be eligible for a scholarship in the Westminster Theological Seminary, as now offered or to be offered. The candidate will not be required to attend the Seminary, but he will be urged to do so. In the event that he decides to take a theological course, he must take that course in the Westminster Theological Seminary, which is the duly accredited Seminary of the Methodist Protestant Church.

3. Upon graduation from college or the Seminary, as the case may be, the recipient of this scholarship must agree to return to the Conference whose President appointed him to this scholarship, if that Conference has work for him to do, and he must agree to work under the stationing authority of that Conference for two years. If that Conference should not be able to give him work or if the Conference shall have ceased to exist, then the recipient of this scholarship may be free to take work in other Conferences of the Methodist Protestant Church, as he himself may elect. If the recipient of the scholarship upon graduation from the College or Seminary, shall take work in any other denomination, then he must refund to Western Maryland College the amount due the College for board, room and tuition, without interest and for a total sum not to exceed $500 for each year spent in the College. For services rendered to the College, and for the amount agreed upon for such services, the sum thus carried shall be deducted from the charge of $500 per annum.

4. The holder of this scholarship shall render such service to the College as may be required at any time during the four years in College. Such service, including waiting in the dining room, campus and office work, and any other service rendered, shall be of such a nature and requiring an amount of time that will not interfere with the prosecution of the regular college program of studies.

5. These scholarships are to be given, beginning with the college year 1928-29 and will be continued for the three succeeding years. They will not be offered again for four years. This plan provides for 26 individual students only, and for a period of four years only in college.

6. This scholarship will not be offered to any student already matriculated in any other Methodist Protestant College. If they have begun their work in any other College of the Methodist Protestant Church, they will not be admitted to Western Maryland College under the terms of this offer.

7. An exception will be made in the case of the Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas, which is a junior College. One graduate from the Westminster College will be accepted on these terms for the two years, 1928-29 and 1929-30, and one for the two years 1930-31 and 1931-32. A graduate of the Alvin Drew School in Kentucky will be eligible for appointment for the four years beginning with the college year 1928-29.

8. These appointments must be made before College opens this fall, and all matters pertaining to their registration must be attended to before then. College opens Tuesday, September 11, and all appointees to these scholarships must appear on that date. Just as soon as the appointment is made, application blanks will be furnished upon request. These must be filled out by the principal of the high school attended and sent direct from the high school attended to the Registrar, Western Maryland College, Westminster, Maryland. The entire appointment and registration matters should be attended to before September 1, and earlier if possible.

This is a venture of faith, and based upon a need of our church. There are those who will help—some have already promised to do so. There are churches and individuals who will respond to this call. The conferences involved may help some, and the Board of Christian Education certainly will help us more during the next four years than during the past four years. In some way the money and the men will be provided, and the cause of our Zion will be advanced. Upon this venture I ask the prayers of the church and invoke the blessing of Almighty God.

For all other students for the ministry of the Methodist Protestant church, who are not appointed to these scholarships, a discount of 35 per cent will be made from the price for room and board. Such students are permitted to borrow from the Board of Christian Education as provided for by the General Conference. We offer the same discount to children of ministers of the Methodist Protestant church.

A. N. Ward,
President Western Maryland College.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

Slogan

Here it is again: No charge without an honor roll church. For the remainder of this conference year this is our budget rallying call. If pastors and church officials will help us to get this into the ears of our people, we will sing a victory song when the year is up. Please, pastors, say it again and again to the people: No charge without an honor roll church.

Pastors' Conference—Young People's Training School

The comment on the Pastors' Summer Conference was that the program was the most practical yet provided. Owing to sickness and duties in the Training School, it was not my privilege to be present at many sessions of the conference. I am told, however, that nearly every topic elicited considerable general discussion, thus indicating the deep interest that prevailed. A number of pastors were present and were, no doubt, benefited by the discussions and fellowship with the brethren. The old officers were re-elected, and President Curry is already at work on the program for next year.

The Young People's Training School was set in a pronounced spiritual atmosphere. It is our opinion that this spirit must and will grow, and that this fact in future schools will be a guarantee of increasing support and efficiency. All agree that training for Christian leadership must begin with the heart, and therefore the very atmosphere of our training schools must be vibrant with spiritual life. We were delighted to see so much emphasis being placed here, and we bespeak continued effort in this direction.

A fine group of young people were present, and it was gratifying to see so many of them expressing desire to devote themselves definitely to some phase of religious work. We shall look forward with deep interest to these assemblies next year.

Local-ism

This is a malady that is always deadly to the growth of a church. If any one doubts, he may be convinced by examining the roll of conference charges. Without an exception, the charges that are most alive and most progressive are the ones that are most generous in their support of conference programs. This need not, and will not, surprise us, because it is perfectly scriptural. The great Head of the church said, "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." The church that is local, only, in its interests, is trying to save itself. It may do this, but it will certainly lose the larger life and the richer joy that it might have by losing itself in a more extended kingdom service. The most lifeless spot on the face of the earth is the Dead Sea; and yet it is constantly receiving new supplies of fresh water. What is the matter? No outlet. That's all. Just no outlet. But that is sufficient. So it is for the church. No outlet for love, for service, for kingdom sympathy and expansion—no outlet for these, and the living fountains of the church become stagnant pools. Beware, brethren, of the deadly virus of Local-ism.

Congregational Singing

A thing that disturbs us in our visitation of the churches is that so few people share in the music part of the worship program. This is not because they can't sing. I have tested this out over and over again. The reason, I think, is very apparent. In the first place, but few of our churches have any books, except for the choir. That, of course, makes congregational singing impossible. The people are virtually told by the fact that they are not supplied with books that they are not expected to sing. In the second place, congregational singing is not urged in keeping with its importance. The leader of the singing should recognize that the whole congregation is his choir, and that the best music for a worship program is secured always through congregational singing. If it is worth while for a few to take part in the singing, why would it not be more worth while if a large number took part? I am sure that we are losing much in our worship programs because provision is not made for the people to sing. It is a persisting opinion with me that pastors should announce the hymns from the pulpit, and urge the people to sing. I believe that pastors should insist on congregational singing, and keep on doing it, even if it results in a substantial increase in salary.

"Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee."

Revival Consolidation

Bro. Lowdermilk is trying this out in a two weeks' meeting at Kernersville. Three of his rural churches are uniting in the effort. The meeting is being held in a warehouse. Bro. N. G. Bethea is doing the preaching, and Bro. J. L. Trollinger is conducting the singing. The meeting began Sunday.

We believe that this is a step in the right direction. Good roads and automobiles make it possible for us to come together in groups that were prohibited by conditions in other days. It does not seem necessary, therefore, that revivals should be held in each church. We can unite for these meetings, and have the advantage of longer time, more workers, and increased opportunities for reaching the people. A large number of people should be able to do more in a meeting like this than a few can. Anyway, why not try something new in our revival efforts? It is evident to all that the old methods are not yielding results. Why not act in this as we would in other matters—try some other way? We shall pray and watch for the outcome of this meeting.

"Kept Back Nothing"

In the conference that Paul had at Miletus with the elders of the church at Ephesus (Acts 20:17) he said to them, "I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you." Personal consecration was profitable; he had not kept it back. Study was profitable; he had not kept it back. Public ministry was profitable; he had not kept it back. Sound doctrine was profitable; he had not kept it back. Liberality was profitable; he had not kept it back. Evangelism was profitable; he had not kept it back. A world program for the Kingdom was profitable; he had not kept it back. "This one thing" Paul would do; he would keep back nothing in his ministry that was profitable to the people. "This is a faithful saying," and one that must be true of every person to whom is committed the oracles of God as a minister of Jesus Christ. He must say with Paul, "I have kept nothing that was profitable unto you."

The Church and Politics

It is our opinion that the pulpit is not a forum for the discussion of political issues, as such. The principle of the separation of church and state must be adhered to at all times. However, it is the business of the church, and not only her business, but her imperative duty, to stoutly oppose all forces that tend to undermine and destroy the individual or the nation. There was no hesitancy on the part of the state to call upon the church for aid during the World War. The safety and welfare of the nation were imperiled, and the church heroically came to the rescue. Shall it not be equally so whenever the nation's moral life is threatened? We warn against the discussion of political issues, as such, from the pulpit, but we must insist that the church can not be silent on matters that concern the moral life and integrity of the nation.

Budgets

I trust that pastors and stewards are giving the budgets right of way, and pressing them with unflagging zeal. All of the interests are highly important, and all must be pushed with fervor for the best possible results. We must collect the college assessment, and I suggest that every charge put this to the front now, and raise the amount at once. The college is in great need of funds. The Lord will help us in raising these budgets, if only we will "Be strong and of a good courage."

HIGHER CRITICISM AND BOLSHEVISM

Destructive criticism of the Bible denies the authority of the Word of God. Bolshevism denies the authority of the "powers that be," ordained of God. Many professing Christians, and even real Christians, who are accepting conclusions of the Higher Criticism, would be shocked to realize the inevitable relationship between their Bible study and Red Revolution. Yet it is logical, consistent, inevitable. Dr. Joseph Taylor Britain preached a sermon at the opening of the Synod of Ohio, published in the Presbyterian of Philadelphia, in which he said: "Permit me to quote the estimate of the Rev. Bouck White concerning the relation which exists between the teachings of radical or liberal theology and social revolution. Bouck White, you remember, is the well-known socialist in New York City, who gained not a little notoriety during the war for anarchistic and un-American utterances. Mr. White said: "I am a graduate of ——— Theological Seminary. Some of my comrades of the Revolution look coldly upon the seminary as blind to the economic upheaval of our times. They are vastly in error. The professors at that seminary and whoever teaches the Higher Criticism are doing more than perhaps any other group to advance the social revolution. They are planting mines of social dynamite underneath the civilization of massive property rights to blow up the whole apparatus. The fact that my books are so charged with high explosives is but to say that the 'Higher Criticism' upon which my work is based is a direct and magnificent coadjutor of social revolution. Let it be known to every forward looker: The school and pulpit where the 'Higher Criticism' of the Scripture is taught are seminaries of social revolution."—Sunday School Times.

—We had a call recently from an esteemed brother who is much concerned lest the church be made to suffer by the political agitation of this presidential year. There is danger there. Under excitement it is easy to say things that would better be left unsaid. It is easy to lose sight of the relative importance of religion and politics. Two members of the same church may belong to two different political parties. Their church membership should mean more to them than their political affiliation. Brotherhood in Christ is an eternal relationship, whereas association with a political party is only a temporary relationship. No Christian of any political party should have any difficulty in deciding what to do when Christ calls in one direction and his political party in another. Loyalty to party cannot justify going with the multitude to do evil. When a political party calls upon its members to join with evil forces in putting across a program of evil, no member of that party should be called upon to apologize for refusing to support such a program. For example, a party that would make an alliance with the Mormons to make polygamy legal everywhere throughout the United States could not expect its members who abominate polygamy to support the measure. The same thing is true of all other moral evils. Let all Christians of all political parties stand firm for the right, let the consequences be what they may. The church will certainly suffer if its members allow themselves to be drawn for the sake of party success into the support of immoral measures. There are several ways to hurt the church. Let us beware.

—"The state of Georgia has been dry for 21 years. Atlanta has jumped from a city of one hundred thousand to four hundred thousand and its breweries and distilleries have been erased so thoroughly that in the day that I was there I could find no youth grown to age in that time who could direct me to a place where liquors were sold. Eventually, I became ashamed of being laughed at, as I inquired their whereabouts, and gave the thing up in disgust. From Atlanta I took highway No. 9 to the state line, which I crossed into South Carolina. The greatest prosperity prevails. Since prohibition cities have grown from 1,000 to 70,000 population. Huge textile mills, employing as many as 7,000 workers, have been erected. Beautiful schools are on every hand. Since leaving New Orleans I have been in Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina, and I saw only one drunk. Such cities as Anderson, Spartanburg, Greenville and Gaffney in South Carolina are amazing."—Joe Longton, Correspondent of the Sydney (Australia) Sportsman.

OUR STORY PAGE

JOHNNY'S WEATHER MAN

Helen was trying to draw Red Comb, her grandmother Brewster's big red rooster. She had a piece of thick white paper and a whole box of crayons she had brought to the country with her. But Red Comb was a hard subject. He would not stand still anywhere. First he flew up on the gate post and crowed, and then he got down and found a worm, and called all the hens to see it.

When one of them had swallowed the worm, Red Comb went around to the currant bushes. Not finding any ripe currants, he began to stalk along the row of rhubarb, peeping under the big leaves for beetles. Just as Helen thought he was really going to stand still a minute, her brother, Johnny, ran out of the woodhouse and frightened him, and away he went with a flap of his big wings.

"Johnny Brewster, you're a perfectly dreadful boy!" fussed Helen indignantly, trying to be as grown up as possible. "I was playing I was Miss Brown, the artist lady, and was painting Red Comb's picture. I've chased him and chased him all over the yard, and now you've gone and frightened him away."

Johnny grinned, as he looked after Red Comb. "Red Comb is always squawking and running," he said, "but he'll come back. If he don't come pretty soon, I'll throw out some corn and call him. Then you can draw his picture all you please."

Helen's vexation vanished. 'Why didn't I think of that myself?" she wondered. "I know where the corn is, and Grandma would let me give him an extra handful, I know. Johnny, you do think of things a whole lot quicker than I do."

Johnny looked pleased, then sober. "I wish I could think of some way of finding out if it is going to rain this afternoon or not," he told Helen. "If it rains I want to stay home and go fishing with Ted Peters. He says he knows a place in the brook where we can catch trout."

Johnny spoke very importantly. He was eight years old and Ted Peters was only seven, but Ted had actually caught fish since he was six. The little brook was so small that Grandma Brewster never worried about the children playing in it because she knew that they could get out if they did happen to tumble in. Uncle Ben had made Johnny a nice fishing pole out of a long light cedar and put a line and a tiny hook on it. It made Johnny tingle all over just to think of catching a fish with his own pole and hook.

"If it isn't going to rain, I am going to ride to town with Uncle Ben," added Johnny. "But I'd hate to miss going fishing."

Helen looked up at the sky. It was blue in little patches and cloudy in little patches, and it was hard to tell whether the sun was going to come out or not.

"In the city the newspaper always told us whether it was going to be fair or stormy," she reminded Johnny. "Sometimes it didn't just come true, but nearly always did. You know mother always makes us take our umbrellas when the paper says rain."

Johnny nodded. He knew his mother's forethought had saved him and Helen from many a wetting coming home from school. But he sighed.

"There isn't any weather man here," he mourned.

Just then the children heard some one laugh. Aunt Bess had come out and heard some of their conversation. Both Johnny and Helen loved Aunt Bess, she was so jolly and so ready to play with them.

"Goodness me, what's all this about there being no weather man in the country!" she asked gaily. "Why, I'm just going to make a weather man!"

Make a weather man! The children stared at each other. Here was something new. They thought Aunt Bess was joking. Excitedly they followed her into the house. It took her but a few minutes to get out the baking dishes and the big rolling board and wooden pin.

"Oh," said Helen, "ginger cookies! Can we help roll them, Aunt Bess?"

"Indeed you can," replied Aunt Bess. "Just a minute and I'll have some dough ready. But you must be very careful and roll this first piece thick, much thicker than usual."

She sifted some more flour into the soft dough and took out a big yellow handful of it. It seemed unusually stiff and Helen had to bear down hard on the big rolling pin.

"Let me help," urged Johnny, so he rolled out part of the dough, popping a piece into his mouth when he finished. "Oh, but that's good!" he declared. "I like raw dough almost as much as cooked dough."

Aunt Bess laughed. "I always loved to lick the cake spoon when I was a little girl," she said.

Johnny had left the dough nice and smooth, and Aunt Bess took a knife and began to cut it instead of using the diamond-shaped cookie cutter. Amazed the children saw a head, and a body, two arms and two legs, a man indeed.

"Now for his eyes," said Aunt Bess, and thrust two fat currants into the dough. Then she laid the man in a little pie tin and put him in the oven. When he came out, he was brown and plump and smelled deliciously. But Aunt Bess explained that he was not to be eaten but was to be a real weather man. She tied a string around his neck and hung him on a nail outside of the kitchen door. Then, when he had dangled a little while in the air, she told Johnny to go and feel of him. "Is he dry or wet?" she asked.

"Dry," said Johnny.

"Then you can go to ride with Uncle Ben," announced Aunt Bess gravely. "It won't rain today." And sure enough it didn't.

But the next morning the weather man was damp and soft. "You can go fishing today, Johnny," said Aunt Bess. "Your weather man says it is going to rain. Always your weather man will tell the truth. When there is moisture in the air, he will grow soft, and when it is dry he will stay dry. Watch him and see."

And Aunt Bess proved to be right. The very first day that the weather man foretold rain, then came a nice showery day and Johnny actually caught his first trout, a speckled beauty. But when the weather man was hard and dry, the sun would shine. Every day the children consulted him and liked him better.

"We couldn't have a nicer weather man," said Helen. "Could we, Johnny?"

"No," said Johnny, "and when he gets old, we can make another. I certainly like the kind of weather man that you can eat, if you want to. But we don't want to."—Lillian E. Andrew in The Presbyterian.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JULY 29

"Appreciating Our Immigrant Neighbors"

Scripture, Ruth 2:4-17

By F. L. Gibbs

Pointograph

"Americans first!" we cry,
With an attitude that is bold;
We call them "Dagoes," "Chinks," and Wops,
But forget they have a soul.

Plans for Meeting

1. Make the element of worship prominent in the meeting.

2. Have some well-thought-of foreigner to attend the meeting and take a leading part.

3. Have someone tell the following stories found in Christian Endeavor World for July 12:

(a) The Story of Ruth.
(b) The Good Samaritan.
(c) A Hungarian Landlord With a Heart.
(d) The "Glad" Story.
(e) Waiting for An Invitation.

Points for Leader

It is true that foreigners cause trouble in our country. It is evident that they do not always understand our ideals, customs, etc. But when we investigate the real situation we find that Americans, even of our own community, with a life spent in our best institutions and under the best influences do not always uphold our ideals, standards, etc. It is time that we were assuming a different attitude to these, "our neighbors," that we find in our midst.

It may be that we have too many in our country and there is need of immigration laws to restrict them, but the fact remains that we have them here, and in large numbers, too! This fact lays upon America a great "responsibility," but with it brings a great "opportunity." Here is the chance of "Christian America" to prove that Christianity is universal and will work. Too often we slight the brother in our midst, call him names and treat him as an inferior. At the same time we cease to remember that he possesses a soul that has been purchased by the blood of Jesus Christ. Because we spurn him he learns to hate us. Thus we close the door of our opportunity; however, the responsibility remains!

Bible References

Deut. 10:18, 19—Love of neighbors.
Exod. 12:48-50—How to treat strangers.
Deut. 23:7, 8—Attitude toward immigrants.
Heb. 13:2—Blessings of strangers.
Luke 14:12-14—Helping our neighbors.

Discussion

Have different ones tell of the following worthy immigrants:

Ruth, Abraham, Alexander Hamilton, Jacob Riis, Edward A. Steiner, Edward Bok, Steinmetz, Michael Pupin, or tell of others known in the country.

There are three things the foreigner desires of us. They have too much self-respect to ask for them, and we are unthoughtful and untactful about supplying these needs, namely, interest, appreciation, and help.

Let us take a greater interest in our foreign neighbors. Let's appreciate their position in an understanding way. Won't you help them in every way possible?

The writer knew a foreigner in Elon College. She is doing a great missionary work in Porta Rico now. He was friendly toward a German in a large city. That one joined the church on confession of faith Easter and is making a good church worker. A Chinese boy, spurned by Christians in a certain community, invited the writer to have a real Chinese meal with him. The invitations was accepted. Before the meal the spurned Chinese boy prayed. Yes! they, too, have a soul.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

August 5: Paul in Pagan Country

Scripture Basis: Acts 14:1-28.

Golden Text: I know how to be abased, and I know also how to abound. Phil. 4:12.

Places

Antioch. Since the Apostle Paul retraces his steps in Asia Minor on his return from his first missionary journey, we shall consider briefly the places in the order in which they come.

There were two Antiochs; one in Syria and one in Pisidia. The latter is the one mentioned in this lession. It was a city east of Ephesus and northwest of Tarsus, and is known as Yalobatch today. It was founded by Seleucus Nicator about 300 years before Christ, and named after his father, Antiochus. It was strategically located in a plateau near the western bank of the river Anthios. "Antioch was the military and administrative center for that part of Galatia which comprised the Isaurian, Pisidian and Pamphylian mountains, and the southern part of Lycaonia."

Iconium. This city was situated 60 miles eastward. During the Middle Ages, it was the capital of a powerful Mohammedan kingdom. It was a large city, and still exists today under the name of Konieh.

Lystra. In the province of Lycaonia, Lystra was located less than 20 miles S. S. W. of Iconium. It is conceded by some scholars that the boundary line between Phrygia and Lycaonia passed between Iconium and Lystra. Doubtless Paul was attracted to it because it had been made a Roman colony by Augustus, and was therefore a center of learning.

Derbe. About 20 miles east of Lystra, Derbe is situated at the foothills of the Mount Taurus, near the pass known as Cilician Gates, which led to Tarsus. The apostles could have easily slipped through here and taken a short cut home, but they preferred to return over the hazardous route over which they had come.

Perga. On their return trip, they busied themselves "confirmign the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith." Next to the last stopping place was Perga, "an important city of the ancient province of Pamphylia, situated on the river Cestris, 12 miles northeast of Ottalia." The ruins now standing are called Murtana.

Attalia. This city received its name from its founder, Attalus II, Philadelphus, which in modern days is called Adalia. It stood on a flat limestone terrace at the mouth of the Catarrhactes river. From here Paul and Barnabas sailed for Antioch in Syria.

Persecutions

It would seem that God soon carried out the pronouncement He made to the devout disciple of Damascus, Ananias, concerning Paul (Acts 9:16), for the apostle to the Gentiles soon discovered that he must suffer great things for His name's sake. Nevertheless, these things never phased him. To the contrary, they seemed to spur him on to greater zeal and boldness in proclaiming the gospel. At Antioch, after preaching boldly and winning many to their Lord, Paul and Barnabas were expelled because of the persecution of the Jews. Going into Iconium, they repeated their practice with similar results. The unbelieving Jews influenced the Greeks who may have believed had the Jewish influence not been so strong. However, many disciples were made and a church established. Finding it advisable to leave this city, they went to Lystra to preach and heal. Here the opposing Jews from the other cities came and continued their persecutions. So embittered were they that they drove Paul from the city and stoned him, leaving him for dead. But after a while he arose and with Barnabas went to Derbe, where it is supposed they labored in peace.

Power and Popularity

When Paul and Barnabas reached Lystra, after being driven from Iconium, they found a life-long cripple, perhaps begging at the market square. Hearing the apostle preach the gospel of Christ, his soul was doubtless stirred, and the Holy Spirit responded to his desires to be released from physical as well as spiritual impotency. As soon as the discerning Paul observed the eager, believing face of the man, he commanded that he stand upon his feet. That was all that was needed, for the cripple leaped—not merely arose—to his feet, and went on his way rejoicing.

What a miracle! Those Lystrans had never seen the like of it before! Immediately they decided that none other but the gods could do such wondrous works, so they prepared to sacrifice unto Paul and Barnabas as the gods, Jupiter and Mercury. Would we not have rejoiced to have become so suddenly popular? Would we not have "fallen for it?" Not so with the apostles. They rent their clothes as an indication of humility and abhorrence. They felt that their preaching was almost in vain, if they themselves were to receive credit for the deed. With much difficulty they persuaded the people to desist and to give the God of heaven the glory.

—Bro. W. T. Hanner, of Julian, was among the visitors in Calvary church last Sunday night. Grace church and West End both helped to swell the congregation. Dr. Broomfield preached with his usual interest and impressiveness.

—Will F. Kirkman, aged 75, was buried at Alamance church this P. M.

MY IMPRESSIONS OF THE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The Young People's Leadership Training School which has just convened at High Point College was a vast improvement over the Summer Conference of last year. The most outstanding improvement was in the standardization of this year's school. The curriculum was more advanced and more suitable as a whole for mature students. There was not so great a number of students present this year, but all those attending finished their courses, which is a remarkable event for any school. I could not say that the corps of teachers was an improvement over any conference; however, they were just as good as any force we have ever had at any previous time. All courses were well taught. The recreation this year excelled that of any conference held and the spirit of the young people was a very fine one. The most impressive occasion of the school was Decision night when forty young people dedicated their lives in full and part time service for the kingdom. The school was an inspiration and a "mountain top experience" for me. The week was enjoyable and I shall look forward to a larger and a stronger school next year. Let us all work to this end.

Yours for Christ,

GROVER L. ANGEL.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Lexington, State Street.—Mr. Bethea gave us a fine and helpful sermon Sunday morning after having spent a week teaching in the Leadership Training School at High Point College. Sunday school attendance is holding up well. A few of our folks are away and there is some sickness, but our record has kept up in the face of this and extremely hot weather.

Dr. Broomfield and Bro. Norman Wills were with us Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock for a short service. Dr. Broomfield talked to us a while in his usual impressive and interesting way. He spoke very encouragingly of the growth and general progress of the church and of the faith and courage shown by so small a number to undertake so largely in the name of the Lord. Bro. Wills also gave us a few words of commendation. A large audience attended this service and not one but was helped and inspired to greater effort.

Dr. Brannock spoke to Bro. Bethea's congregation at Yadkin College Sunday afternoon that Bro. Bethea might be in the four o'clock service here.

Mr. Bethea went to Kernersville yesterday, where he will preach in revival service for the next two weeks. This is a part of Mr. Bethea's vacation time which will extend to the fourth Sunday in August. We will have no preaching service during this time. Many of our folks wished a chance to visit at other churches rather than to have a supply preacher.

A week ago Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Aaron, of Fifth Avenue, Lexington, united with the church. They have been regular and faithful members of the Sunday school and attended almost all the church services since coming to Lexington about two years ago. They have a large family of very bright children, all of whom are always in their places at Sunday school if possible. So they were our folks already and we all gladly wecomed them into church membership.

Mr. Louis Bethea, son of our pastor, who attended high school in Halifax county last winter and has been working there since school closed in the spring, has returned home where he will stay until the opening of High Point College this fall where he will be a freshman.

Master Vance is also at home after an extended visit to his sister, Mrs. Wilcox, of Enfield.

REPORTER.

Democrat Church.—Our Sunday school and prayer meeting are moving on right well and we are having good attendance. We are glad to report about our revival meeting, which was very good. Rev. C. E. Ridge came and did the preaching. He preached well and every one enjoyed hearing him.

Miss Annie Chisholm was also with us. She sang for us and worked with us in the meeting. We miss them since they have left us, for they seem like we have always known them.

We hope that we may see them again and perhaps be with them in another meeting, for we enjoyed being with them.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

JESSIE WILLIAMS, Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—We had a good service Sunday morning. Bro. Spencer's subject was, "Soul Winnings." This was a very appropirate sermon, as our revival is to begin the next fourth Sunday. We are expecting to have three services on the day our revival begins. Rev. B. M. Williams will be with us for the first service and will preach for us during our revival. Our pastor assures us that Bro. Williams is a good preacher. We are looking forward to hearing him preach. We are hoping and praying that we may have a great revival.

We will have an ice cream supper on the church lawn on Tuesday evening, July 31. The proceeds will go towards purchasing a carpet for the church. We hope to have the new carpet in before our revival begins.

Our pastor attended Pastors' Conference in High Point last week. He reports a splendid conference.

Our community has been saddened by the death of Mr. Joe Hamlet, of Hollister. He had been suffering with heart trouble for about four months. He was a member of Harris Chapel Baptist church near Hollister. Burial service was conducted at the church by his pastor, Rev. C. M. Rollins, assisted by Rev. A. P. Mustian, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., a former pastor of the deceased. He is survived by his wife and son, father, one sister and two brothers, a stepmother and six half-sisters. The floral offerings were beautiful. Mr. Hamlet will be greatly missed in his church and community.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Oak Grove.—I heard Pastor Stubbins preach last Sunday. He had abundant liberty, as it seemed, and also the congregation had "liberty" to hear.

He preached on the Ten Commandments, one of the best of subjects. People do not have to "profess religion" in order to be obligated to all the Ten Commandments, and truly all who bear rule in the nation can only be fit by submitting to all the commandments of God.

All good men and women take pleasure in listening to the voice of Moses and the prophets.

We voted for delegate to the annual conference.

Communion was served.

Oak Grove Sunday school went over to the Big River Saturday on a picnic and swim. I did not get in, but they reported a fine time—did not need me.

W. F. GRADO.

Bessemer City Church.—Sunday was a great day for us. Our Sunday school was very good, there being 220 present. We have built a new room at the rear of the auditorium. The ladies have already taken possession and seem to feel their importance very much. They reported 60 or more present last Sunday, with 40 or more in the Baraca class. A goodly number were present at C. E. meeting Sunday evening. Our society is growing both in number and interest. Several prayer meetings have been held in different places here, which we feel have accomplished much good. Bro. Henderson delivered a very interesting discourse Sunday night. Bro. Caleb Hoyle preached for us Sunday morning a very interesting sermon or rather talked in a very plain and earnest way, which it seemed every one enjoyed. We were glad to have him with us. We wish to extend a very hearty invitation to all ex-pastors and any one else will be cordially welcomed to attend home-coming the first Sunday in August. Dinner will be served picnic style on the church grounds. Come and make it a joyous gathering. We hope to have some good singing also. Prayer meeting each Wednesday evening at the church with extra good attendance. Pray for us that God will continue to bless us and cause his face to shine on us. Praise, honor, and majesty be unto him who giveth every good and perfect gift. Let everything that hath breath "Praise the Lord." Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

Randolph Charge, Shiloh Church.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely with Charlie Hemphill as superintendent. The attendance has increased. We have set for our goal 100, and had 80 present last Sunday. We are hoping to reach our goal next Sunday.

The president of our M. P. Conference, S. W. Taylor, filled our last appointment the second Sunday at 11 o'clock. He preached a most able sermon, taking his text from the third verse of the 11th chapter of Mark. His subject was "The Ability of God's Needs."

He gave some splendid suggestions for the benefit of the church, and also a good report. We appreciated his good advice and were glad to have him with us.

Our revival meeting begins the second Sunday in next month. Brother Lindley will have for his help Rev. G. F. Millaway. Pray that we may have a great revival.

The Children's Day program will be rendered on Sunday night of the revival meeting.

All the men of the church are asked to come Thursday, July 26, to clean off the cemetery.

We are glad to note that Mrs. Henry Capps, who has been very ill, is improving.

We were very glad to have Mrs. W. P. Pickett, who has been confined to her home for some time, with us a few Sundays ago. We hope she will be able to come again soon.

REPORTER.

Democrat Charge.—Our revival meeting began at Pensacola church the third Sunday in June. Rev. J. L. Trollinger, of Thomasville First Methodist Protestant Church, came to us on Monday and did the preaching. He did some wonderful preaching that will bring fruit in years to come; the church was greatly revived. Miss Annie Chisholm, of Thomasville First Baptist Church, came and sang for us in the meeting. Miss Annie's singing was greatly enjoyed and helped to make the meeting a success. She is doing a great work in singing the gospel. Twelve professed faith in Christ; three united with the church.

We bought a new organ for Pensacola Church during our revival meeting. I wish to thank the people at Pensacola for their contributing the new organ and for the offering they gave Bro. Trollinger and Miss Annie. May God richly bless them and the efforts they made to make the meeting a success.

Our revival meeting began at Democrat Church on the first Sunday in July. Rev. C. E. Ridge came to us on Monday and did the preaching. Bro. Ridge was at his best. Every sermon he got better. I feel that his preaching has helped the people and the church. Miss Annie sang for us here throughout the meeting which helped to make the meeting successful. Twenty professed faith in Christ on the second Sunday of July; four united with the church by letter on the third Sunday evening of July at 4 o'clock. I baptized five bright faced girls by immersion. They united with the church at the night service. May God's unseen hand of protection ever be over them. Our revival meeting will begin at Pleasant Gap Church the first Sunday in August. Rev. J. A. Carn will help me in the meeting. Pray for us, brethren, that souls may be saved. I carried Brother Ridge and Brother Trollinger and Miss Annie and my wife up on Mt. Mitchell while they were here. It was a great pleasure to me to have them to help in the meeting and to have the privilege of being with them on the highest peak of the state of North Carolina as we talked and conversed together of the handiwork of God. "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help." Brethren, may we all lift our eyes and hearts to the God of Jacob and Abraham, then one day we will stand upon the mountain peaks of this life with the redeemed of Israel.

I am yours in His service.

H. W. BELL.

Grace Church News.—We were delighted to have with us Sunday morning Dr. John Calvin Broomfield, president of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. Dr. Broomfield delivered a most wonderful sermon. Dr. Broomfield has been attending the Young People's Conference at High Point College. Dr. Andrews, president of High Point College, was also present at the service.

The Christian Endeavor Society is going to present two plays next Tuesday night at 8 p. m. Two modern plays, "His Methodist Foot" and "Betty's Butler," will be given. The purpose of presenting the plays will be to raise money for the convention to be held here in August.

CARL JONES, JR.

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—Sunday school continues about the same in both interest and attendance. Third Sunday in June we held memorial service at Palestine. The cemetery was cleaned off nice and as many as one bunch of flowers on each grave, and many mostly covered, which made them lovely to look at. It brought back afresh the memory of loved ones who rest beneath the flowers. Second Sunday in July our revival meeting began. In the morning our pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg, preached to a good congregation. In the afternoon Rev. Mr. Shoemaker, pastor of the Missionary Baptist Church, preached. I enjoy Mr. Shoemaker's messages for he is my mother's pastor. Pastor Pegg had for his help our former and beloved pastor, Rev. J. F. Hutton, of Greensboro. It was a joy and delight to have Brother Hutton back for a few days with us, and also to have little Billy at each service. Was sorry Mrs. Hutton was not able to attend. Brother Hutton has not changed in the three and a half years since he has been away. Neither has he forgotten how to preach. A purse was made up for him. One convert and one united with the church. Yet the seed sown in these few days, we are sure, will produce fruit in the future.

Was glad to have with us one afternoon during the meeting Rev. T. J. Rogers, pastor M. E. Church at Madison. We were also glad to have during the meeting Mrs. Pegg and baby. We all fell in love with Mrs. Pegg, and of course everybody loves the baby.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

Bessemer City.—We are proud to say that our church has organized a Junior Christian Endeavor under the leadership of Mrs. Vilda Beam. Sunday night, July 22, at 5:30, was our first meeting. There were about 15 young people present. At this meeting the following officers were elected: Leader, Mrs. Vilda Beam; president, Miss Mozelle Hudson; vice-president, Miss Ethel Noblitt; treasurer, Miss Ollie Mae Lutz; secretary, Miss Ruby Canipe; corresponding secretary, Miss Ollie Mae Lutz; chorister, Miss Ethel Noblitt; pianist, Miss Ethel Harmon. We are still hoping that our Junior C. E. will keep on growing not only in numbers, but in faith. We are more than glad to send in this report and hope to have another one soon.

OLLIE MAE LUTZ,
Jr. C. E. Reporter.

Harris Chapel, Vance Charge.—Our revival meeting began Sunday, July 8, and closed July 13. Our church and community were greatly blessed by the strong gospel sermons Brother Troxler, our pulpit help, brought to us. Our people were delighted with his work. There were a number of reconsecrations and one conversion.

Our Sunday school attendance could be better. A committee is at work arranging a Children's Day program.

The C. E. Society is progressing nicely. These young people recently had an enjoyable outing picnic.

Brother Chambliss fills his regular appointments faithfully and always brings us inspiring messages.

Mrs. John Wells is sick at her home.

Since our last report one of our most faithful and loyal members, Mr. James Glover, has passed into the beyond.

Mrs. Charlie Ellington has also been claimed by death.

Our hearts go out in sympathy and love to the bereaved.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—Pastor Paschall returned to us Saturday night, physically much worse for the wear. The week in High Point was a success in spite of the heat. Sunday morning the children gave a delightful program. The local children were aided by the two Bellamy children of Enfield, N. C.; the two Hardin children of Julian, N. C.; the two Padgett children of West Virginia.

Brother Paschall's message Sunday night was practical and inspiring.

Miss Novella McIntyre is now at home and improving daily.

Attending the anti-Smith conference here last week were J. Bib Mills and Ira Champion and Rev. Mr. Iddings of Alabama.

Prof. Arthur Smith, Western Maryland, '92, and Mrs. Smith visited Asheville.. A delightful W. M. C. get-together was enjoyed by the hospitality of Dr. F. Webb Griffiith and Mrs. Griffith.

Attending our services Sunday were Dr. and Mrs. T. C. Amick and daughter, of Elon College. This is Dr. Amick's second term on the faculty of the Asheville Summer School. More than 2,000 enrolled this summer.

Brother E. C. Fawcett conducted our prayer meeting last week in his usual helpful way. A Jewess was present and showed keen interest by interviewing Bro. Fawcett after the meeting. She attends our services regularly. Bro. Scharnock's Bible class invites the Sunday school to an outing this Tuesday night. Miss Flossie Monteith will give an outing to her class this Wednesday. We were glad to have Bro. Ferd Stout, of Greensboro, N. C., to worship with us Sunday.

REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—On Sunday, July 22, one of our own boys preached for us at the eleven o'clock hour, Rev. Durant D. Nash, of Hopewell, Va., pastor of the First Christian Church. The service was well attended. Rev. Mr. Nash and his daughter, Miss Mary Lillie Nash, sang a beautiful duet. We had about 125 present. We had a regular reconsecration service which a large number took a part in. We feel like taking on new life. We are asking the prayers of all Christians that we may go forward in our new work.

MRS. C. B. McCOMMONS, Reporter.

Flat Rock Circuit.—The third quarterly conference convened at Bethel church on the afternoon of July 14. The conference was largely attended, all churches being represented by two or more members. Harmony and a spirit of good will was evidenced at all points. Financial reports were good. We were well pleased with the amount paid on the budgets. The trustees of Bethel reported that the insurance on the church was to be increased soon, and a marker to be set up.

The new church at Flat Rock was said to be going along nicely, and that it would be completed in a month or six weeks. The people at this church are to be congratulated on the erection of such a beautiful and substantial church building. It speaks well for the spirit of progress and enthusiasm of its members.

Each church reported an active Sunday school with good interest, attendance and offerings to our Children's Home.

The special meetings have been held at Gideon Grove and Palestine. Bro. Trogdon did the preaching at the former place. The services were well attended and the messages deeply impressed us all. Bro. Hutton was with us at Palestine. The house was filled at each service. His words were edifying and inspiring. They were saturated with the gospel of salvation. The meeting will result in additions to each church.

J. P. PEGG, Pastor.

Flat Rock, Flat Rock Circuit.—For some time I have been watching the columns of the Herald for a report, not of the happenings, but what we are really doing at Flat Rock, but as yet I have seen nothing definite about our new church. Someone asked me recently if we had begun to build our new church. I was glad to answer them, most emphatically, we had. The work is progressing nicely. The stone wall is nearing completion, the roof is on, and the inside is lathed ready for the plasterers. Every one seems interested in seeing the work progress. To say we are proud of our church is putting it mildly. If anyone wants to donate anything towards it, any amount will be thankfully received.

We are still having preaching and Sunday school. Until last Sunday we met in the church with just the ceiling for covering. The weather has been favorable at each service so far. Last Sunday we held Sunday school out under the trees and had the largest number present we have had this year. We intended taking our Sunday school to High Point one day this week to the Young People's Conference, but the wheat-threshers made their annual visit in our midst, so the picnic had to be postponed.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Friddle and children, of Birmingham, Ala., are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Friddle and Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Bailey, respectively.

Mrs. George Friddle continues quite ill, as does also Mrs. Sidney Parish. Louie Daniel has been suffering with an attack of erysipelas. R. L. Ogburn is recuperating from an operation for appendicitis. He, together with Mrs. T. J. Ogburn, spent the week-end in Richmond visiting T. J. Ogburn, Jr.

The third quarterly conference was held at Bethel last Saturday. The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Flat Rock. J. B. Ogburn, of Flat Rock, and Mr. Humphreys, of Bethany, are the nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference.

MRS. J. B. OGBURN.

First Church, Burlington.—The attendance at Sunday school today was 278. We noted a decrease of 69 from the previous Sunday. Offering amounted to $17.02. The orchestra rendered a beautiful and impressive selection after the classes reassembled and was enjoyed by the congregation. In the absence of the regular Baraca teacher, Prof. C. C. Lindley, the assistant teacher, Dr. Hobart M. Patterson, taught the lesson in a helpful manner. The attendance, considering the extremely hot weather, was very good and we are hoping that the boys will be faithful and not allow the class attendance to decrease during the hot months.

Our pastor delivered a helpful and uplifting sermon at the morning preaching hour.

Our church united with the First Baptist and the Episcopal churches in a union service at 8 o'clock in the evening, in accordance to action of the local ministerial association to have union services in different sections of the city for some of the summer weeks.

The drive to raise funds with which to settle for the new church site, is now on. We have ten captains, each over a team of six members, calling on the membership to secure pledges to cover this indebtedness, and we hope that the full amount will be pledged by Wednesday evening of this week, when the general captain and the division captains and their respective teams meet for reporting, etc.

We are sorry to report that Miss Elizabeth Rogers is ill at her parents' home on Ruffin street. We hope she will soon recover. Our Bro. L. L. Wilson, at Oteen Hospital, is resting fairly well and has gained a little in weight, we learned in a recent letter from him.

Bro. Gerringer and others from our church were in attendance at the Leadership Training School at High Point College recently and report a good session of this body. Miss Margaret Rogers, of our church, brought the registration banner back, as a reward for registering the largest number for the convention.

Our young people's worker, Miss Taylor, is busy these days and we are highly pleased with her services. She is organizing a junior choir among the children of the Sunday school now and this will be a splendid addition to the school, we are sure.

Perhaps there are other things that we might say at this time, but as we do not wish to take up too much of the valuable space in the Herald and do not want to burden the readers with a long report, so will close for this time. Best wishes.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Asheboro.—A week ago two more new members were received, Mrs. N. M. Harrison, coming from Grace Church, Greensboro, and Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., coming from the Presbyterian Church at Cheraw, S. C. Yesterday morning Mrs. L. F. Ross came to us from the Marlboro Friends Church. We are indeed glad to receive these three brides into our church. Mrs. Harrison was a member here before going to Greensboro two years ago. We now have two more church letters in hand and are hoping to have two additional ones before many days.

The attendance at Sunday school and church services was off yesterday due to the fact that many of our people went to the country churches to revival meetings and some are away on vacations.

Next Sunday morning there will be Sunday school as usual, but we will not hold the morning service owing to the District Rally at Charlotte Church in the country. The evening service will be held as usual.

At the evening service last Sunday the young people who attended the Young People's Training School at High Point gave their impressions of the conference. It was a profitable service. J. E. PRITCHARD.

SIXTH DISTRICT RALLY NOTICE

Again we give notice that a district rally for the sixth district will be held at Charlotte M. P. Church, Richland Charge, on next Sunday, July 29, beginning at eleven o'clock and continuing through the afternoon. Charlotte Church is about three and a half miles west of Asheboro on Route 90 leading from Asheboro to Lexington. A fine concrete road leads from Asheboro right by the church.

We have the promise of the Ridge quartette and we are hoping also to have the Bulla quartette. Any other church having musical numbers to give will please come prepared.

Again let me say that the charges in the district are Randleman, Richland, Asheboro, Why Not, Denton and Davidson. It is earnestly hoped that all churches in the district be represented.

Each family coming is expected to bring a basket for the picnic dinner.

No new charges to be added to our paying list this week. Three months till Conference, and still TWELVE CHARGES WITH NO CREDITS ON ANY BUDGET! I wonder if this does represent the best that these charges can do? Would you answer, "Yes" on that, brethren? Or is it just the old habit of putting off until the last Perhaps this is it. Well the last is right here. NOW is your time. Won't you please let us have your report next week? Thank you! Thank you!

That blank is still standing in our list of "Charges Paying All Claims in Full." Our charges start with "A" and end with "Y." At the beginning or the end, or somewhere between, we are bidding for a charge to fill in that blank. YOUR name would look good there. Hurry, and let us have it.

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL MINISTRY

Of the 30,000 children trained in Chicago's daily vacation Bible schools this summer, 3,000 were from the teeming downtown sections of the city. Just north of the downtown Loop is the congested region served by the vacation Bible school of the Moody Bible Institute, which was the school nearest to this needy field.

Paul at Mt. Sinai

Immediately after his conversion and his baptism as a believer in Christ, Paul preached that Jesus is the Son of God. This indicates both the thoroughness of his conversion and his keen sense of honor. He had started to Damascus with the conception that Jesus of Nazareth was an impostor whose influence ought to be destroyed. Convinced that Jesus was the Son of God, the view that He was an impostor was no longer tenable. And the feeling that honorable amends must be made for the wrong done in persecuting beilevers in Jesus was keenly felt by Paul and allowed to express itself in public acknowledgment that Paul (and not Christians) was in error. Paul could scarcely refrain from saying this. But when he thought of the seeming conflict between Judaism in which he had always believed and Christianity in which he had come to believe, he realized that there were many reconciliations to be effected if he were to have peace of mind and to be qualified to serve as a public teacher. Clearly he needed opportunity for reflection and for the receiving of further light upon the relation between the law and the gospel, the teachings of Moses and the teachings of Jesus. Should he go back to Jerusalem and sit again at the feet of the Jewish rabbins? They would only teach over again the things they had taught him. He might have thought of going to Jerusalem and sitting at the feet of the apostles of Jesus, and almost certainly he did think of pursuing this course. But he decided to go into retirement to receive directly from Jesus who had encouraged him to this course by appearing unto him by the way. If Jesus and Moses were in accord, what more fitting place of retirement could there be than Mt. Sinai where God had appeared to Moses and given to him the law? Paul's retirement into Arabia is therefore believed to have been a visit to Mt. Sinai and a protracted stay there in communion with his Lord, to learn the new truths of the gospel and to harmonize his views of them with his views of the law of Moses. Jesus had said that He came not to destroy but to fulfill the law. But the Jewish teachers had looked upon Jesus as a destroyer of the law. To see the true relationship between the dispensation of Moses and the dispensation of Jesus required careful and prolonged study. Hence Paul's long retirement in Arabia and probably at Mt. Sinai. Paul there prepared himself as no other man of his time was prepared to show how the old dispensation stood in relation to the new. He was thus liberated for his ministry to the Gentiles and he was prepared to confound the Jews who insisted on the perpetuation of what was intended to be merely temporal and preparatory in the economy of Moses. Paul's mind grew as other human minds grow. It took much time and study to become the great teacher he was.

"An old saying—and a true—Much drinking, little thinking."—Swift, in his letters to Stella.

Atheist League

It seems surprising that atheists would bestir themselves to propagate their worthless and worse than worthless creed. But however their action is to be explained, some of them are very active in effort to spread atheism. I have just received from the American Association of Atheists a blank application for membership. They propose to let me join for $1 in payment of annual dues. Or they will sell me a life membership for $100. It looks as though it would be cheaper for me to pay by the year as I do not expect to live 100 years. They also announce a "Junior Atheist League" for boys and girls from seven to seventeen, and they exhibit the pleasing picture of a young woman, Christine Walker, as national secretary of this league.

This organization is against the church and against the clergy because these believe in God. It aims to do practical work on a large scale in setting people against all religious teaching.

If any movement among men had an infernal origin, it would seem that this movement had. Here are some of the declarations of the league: "The league will remove boys and girls from the evil influence of the clergy." "The attainment of happiness in this world rather than eternal bliss in a world to come shall be taught as the chief end of man." "Stress will be laid on forming branches in high schools, as these will prepare students to serve as organizers of Damned Souls societies during college years and for effective work thereafter in combating the church."

We thought the world had pests enough, but the atheists are adding themselves to the number. Like boll weevil and other destroyers, they will have to be met and overcome, though it may take much time and much labor. If the atheists would only segregate themselves on some island they might test for themselves the merits of their creed.

—"A friend who prefers to be unnamed" has given to each minister of the General Conference and to each minister of the Maryland Conference a copy of E. Stanley Jones' book, Christ at the Round Table. Dr. W. H. Litsinger is the intermediary in the matter. We thank Dr. Litsinger and the unknown friend for the copy on our table. Rev. E. Stanley Jones proved himself great enough to refuse the office of bishop in the M. E. Church after he had been unanimously elected last May. His heart is in the work of evangelism. We will read his book with greater interest because of his whole-heartedness in the work of preaching the Gospel of the Christ.

—The North Carolina Conference will have for visitors Rev. G. W. Haddaway and Rev. Lawrence Little to represent the work of the General Conference. Both will be received with pleasure. Bro. Little will also visit the following conferences: Tennessee, Fort Smith-Oklahoma, Louisiana, North Mississippi.

THE PROBLEM OF THE DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGE

(Delivered by Thomas C. Amick, Ph.D., before the Schoolmasters Club of Asheville, N. C.)

The topic assigned this speaker was put in the form of a question, "What is the problem of the Denominational College?" The implication seems to be that colleges have problems to face and problems that they must solve. Every institution established for the good and for the well-being of humanity has its problems, and denominational colleges are no exception.

In the first place, the line of distinction should be drawn and we should understand just what we mean by the denominational college. In this paper we will assume that colleges are divided into two classes, namely, the state owned and controlled colleges and the privately endowed, or denominational colleges. This line of distinction is not rigid, for there are a number of privately endowed colleges that are neither state colleges nor are they denominational colleges. However, for the purpose of this discussion, these will be left under the head of denominational colleges.

The problem of the denominational college is, in a sense, the problem of every college in the land. It is the problem of equipping the young man and the young woman who attends college with the soundest, sanest educational equipment possible; to give to them that preparation that will enable them to render the greatest possible amount of service in the world, both to God, to humanity, and to themselves. The problem of all colleges is to inspire into each student the highest and noblest ideals possible and to enable the student to make life as resourceful as possible to the end that the material and spiritual forces of the race may be conserved and that the race may make progress and advancement to higher goals than those yet attained. The object of all colleges is to develop in the man or woman all the manhood or womanhood of which the person is capable, and then to inspire the student to go out and use this for the betterment of society and for the uplift of the world, and also to cultivate in the young person the capacity for enjoying everything that is noble and fine in nature, literature, science, or art, to the end that life for this person may be as full as possible of the noblest and best that this world has to give.

Now the problem of the denominational college is to do this work just a ltitle better than the other instituion can do the same work. And the speaker maintains that, unless the denominational college can do this work better than the state college can do the same work, then there is no excuse whatever for the existence of the denominational or privately endowed college, unless it is for the reason that the church wishes to help the state to bear the burden of educating the citizenship of the state. The church has the command, "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ," and, unless the church makes an additional contribution in education that the state cannot make in educating the young people of this generation, then the church is simply helping to bear the burden of the state, and, by so doing, the church is simply performing a Christian service, which is her wont.

The writer, however, maintains that the denominational college can do the work of education better than the state can do it, and he is prepared to defend the following theses:

First, the state, as our government is organized, cannot teach religion. Neither can a state college, without usurping its authority, teach anything along this line except the history of the different religions and religious organizations that have existed from time immemorial. The state college may teach the history of Judaism or of Hinduism, but it may not teach Judaism or Hinduism as a religion; otherwise the Protestant, the Catholic, or the Christian, the Mormon, or some other sect, who pay their taxes just as the Jews and the Hindoos pay theirs to support the government of the state, would have a right to protest, and to bring an injunction suit to restrain the state institution from teaching religion.

The state has a perfect right to teach the principles of citizenship, to indoctrinate her future citizens in the fundamentals of character; but when it comes to teaching religion the state must keep hands off. From the time when Jefferson and the fathers of this country who established the Constitution of this great country and laid down the principles of action for these United States and separated forever Church and State to this good day, this principle has been held inviolable in this country.

Again, the faculty of state institutions are selected, not because of their strong personality and their abiltiy as teachers and inspirers of young men and women; but they are selected because of their scholarly attainments, their reputation in the field of research, their ability in authorship in their respective lines and in the general fields of learning. It is seldom we find great teachers like Horace Mann, Mark Hopkins, and others of their kind in state institutions. In calling the roll of the great teachers of the ages from Jesus of Nazareth down to the present we find the teachers who have inspired men and women to do and to dare and to die, to give their lives to unselfish service to the race, in the denominational colleges. These colleges and their teachers have given to men that inspiration that has led to sacrifice and progress along all lines that have moved the world upwards toward God. True we have found scholars in state institutions, they have written books and their names have become famous and renowned; but where have they inspired man and woman to the noblest and most heroic lives? The teacher in the denominational college is generally too busy and has too much to do to do a great deal of this research and literary work that otherwise might make for his reputation and renown.

The state colleges generally have so large a number of students that their faculties do not have the opportunity to come into personal contact, personal relationship, and personal touch with the individual student that they might leave on the student the personal impress and stamp of their lives, as the personal impress and stamp of King Arthur was left on his knights of the Round Table. This leaves the student to get his inspiration from the mass of other fellows like himself, or from the immature instructor, or from the common rabble with whom the student associates on the streets or in the fraternity house. As a rule these influences are neither uplifting nor are they such as tend to the development of the noblest that is in the young man. Your speaker has, in his experience as a student, attended state colleges only; and his experience warrants him in saying that, unless the religious character and convictions of the young man are thoroughly fixed before he attends a state college, unless he is firmly grounded on the Rock of Ages and his faith has been fixed by thorough training in the home and in the church before he goes to college to the state institution, he is pretty sure to go on the rocks within the four years of his college career.

And when he goes on the rocks and shoals during the age of college preparation for life, he is pretty apt to be a religious derelict upon the sea of life as long as he is here among men. On the other hand, your speaker, as a member of the faculty of denominational colleges, has seen the derelict and the skeptic and the unbeliever come to the denominational college and after four years of association with a faculty of Christian men and women, and association with a Christian student body, go out of college with his faith firmly established, his eye fixed on a goal, a star not seen on land or sea, and his life become a blessing and a benediction as well as a guide and light and inspiration to all who come in contact with him.

The next thesis that the speaker maintains is that the denominational college can offer broader and fuller courses of study and instruction than the state college can possibly offer. The denominational college can certainly teach every course in language and literature, in science and mathematics, in engineering and mining, in law and in medicine, in art and appreciation, as well as in any and every subject that you may name that the state college can teach; and then the denominational college can enter the fields of theology and explore its broad vistas and labyrinths; it can enter the domain of the soul as the soul sits in contemplation of and with its God; it can enter the fields of the life eternal and there, from some Mount Pisgah of the Universe, it can explore the workings of God in sun and moon and star and it can cause the student to walk with the everlasting spirits who forever do the Master's will and make the eternal and everlasting city their home. In the denominational college the problems of everlasting life and of eternity may be studied with none to molest or to make afraid; and here the student may become acquainted with that "city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God." Here he becomes acquainted with a love that is eternal and that passeth within the veil; he gathers beatific visions that inspire and lead him to live the life of the spirit and to live above the things of time and chance and change. And so we maintain the thesis that the denominational college has the whole field of truth and of revelation for its own, its courses may cover time and eternity, they may treat of man and of his progress, of God and of His doings among men and in the earth; these courses are not bounded by time or chance or change, for they are universal in their nature. The other college has a field by no means as broad as this.

Then the denominational college must, in choosing its faculty, select men who are scholars, it is true, but it must also lay great stress on a faculty of men and women of great personal magnetism, men and women of faith and hope; men and women whose hearts and spirits throb in unison with the heart and spirit of God. The faculty of the denominational college must consist of men and women who are connected up with the great dynamo of everlasting and eternal truth, who drink from the fountains of living water, who are teachers as well as scholars, and who will wield an influence that will attract and affect the lives of young men and young women for time and also for eternity. The state college may get such men and women in its faculty; the denominational college must have them. It is a problem in mathematical probability as to whether or not the state college gets such men and women. The denominational college can have no other kind. The faculties of the denominational colleges must be men and women of strong religious convictions, men and women who, like Luther, will take their stand for the right and for religion, the universal principle in man, and having taken this stand, they must stand there eternally.

Again, the denominational college must limit its student body to such numbers as can reasonably be taught by the direct members of the faculty. The standardizing agencies, and these have generally been initiated and organized by the denominational colleges, have said what endowment a denominational college must have for every fifty to one hundred students beyond a certain number. This provision has been made in order to prevent the college from taking more students than can come into direct contact with the heads of its departments, and, as a result, the denominational college accepts only that number of students that can reasonably be taught directly by the faculty. Hence, the instruction is more personal, more direct, more individualistic, more appealing, and carries greater weight with it than instruction given to the masses can possibly be. And so it tells more for life, for character, and for true manhood and true womanhood.

The denominational college must encourage the spiritual development of its students. Spiritual development, being based on religion, the denominational colleges must lay emphasis on religion. It must stress not only character; but it must strive to make that character decidedly Christian. Unless this is done, the denominational college loses one of its chief rights to exist.

The problem of the denominational college, then, is to maintain an institution of learning that does what the state college does, but does this work better and in a decidedly better way than the state college can do it; and it must do this work in a decidedly more religious way than it can possibly be done by the state college. The denominational college must have no limitations; the state college necessarily works under limitations. The denominational college must have a wider and a broader curriculum, its course of study must be enriched by relating it to and bringing it in touch with God, its faculty must be men and women devoted to God and to truth, and its student body must be led and guided as well as directed along different lines and towards different stanards and nobler ideals than the state college can guide and lead unto. To do this work effectively, to provide the equipment, the faculty, and the endowment to successfully prosecute this great work, this is the problem of the denominational college.

MAKE IT A REAL REFERENDUM

It is with great pleasure that I note the correct ring to the brief editorial in the issue of the HERALD immediately following the convention in Houston. It takes a strong, and perfectly justifiable, position against the candidacy of Al Smith for the presidency.

"The defeat of a candidate," says the editorial, "is a small matter. The defeat of a great moral issue is a very serious matter." I have heard both Bishop Cannon, of the M. E. Church South, and Dr. J. A. Barton, a leading Baptist of Atlanta, say very much the same thing as they discussed the outlook for prohibition some months ago.

Will the good people of the South continue to write such editorials and make such speeches until election day next November, then go to the ballot box and cast their votes in harmony with this line of thought? I am fully persuaded that many thousands of them and their readers and hearers will do that very thing—though, no doubt, some will weaken and, on the fateful election day, decline to break their record of supreme loyalty to the candidates set forward by their political party.

For the sake of the Democratic party itself, and for the salvation of the values of party government, every dry Southern state should record its loyalty to the constitution as expressed in the 18th amendment, and its condemnation of its own party for nominating for the presidency a candidate who is notoriously wet both in theory and in practice, and who proposes to do all he can to make the entire country wet.

This seems to me to be the only logical and moral course for dry Democrats of the South to take, Democrats who have rendered such valuable service toward making this a dry nation. Furthermore, these men and women should resent the implications of wet Democrats that by refusing to vote for Smith they lose their standing in their party. It is only by such practical rebuke that they can restore the good name of the Democratic party, and make its future usefulness at all possible.

Here's hoping that when the ballots are counted in November, North Carolina and Maryland, and many other states of the South, will be found to have endorsed prohibition in the only practical way.

EMERSON AT THE SISTINE CHAPEL IN ROME

In 1833 Ralph Waldo Emerson visited Europe for the first time. On March 31st of that year he attended a service in the Sistine Chapel. He records in his journal of that date his impressions of the ceremonies:

I have been to the Sistine Chapel to see the Pope bless the palms and hear his choir chaunt the Passion. The Cardinals came in, one after another, each wearing a purple robe, an ermine cape, and a small red cap to cover the tonsure. A priest attended each one, to adjust the robes of their eminences. As each cardinal entered the chapel, the rest rose. One or two were fine persons. Then came the Pope in scarlet robes and bishop's mitre. After he was seated, the cardinals went in turn to the throne and kneeled and kissed his hand. After this ceremony the attendants divested the cardinals of their robes and put on them a gorgeous cape of cloth-of-gold. When this was arranged, a sort of ornamental baton made of the dried palm leaf was brought to his holiness and blessed, and each of the cardinals went again to the throne and received one of these from the hands of the Pope. They were supplied from a large pile at the side of the papal chair. After the cardinals came other dignitaries, bishops, deans, canons—I know them not, but there was much etiquette, some kissing the hand only, and some the foot also of the Pope. Some received olive branches. Lastly several officers performed the same ceremony.

When this long procession of respect was over, and all the robed multitude had received their festive palms and olives, his holiness was attended to a chair of state, and, being seated, was lifted up by his bearers, and, preceded by the long official array and by his chaunting choir, he rode out of the chapel.

It was hard to recognize in this ceremony the gentle Son of Man who sat upon an ass amidst the rejoicings of His fickle countrymen. Whether from age or from custom, I know not, but the Pope's eyes were shut or nearly shut as he rode. After a few minutes he re-entered the chapel in like state, and soon after retired and left the sacred college of cardinals to hear the Passion chaunted by themselves.

All this pomp is conventional. It is imposing to those who know the customs of courts, and of what wealth and of what rank these particular forms are symbols. But to the eye of an Indian I am afraid it would be ridiculous. There is no true majesty in all this millinery and imbecility.

A District Rally

The editor accepted a special invitation to Pleasant Union for the District Rally last Saturday and was glad he did. There were about 25 persons present in the forenoon and about 50 in the afternoon. (We suspect there were hundreds Saturday night and Sunday.) At the request of Chairman Hanner, Dr. A. G. Dixon presided. The program was followed and was well filled in. Young people from Mt. Pleasant, Shiloh, and Moriah contributed largely to the entertaining and inspiring exercises of the day. In fact, their parts probably attracted more attendants than did the parts taken by older speakers. One secret of the large attendance at some rallies is the fact that many are to have parts on the program—children, young people, older people. Each speaker attracts a few, many speakers attract many. President Taylor and Mrs. A. G. Dixon and Mrs. W. T. Hanner were the grownups who had places on the program at Pleasant Union and all held undivided attention. President Taylor spoke on the program of the Annual Conference. If all parts of the proceedings measured up to the standard of Saturday morning and afternoon, this rally was well worth while. The picnic dinner on the grounds was another of the satisfying features.

ALL TRUTH IS GOD'S TRUTH

I think God kept on talking when His book had gone to press;
That he continues speaking to the listening sons of men.
I think His voice is busy yet, to teach and guide and bless;
That every time we ask for light He calls to us again.
I think He bade the scientists to search the crust of earth
And find the truth He'd hinted at in allegory style;
To ferret out the facts about the human race's birth—
Through clammy protoplasm up to souls that love and smile!
I'm sure I've heard Him saying: "Use the mind I gave to you;
Find out with it as much of truth as ever you can find.
No true thing ever can refute another thing that's true—
I ask not mere credulity—the faith that goes blind."
He never meant His book to hold the total of His word;
He still communes with human souls that crave enlightenedness.
Each honest ear to truth attuned His teaching voce had heard—
I know He kept on talking while the Bible went to press.

Not a Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

We believe that this goal can be realized, and we are asking for a list of all churches that will undertake to do it. Just one cent will bring us this information. And my, how a big list of such churches would stimulate our zeal and yours! Pastors, members, put your churches in this group, and let us do this thing.

Transferred

Bro. G. W. Andrew and Bro. C. M. Compher have been granted transfers, at their request. We wish for these brethren every possible measure of success in their new fields of labor.

Assigned

July 27.—Rev. W. M. Pike assigned to West Thomasville charge. The vacancy on this charge has been caused by the retirement of Rev. G. W. Andrew, who took the work this year for nine months only, as we understand. Bro. Andrew leaves this charge to take up again the work that he was doing in Alvin Drew school before he came to High Point College and to our conference. Bro. Andrew has rendered efficient service on this charge, and has won the esteem and love of his people. Bro. Pike will have, also, a ready reception by the charge, and we bespeak for him a happy and successful closing of the year.

Mailing List

About forty pastors have filled out and returned the blank that we sent to them some time ago, asking for names to constitute a mailing list for our files. We are sure that other pastors mean to send this list in but did not do so promptly, and it probably has been forgotten. This is just a reminder.

Budgets

Treasurer Idol reports only two charges—Davidson and Enfield—remitting last week on the A. C. B. Several remit on the G. C. B., and one—Yarborough—on the college. We presume that the large number remitting on the G. C. B. is for Children's Day offering. It is gratifying that many of our charges observed this day, and that the offerings are now coming in. We trust that the report next week may be large again. And let us urge that no charge retain this offering until the conference report is made. It should be sent in now, so as to be made available at once for use by the Board of Missions.

Blank No. 1, in the list of charges paying in full, is still ———. We know of one charge that would not have to pay but a very small amount to take it. "A hint to the wise is sufficient."

We are giving a full list this week of all the charges, and the full amount of credits due each. The report shows that there are still twelve charges with no credits. Bro. Pastor and church officials, please locate your charge in this list and see if that blank is "pleasant to the eyes." I wonder if it can be justified? It's the force of the old habit, isn't it—putting off till the last? But, brethren, this is the last. Just three months, and then comes conference. The raising of these budgets is not an easy matter, I know. But we must not shrink from a thing because it is hard. Weaklings do that. God is able to help us, and He will. In that confidence let us go "about our Father's business," knowing that He needs these budgets for the promotion of His work, and that He will not permit faithful and persistent labor to go unrewarded.

An Unusual Offer

Western Maryland College is offering a full scholarship of $500 to one ministerial student from each of our twenty-six conferences. No student is eligible who is now enrolled in some other Methodist Protestant school, or who is not a graduate of an accredited high school. The offer holds good until the first of September of this year, and will not be renewed for four years. This is an exceedingly generous offer, and one for which the church will not fail to be grateful. But the best way to show gratitude is to supply the students. We sincerely trust that some young man from North Carolina can qualify for this scholarship. The appointment is to be made by the presidents of the various conferences. I shall greatly appreciate any information that will put me in touch with any young man who should have this scholarship.

High Point College

Our assessment for maintenance this year is only $5,000, a very small amount measured by our ability, and by the needs and the increasing opportunities for service that are opening to the institution. The enrollment last year taxed the capacity of the dormitories, and the student prospects are as good or better for next year.

We urge that every charge major on this college assessment, and raise every dollar of it. And, brethren, please do it now. The need is urgent. Don't minimize this appeal. Let me ask you to accept it on its face as fact. And I say again, The need is urgent.

Special Herald Number

We hope to have the material ready for this number by the last of September. The number will be devoted to church and parsonage improvements during the year. The plan is to carry a picture of all such churches and parsonages, with a brief word in regard to each. It will be necessary for us to have a good picture of these buildings so we can have cuts made. A kodak picture, if it is a good one, will be sufficient. We trust that pastors and church officials will provide us with a good picture of each parsonage and church that has been built or repaired, and let us have it as early as possible. The small expense for making the picture and cut will be borne readily, we think, by the churches. For full co-operation in this undertaking, we shall be very grateful.

Appointments

Aug. 4-5, Fallston and Cleveland charges. We will preach at Hebron at 11 a. m. and Friendship 8 p. m. Saturday. Kistler's, 11 a. m., Oak Grove, 2:30 p. m., and Lawndale, 8 p. m. Sunday.

THE COLLEGE SITUATION

Many of our people do not realize the change—the very great change—that has come in recent years with reference to our colleges. But they ought to know it.

Even under the old regime it was a difficult thing to establish a college. This could be known if only we had an accurate and full history of Baptist education in the South. Such a history would be very largely taken up with educational institutions which started with glowing hopes, failed of financial support, became embarrassed with debts and passed into death without even leaving behind enough wisdom to stop others from following them into dismal swamp, and further. This was in the old days when all that was needed to have a college were buidlings, teachers and pupils.

But those old days have gone. It takes more now. It even takes more of those things which once were the only requirements. A college now must have more teachers, and more buildings and more books, and it must pay much higher salaries. Besides, a college must now have endowment funds and these must be large. A Junior College, in addition to a full material equipment in buildings, books and apparatus, must have $200,000 in interest bearing endowment. In other words, a Junior College is hardly possible without about a minimum of $300,000. We doubt seriously if $300,000 would do the work. And a Senior College in addition to all its material plants, must have an endowment of $500,000. We have some Baptist colleges in South Carolina which have plants that are worth more than $500,000 and yet they are not equal to the endowment requirements demanded by the standards. It takes now about $1,000,000 to build a college, on the minimum scale, and get it in the Senior class. Do our people realize these facts? Are they hiding their eyes to them?

But one says: "Are we not a free and independent people? Can't we have a college without such a large endowment if we want one? Can't a man, if he is not able to build a mansion, build for himself a cottage and call it home? And if he builds the best home his money is equal to, is it not home to him and his, doing all the good work of home? Do not the highest and best things come out of these humble homes? What's to prevent us from having a little unendowed college, if that is the best we can do? Has this become a land where only the rich can live?" All right, my brother Baptist, I got as mad as you are now, and I asked all those questions. But all that we have said about the necessity of endowment is true. And, mark you, this editor never had one solitary thing to do with bringing about the necessity. He has all along deplored the changes that have produced this new condition of things. Did he have his way he would go back to something of the old freedom. But as a matter of simple fact, the old freedom is gone and it never will return. For the future a college must have the required endowment equipment or die.

Now why? The answer is very plain. It has come about that the only diplomas that are accepted are diplomas given by colleges that are members, or are on the accepted list, of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. A college to be a member of this organization must have the required equipment, and also the endowment, $200,000 for a Junior College and $500,000 for a Senior College. Without this they can't get in, and unless they are in or are on the accepted list, they can give diplomas indeed, but their diplomas are simply not recognized by universities or by those employing teachers in our high schools. You ask, Do not many colleges, not in this Southern Association, do as good work as those in it? They certainty do. But we have come on a time when it is not the work only that counts. The value of the diploma has got to be considered. Young people will not go to a college whose diploma is not accepted when they can go to one whose diploma is accepted. If all of them do not know this now, it is only tomorrow when they will find out. Had we not as well face the facts? It is utterly useless and hopeless now to try to find a college that is not equal to membership in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. One might think that the time will come when we will all go back to "the good old days." Well, they were not as good as some of us want to imagine; but we have about as much hope of getting back there as we have of having yard sticks of varying length. Whatever changes are to come, a college must be a college, and there must be some great standard to which it must measure up.

If our people will consider the situation as it is they will be slow in building another college. Their leaders will be slow in urging such an undertaking. Some of them might get wrathy with this editor for writing such an editorial. But all that we have to say is, after the first flush of wrath is a little past, then sit down and read again what we are saying in this editorial.—Baptist Courier.

ONE REQUIREMENT FOR ALL

The educated rationalist may laugh at you. But tomorrow he will be trodden under foot, and will go down to shame and everlasting contempt. "Stop," you say, "suppose he graduated at Harvard? or at Princeton? or suppose he is at the head of one of the German universities?" I cannot help that. God makes no special provision for the graduates of Harvard or Princeton. Rejecting the Bible, they will go down to be companions of the most abandoned wretches in the universe, and more miserable than they, because of their superior education. One rule for all—for great brain and little brain; for high-foreheaded Greek professor, and for flat-skulled Esquimaux. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." —Rev. DeWitt Talmage.

UNSELFISHNESS

The lesson of unselfishness is the most important, yet the last to be learned.

The Bishop of Cambridge once put it to his pupils in the form of Christian grammar: "We have learned to say: First person, I; second, thou; third, he. But to put it right, we must turn it upside down: First person, He; second, thou; third, I. 'He' means God, the First Person in the first place; 'thou,' my fellowman; and 'I', myself, comes last." —Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

A STORY OF TWO ARABS

Lamartine, the French poet, tells the following:

There was a famous horse in the tribe of Nagdeh, and an Arab of another tribe wished to have it. He offered for it all his camels, but the owner would not sell it. One day he stained his face, clothed himself in rags and waited by the roadside where he knew the horse was to pass.

When he saw Naber approaching on his fine horse, he cried out in a weak voice, "I am a poor stranger; for three days I have been unable to move from this spot to seek for food; I am dying; help me, and heaven will reward you!"

The Bedouin kindly offered to take him upon his horse and carry him home; but the rogue replied, "I cannot rise; I have no strength left."

Naber, touched with his distress, dismounted and with great difficulty set the seeming beggar on the horse's back.

No sooner did Daher feel himself in the saddle than he set spurs to the horse and galloped off, calling out as he did so, "It is I, Daher! I have got the horse and am off with him!"

Naber called after him to stop and listen. Certain of not being pursued, he turned and halted.

"You have taken my horse. I wish you joy of it; but I do beg you never to tell any man how you obtained it."

"And why not?" said Daher.

"Because," said the noble Arab, "another man might be really ill, and men would fear to help him. You would be the cause of many refusing to perform an act of charity for fear of being duped as I have been."

Daher, struck with shame at these words, was silent for a moment, then, springing from his horse, he returned it to its owner. Naher made him accompany him to his tent, where they spent a few days together, and became fast friends for life.—Selected.

THE CHEERING WORD

Little Charlie was the dull boy of his school. All of the rest either laughed at him or pitied him. Even his master sometimes made fun of him.

He became sullen and indifferent and took no pains to get on.

One day a gentleman who was visiting the school looked over some boys who were making their first attempt to write. There was a general burst of amusement at poor Charlie's efforts. He colored, but was silent.

"Never mind, my lad," said the gentleman, cheeringly, "don't be discouraged. Just do your best and you'll be a brave writer some day. I recollect when I first begun to write being quite as awkward as you are; but I kept on, and now look here."

He took a pen and wrote his name on a piece of paper in good, plain writing. "See what I can do now," he said.

Many years afterwards that gentleman met Charlie again. He had turned out to be one of the most celebrated men of his day, and he told him he owed his success in life, under God's blessing, to his encouraging words.—Scottish Reformer.

HOW TO MAKE A SUCCESS OF YOUR CHRISTIAN LIFE

After we become Christians, our growth in grace depends upon ourselves. It is not possible for us to be very useful Christians unless we are willing to do the things essential to spiritual growth. The following suggestions have been found by many Christians to be of vital importance:

1. Study the Bible. Set aside at least 15 minutes for study of the Word of God. Let God talk to us through His Word. The word of the Bible is food for the soul. Commit to memory great verses of Scripture. Join a class for study, and unite with others in studying the Bible.

2. Pray much. Praying is talking with God. We need to talk with Him about everything—our perplexities and our joys, our sorrows and our mistakes, our plans and our associates.

3. Win some one to Christ. The only work Christ ever gave Christians to do is to win others for His Kingdom. The only way His Kingdom can be advanced is by the personal work of those who believe in Him.

4. Avoid evil comradeship. Our evil companions may be either bad people, bad books, or bad thoughts. We make our friends, and if these are the wrong sort of people they unmake us in character. Shun evil companionship.

5. Be active in the church. This implies faithful attendance at all the services in the house of God. Co-operate with the leaders in every department of the work and strive to advance the plans made by those in charge of the congregation.—Selected.

IGNORANCE OF SCRIPTURE

It is positively pitiful how ignorant some people, even church people, are of Bible truth.

For example, at the Deacons' and Elders' Institute, in the summer of 1927, at DeFuniak Springs, Fla., I heard one of the speakers tell this sad incident:

After an Episcopal bishop had spoken in one of a series of services, one who was a member and a worker in that church said to the wife of a Presbyterian deacon, "What do you think the bishop said?" Of course the deacon's wife did not know. Then the other answered, "Why, he said that God is everywhere!" "Well, do you not believe that?" asked the deacon's wife. "Why, no! Do you think I would sit down at the card table and play cards, if I knew God was right there?"

It was not said what sort of card game it was that she referred to—likely some game for a prize, which is gambling, it matters not who engages in it. But it is plain that the woman regarded it as wrong; and she seemed to think she could engage in it and "put one over" on God because she thought God was not there.

What pitiable ignorance of the teaching of God's Word! Had that poor, ignorant church member never read Prov. 15:3, "The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good?"

Men may work wickedness under cover of darkness and hide it from other men, but "All things are naked and opened to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do." (Heb. 4:13). We do well to keep in mind the word, "Thou seest me." (Gen. 16:13).—Daniel J. Currie.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

Aug. 5, 1928: "Personal Convictions Versus Following the Crowd"

(Consecration Meeting)

Scripture: Acts 5:27-29

Point-o-graph

"A chameleon changes its color to suit the environment.

Do you change your color to suit the crowd? Be true to your personal convictions! Don't be a chameleon!"

Plans for the Meeting

Write the names of great men upon pieces of paper and have each member take one and tell in the meeting how the character assigned stood by his or her convictions rather than following the crowd. Here are suggested names: John Huss, Savanarola, John Knox, Pilgrims, Woodrow Wilson, Jefferson Davis, Abraham Lincoln, Paul, Peter, William Lloyd Garrison, Susan B. Anthony, Frances E. Willard, Francis E. Clark, etc. Use history, "Who's Who," and references to find out about these.

Hints to the Leader

The prisoners in our Scripture stood by their personal convictions. They were told to go preach and teach. When brought before their accusers they said, "We must obey God rather than men." This same spirit of being true to one's convictions has given men the moral strength to face all the terrors that men could invent, and even die for the sake of their convictions. Paul suffering with Silas in jail, Peter with head downward upon the cross, James stretching himself without flinching under the executioner's axe, the martyr Stephen being stoned to death, the heroic deaths in the arena and at the stake, Luther at the Diet of Worms, John Knox a galley slave, John Calvin in exile, John Bunyan in Bedford jail, the Pilgrims in search for religious freedom, the great host of Christians through the century daring to follow the gleam of the Holy Grail, all these have heroically chosen to follow the "voice of God rather than the council of men." May we follow in their train.

Correlation with S. S. Lesson

The Sunday school lesson for today is "Paul Unmoved by Flattery and Danger." Have some one tell of Paul's convictions and how he was true regardless of the cost.

Lessons in Life

Often one finds himself in a place where a very important question is being voted upon. It is always best to vote one's convictions rather than vote to be popular with the crowd in which one is voting. Do not be a chameleon and have a color for each occasion.

A certain young lady danced because she desired to keep up with the other young ladies of her group, yet it was against her conscience to do so. She broke from the crowd and all honor her and respect her for being true to her convictions.

John didn't think it right to go swimming on Sunday. Mary thought it wrong to go to movies when church services were being held. Jack thought car riding during C. E. hour and church hours was wrong. What should each do in their particular cases? Would they be respected for keeping true to their convictions?

Debate

Resolved: "That it is better to stand alone and lose friends than to go with them into questionable things."

Closing Minutes

Sing "Faith of Our Fathers."

Close with Mizpah.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

August 12—The Council at Jerusalem

Scripture Basis—Acts 15:1-35; Gal. 5:1-15.

Golden Text—If therefore the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. John 8:36.

Controversy Concerning Circumcision

Antioch of Syria was the foreign missionary church. When Paul and Barnabas returned from their missionary journey, described last week, and related their experiences and God's successes through them, the church rejoiced and praised God.

But a disturbance arose to somewhat dampen their ardor. Some Judaean critics came down from Jerusalem—"'down' because Jerusalem was regarded as the summit of Jewish authority and the temple hill as the center and source of revealed religion"—and insisted that Gentile Christians must be circumcised.

Circumcision was a sacred Jewish rite. "There can be no doubt that circumcision was originally a religious act. Membership in the tribe, entrance upon the rights of citizenship, participation in the religious practices of the tribe—these privileges are interdependent." This was an old Mosaic law, to which the Jews clave tenaciously, but which the Gentiles knew nothing about from experience. To submit to this practice would put a burden upon the latter, which would add nothing to their salvation.

Commission Carefully Chosen

What must they do to settle the matter permanently and satisfactorily? Paul and Barnabas, who were anxious to deliver the happy, innocent Gentiles from this Jewish yoke, defended their position earnestly. Although there was a sharp difference of opinion, the original Greek gives no indication of anger. They could disagree and yet not lose their Christian spirit.

Since they could arrive at no agreement, wisely the church decided to carefully select a commission of several men to consult with the mother church at Jerusalem. Naturally Paul and Barnabas should head this commission. Only one other is known, and that is one of Paul's disciples and helpers, Titus. (Ga. 2:3).

Making good use of their time as they journeyed from Antioch to Jerusalem, as they passed through Phoenicia and Samaria, they spoke encouraging messages to the Christians scattered through these countries, especially by apprising them of the fact of the conversion of many Gentiles. Any bits of news concerning additions to their ranks or the faithfulness of those enlisted was encouragement to these early Christians, who were always in danger of persecutions and privations because of their faith.

Church Council Called

Arriving at the Holy City, where they were received gladly, they rehearsed in the ears of the apostles, Peter, James and John, and others the glorious things God had wrought through them in the lives of the Gentiles in various places. Here some of the Pharisee converts, of which there were probably only a comparative few, insisted that the law of Moses be observed concerning circumcision.

After some discussion, Peter, the venerable and revered apostle, arose and defended the Gentiles against this Jewish rite, recalling his vision and experience with Cornelius of Caesarea, on whom the Holy Spirit descended and who was baptized a Christian. (Acts, Chap. X). He spoke for the liberty of the Gentiles.

Next, Paul and Barnabas were given an audience to inform the council "what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them." (15:12). Their words had weight, for they had seen and experienced these things.

James was the next to speak. This was not John's brother, for he had been martyred. "Quite certainly this was James the Lord's brother (Gal. 1:19), Christ's brothers had not believed in him during his lifetime, but were won to the Christian faith by His resurrection." By his wisdom a compromise was offered and the problem solved. The summary of his proposal was: That the Gentiles should not be required to be circumcised; that they eat not meat offered to idols; that they abstain from fornication; that they eat not the meat and blood of animals strangled.

Committee Carries Communication

A satisfactory conclusion having been reached, a brotherly letter setting forth the factors of the decision was written and sent by two of the devout men of the Jerusalem church, namely, Judas Barsabas and Silas, along with the Antioch deputation. These two not only delivered the letter, but added words of exhortation and encouragement, which did much toward creating a fine feeling of fellowship between the two churches. May we not apply this to the present day regardless of denominational connections?

TENTH DISTRICT RALLY

The Tenth District Rally will be held the second Sunday in August, the 12th, at Love's Grove Church, Midland Charge. Two services, morning and afternoon. Dinner on the ground. Able speakers and a good program arranged.

Pastors, superintendents and leaders, take notice and plan to attend. Let every church in this district be represented with a large delegation. Come and you will be glad you attended.

H. FREO SURRATT,
District Chairman.

—The Ross Clan will hold its annual reunion at Pleasant Garden on August 9 at 10:30 o'clock.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

New Hope Church, Pageland Circuit.—Our Sunday school is good. Brother John Richardson, our superintendent, is very faithful in the work. We had a great service Sunday night, July 22. Our good pastor preached. Oh! it was good to be there.

Now we are on the eve of a great camp meeting at New Hope Tabernacle. The camp meeting begins the second Sunday in August at 11 a. m. Rev. A. E. Belk, of Los Angeles, California, has been secured to assist Brother C. E. Phillips in the meeting. Several other able ministers will be on hand to assist in the services.

Rev. Mr. Belk is a man of wide experience, having held pastorates in several large cities in the southern states. He has also had a successful career as an evangelist and a church builder. He is truly a preacher and a teacher of the word. Now the need of the hour is prayer. Praying changes things. God continues to hear and answer prayer. Join us in prayer for the meeting.

Your sister in His name,
MRS. JULIA ST. CLAIR, Reporter.

Greensville Circuit, Matthews Chapel.—Our revival meeting began the fourth Sunday and closed the following Thursday night. Bro. Shelton, from Spring Church Circuit, came on Monday and did the preaching. We feel that our church and community were greatly blessed by the wonderful sermons Bro. Shelton brought us, and he worked so faithfully. There were two to unite with our church.

We are glad to say we are still having an interesting Sunday school.

Every Sunday night at 8 o'clock our C. E. Society meets with an interesting program. We are sorry to say our president, Mrs. C. E. Ellis, has resigned on account of bad health, and the writer has been elected to fill the vacancy.

Since our last report we have put a new coat of paint on our church, both inside and out, varnished the pews, purchased new song books and also placed a marker at the entrance of our church bearing its name, Matthews Chapel M. P. Church, and made some improvements on the yard.

LOTTIE EDWARDS.

Rehobeth, Granville Circuit.—Mr. John H. Mundy, of Henderson, N. C., departed this life Sunday, July 15, 1928.

Mr. Mundy for more than 20 years had been a loyal member of Rehoboth church, attending the church services and taking an active part while living in the community. After moving to Henderson he continued to support the church and to attend services when health permitted. He is survived by his wife and the following children: Mrs. Tom Powell, Mrs. Clifton Finch, Mrs. Tal Beckham and one son, Mr. John Mundy, all of Henderson.

The funeral was held in Rehoboth church July 16 and was conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter, of the Henderson M. P. Church. The remains were laid to rest in the Rehoboth cemetery. The large crowd and many beautiful floral designs attested the high esteem in which he was held by friends and loved ones.

In the passing of Mr. Mundy the church has lost a good member, the community a good citizen and the family a loving father and husband.

The Children's Day exercises were held the third Sunday morning of July. The program was unusually good, showing the training and effort of those who were responsible for this program.

The Missionary auxiliaries held their meeting with Mrs. Jim Wrenn. After a short program and Bible lesson, the hostess served an ice course. The August meeting will be held with Miss Crystal Bobbitt.

Rev. C. W. Bates and family have returned to Greensboro after having spent last week in the Union Chapel community, where Mr. Bates ably assisted the pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, in the revival services.

It was indeed good to have Mr. and Mrs. Bates among us again, a former pastor and wife who are much loved.

The first Sunday rally was held at New Hope church July 29 with large crowd attending and a good program.

The young people held the Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. The meeting was led by Miss Lucy Rogers.

The Children's Mission Band, Circle No. 2, met with Mrs. Tom Chandler on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Chandler read an interesting story. The children repeated Scripture verses and sang songs. After the meeting Mrs. Chandler served ice cream.

The Mission Band, Circle No. 1, met with Mrs. Richard Harris on Saturday afternoon. The children are interested and active in the mission work. REPORTER.

Vaughan, Littleton Circuit.—We are glad to have back with us Rev. N. M. Harrison, who has been assigned to the Littleton Circuit the rest of the conference year. We had our regular preaching services last Sunday. We are going to have a revival, starting the fourth Sunday in August.

We are expecting to organize a Sunday school some time in the near future.

Our pastor is trying to get all the people of Vaughan to go together and have cottage prayer meeting. We hope it will be a success.

At the third quarterly conference at Littleton the votes were counted and Mr. M. J. Morris was elected as delegate to the Annual Conference. REPORTER.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Bro. Wm. Pike came to help Bro. Hunter in our special meeting which started at 11 o'clock the third Sunday in July. He preached faithfully and very properly for a revival, and while there weren't near the results that we hoped for, there were five confessions of faith and a very strong renewed interest noticed in the church.

On the third Sunday we made an effort to hold our Children's Day program, and just as we got started good with a packed house the lights went out. We finished as best we could with an oil lamp, but it was disappointing to all of us; so on the fourth Sunday night we had the program over with a large attendance and a very acceptable offering. The training committee in charge of this program are to be commended for their untiring efforts with rehearsing the program.

Our Sunday school attendance is running above a hundred now with new ones coming in every Sunday.

Bro. Roy Hunt and wife, of Shoals, N. C., came over and worshiped with us two days and nights during the special meeting.

A goodly number of our people attended the county Sunday school convention at Pinnacle recently.

President Taylor was with us the first Sunday in July and preached one of his very finest sermons, which was enjoyed by every one.

Wonder how many noticed in his report of visiting Mt. Zion what he said of Mt. Zion building a new church with Sunday school rooms. We fully believe this will be put over this time. Bro. Hunter is determined that it shall be, and each one of the church trustees is decided on building new rather than spending anything on repairing the present building.

Bro. Hunter accompanied the trustees down to Reeds, N. C., to look over and study their new building. They came back mighty well pleased with the plan and we are sure that there will something definite be started soon on a new church at Mt. Zion.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Sandy Ridge, Kernersville Charge.—There will be a Children's Day service the second Sunday in August, beginning about ten o'clock. We are expecting to have a picnic dinner and then in the afternoon there will be a community singing. Every one is invited to come and spend the day with us. Come, bring your basket and let's enjoy both services. R. K. ANDERSON.

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—We are moving on as well as we could since you last heard from us, having observed all the services of the church from Christmas on as they came each year, but no one has reported for two years or more from this church.

We have a reporter now who will after the second Sunday in this month begin her work. We are praying for a good revival which begins second Sunday.

Capt. Noah Tarkington's family moved last of February to the old home of his mother in this community; his wife and several children were received in the church Easter Sunday. He and his oldest son were already members. Norma Tarkington, his oldest daughter, I introduce to you as our reporter.

Herbert Swain, son of Henry Swain, was professor of our Creswell high school last year. His church attendance is with us. It is gratifying to know he will teach again in Creswell this coming year. Bro. C. V. White is rapidly gaining his strength; was out to Sunday school Sunday. He was ill in Protestant Hospital, Norfolk, Va., for several weeks. His sister, Minnie White Bendler, died. He went down to the funeral to accompany remains to Edenton for burial, was taken ill at his son's, Thomas White, in Norfolk, was taken to hospital, his family all called, and for several days no hopes; but God mercifully raised him up again and restored him to his home and church.

Mrs. G. L. Davenport has been "under the weather" since last of May with rheumatic troubles. She's slowly improving.

Rev. R. L. Hethcox is enjoying two weeks' rest and vacation in Charleston, S. C., guest of B. G. J. Cherry. Hope Bro. C. H. Whitaker has greatly improved. A MEMBER.

Pleasant Union, Mt. Pleasant Charge.—On Saturday and Sunday, July 28 and 29, the District Rally was held at Pleasant Union church. Large crowds attended all the services. The response from the different churches represented in regard to Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and missionary work was fine. Saturday morning Dr. Taylor, president of the North Carolina Annual Conference, gave a splendid discussion of the conference program. This was followed by an open discussion. If we will each do our part it will not be a difficult matter to carry out the program as was outlined by Dr. Taylor, but a chain is no stronger than its weakest link. Am I, are you, going to be the weak link in our chain of church work? The Methodist Protestant church will be just what we make it, so let's enter whole-heartedly into this work and make this the best year thus far in the history of our church.

Saturday afternoon was given over to missions. Moriah and Julian churches gave short, interesting programs which were followed by an address by Mrs. A. G. Dixon. Mrs. Dixon carefully explained the work of the Mission Board and told of the changes made at the General Conference in Baltimore. There is a great mission work to be done at home and abroad and if we cannot go we can help send others. May our zeal for missions speak by our lives.

Saturday evening a missionary pageant or rather a short play was given by Pleasant Union church. It was entitled "The Two Masters."

At 9:45 a. m. Sunday we had our regular Sunday school. Following this at 11 a. m. Dr. Taylor gave us a wonderful sermon on "An All-the-Year Program of Evangelism." His text was Acts 2:47. He said that an all-year evangelism is the heart of the church. We must not only get sinners saved but we must keep them saved. Christ's program is an all-year program and if we accept the program of Jesus Christ for evangelism it will be one that operates 12 months in the year. May we adjust ourselves to this kind of program.

Sunday afternoon Rev. A. G. Dixon spoke to us very forcibly on "Christian Stewardship." He referred us to numerous passages of Scripture relating to the duty of a Christian steward. Following Rev. Mr. Dixon's address, Rev. R. M. Andrews, president of High Point College, gave us an address on "Christian Education." His text was Genesis 13:14-15.

The rally was helpful and inspirational. We were glad to have it at Pleasant Union church. READER.

Tabernacle Charge.—Our revival meeting at Julian began the fourth Sunday in July and closed on the following Friday night. Rev. J. C. Auman, the engaged help, came on Monday and remained until the close. His sermons were instructive and inspiring, resulting in seven conversions and three accessions. Others will join later. Pastor and people were delighted to have Brother Auman with us in this meeting.

A number of our faithful Tabernacle members are very sick at this writing. We trust that they will soon be better.

Mr. William Hardin, son of Brother P. A. Hardin, was the only representative to the Leadership Training School from Tabernacle Charge. He was present from the beginning until the close.

Miss Ezda Deviney, who has been teaching in Florida State College for a number of years, is spending the summer months with her parents at Julian. She is a great help in our church services.

Brother R. L. Jones will represent Tabernacle Charge in our next Annual Conference.

The following have remembered the pastor with substantial gifts recently: Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Fields, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner and Mr. and Mrs. Ivey. They have our thanks.

H. L. ISLEY.

Friendship Station.—Our protracted meeting will begin Sunday. Rev. Julius Morgan will assist in the meeting. We are indeed fortunate in securing Mr. Morgan, for we know he is a Christian man and we feel like he will feed our souls on heavenly food during this meeting. We ask an interest in your prayers for the success of our meeting.

MRS. D. W. SIDES.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—Our community was saddened on last Saturday by the death of little Hazel, the nearly two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garnett Hawkins. Little Hazel had been sick about two days but her disease developed rapidly and as a last resort was taken to Roanoke Rapids Hospital where her mother had previously been carried a week before for an operation. Little Hazel lived only a few hours after reaching the hospital. Her mother, who is still in the hospital, and her father are intensely grieved and need the prayers and sympathy of the entire community.

The funeral service was conducted at Hawkins Chapel at 2:30 Sunday afternoon by Rev. J. B. O'Briant, who married them, and Rev. N. M. Harrison, our new pastor.

After the interment the congregation reassembled at church to hear the first gospel message of Bro. Harrison to his people.

We are gratefully pleased to know that Bro. Harrison has been assigned to Littleton Charge. The people seemed much impressed with his first message. His gospel is kind and convincing. We trust there will be a harmonious loyalty in the church and that Bro. Harrison may lead us to victorious success.

Our Sunday school superintendent, with his helpers, has launched the Children's Day program, and we are working overtime to have a creditable service on the second Sunday morning in August. The revival meeting will commence in the afternoon of the same day.

This is somewhat of a home coming day, and we very often have about a thousand people in attendance.

We had expected Rev. A. D. Shelton to preach for us during this revival, but learned that he had been previously engaged. Bro. Harrison will do the preaching and, judging from his sermon yesterday, he is fully able to handle the job. We trust that there will be a unity of prayer and service.

We appreciate the interest of President Taylor in this charge and hope that he, with the care of all the churches, will not forget us in prayer in this urgent hour.

And now may all our services be blest and all our sacrifices be acceptable to Him.

BEATRICE HAWKINS, Reporter.

Asheboro.—Two more members, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Lamb, were received Sunday evening, coming to us from Giles' Chapel, Richland Charge. We sincerely welcome them. For the past two years they have lived in Asheboro and have been regular attendants at our church.

Quite a goodly number of our people attended the District Rally at Charlotte Church last Sunday. The house was comfortably filled both morning and afternoon. Rev. W. H. Neese delivered a very fine address on "Evangelism" at the morning service and Miss Esther Ross read a fine paper on "Women's Work in the Church." At the afternoon service Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the conference, spoke enthusiastically of the Annual Conference program. The Ridge quartette rendered several selections and the Bulla quartette gave one selection. Mildred Lamb, of Asheboro, gave a beautiful recitation.

Next Sunday there will be Sunday school as usual, but no preaching either morning or evening as the pastor will be taking a vacation. On August 12 Dr. T. C. Johnson, of High Point College, will preach at 11 o'clock. J. E. PRITCHARD.

High Point.—Last Sunday morning an interesting missionary program was given in the Baraca class at the regular Sunday school hour. At 11 o'clock the junior church, under the leadership of Rev. E. Lester Ballard, held its usual services with a good attendance. Dr. S. K. Spahr, of Greensboro, who has been preaching for us since January 1, delivered his last sermon to a very appreciative audience. His theme was the thoughtful and forceful question of James in the fourth chapter and 14th verse: "What is your life?" He said that each one of us is a distinct personality, and must give an account of his deeds to God. Life is not an accident; are we here only to gratify our desires and appetites? It is full of responsibility, and each one of us must take others into account. A selfish life is an unhappy one, and in order to make the most of our lives we must recognize our duty to God and our fellow men.

"So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan that moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

It is with the greatest reluctance that the congregation parts with Dr. Spahr, whose ministry we have enjoyed greatly. His sermons are uplifting and full of comfort. He and Mrs. Spahr will leave Wednesday in their car for a visit to relatives and friends at different points in Pennsylvania.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. George T. Penny honored her mother, Mrs. J. C. Welch, with a lovely birthday party at her magnificent new home, "Pennybyrn," near Jamestown. The guests were the members of the Ladies' Aid Society and a number of friends from Greensboro, Dr. and Mrs. Spahr, Mrs. J. M. Millikan, and Mrs. T. A. Hunter.

The occasion was honored with the largest attendance in the history of the society, there being 60 members present. The meeting was held in the spacious and handsome living room, and after the conclusion of business Mesdames John C. Whitesell, J. H. Allred and A. W. Bagley, of Greensboro, sang several old-time favorites such as "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "Sweet Genevieve" and others. A tea-wagon laden with many beautiful gifts was rolled to the honoree, Mrs. Welch, by dainty little Miss Katherine Ryan, which was the first hint of the real purpose of the party to the guest of honor, who was overwhelmed by surprise. A delicious salad course with iced tea was then served by Mrs. J. C. Welch, Jr., Misses Ruth Moffitt, Lucy Neal Carr, Elizabeth Oakes, Ruth and Elizabeth Welch. The guests were next invited into the elegant dining room where an exquisite birthday cake adorned the center of the table, and delicious ices, cakes and mints in roses were served, after which the hostess opened the entire mansion for inspection. This beautiful estate comprises 154 acres situated on the High Point-Greensboro highway, 10 acres of which was reserved for the house and grounds. Deep River and the beautiful reservoir lake bound the property in the rear. The house is a combination of Italian and Spanish type of architecture, brick with terra cotta trimmings, containing 20 rooms, and is elegantly furnished throughout. The villa, crowning as it does a lovely knoll, commands a magnificent view of the surrounding countryside. The setting of gently sloping lawn, shrubbery and a profusion of flowers adds greatly to the attractiveness and beauty of the dwelling, which has been two years in building, and is the largest and most handsome private home in Guilford County. Mr. and Mrs. Penny are indeed to be congratulated on the excellent taste and wonderful beauty of this ideal home, and the memory of this delightful party on Monday will linger long in the hearts of all those who were present, and the charming hospitality of the gracious hostess was a great joy to her many guests.

We are pained to announce that our beloved layman, A. M. Rankin, Sr., is confined to his room by illness, which is hoped will be of brief duration.

Miss Annie Robbins, who suffered a sudden attack of appendicitis last Sunday, and underwent an operation Monday morning, is improving satisfactorily. This will be good news to her host of friends.

Mrs. Robert M. Noble, of Chicago, and young daughter, Margaret, are guests of her mother, Mrs. M. E. Blair, and sisters, Mesdames A. M. Rankin, Sr., and Ernest L. Auman and Miss Florence Blair.

The children of Mrs. W. P. Pickett, Mrs. John S. Pickett, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, Mrs. John H. Walker, Jr., and Mrs. H. S. Meredith, of Tampa, Fla., who is a guest in the home, paid a beautiful tribute to their mother last Thursday when they gave a dinner party in honor of her birthday. A large number of relatives and old-time friends were guests on this happy occasion, when an elegant dinner was served.

It is with great regret that we learn of the resignation of Prof. J. D. Hardy from the faculty of High Point College. He will be assistant professor of biology in Dickinson College, Carlysle, Penn., next year. He and his charming wife have greatly endeared themselves to a large number of our church people as well as the college group, and we shall part with them with great reluctance. Many good wishes will follow them to their new home. REPORTER.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—Our community has been saddened by the death of one who lives near the church, Miss Annie Cantrell, daughter of Mrs. Sallie Cantrell. She had been in bad health for several months, although her death was a surprise to the surrounding community.

Our Sunday school has increased greatly in number the last few Sundays. Our enrollment was 125 the past Sunday.

Rev. G. B. Ferree has recently attended the Young People's Summer Conference at High Point College. He reported the conference being very successful.

Miss Montez Henderson, who is a teacher of the young folks' class, is attending summer school at Greenville, S. C. She hopes to get her degree at the close of the session.

Miss Mildred Halley, of Pickens, S. C., the daughter of our superintendent, gave a party last Tuesday night in honor of her 16th birthday. The young people reported an enjoyable time.

The revival meeting started Sunday, July 29, and Rev. Hendry, of Concord, N. C., is doing the preaching. We hope to have a good number of converts, which will leave our community a real Christian one and one which any one would enjoy living in.

The Children's Day exercise was held Sunday night and the children did unusually well for the number of times they were drilled. The offering amounted to $8.51, which we will be glad to send across the waters to the foreign lands. We wish to say here we are glad to express our appreciation for the kindness and faithfulness which Mrs. L. H. White and Mrs. Estella Connelly showed in training these children and helping them to do their parts.

Mrs. Estella Connelly, of our church, was elected delegate to the Annual Conference, which is to be held this fall at Winston-Salem, N. C.

Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Ferree, preached a very interesting sermon Sunday from which everybody received a blessing.

Mrs. J. F. Dosier and family have purchased a home in Greensboro where they now reside at No. 9 Springdale Court.

The writer and family are spending their vacation in Vance County.

In connection with the above contributions of this week we have received from Mrs. E. M. Brower, of High Point, a very fine box of merchandise, which she terms remnants, from her store, but among them we have found several pieces containing enough for one and two dresses for the large girls.

Not from usual custom, but in all sincerity, we extend to you our thanks and deep appreciation.

May we always have your prayers.

On Wednesday evening of this week we were agreeably surprised on having a large delegation from Flat Rock Sunday school come here on their picnic.

We were happy to have them, and we extend a welcome to any other Sunday schools that wish to do likewise.

ANTAGONIZING THE AL SMITH FORCES

The writer has been reading today where influential leaders have come out against the "Anti-Smith" and "Vote for Hoover" forces. With strong language and convincing argument these antagonized leaders are massing their followers.

Some think that there are better ways of winning an argument than to antagonize the opponent. It was not the method of Jesus to antagonize. He appealed with the instrument of love and goodness. Hence evil vanished.

It seems to the writer that the best method Jesus' disciples can use just now is the method Jesus used. We have ministers in every community preaching and living the loving and righteous life. They are heard by the populace. We must have confidence that this populace will vote for the right things when the test comes. If we can have this confidence in those to whom we have preached, there is no reason for organizations that will antagonize the enemy, for right will eventually triumph.

The writer is first of all a Christian, therefore, he will not vote for wet candidates, and secondly, a Democrat when the party has a Democratic leader. F. L. GIBBS.

"LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL IN MISSISSIPPI"

By F. L. Gibbs, Assistant Secretary, Board of Christian Education, Methodist Protestant Church

The third Leadership Training School of the southwest this summer was begun at Pineville, Mississippi, July 2nd. Some thirty young people signed up for the following courses: Principles of Teaching, Mrs. Leslie M. Wheeler; Evangelism, and Life of Christ, Dr. G. O. McMillan, and Vocational Guidance and Science of Leadership, Rev. F. L. Gibbs.

Rev. F. E. Roberts and his good people entertained the students in their homes and administered in other ways to make our stay a happy one.

Rev. Lawrence Little, Mrs. Leslie M. Wheeler, Dr. G. O. McMillan and F. L. Gibbs spoke at the evening services to large congregations. Each evening prior to the eight o'clock service, worshipful vesper services were conducted under the trees of the church grounds. Again we heard the still small voice of God speaking to us. Again youth responded, and many dedicated their lives to religious work as their vocation.

Each afternoon two hours were given to recreation. The Indian Tribe ideas were used. The names were Kola Akita, Onspe Akita, and Teca Akita. Competitive games, songs, yells, and stunts were participated in by the groups. Much wholesome fun was enjoyed by many. The Christian Endeavor Society of the local church served refreshments at the close of the recreational periods Wednesday and Friday. Points were given to the various tribes and the results were: Tecas 13 (winners), Onspes 8, and Kolas 6. The stunt afternoon was one of joy and laughter for all attending.

The decision service was conducted by Rev. F. L. Gibbs Friday evening. At this service 16 of the finest young men and women to be found anywhere dedicated their lives to make their vocations Christian, and signed the Methodist Protestant Life Service League pledge.

Our small conferences of the west and south are developing its youth for Kingdom service. We feel that this will make the future secure. Watch the west and south grow!

The officers selected by the Mississippi Conference Young People's Union are as follows: President, Rev. C. F. Gerald, Clara, Miss.; vice-president, Mr. Truette Roberts, Pineville, Miss.; secretary, Miss Lorena Kinsey, Richton, Miss.; treasurer, Mr. Emmison Blakeney, Meridian, Miss.; advisors of board, Miss Betty Ridgeway, Moselle, Miss., and Mr. Nate Williamson, Meridian, Miss.

——? ——?

The report this week is gratifying, as to the number of charges reporting on the G. C. B., but not so as to the A. C. B. Eleven charges report for the former, and only two for the latter. The A. C. B. funds are distressingly low just now, and a little from many charges would help much. We hope that the report for next week, as to A. C. B., may be much better. Please see note regarding college in president's letter.

We are giving a full list of all charges this week, and the credits due each. An examination will show TWELVE BLANKS. Too bad! Too bad! Only three months till Conference, and yet here are TWELVE charges that have not paid a cent on any Conference claim this year. If the record of every charge were like that, what would become of the Conference? If it is a matter of inability, these charges are excusable. God does not expect of us, neither must the Conference, what is beyond our ability. But are we to believe that there is any charge in the list that has no ability to pay anything on any Conference claim during a period of NINE months? Are we to believe that? Let's not discount ourselves, brethren. "We are well able to go up and take the land."

We are doing our best to avoid errors, but even then they will sometimes be made. If you discover any regarding your charge, we shall be glad to have you call our attention to them so the necessary correction can be made.

With a deep interest in every charge, and a full appreciation of all faithfulness on the part of pastors and people, I am,

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

ECHO NORTH CAROLINA LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The Leadership Training School which was held at High Point College the past week was in every sense of the word a real success.

The recreational program, furnished by Rev. F. L. Gibbs and Miss Betty Brittingham, provided clean and wholesome, yet enjoyable, fun and recreation at just the proper times for play. We are glad that it is no longer the custom to separate the social from the spiritual side of life. And one of the main points stressed by the recreational leaders was the fact that these two sides of a person's life are, and should be, closely connected.

Standard courses for Leadership Training were offered; they were taught by competent and consecrated teachers. The young people took the study of these courses seriously and went back home with a determination to put into practice and carry out the principles and truths learned.

It is hard to believe that messages could have been given more inspirational than those delivered by Dr. Link, of Baltimore, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights. Then the climax of the conference came on Friday night when forty young people, who before had not decided definitely upon their life work, came forward and dedicated their life to Christ, either to render whole or part time Christian service.

Young people, if you would like to enjoy a real mountain top experience, attend the Leadership Training School next year.

KATHLEEN PASCHALL.

—Bro. J. A. Cox and wife, of Calvary Church, with two friends are to make a trip to Indiana soon by automobile. They go to visit friends and to have a vacation. They will be gone two Sundays and will be missed at the church.

—Calvary's new bulletin board was formally presented to the church last Sunday morning. It is said to be the best bulletin board in the city. It was paid for by the C. E. Society, but much of the labor was contributed by members of the church who are handy with tools. It cost over $60, but would have cost about $160 if it had been bought ready made.

—Prof. J. D. Hardy, of High Point College, has resigned to accept a position in Dickinson College, Pennsylvania.

—The first state-wide anti-evolution referendum ever held occurs in Arkansas on November 6.

It is advisable in the larger churches to have Circles with a membership of not more than 30. A smaller number is even more desirable.

TAMMANY AND THE SUPREME COURT

Before 1933, Chief Justice Taft of the Supreme Court will be 75; Justice Holmes will be 91; Justice Brandeis will be 76; Justice Van de Vanter will be 73; Justice Sutherland will be 70. The probability is that the next man elected president will appoint successors to every one of these men, either because of retirement or death. The election of Gov. Al Smith may place Tammany in control of the Supreme Court of the United States.

VOLUME XXXIV GREENSBORO, N. C., AUGUST [illegible] NUMBER 40

A Mother's Anxiety

Our mothers are our best friends. How deeply and constantly are they concerned for our welfare. When we are children, they are ever on the watch for us, and are ever fearful lest we are hurt in our play. When we grow up, they become anxious lest we hurt ourselves incurably by doing wrong. They pray for us night and day. They lose sleep for us. What a wonderful love is theirs! If we could realize what they are suffering for us, surely we would do our best to relieve them of anxious fears. We may exhort mothers not to be anxious about their children. We might as well exhort the wind not to blow. The mother will tell you that she cannot keep from being anxious, and she can't. It is her nature to be anxious for her children. God made her as she is. God saw that young people need a great human friend, and He gave them such a friend in Mother. What a shame it is to despise mother's love, what a crime to trample mother's love under feet. And yet mother's love does not die even when trampled under foot. It springs up again strong as ever. When men are shut up in prisons or insane asylums, the friend that continues longest to visit them is mother. A mother's love is said to be the fairest flower that grows on earth. A mother's anxiety is the fruitage of her love. It is through a mother's love that God would reveal to us His own wonderful love. Anxious mothers may do well to take Peter's advice and cast all their care upon Him that careth for them. Mothers are God's agents and partners in the divine work of bringing souls into His service. Their efforts and sufferings are great and protracted, and surely their reward will be correspondingly great. Their anxieties and their prayers for sons and daughters will not go for naught. They shall see of the travail of their souls and shall be satisfied.

Herald's Vacation Week

"He that fights and runs away may live to fight another day." He that fights recklessly on may fall in his tracks and be able to fight no more. This hot weather suggests that it is time for a little rest, and week after next is the time looked forward to by the HERALD forces. Therefore we expect to issue no paper on the 23rd of August. Those having announcements or department matter will please send them in time for the issue of August 16.

—No one, preacher or laymen, should allow himself to be carried away by waves of worldly excitement over temporal concerns. It would not be nearly so bad for the ——— to win as for Satan to win.

—A greater campaign than the politicians are waging is the campaign preachers and laymen are carrying on for the salvation of souls. The Kingdom of God is a far greater thing than is the government of the United States.

Diotrephes at the General Conference

We do not know whether he was at our General Conference in Baltimore. We presume he was not, as the M. E. General Conference met at the same time in Kansas City, and Diotrephes was there and had much to say. A writer in Zion's Herald says of him: "But for him the General Conference would evidently have been a failure. He knew what the Conference had a right to do and what it didn't. He had to speak on every subject. He made so many points of order that it was sometimes impossible to do business, but of course his points were always right. He must eulogize upon everybody who was dead or had a birthday. Mutual admiration ran so high at times that the day's work was forgotten. The obituaries of the living and the dead," to quote one of the bishops, "were freely donated, and if any dead or retired Methodist was omitted it must have been his own fault for not holding some office or having been a member of some General Conference. Of course they were all worthy and anyway the business could wait, but how we did jam that business through at the end, except what the chairmen of the committees would rather leave out!"

Diotrephes is a very eminent and influential man, but somehow the Apostle John was not well pleased with him.

—Do the duty that lies nearest to thee.—Goethe.

—Let no man presume to give advice to others who has not first given good counsel to himself.—Seneca.

—Has the office of President of the United States become so unimportant that it does not matter who is elected?

—We will be glad when this election campaign is over and people can give their attention to more important interests.

—Take your full part in civic affairs but do not let any influence cause you to degrade yourself by taking a mean or unworthy part. Your own honor is worth more to you than would be the greatest success of your party.

—The election of four years ago brought out twenty-nine million voters. It is predicted that there will be thirty-five million people who will vote in our national election this year. The politicians are very anxious about the way they will vote.

—Daniel W. Wilbur, a layman, at Kansas City voiced the will of the laymen: "I will stand here and advocate the payment of the ministers, and that they have more. I propose to help raise the flag higher, instead of pulling it down. I say to you, as a layman, it is poor judgment to cut down the askings for these men in their declining days. No industrial plant would think of doing that in the case of old employees who have been faithful for twenty or thirty or forty years."—Zion's Herald.

THE CHALLENGE

(Review of The Challenge by William G. McAdoo; The Century Co., New York City)

The voice of true Democracy on prohibition, liquor lawlessness and constitutional government speaks clearly in the volume, The Challenge, by William G. McAdoo, recently published by the Century Company, a collection of addresses delivered during 1927, dealing with the fundamental issues of politics from the standpoint of prohibition enforcement. Mr. McAdoo declares:

"The liquor question itself is a question that political leadership cannot ignore. The American people by writing the Eighteenth Amendment into the Constitution registered their solemn conviction that the welfare of the human beings who compose the nation demanded that they should be protected from exploitation by a traffic which took a heartless toll from millions of innocent persons, women and children for the most part, who without any act of their own were sacrificed to its financial greed. By the Eighteenth Amendment the American people determined that the resources of government should be brought into play that this wrong might cease, that this burden might be lifted from the innocent, that this source of social loss and wastage might be checked and the human resources of the nation conserved. In other words, they determined to bring into operation by constitutional processes the uncontested power of the state to safeguard the health, morals, and well-being of the community —the power to abate a public nuisance."

In view of recent happenings in the world of politics, this statement by Mr. McAdoo is of great significance.

"A great drive is being made by an alliance of all the political machines, in the section of the country where they are strongest, to gain control of the federal government for the first time in American history. This drive is being made under the guise of an attack upon the Eighteenth Amendment and the prohibition laws. That this issue should have been chosen by the machine politicians for their purposes is not unnatural. The connection between machine politics and the criminal liquor traffic has always been particularly close and intimate. The machine politician was bred by the saloon. The saloon was the center of his operations and a main source of his power. It was the gathering place of the idle and criminal class of hangers-on upon whom he depended to do his errands and to act as his go-betweens with those who desired to purchase his favors. It is asserted and perhaps with truth that many machine politicians in our great centers of population maintain speakeasies in order to retain their connection with this class of supporters and to form the indispensable basis for their political operations. Of course, politicians of this stamp are opposed to prohibition and the prohibition laws. These politicians are fighting for their lives. Not merely would prohibition, if adequately enforced, break up their centers of power, but as the population becomes more sober, more thrifty, and reaches a higher plane of comfort through the abolition of the liquor traffic, it will be much less susceptible to machine deception and more alive to its real nature and purpose."

Those responsible for the repeal of the Mullan-Gage prohibition enforcement law in the state of New York should read Mr. McAdoo's discussion of the constitutionality of such action.

"I submit that where a state has once performed its constitutional duty of enacting a law to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, and later undertakes to repeal that act, the repeal, if unaccompanied by the substitution of another constitutional and efficacious enforcement statute, is unconstitutional and void for the same reasons that I advanced in considering the effect of a possible repeal by Congress of the Volstead act. In the case of the repeal of a state statute, however, it would probably be difficult to bring the question of the constitutionality of the repeal before the federal courts because of the porcedural obstacles; but the courts of the repealing state are under a constitutional obligation to hold the repeal void when their jurisdiction is properly invoked.

"If these views are sound, it must follow that the repeal by the state of New York in 1923 and the repeal by the state of Montana recently of their prohibition enforcement laws are void."

Elsewhere Mr. McAdoo discusses the consequences of the Mullan-Gage repeal and Governor Smith's misleading statements concerning it. He says:

"Considerable misunderstanding of the consequences of the repeal of the state enforcement act in New York has been created by recent utterances of the governor of that state. After giving his approval to the act repealing the state prohibition law, the governor now says that 'there devolves upon the state the sacred duty of sustaining the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead law. They are as much a part of the laws of this state as our own statutes and our own constitution,' and he then goes on to imply that even in the absence of a state enforcement act the police agencies of the state are available for the enforcement of prohibition. His effort is apparently to create the impression that no state enforcement statute is necessary because even in the absence of such a statute the state officials are under an obligation to enforce the Volstead act. This position is entirely misleading and has no justification in law. . . .

"The 'sacred duty' upon state officials of which the governor speaks doubtless exists, but the means of performing it were taken away from them when jurisdiction over prohibition offenses was removed from the state courts by repeal of the state enforcement act. The living organism of state enforcement has had its head struck off by closing the state courts to prohibition cases, and while the duty remains, the situation is precisely as if we were to say that a policeman is under a duty to protect a bystander form murderous assault when we have taken away from him the gun which is his only means of giving such protection."

The South, whose loyalty to the ideals of true Democracy, as distinguished from Tammany Democracy, finds Mr. McAdoo a defender from the assaults of the liquor group. He presents the Jeffersonian idea of individual liberty in its contrast to liquor license, thus:

"In those sections of the country where opposition to the prohibition amendment is strongest there has been unfair and misleading criticism of the South because of its vigorous support of the prohibition cause. The charge has been made that in supporting prohibition the South is untrue to its traditional Jeffersonian ideal of individual liberty. Such a charge could only be made by men whose traditions do not enable them to understand the meaning of civil liberty; by men who do not share in the Anglo-Saxon tradition of liberty under law which is the liberty that Southern statesmanship has always fought for."

When Mr. McAdoo wrote: "The contest between the two great political parties for the control of the presidency and the Congress of the United States affords the only national referendum for the decision of great questions of this kind, and we must have the courage and sincerity to present this issue squarely to the people so that their judgment may be rendered in the light of reason and with full knowledge of the facts," he probably did not appreciate the fact that the clear-cut issue whereof he wrote would be so clearly presented for the American people as it is today.

We wish that every American citizen might read these words which sum up clearly and calmly the peril faced by our public institutions today.

"The supreme need is to put law enforcement in the White House; it is of less importance to put it in party platforms. In the White House it will transform law violation into law obedience; in party platforms it will mean nothing unless translated into the strength and authority of a fearless, righteous, and resolute president. Attempt is being made to convince the country that no matter if a 'wet' is elected president, the Constitution and laws will be enforced. This is both unsound and untrue. Neither the Constitution nor the laws of the United States are self-executing. The president is charged by the Constitution with the express duty of protecting and defending the Constitution, and executing the laws of the land. In doing this he has, of necessity, wide latitude and discretion. If he is opposed to the laws which he is called upon to execute, he can neglect them or fail to exert his power and authority in such manner that the despised laws will become impotent, without subjecting himself to tangible criticism or possible impeachment. To say that a president hostile to the Eighteenth Amendment and the prohibition laws cannot seriously impair effective enforcement throughout the United States is upon its face an absurdity. This has been conclusively demonstrated by what has been done in New York and Maryland, where hostile executives have paralyzed prohibition enforcement. The president has the power to appoint the judges of the Supreme Court, the judges of all circuit and district courts throughout the United States, the prosecuting attorneys, the United States marshals, the secretary of the treasury, and his assistants—these latter officials being directly charged with enforcement of the prohibitive laws. If he should appoint to these positions men who are hostile to the laws, the effect upon their successful enforcement would be profound. Moreover, the president is primarily responsible for the budget through which the Congress makes appropriations for prohibition enforcement. He can largely influence the size of the appropriations, which, if inadequate, seriously impair the ability to enforce the law. He has the power to veto appropriation and other bills enacted by the Congress and through such power he might be able to reduce the appropriations to such a small amount as to paralyze prohibition enforcement. He has a tremendous influence upon public opinion, and through his speeches and messages to the Congress, and the use of general patronage, which is a powerful weapon in his hands, he could, if he was opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment and the prohibition laws, lead a formidable movement for their repeal. The White House in the hands of the liquor interests would be a veritable Gibraltar of offensive operations, and the doom of the Eighteenth Amendment would be written boldly upon the face of the Constitution." —By Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D., Litt.D., Director of Department of Education, Anti-Saloon League of America.

ANANIAS OF DAMASCUS

By Rev. W. A. Ledford

Damascus is not indebted to Ananias for its place in history, as is Tarsus to Saul; Nazareth to Jesus; Arimathaea to Joseph; Assisi to Saint Francis; Clairvoux to Bernard; Epworth to the Wesleys; Ayreshire to Robert Burns, and Stratford-on-Avon to the immortal Shakespeare. Numerous other places might be mentioned, which owe their historical existence to the name of some famous personage. Likewise many a small, obscure person becomes a historical character by being connected with some famous character. Simon of Cyrene will always be remembered as the man who met Jesus and bore the cross for Him. Ananias is known because he was associated with Saul rather than by any achievements of his own.

I have called this man "Ananias of Damascus" to distinguish him from the other two Ananiases named in the New Testament. The best known, perhaps, is that one which, with his wife, lied to the Holy Spirit, and died as a consequence. The other one held the office of high priest, and because of his illegal commands was called a "whited wall" by Paul. One naturally contrasts how differently these three men of the same name bore the name. Ananias, who lied to the Holy Spirit, headed the well known "Ananias Club" of the late Theodore Roosevelt. That other one, who regarded laws so lightly and his oath of office so meaningless, might properly head a great club in our own country, who take pride in scoffing at certain fundamental laws of our land. All ages and countries afford such contrasts in the character of men bearing the same name. I shudder when I read of a George Washington sentenced to be hanged, desecrating the name left so clean by the "Father of Our Country." Or of a John Wesley, or a Martin Luther, or a John Calvin, being arrested for bootlegging; desecrating the names of the "Fathers of Protestantism," who so faithfully followed the command, "To do justly, and to love mercy and to walk humbly with God." We need to wear the mantle of our fathers worthily.

All that is known of Ananias of Damascus is in his favor. Paul refers to him as a "devout man according to the law, and well reputed of all the Jews that dwelt at Damascus." Authorities hold that he was the head of the Christian Church at Damascus, and that he baptized Paul. Tradition says that he later was consecrated Bishop of Damascus by a few of the Apostles, and he met a martyr's death. His is an illustration of the fact that "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor than silver and gold." The Bible says, "That the memory of the righteous is blessed." All should diligently, prayerfully, and conscientiously guard their own good names, and also those of their fellow men, remembering the often quoted words of Shakespeare, "He that steals my purse, steals trash; but he that filches from me my good name, takes that which does not enrich him; but makes me infinitely poorer."

When Ananias was bidden to go to where Saul was, he began to form excuses, pointing out Saul's former record, and the object of his present mission. After the assurance that it was God's will for him to go, he went immediately to where Saul was in distress, and took him by the hand, and called him "Brother Saul." This salutation has led many to refer to this Ananias as "Ananias, the Methodist." Ananias learned what all Christians should learn, namely, that it is always safe and profitable to go where God says go. The Evil One sets snares, and leads on into places of grave danger; but He, who neither tempts nor is tempted of evil, will ever lead in places of "safety first." When God says, "Go forward," there is a way to march forward and it is safe to do so.

This salutation of Ananias to Saul was an ice-breaker, heart-warmer, and a soul-stirrer. Saul had gone with letters from the high priest to take the Christians at Damascus, and finally blot the name from the earth. His well known experiences on the Damascus road had thwarted his ill planned campaign against the Christians of Damascus. Now he lay in darkness, and doubtless wondered what would befall him next. The least he could expect would be for those Christians at Damascus to take him into their love and affection. By this hand clasp and warm salutation, that was just what had happened. Surely it was "a song in the night" and as cold water to Paul's thirsty soul, and good news from a far country. The world needs more of that warmth today, that led to the opening of Paul's eyes, and filling him with the Holy Spirit. That spirit once expressed so frequently and fervently by Christians by the use of the terms of "Brother" and "Sister" is dropping out of the speech of this modern age, and I fear the church is going to be the poorer for these losses, and I hope somehow the spirit may be kept.

I am aware that comparisons are odious and superlatives are dangerous; but I am sure that the greatest brotherhood this world knows anything about is the Brotherhood of Christians. Also the greatest transforming power in the world is found in the gospel of Christ, "which is the power of God unto salvation unto all that believe." The power that changed Saul from the persecutor to the defender of the faith is nothing short of miraculous. The best illustration that I know of the transforming power of the Gospel is found in the thief on the cross. That morning confined in the death cell, doomed to die for his sins, and that afternoon walking the streets of Paradise with Jesus, as free as the angels of heaven. Such a Gospel was preached by Ananias of Damascus to Paul, and is the heritage of all believers. Publish it!

TOBACCO TRAPPERS BUSY

WILL H. BROWN

The tobacco trappers are after the boys and girls in dead earnest. A big tobacco firm in New York sends a carton of 200 cigarettes to youths as "birthday presents," accompanied by a friendly letter. The firm obtains the names, addresses and birthdays of youths in a community, and shortly before the birthday sends a letter, from which the following is an extract: "Tomorrow is your birthday, and all your friends will want to help you enjoy it. For our part we are sending you, under separate cover, a carton of ——— cigarettes. And we are not going to trouble you with a long letter explaining how good they are. Just smoke 'em! We hope they will win your friendship, and that you will agree with us that 'nothing else will do.'"

It is said by one editor that the company does not send such birthday presents except to those who do not smoke, showing that it is a trap for the sole purpose of making smokers of boys. If any one knows of a more devilish scheme to catch the boys for nicotine slavery, they should make it known to the public.

A writer in the Christian Endeavor World tells of another trap to catch boys and girls—pictures on great billboards showing boys and girls, or young men and women, lighting their cigarettes, the one from the other's "smoke."

The Reform Bulletin is authority for the statement that a certain movie hero, who does not smoke in private life, receives $1,000 per week from tobacco men for rolling cigarettes in his plays. It is certainly time that the decent people of America should vigorously protest against such contemptible methods.

WHY EXEMPT RELIGION?

A good many people are going to succumb to a false plea for tolerance before they are much older. The season of the country's candidates is here. In particular, religious tolerance will be urged upon the credulous so feelingly yet speciously that they will become emotional, swallow all their convictions, and only when they hear a man's religion criticised will they take a stand. They will not tolerate that. Why is it, we ask in the name of common sense, that when a man runs for office we have a right, aye, a duty, to express ourselves on his moral character, on his political doctrine, on his tariff views, free-trade or protective, but must be mute on his religion? The press or the orator broadcasts opposition to a candidate's alleged heresies in every other field of thought and human interest, and no one ever whispers that such methods are tainted by intolerance. But let a word be said about a man's religion, and that is something else. Is it, as a matter of fact? Why should religion be exempt?

The familiar answer shows the common ignorance, it seems to us. We do not realize that religion is not merely an inner sanctity of the soul in the house of prayer, but an outward expression in public life—in other words, in politics. If an office-seeker's theories of the rights of man are subject to outspoken difference of opinion, as they surely are as between your Hamiltonian and your Jeffersonian, so much so that the two great national parties are in some part founded upon the difference, how much more are a man's theories of the nature of God, everywhere called the "Ruler of the Nation," subject to difference of opinion? Why should we not say that we do not believe in a monarchic God as He is defined in a monarchic church which claims under that God suzerainty over a virtual monarchic state? One church believes that God, through this church alone, should rule over us. All the other churches repudiate that view, and believe in the separation of church and state. There you have a great political issue on a religious proposition, as old as recorded history and most alive today. Foolish are the men who think either that it is not so or that they should smother the truth in the interest of a peace too cheap and unworthy to be mentioned.

A respect for a man's religion is exactly like a respect for his economics. Toward both one should always be decent, willing to listen, and considerate. One should also reserve the right publicly to give his own position, differ from the other, and realize that in so doing he is not only exercising his co-equal status with the other, but, in all conscience, serving the truth as he sees it for his country's sake. Let us debunk every insinuation of intolerance when it is not intolerance. There will be many opportunities.—Christian Register.

THE BIBLE

Born in the East and clothed in Oriental form and imagery, the Bible walks the ways of all the world with familiar feet and enters land after land to find its own everywhere. It has learned to speak in hundreds of languages to the hearts of man. It comes into the palace to tell the monarch that he is a servant of the Most High, and into the cottage to assure the peasant that he is a son of God. Children listen to its stories with wonder and delight, and wise men ponder them as parables of life. It has a word of peace for the time of peril, a word of comfort for the time of calamity, a word of light for the hour of darkness. Its oracles are repeated in the assembly of the people, and its counsels whispered in the ear of the lonely. The wicked and the proud tremble at its warnings, but to the wounded and the penitent it has a mother's voice. The wilderness and the solitary place have been made glad by it, and the fire on the hearth has lit the reading of its well-worn page. It has woven itself into our dearest dreams; so the love, friendship, sympathy and devotion, memory and hope, put on the beautiful garments of its treasured speech, breathing of frankincense and myrrh.

No man is poor or desolate who has this treasure for his own. When the landscape darkens and the trembling pilgrim comes to the valley named of the shadow, he is not afraid to enter; he takes the rod and staff of Scripture in his hand; he says to friend and comrade, "Good-bye, we shall meet again"; and, confronted by that support, he goes toward the lonely pass as one who walks through darkness into light. —Henry Van Dyke.

THAT WONDERFUL NAME

The name of Jesus Christ alone will beat back the waves of darkness that are settling on the earth. It is only the name of Jesus that will protect the people in the days ahead. It is only where His name is placed above every name that there will be perfect victory and perfect deliverance from the things with which Satan is trying to crush us down.

If you possess that name, you must be an embodiment of that name and the name must possess you; and if you possess that name and that name possesses you, everything that now possesses you will have to go out of your body. The early saints knew how to possess that name. "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." Such as I have! Some have nothing and are dead. If you have that name possessing you, you can possess the name and pass it on; and you will be able to say, "Silver and gold have I none, but I have the name, the name of One who created all the silver and the gold, all the world, and all the stars of the universe." Pray for faith to realize the meaning of that name. You possess that name, may the name possess you.

"The name of the Lord is a strong tower; the righteous runneth into it, and is safe." Are you hiding in that name —the tower on the rock? All the gates of hell cannot prevail against that name. Samson took the gates of the city away. If you possess that name, you can take hold of the gates and you can remove them, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against you. The suffocating gates of hell cannot stifle you, suffocate you, or prevail over you. You are more than conquerors through Him who loved you.

Enter your heritage, claim your prerogative, act on your faith. Christ is depending on His people to make His name act all its power that is behind it. God has given this marvelous name of His Son, but He limits Himself to make it manifest through His people. The name was coined in heaven, minted on the earth, and impressed in hell. The devils believe and tremble.

God loves him who loves the name of His Son. Reverence Him, reverence His name, use His name, magnify His name. When the fiery darts of hell are hurled against you, hurl back the name. "Thine arrows are sharp in the heart of the king's enemies." You can use this arrow. Ask God to take you into His school to teach you the rudiments, the alphabet of the meaning of that name. God has declared, "Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion"—on the place of authority, the place to be seen, the place of power, and the saint is seated with Him on that seat of power.

That name is also an antidote for disease—a living name. That name penetrates farther than your mind can penetrate; it is high, it is deep. It is effective in heaven, for the saint asks in that name; and it is effective in hell, for the demons are bound in that name. This is the midway place where the name is used with earthly power—heaven—earth—hell. And the redeemed ones use that name as no others can. "These signs shall follow them that believe: In my name, etc." The believers have preference—not the angels. Learn the value of the name, learn how to use the name, find it in the Word, carry it out in your life. God will honor you if you will honor His name.

The name of Jesus paralyzes all the power of the enemy and everything Satan brings against His redeemed. Will you not pray, "Father, teach us the power of that name, that from this day we may use it"?—Selected.

WHO PAYS?

Higher education is being more largely financed by private benefactions than out of public funds, or out of the pockets of the students, according to recent statistics.

These figures, compiled by the Federal Bureau of Education, show that in the contest between these three agencies as contributors to colleges and universities philanthropy is far ahead. For the last year for which figures are available, city, state and federal government contributed $116,000,000. Students themselves paid into the coffers of these institutions for higher education, for tuition, board and lodging, an amount aggregating $144,000,000. That same year private benefactions and incomes from them amounted to $168,000,000, a greater sum than that which came from any other source. Another $50,000,000 came from miscellaneous sources. This brought the total receipts up to $480,000,000. Seventy-two millions of this money was for additions and endowments, so altogether these institutions had $408,000,000 to spend in a year.

The buildings of these colleges and universities are valued at about $1,000,000,000. Among them they have another $1,000,000,000 in the form of productive funds. Grounds, libraries, machinery, and such, have a value between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000. Altogether there is invested in these plants that yield higher education in the United States some $2,335,000,000.

SLOGAN

for the Closing Quarter

Not a Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

One pastor writes this week, saying that he believes one of his churches, at least, will make this slogan good. Hurrah for the spirit of this pastor and this church! We will enroll this church at the head of our list of prospects—you know that we asked last week for such a list. This is the first to come in. Please let us have the names of these churches. We are going after this goal with a determined purpose to make it true. If every charge will "come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty" in this thing, we will win sure. Church Number 1 is listed; please, brethren, make the list grow.

En Route

We were called from Cleveland charge Monday to assist in the funeral of Miss Sallie Trollinger, which was held at Providence church, Graham, Monday, 3 p. m. We are now (Tuesday) en route to Shelby, where we have an appointment with our church tonight.

Fallston

Aug. 4.—We were with two of the churches on this charge on this date—Hebron, 11 a. m., and Friendship, 8 p. m. Congregations at neither place were large, but encouraging, both in numbers and interest. In addition to preaching, the conference programs were presented at each place, and the people urged to give their earnest and prayerful support to these essentials of the development of the local church and the conference. We were at Lawndale, on this charge, Sunday night, and were accorded a respectful and pleasing hearing by a union congregation. Bro. Morgan has the esteem of his people and those of other churches. He has done a good work on this field, as is evidenced by his long pastorate. He is serving his fifth year here.

Cleveland

Aug. 5.—Sunday. The morning and afternoon were given to this charge. At 11 a. m. we were at Kistler's church and at 3 p. m. the appointment was at Oak Grove. This charge is getting ready to build a seven-room, brick veneered parsonage, which they expect to have ready by November 1. The parsonage will be located at Oak Grove church, and near a good high school. We most heartily congratulate the charge upon this evidence of progress. Bro. Morris has served this charge eight years in succession, and both in his ministry and his personal life he has been a blessing to the people.

We enjoyed our visit to these fields, and we assure pastors and people of our grateful thanks for the kindness and hospitality shown us while with them. Cleveland county is one of the very best agricultural counties in the state, and the prospects are good for a bountiful crop this year. We hope and pray that the people will show their gratitude to God by putting these two charges on the honor roll this year. Brethren of Cleveland and Fallston charges, you are well able to do this. Let us beseech you that you break the record this year, and take the place where you belong in your support of the financial programs of the Kingdom. The revival season is on with these charges; we pray that these meetings may result in great blessings to the churches.

A Free Hand

The man who is most held to account for the progress of a charge is the pastor. He is given his appointment by the conference for the express purpose of strengthening and enlarging the work to which he is assigned. His duty to the church concerns every phase of church activity and development. He should, therefore, be a part of the building programs of his charge; he should have vital connection with the Sunday school, the C. E. societies, and all of the other organizational activities of the charge that he is to develop. The Sunday and mid-week worship programs are phases of his work that should have his special attention. It is his mission, of course, to prepare sermons that will be full of spiritual food and spiritual refreshment for his hearers. But there is much more in a worship program than the sermon, as our form of worship indicates. We all need to be developed in the art of worship, and order and forms are necessary to this development. And certainly the pastor, more than any one else, because of his office, is charged with the responsibility of preparing and directing this program.

In many of our churches there are certain well fixed and well defined policies for running the church, and certainly no wise pastor will disregard these policies; on the other hand, he will readily adjust himself to them. However, there is an individuality that belongs to each pastor, and if he is to do his best work in developing and enlarging his charge, he must be given full opportunity of putting his own individuality into the programs of his churches. The pastor is supposed to take to his charge and keep before his people new ideas and new plans. No church wants a pastor who can't move only as he goes in the trail that somebody else has blazed. But what are his new ideas and new plans worth unless he can put them into operation? Brethren of the laity, recognize your pastor as the servant of Jesus Christ, charged with the responsibility of developing and enlarging His church. Give him a free hand and full co-operation. And let us, brethren of the ministry, "study to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen that need not to be ashamed," rightly thinking, planning, praying, executing, that the churches committed to our care may have peace and progress.

Financial Report

Owing to our absence from home we will not be able to get the financial report in HERALD this week. It will appear next week. Only one charge reports on the A. C. B. this week. The treasury is empty, empty, empty. Please.

Bro. Whitaker writes that Tabernacle church has paid the college assessment in full. We will see that this church is in the proper list next week. And be assured, Tabernacle, of our full appreciation.

THE SIN OF WORRY

More people died last year from heart failure than ever before in the history of the country, and the explanation given by medical men is that people are living under too intense a strain. We are living in an age of speed never known before. That in itself tends to increase the mental tension of our daily life. But mere speed alone, where we are master of the situation, need not create an unbearable strain. The bird in the sweep of the gale does not grow distracted, but adjusts itself to the current that drives it along. The aviator, as the speed of his aeroplane increases, feels not less, but rather more, safe and sure in his flight. The great executive, sitting at the center of the mighty business machine which he controls, feels no panic, but rather is conscious of his power to guide the complex interests committed to him.

Where there is the consciousness of being in control, of being equal to the occasion, there is no inner heat or fretfulness, but a quiet, untroubled confidence even under great pressure. Where this confidence has been lost, the dangerous mood of worry arises, for worry is a state of anxiety, in which the soul sees no way out of its problem. This feeling that things have got the better of us agitates the soul to the breaking point. This mood, say the doctors, is largely accountable for the tendency of the sudden breakdowns which characterize the present generation. One of the famous Mayo brothers said at a recent medical congress in London that the age will somehow have to find a way to slow down, but he confessed himself unable to see just how this is to be done. The distinguished surgeon feels that things have almost got out of hand, and that the machinery of our modern life is running away with us.

The first step in winning any success in our effort to recover the mastery of ourselves is to face the fact that, at all cost, our program of life must be simplified. We are trying to do too many things, and many of them are not worth doing. We have too many irons in the fire, and are being consumed by the effort to handle them all. And all the time we know in our hearts that life itself is essentially simple and spacious and that breathing space is vital to its continuance.

But the lightening of our program will not of itself cure our trouble. In the last analysis, worry is not due to a badly overcrowded schedule; it is due to an unbelieving heart. We face not a case of nerves, but a state of soul. To worry is not a mistake, but a sin. Worry is a form of pessimism, and pessimism is rooted in unbelief in the love and goodness of God. Many people have never analyzed their philosophy of life, or they would discover the truth. I may be carrying a heavy load, but if my trust is in Him who bears our burdens, my load will not break me. But if my trust is in myself, my burden will certainly bear me down. When we insist thus upon managing things without God's help, are we not telling Him plainly that we do not believe that He can manage them for us? What is this but unbelief? And is unbelief ever anything but sin in God's eyes?

We must take Jesus more seriously. We have not yet faced squarely the plain meaning of His words. In nothing perhaps is this more true than in our attitude toward His teaching about trusting God. Though Jesus says, "Be not therefore anxious for the morrow," we deliberately refuse to obey Him. And when He said "therefore," He gave us the reason lying back of His command: that our lives, to their smallest detail, are in the loving care of God. He who clothes the grass and cares for the birds "much more" cares for us. If we do not know that God cares, we indeed have cause for worry. But we do know that God cares. So to continue worrying is to continue a habit as sinful as stealing.

Let us confess our sin of unbelieving care, and cast ourselves upon God's mercy to be forgiven for our past distrust of Him, and to be delivered, as we can and shall be, from the care that corrodes and weakens into the glorious peace and freedom of the trustful, obedient children of God.—Home Department Quarterly.

GROWING OLD

God loves the Aged.
He gives them greater visions than the young;
He puts the words of wisdom on their tongue;
And keeps His presence ever by their side,
From dawn to dusk, and on through eventide.

God helps the Aged.
Within their home His spirit ever dwells;
Their mellow hearts are touched like chiming bells;
He calms their fears, then worries disappear,
Because they know His help is always near.

God keeps the Aged.
With hearts of gold, and silver-tinted hair,
And earnestness, and greater faith in prayer;
He keeps them as a shepherd guards his sheep,
'Til in His fold they gently fall asleep.

THE TRUTH MUST BE TOLD

What is written in the Bible must be preached, whether it be gloomy or cheerful. There are some ministers who never mention anything about hell. I heard of a minister who once said to his congregation, "If you do not love the Lord Jesus Christ you will be sent to that place which it is not polite to mention." He ought not to have been allowed to preach again, I am sure, if he could not use plain words. If I saw that house on fire over there, do you think I would stand and say, "I believe the operation of combustion is proceeding yonder!" No; I would call out, "Fire! fire!" and then everybody would know what I meant. So if the Bible says, "The children shall be cast into outer darkness," am I to stand here and mince the matter at all? God forbid. We must speak the trust as it is written. Sinner here tonight without grace in your heart—without hope of heaven—you are going downward towards hell as fast as your feet can carry you.—Charles Spurgeon.

—Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, an organ of the Church South, and for many years an ardent supporter of the prohibition cause, has withdrawn his candidacy for the nomination for lieutenant-governor of Arkansas, stating that he cannot support the Democratic presidential ticket and therefore cannot run for any office within the gift of the party. Dr. Millar had entered the race as a result of persistent urging on the part of the friends of good government.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

"Toot! Toot! Blare! Blare! Bang! Bang!" And all sorts of loud sounds came out of a little frame house in a quiet street. Gay bunting and flags adorned the porch and lawn in front of the house, explaining the noise to passersby. In fact, it was the Fourth of July and the Madisons were celebrating the glorious day in a safe and sane way.

"Fact is," said Phil Madison, "we can make pretty near as much noise as a giant cracker. Hey, Tommy, quit hitting that wash-boiler so hard. You'll knock the bottom out of it and then what will Mommer say?"

The kids from next door were helping the Madisons celebrate their safe and sane Fourth of July. Tad Jones, the eldest one, did not think Independence could be properly celebrated so tamely.

"Whoops!" he exclaimed. "Wish you could have been in Ithaca the year my Uncle Johnson was there. We had fifteen dollars worth of fireworks—cartwheels, crackers, Roman candles and everything. One of the rockets set fire to our old elm tree, but we soon put out the blaze. Then we did feel awful patriotic. We felt just like soldiers. Didn't they shoot off gun-powder when they fought for freedom? Sure they did. I'd risk blowing myself to show what a true American I am."

"Aw, it's too bad, but when you come to think of it, patriotism isn't just shooting," said Phil. "Tommy, you aren't going to turn on that hose! Mommer said you shouldn't play with water."

Just then Mrs. Madison came out on the porch and called the children. She knew from experience that the best way to celebrate anything was to have plenty of ice cream and cake.

The radio was playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the children trooped into the dining room, and Tad insisted on everybody standing up while the grand old piece was played. Tommy kept an anxious eye on his plate of ice cream, feeling sure that it would melt and dwindle away while he was paying homage to his native land.

As soon as everybody was seated, Tad began again:

"I think Grandpa is right when he says that old times are best," he said. "He used to make his own firecrackers, and some they'd buy from the Chinese."

"Chinese!" exclaimed Tommy. "I didn't know Chinese people kept the Fourth of July."

"They don't, but they knew about gunpowder before anybody else," said Tad, "but Grandpa says they never used it for guns. They just had firecrackers."

"Sillies!" sniffed Mildred, Tad's sister.

"Say," Tad exclaimed, "would you have thought of it!"

Phil had been looking thoughtful.

"We have an old gun out in the storeroom," he said. "Dad used to shoot woodchucks with it. You throw gunpowder and bullets in the muzzle. It's an old-timer. I'll get it."

He hastily scooped up the remnants of his ice cream and ran out to the storeroom.

Mrs. Madison came in and passed around more cake.

"Don't forget, children," she said, "what this day means. It stands for everything that makes our country great and glorious. Remember the heroes that died for their country and for us. Many young boys hardly older than Tad gave their lives. We mustn't forget them, and we must do everything to keep our country pure and noble and great, by being good Americans, every one of us."

"Hurray! Good speech!" cried the boys, clapping loudly.

"Oh for one big grand rocket!" sighed Tad.

Just then, Bang! Bang! Two bangs just like that! They all stared around expectantly. Tad saw a neat hole in the window glass which he had not noticed before. He gave one big yell.

"Duck!" he shouted, slipping out of his chair, and pulling little Tommy down. "Duck down. Some dumbbell is firing a gun this way."

Under the table sank all the patriots, including Mrs. Madison.

"It's Phil," said Mildred. "He went for the old muzzle-loading blunderbuss."

"I'll blunderbuss him," muttered Tad, crawling towards the door.

A bit of plaster fell from the wall and struck him in the back of the neck. What a yell he let out! Tommy began to cry with fright and Mildred sobbed: "I want to go home!"

"It's like the days of 1776," groaned Mrs. Madison. "Tad, please come back here."

But Tad was almost through the door, a grim light in his eyes, his lips set in a thin line.

He went swiftly to the door and peeped out. There was Phil whistling cheerfully, carrying a curious-looking shotgun in his hand.

Tad rushed boldly up to him and snatched the weapon out of his hand.

"Hey!" protested Phil. "What's the excitement?"

"Who wouldn't be excited, you dumbbell!" cried Tad. "You're shooting up your own family, don't you know it? One bullet went right in the window and hit the wall near your mother's head. That's a nice way to keep a safe and sane Fourth of July. I'd call it dangerous and crazy. Look at all this plaster down my neck. One of your bullets whacked a big hunk out of the wall and when it fell on me I thought I had been hit by one of those round cannon balls over at the soldiers' cemetery."

Phil began running to the house, looking a bit pale, and in the dining room he met his angry mother, who grasped his arm with a strong hand which she had inherited from her Pilgrim ancestors. The next instant Phil saw some sky-rockets and stars which were not the patriotic kind.

"Mommer, wait," he cried, dodging around the festive table. "I'm glad you're well and able to give me a slap, good old Mommer. But why are you mad at me? I didn't shoot in the window."

"You did so," cried Tad, coming in with the gun. "He had this gun in his hands."

"Why, Tad," exclaimed Margaret, Phil's sister, coming up from under the table, "that gun is all rusted and hasn't even got a trigger or a hammer on it. We've often played Indian with it."

Tad looked at the gun and saw that it was nothing but a rusty old barrel.

"Come here, you poor dear," cried Mrs. Madison to her wary son. "I'm sorry I was hasty."

Just then a step sounded outside and a voice saying: "Hip-hip-hip-hooray!" And in came Tad's grandpa waving a revolver.

"Mr. Jones!" gasped Mrs. Madison while all the children dived under the table. "Your gun is loaded!"

"Only blanks, my dear," said the old gentleman. "A few shots to celebrate our glorious independence."

"You thought it was unloaded," said Mrs. Madison. "Look!"

She pointed at the windowpane and at the crumbling wall.

"We were all in here when it happened," she said gently.

Grandpa Jones turned pale and looked around the little group. Then he handed his revolver to Mrs. Madison, and parting his coat tails, he sat down at the table.

"I'm cured," he mumbled hoarsely. "A safe and sane Fourth for me! Bring on the ice cream and cake!"

"Never mind, Mr. Jones," laughed Phil. "I took a licking for you."

And so one of the last of the Old Guard was converted to a "Safe and Sane," and Tad said no more about the good old days.—Selected.

WHAT FAITH IS

A letter from a radio listener asks the real meaning of the words translated "faith," "believe," and "belief" in the New Testament. He says, "I have often thought that if we could really understand the spiritual, mental or metaphysical basis upon which Jesus stood, that what He really tried to teach would be much more easily carried out." It is an interesting question, and fortunately easily answered.

There are two verbs used in the New Testament translated believe, or trust, or have faith. They are pisteuo and peitho. The former is the one more commonly used. It is used in Mark 16:13, 14 in the sense of believing what a persons says to be true. In John 11:40 it is used in the same sense, but with the especial reference to a statement about religious belief. In John 1:12 it is used to express personal trust and reliance as distinct from mere credence. Here the reference is to the thing that brings salvation. The noun pistis which comes from this verb is translated faith, trust, belief, confidence. Never is the word used of mere credence, or blind faith which has nothing upon which to rest.

The other verb is even stronger. It is often translated "persuade," and the thought which it always conveys is that the confidence is that which has been reached only after the person has been persuaded that the object of the faith is thoroughly trustworthy, from a careful examination of all the claims. Both of these verbs occur in II Timothy 1:12, when Paul says, "I know Him in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to guard my deposit until that day." Before making your deposit in a bank, you examine the condition of that bank, become convinced that the officers are honest men, that the bank is thoroughly solvent, and that when you put your deposit there it will be safely guarded, or kept, until the time you call for it. That is exactly what Paul meant when he used these words; he had become convinced from all the facts in the case that Jesus Christ was thoroughly trustworthy, that He was one who was not only honest, but able to take good care of what he had to deposit with Him, and that He would keep it safely until the day of reckoning. Therefore he committed all that he had to His safekeeping; he trusted Him; he believed in Him; he had faith in Him. This is the Scriptural idea of faith or belief. It is never mere credence; but it is trust, confidence based on the facts, which will stand the most critical examination.

If you have the faith that saves you, it is nothing less than believing what Jesus says is true, that He will do what He says He will do; it is having the utmost confidence in His ability and willingness; it is committing yourself and your all to Him, because you have examined His claims and are convinced that He is thoroughly trustworthy. Such faith will show itself in works. Anything less than such faith is not worth a straw.—North Avenue Presbyterian, Atlanta, Ga.

RICHES WE FORGET

"Uncle, how much money have you?" It was an impertinent question; yet Murray could be excused for his frankness, for he was only a lad.

Uncle Ben laughed. "Not very much, son. I own this house, the last payment on the store has been made, and there is a little bank account."

"Then you are not rich?"

"No."

"But you are always so happy," persisted the boy.

The lad was making the same error the majority of us go on making day after day. It would seem as if we cannot erase from our minds that silly, outworn idea that riches and happiness are as inseparable as poverty and unhappiness.

True, money is powerful, but enormous wealth does not always mean real riches. We tend to forget all our internal riches—riches greater than all the silver dollars one could accumulate. We forget our riches in health—feet to walk, nose to smell, mouth to eat, tongue to talk, arms to work, eyes to see and ears to hear.

We forget our riches in friends. Life would hardly be worth living without friends. If I did not have a comrade to whom I could confide my secrets, I would be poor indeed. We forget our riches in thoughts. Thank God for the freedom of thought. No matter how tied down in body one might be, he can send his thoughts as far as he likes. In thought he can be a millionaire, a king, a prince, a sailor or a soldier.

Collecting money for the sole purpose of amassing wealth is a poor excuse for a life. Hoarding money so that when the owner dies it is lying idle is not using our possessions to the best advantage. Money is made to be exchanged. Money wisely used will bring a great reward. Hoarding brings a loss. What if the leaves should be greedily held by the tree? There would be no room for new growth.

Possess money, if you can—money is a power. But do not allow money to possess you. And, while we are earning and saving money, let us remember the other riches—health, friends and thougths.—F. C., in Boy Life.

—Often men decry ambition, which is as foolish as it would be for a locomotive engineer to scorn steam. Ambition is simply a big purpose. Whether it is good or bad depends upon the way in which it is directed. To be without ambition is to be without an object in life with determination back of the object. Our object may be a poor one, in which case we would better have no ambition at all; but it may be a good one, in which case our ambition will be the making of us. Let us get a consecrated ambition. It will bless us and enlarge our lives.

Aug. 19: Paul Carries the Gospel Into Europe

Scripture Basis: Acts 15:36-16:15.

Golden Text: Come over into Macedonia and help us. Acts 16:9.

The "Mark" Contention

After the settlement of the circumcision dispute, which was communicated to the church at Antioch of Syria, the missionaries, Paul and Barnabas remained there for a while. One day Paul besought Barnabas that they re-visit the churches they had established on their first journey, to which Barnabas agreed. But a contention arose between them.

John Mark, a cousin of Barnabas, and son of Mary of Jerusalem, was in Antioch at this time, and Barnabas desired that he accompany them on this journey. Mark, having left them at Perga on their previous trip and returned to Jerusalem, Paul was insistent that he not be permitted to go. It was probable that his departure was not because of fear or home-sickness, but because he was of the group who disfavored the acceptance of Gentiles on the ground of faith alone. However much he may have changed his views, Paul would not take him, which resulted in the separation of the two, Paul taking Silas, who had come to Antioch from Jerusalem, and Barnabas taking Mark, and sailing for Cyprus, his home.

The Modest Companion

Paul and Silas started on their journey through northern Syria, into Cilicia, through the pass in the Taurus Mountains known as the Cilician Gates, westward to Derbe and Lystra. At the latter place, his attention was attracted to a goodly, modest young convert of his former visit. Brethren at Lystra and Iconium spoke well of him. He was none other than Timothy, the young man to whom Paul affectionately wrote the two epistles which bear his name.

Timothy was the son of a Greek father and a Jewish mother, apparently a native of Lystra. His father was probably dead at this time. His mother's name was Eunice, and grandmother, Lois. These Paul mentions in his second letter to this "son in the faith." (II Tim. 1:5.) Eunice was evidently converted during the apostle's first journey, since she is spoken of as one who believed (Acts 16:1). Timothy, not having been circumcised in infancy, probably because of the objection of a Gentile father, consented to this Jewish rite that there be no contention about it among the Jews. Paul then took him with him, and he became a faithful companion throughout the rest of his life.

The Macedonian Call

Leaving Lystra, the little company of evangelists went on to Iconium and Antioch of Pisidia, strengthening the faith of the converts, encouraging them to remain faithful, helping them to solve their many problems, etc. Continuing westward, Paul planned to preach in the cities of Asia not as we know it today, but "only of the western seaboard of what we call Asia Minor, the three countries of Mysia (on the north), Lydia and Caria."

Paul's plans were thwarted by the Holy Spirit. He was forbidden to preach in this province. Why, we do not know, nor how. Turning northward, the little band started for Bithynia, but again were halted. God had something else for them to do, as He often does us, when we are disappointed in carrying our plans to completion. It was God's will that they go straight to the coast town of Troas, which they did.

Troas was located on the northwestern coast of Asia (Minor) on the Aegean Sea, just south of the Dardanelles. To the north was the province of Thracia, and directly across the sea was the country of Macedonia. While the company was here, Paul received a vision of a man of Macedonia calling for help. It is thought that Luke joined the party at Troas, and urged them to go over into his home country (as some think), which might have prompted the vision. However, Paul was not disobedient to this vision, as he was not to others, for in it he saw the will of the Lord.

The next day they set sail for Macedonia. From Samothracia, an island in the northern part of the sea, they came to Neapolis, and thence by land to Philippi, supposedly Luke's home town, where they remained a few days. There was no synagogue here, so on the Sabbath Paul went down to the riverside where gathered a small company of devout women. Preaching the gospel, he was made to rejoice over the conversion of one Lydia, who represented her home town of Thyatira by selling purple-dyed cloth as a means of livelihood. She and her household, perhaps children, slaves, trade assistants, were baptized. A woman was the first European convert!

Our ears need to be opened today to the Macedonian call. It comes from Europe, yes, for Europe is not all saved. But it comes from Asia, from Africa, from South America as well—yea, even from the isolated sections of our beloved home land and from the foreign districts of our big cities. What is your answer to the call?

LEADERSHIP TRAINING OUT WEST

Arkansas—Vocational Guidance

The class of Vocational Guidance of the Leadership Training School Conference was organized Tuesday morning, July 24. Ralph Clayton was elected president and Faye Kennedy as secretary. Twenty-six were enrolled for this course and we chose for our motto: "To Strive, to Seek, to Find, but Not to Yield."

Rev. F. L. Gibbs, of Burlington, N. C., instructor of this course, emphasized the importance of keeping a notebook. In our books were the following questions:

1. What shall I do with my life?
2. Who has influenced my life most up to the present time?
3. Whom shall I have as my ideal in life?
4. What I should like to be at the age of 21. Why?
5. What I would like to be ten years from today.

One of the above questions were taken up and discussed each day in class. Each individual resolved to keep his notebook until he reached the age of 21, so he might see if he has reached his goal or lived up to the standard.

All members of the class took an active part and enjoyed it immensely; and each one feels that he is better qualified for choosing his life's purpose after studying under such an inspiring leader as Rev. Mr. Gibbs.

The conference had representatives from Haynesville, Prescott, Buckner, Leddisdale, and Magnolia.

All members of this class signed the Methodist Protestant Life Service Pledge, and we are determined to carry out that which we have signed.

I'm sure all the young people who attended received many rich blessings and will be eager to meet with us again in the next conference. FAYE KENNEDY.

OUR LEADERSHIP TRAINING OUT WEST

"Leadership Training School"

Magnolia (Warnock Springs) Arkansas

The Arkansas Leadership Training School, held under the auspices of the Board of Young People's Work of the Arkansas Conference and the Department of Religious Education of the Methodist Protestant Church, met at Warnock Springs, seven miles from Magnolia, Arkansas, July 23 to July 28.

This was the third Leadership Training School of our Conference and the first school ever held in camp style. It was a glorious time Monday morning when the faculty and many young people arrived at the beautiful camp. There were wooden huts for all campers, a large wooden shed for the classes and services of the school and five beautiful, large springs of wonderful mineral water, all of these amid a grove of beautiful trees. With such surroundings, it seemed all were happier to be out in God's "out-of-doors."

Rev. J. A. Wade, pastor of the local church who is president of the Young People's Board of the Arkansas Conference, was dean of the school, and he conducted the school in an efficient way. The dean and his helpers had made all arrangements for the camp and every provision was made for our entertainment.

The following faculty offered the following courses: "The Principles of Teaching," Dr. C. M. Lippencott, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church of Haynesville, La.; "The New Testament," Rev. J. A. Wade; "Vocational Guidance, The Science of Leadership," Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assistant secretary of the Board of Christian Education of the Methodist Protestant Church, and "Stewardship," Rev. W. R. Clower, president of the Arkansas Conference.

In the afternoon study, rest, and recreational hours were observed. Rev. F. L. Gibbs was director of the recreational hours. Games of volley ball, horseshoe-pitching, and croquet; yells, songs and the three tribe groups, Tola Akita, Onspo and Iye Adita, were enjoyed by all.

The song and praise service and the morning worship service were very impressive. The evening services were very inspiring. In the opening evening service, Rev. F. L. Gibbs gave a challenging message. Other helpful evening messages were brought by Dr. C. M.

Lippencott, Rev. W. R. Clower and Rev. J. A. Wade.

The decision service was conducted by Rev. F. L. Gibbs Friday evening. At this service 36 fine young men and women dedicated their lives as Christian leaders and signed the Methodist Protestant Life Service League pledge.

Thirty-eight young men and women, and Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Hague, of Prescott, Ark., received credits at this school.

Truly we are progressing; let's make our goal a hundred next year.

WHAT I LIKED ABOUT THE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL AT HIGH POINT COLLEGE

During the Leadership Training School at High Point College, the daily program was a busy one. In the morning every one had classes. These classes were very helpful and enjoyed by all. Then in the afternoons, rest, study, and recreational periods were observed. Every one was interested in the recreational activities, and much sportsmanship was shown. The school was divided into four groups: The Early Comers, June Bugs, July Flies, and Late Comers. Games were played in volleyball, tennis, horseshoe-pitching, etc. Each group was also called upon for stunts. At the end of the contests, it was found that the July Flies had won, by making the most points.

The devotional services in the morning and the worship services in the evening were both helpful and inspiring.

After each evening service every one came over to the girls' dormitory and much fun was afforded by the stunts.

Another part of the daily program not to be forgotten was the meals served in the College dining room. Much parise is due Mrs. Neese and the cooks for the splendid food.

On Wednesday, in spite of the downpour of rain, a picnic dinner was served, but in the dining room. This picnic dinner was enjoyed by all, as was shown by the empty table at the end of the meal.

At two o'clock on Wednesday, a splendid talk was made by Dr. J. C. Broomfield. This talk was very educational and benefited those who heard it.

Everyone greatly enjoyed the Leadership Training School, and being with the fine group of young people, and every one is hoping for a larger and better training school for the coming year.

CLARA FAUCETTE.

SOME IMPRESSIONS OF THE HIGH POINT LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The first thing I liked was where the Training School was held. High Point being so near the center of the denomination made it very suitable. Then the college is so convenient with its nice classrooms and dormitories, dining hall, auditorium, and club rooms.

Our schedule was arranged so nicely, everything possible was put in the few days we spent together. I feel that every one who attended was greatly benefited.

I think we all gained much from our classroom work. In my "Study of the Pupil" I learned how to classify and deal with many characteristics of children that I must deal with as a leader of children.

I was greatly impressed by the "morning worship." It seemed to come just at the right time and was led in a way that made it very impressive.

The afternoon with its rest, study and recreation periods always brought joy. Then after dinner the vesper service fitted our minds for the evening address which was always good. Of course we all enjoyed the recreation period after the evening address, but the one thing I believe every one in Woman's Hall looked forward to was the quiet hour the girls had together under the supervision of Mrs. H. W. Maier just before retiring.

FEED BARN BURNS

On Saturday night the feed barn of Mrs. Gilmer Huffines was struck by lightning and burned. Among other contents that were destroyed was a good pair of mules. The barn was a good, new, modern structure, having been erected during the last few months. It will be recalled that Bro. Huffines himself was killed on July 20 because of the overturning of a tractor which he was driving. The Huffines family are among the leading members of the Mizpah church, Haw River charge.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

FLAT ROCK MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Miss Mary V. White and Mrs. T. P. Hester were joint hostesses Thursday afternoon, August 2nd, when they entertained the Missionary Society of Flat Rock church at the home of Mrs. T. P. Hester.

The devotions were conducted by Rev. W. H. Neese, reading the 42nd Psalm, followed by prayer.

Quite a goodly number were present for this meeting, only one member being absent, Mrs. B. W. Jones, who was kept away on account of illness. After the business session, the program was taken up. Chapter E of the "Shining Light Booklet" was given by Miss Mary V. White. Readings were then given, as follows: "The Demands of Stewardship," Mrs. W. B. Reavis; "Sunbeams of Sorry Lands," Mrs. U. J. Parrott.

The society adjourned, after which Miss White and Mrs. Hester served delicious refreshments.

We were indeed glad to have with us our ex-pastor, Rev. W. H. Neese, wife and daughter, Sara Marie. It was Mrs. Neese who organized this auxiliary on April 5, 1921. As a token of appreciation for her never-tiring service, the auxiliary later made her a life member.

MRS. T. P. HESTER, Secretary.

A POET'S "PIPE" DREAM

By Will H. Brown

A certain poet wrote a screed about a boy named Robert Reed. (This poet's rhymes go hit or miss, just like you see I'm putting this). This youth, he says, a model was, held up to view by pa's and ma's with boys inclined to boyish pranks, who needed stern parental spanks. This poet claims that Robert Reed ne'er chewed nor smoked the "filthy weed," but later took to crime's career—got worse and worse from year to year. He tried all sorts of stunts in crime, in many jails he served his time. He broke the laws that govern speed, but never touched the filthy weed. 'Tis plain to see what it's about—who reads with brains need have no doubt. The "Anti-Bacs" have got the goat of all who're in the poet's boat. For such a nut as he sets forth is seldom found upon this earth. For in the jails and pens men plead for smokes and plugs of filthy weed. Go to the hangman, ask him what the doomed men crave that they have not. He'll tell you nothing fills the bill like nicotine for men who kill. Go down the list of all that's wrong, you'll find the victims sing one song: "Give me a pipe, fags or cigars. Oh, slip them in behind these bars! I got the habit when a kid—'twas when that I began to skid from ways of good and paths of right, and that's what brought me to this plight." Go, tell the world this golden truth, that nicotine's against the youth who wants to win in life's great fight, and stand triumphant in the right.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Concord.—A very beautiful and impressive communion service was held Sunday morning. The pastor brought a very touching message on "The Last Supper," using as his text, "This do in remembrance of me." A large number communed.

The Sunday school attendance has been off some during the summer months as so many of our folks are taking vacations. There were 260 present Sunday and an offering of $25, which goes to our Children's Home.

Mr. Hendry is taking his vacation now, but is spending it in special meetings. Last week he helped in a meeting at Easley, S. C., and as we were unable to get someone to fill the pulpit Sunday morning, he came home and preached, leaving immediately after service for Cleveland, where he is engaged in a meeting this week.

On next Sunday morning there will be no service, as our folks are expected to attend the 10th District Rally to be held at Love's Grove church, Midland charge.

On Sunday night Dr. Allman and a group of children from the Home will be with us and render a program.

We were glad to have Miss Annie Livengood, of Greensboro, worship with us Sunday. Miss Livengood is teaching in one of our county schools this year.

Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence Little and children and Mrs. H. C. Little and children have returned from Louisiana and Texas, where they spent six weeks.

Our people deeply sympathize with Mrs. J. R. Helms in the death of her sister, Mrs. George Foreman, of Albemarle. Mrs. Foreman was the second sister of Mrs. Helms to die in the last three months, and our hearts go out to this dear woman in her great sorrow. MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Anderson Charge, Fairview Church.—Our revival meeting began the fifth Sunday in July and closed the following Sunday night. Rev. G. H. Hendry, of Concord, the engaged help, came on Monday and remaiend through Friday night. His sermons were instructive and inspiring, resulting in 25 conversions and 11 accessions. Others will join later.

Our meeting at Liberty Hill will begin Sunday, August 12. Rev. G. H. Hendry will be the pulpit help there also.

Pray for us, brethren, that the meeting will be a great success, and that many may be born into the Kingdom.

G. B. FERREE, Pastor.

Bessemer City Church.—Yesterday, August 5, was Home Coming here. We had 399 present in Sunday school; collection $29.00. All seemed to enjoy the occasion and also enjoyed a sumptuous dinner which was served on the church grounds. We were glad indeed to welcome several visitors from Lincolnton church. Bro. D. B. Johnson was among them and we are always glad to have him with us. A professor of High Point College delivered a very interesting discourse Sunday morning; also Rev. Frank Schnider delivered a very forceful sermon Sunday afternoon; also Solicitor John G. Carpenter, of Gastonia, gave an address which all seemed to enjoy very much. We were glad to welcome every one to our church. We are always glad to have any visitors with us.

Pray for us that God will continue to bless us and cause His face to shine upon us. May the Heavenly Father's richest blessings rest on all, is the earnest prayer of (MRS.) LUCY BLANTON BRASKETT, Reporter.

Orange Charge, Efland.—The special meeting began here Monday night, July 23, and continued until Wednesday night, August 1. Rev. J. D. Williams did all the preaching except one service by Rev. J. F. Minnis and three by the writer. Brother Williams was at his best. He gave us a splendid series of sermons. Visible results: 26 conversions, 11 additions to the church, others to join later. Some will join other churches. A purse of $55.00 was given Bro. Williams.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

West Forsyth Circuit.—For a month the pastor has been, in obedience to the doctor, quietly resting at home, but thanks to the president and other brethren the work has gone on. While I have lain here in bed, members from all six of the churches have been to see me. There has been only one day since they heard of it that there has been no one to see me. Flowers, fruits, vegetables and groceries have been brought. The doctor said I should drink milk, buttermilk, if available. I have had nice, fresh buttermilk nearly all the time. The stewards have been thoughtful. Every church is represented in that phase. The C. E. Society at Pleasant Hill sent cards of loving sympathy.

Messages have come to me from people who before this seemed almost strangers. Now they seem like dear friends. Almost all trades and professions have remembered me by a visit or word or letter. Bankers, merchants, teachers, farmers, preachers, old folks, young folks, little folks; almost as varied a crowd as heard the story of the resurrection on the day of Pentecost, but all speaking the same language of love and sympathy. "I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified."

"My God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." C. H. WHITAKER.

Pine Grove, Kernersville Charge.—The consolidated meeting of the three country churches, Pine Grove, Ai, and Sandy Ridge, of Kernersville charge began the fourth Sunday in July at the warehouse in Kernersville and came to a close last Sunday night. Rev. N. G. Bethea, pastor of the M. P. church of Lexington, N. C., was pulpit help. We enjoyed listening to his inspirational and helpful sermons.

Rev. J. L. Trollinger, of the First M. P. church, Thomasville, was choir director. Miss Ruth Vuncannon, of High Point, was pianist.

Other churches in town co-operated in a very commendable way. We were glad to have the people from these churches with us in our services, and also the people from the nearby towns and surrounding communities.

President and Mrs. S. W. Taylor were with us in one of the evening services. President Andrews, of High Point College, and Mrs. Andrews were present at one service. Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard, of High Point, were in our midst at one service.

We were delighted to have with us and feel grateful to the ones who rendered the special messages of song in the different services.

At one of the evening services the quartet from Lexington M. P. church sang several selections. Mrs. R. M. Andrews also sang a solo.

The children from the M. P. Children's Home sang in one evening service.

Rev. E. L. Ballard, of High Point, sang in one of the evening services.

The quartet from the M. P. church, Thomasville, sang in the evening service the second Sunday of the meeting.

At the last service of the meeting the quartet from Pine Grove sang.

There were several confessions of faith, and we feel that many were greatly blessed by the wonderful sermons Rev. Mr. Bethea brought us, and by the faithful work of Miss Vuncannon and Rev. Mr. Trollinger.

To Thy name, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, be all the praise. REPORTER.

High Point.—At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday morning the choir rendered the beautiful anthem, "Hear My Prayer, O Lord," and Mrs. John C. Whitesell and Clarence Schultheiss sang as a duet, "The Rose of Sharon." A delightful communion service was then celebrated, the associate pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, officiating. The greater part of the congregation joined in this solemn and helpful service. There will be no evening services during the month of August.

An important meeting of the membership of the church will be held next Sunday morning, August 12th, following the 11 o'clock worship service. The question of disposing of the parsonage property by sale or trade will be voted upon. The parsonage is now located in the business zone on North Main street, and it is thought advisable to sell it since it will command a good price, and buy and build in a more desirable residential district. A majority vote of the qualified members, or those who are 21 years old and more, is required by our constitution and by-laws.

It is with very great pleasure that we announce that the new senior pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, will be present next Sunday morning and occupy the pulpit. His regular ministry will not begin, however, until September 1, when he plans to move his family to High Point. The congregation looks forward to his coming with great interest and eager anticipation.

The Sunday school is planning to build up its library, and is calling on all who have books of good fiction, biography, history, etc., and are willing to donate them, to do so.

The numerous friends of Mr. Gorrell Payne extend their kindest sympathy to him in the loss by death of his mother, Mrs. B. E. Payne, which occurred last Saturday at High Point Hospital. Her funeral was conducted on Sunday at Pleasant Grove by her pastor, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, assisted by Rev. Edward Suits and Rev. J. H. Moton, both of whom were former pastors. Mrs. Payne was an excellent mother of a large family, and was held in high esteem by a large circle of friends and neighbors.

Miss Virginia Pickens has returned from a pleasant trip to Washington and Atlantic City.

Misses Helen Hayes, of Henderson, and Pauline Elkins, of Liberty, were guests of Miss May Woollen last Sunday.

We are greatly pleased to note the improvement in the condition of Capt. A. M. Rankin's health.

Theodore Ballard, of Charlotte, spent Sunday here with friends.

Mrs. Herman S. Meredith and sons of Tampa, Fla., are guests of her mother, Mrs. W. P. Pickett, and other relatives.

Miss Annette Pickens is spending the week in Concord with her cousin, Miss Alice Armfield.

The A. M. Idol Philathea Class held a pleasant meeting with Miss Nellie Martin last Monday evening.

Masters Alson and Joe Gray, young sons of Mr. and Mrs. June Gray, spent last week in Charlotte with their grandmother.

Mrs. R. M. Andrews and children are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Harris, in Henderson. Dr. Andrews has been on a fishing trip to Eastern Carolina.

Fairview.—August 12 will he Home-Coming Day at Fairview. We want to see all our members and those that have been members here on that day.

Our revival meeting also begins on that day, with New Salem M. E. church united with us. Rev. T. A. Williams will preach at 11 o'clock. Picnic dinner will be served on the grounds. The afternoon will be given over to our visiting speakers and singers, so all are asked to come prepared to tell us something. On Sunday evening, Rev. L. V. Harris, of the M. E. church, will preach.

Our sympathy goes out to our pastor and family because of the illness of his daughter; we pray for her a speedy recovery. May God help them in their distress.

Pray for us that we may have a glorious revival. We want to see you at Fairview Sunday. REPORTER.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—On account of Brother Ridge's helping in a revival meeting near Seagrove, Brother Eddie Hill, of Denton, filled the pulpit with a sermon that was helpful and beneficial to all thirsting for spiritual food. We welcome such men as Brother Hill in our church and all who wish to be with us and who wish to draw closer to the Lord.

On last Sunday evening a faithful worker in our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor and a member of the Lineberry church, Miss Mildred Loflin, became the bride of Mr. Graham Tysinger. Miss Loflin will be very much missed in our church and community, she being secretary of our Christian Endeavor. Miss Inez Ridge will now take her place as secretary..

As the revival season is now on, I think our main thought should be bringing some poor soul to Jesus, and to do this we must be very prayerful. As the revival at this church is soon to begin, we ask the prayers of all Christian people, for it seems that our church is somewhat cold. I realize that I myself am too cold and unconcerned. Christian friends, I do want to be found in the service of Almighty God always. Please pray that I may be used of Him in the advancement of His kingdom. I feel deep down in my heart that I do have dear friends praying for me. I thank the Lord for their lives.

May we all be drawn closer to the Lord in the meetings soon to begin.

ROB'T LANIER, Reporter.

Bethany, Randolph Circuit.—We had our Children's Day service the third Sunday in June. The children rendered their parts well; offering was $8.57.

The third Sunday in July was also a good day for us. The township Sunday School Convention was held at this place. We had splendid speakers on that day; picnic dinner on the grounds.

Our Sunday school in increasing in attendance, we are pleased to say.

Our special meeting will begin the first Sunday in September. Bro. B. M. Williams will help Bro. Lindley in the meeting. Pray for us that much good may be done.

The W. H. M. S. will meet with Mrs. C. E. Julian on Saturday before the third Sunday in August. We wish all members to be present. MRS. C. E. JULIAN.

Cid, Denton Charge. -Our special meeting began the fourth Sunday. The Children's Day service began at 10 a. m. Rev. C. O. Leonard opened the exercises by making a most splendid talk for the occasion. Pastor Bingham could not be with us until after noon. The children were complimented by many, who said it was the best service of the kind they had ever attended. The church was nearly full. A most bountiful dinner was spread on a long table and there was plenty left. Our meeting lasted until July 31. We had four converts and two joined our church. Bro. Bingham and Bro. Leonard did excellent preaching.

We were pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hill, of Denton, also a Miss Bailey, of Denton, and also to our surprise, Bro. Harris Hill, of Porter, to worship with us. He gave us a few words that were very touching. May they all come again.

We had large congregations from start to finish, and enough gospel preached to have saved the world if they could have heard and heeded. The church was much revived.

The more the people learn of Brother Bingham and family the more they become endeared to them. He visited around in quite a number of the homes, which was highly appreciated. Some of them put good things in his car.

Mr. Nathaniel Adams, one of our old friends, was found dead in bed on July 21. He was buried at Clarksburg on the afternoon of July 22 among a host of sorrowing relatives and friends. He was 73 years old. Rev. Mr. Connell, of Denton, conducted the funeral. REPORTER.

SONG BOOKS WANTED

My dear friends of the Methodist Protestant Church:

The people that I serve here are very poor. Our churches are without song books. If there are any church that read this appeal and have any old or used Methodist Protestant Hymnals that you are not using, we would greatly appreciate it if you will notify me or send these books to me, for which I will gladly pay the expense of sending them. By doing this you will be able to render a splendid service to the colored church of the Methodist Protestant church. For example, I have one church that has only one song book. So you can see the need.

May God bless you and help you to respond to this worthy cause.

Yours sincerely,
REV. RANSOM W. WRIGHT.

A GREAT CONVENTION

Like a mighty army, the Sunday school hosts of the world marched upon Los Angeles to attend the tenth quadrennial convention of the World's Sunday School Association, July 11-18. They came by train, steamer, airplane, and motor caravan, from fifty different countries, representing fifty million Sunday school scholars. Japan had the largest delegation, 194, aside from the United States. China had 53 delegates; Canada, 68; England, 18; India, 21; Mexico, 14; Korea, 34; and Hawaii, 26. There were, all together, 7,494 registered delegates. California, with 3,931 delegates, led all the states. Pennsylvania followed with 471; New York, 138; Illinois, 129; Kansas, 106; and Washington, 100.

It was not only the largest convention in the history of the association, but the most important and far-reaching as well.—E. Guy Talbott.

Minister—I wish to announce that on Wednesday evening the Ladies' Aid will have a rummage sale. This is a chance for all the ladies of the congregation to get rid of anything that is not worth keeping but is too good to be thrown away. Don't forget to bring your husbands.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Rev. Joseph Franklin Allred

Rev. Joseph Franklin Allred died July 22, 1928, aged 80 years, three months and six days. He leaves three children living: Mrs. W. C. Jones, of Franklinsville, N. C., Mr. B. A. Allred, of Franklinsville, N. C., and Mrs. W. C. Slack, of High Point, N. C., and also one stepson, Mr. Wesley Kirkman, of Randolph county, 18 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren. His wife died last February. I do not know when Brother Allred was converted. I knew him when he was a young man; he was class-leader at Gray's Chapel. Later, he joined the M. E. church, South, and was licensed to preach in that church until about 1912; then he came back to the M. P. church and served Rockingham Circuit two years and Why Not Circuit one year. The writer has been with him in a good many special meetings. Brother Allred was very successful in winning souls to Christ. Many have told me that they were converted under his preaching. Preaching was his greatest joy and delight. Shortly after he had completed his work on Why Not Circuit his wife became afflicted, then he had to give up everything else and take care of her, and it seemed to be a pleasure to him to care for her until she died; then the old brother was worn out himself; he said he was out of a job now and had nothing more to live for and he wanted to go and be with Lou, as he called her.

On Sunday morning, July 22, I stood by his bed and saw him breathe his last and go to be with Lou in that land where we never grow old.

Funeral services were held next day in the M. E. church at Franklinsville by the writer and the Rev. Mr. Hale. Then the Freemasons of Hanks Lodge, No. 128, of which he was a member, took charge of the body and placed it by the side of his wife in the Franklinsville cemetery, there to await the resurrection morn. G. A. LAUGHLIN.

Hauser

William Henry Hauser died June 19, 1928, aged 51 years, seven months and four days. He was married to Ellen Owen December 24, 1899. To this union were born two sons, Elmer and Frederick.

The death angel came into the home January 1, 1920, and claimed for its victim the dear wife and mother.

He was again married April 19, 1926, to Mary Slate, who faithfully filled her place as wife and step mother until death again visited the home, removing Bro. Hauser to his heavenly home.

He professed faith in Christ in early life and joined Mount Zion M. P. church. He afterwards removed his membership to Shoals M. P. church, where it remained until he was called to the church triumphant.

He lived at all times a consistent church member, always abiding by the rules and government of his church, obeying all the laws of his country, and as near as possible fulfilling the commandments of his Master.

We have visited in his home numbers and numbers of times and always found him bright and cheerful, and ready to greet us with a hearty welcome and always delighted to assist us in any way, either financially or spiritually, ever having the interests of his church at heart and first in importance.

He had been a great sufferer a good part of the past ten years of his life, but always expressing himself as being so thankful that he wasn't suffering any more than he was. O, what a Christian spirit, not often found in poor, frail mortals of the dust.

He was a dutify son, a devoted husband, a loving father, a loyal brother, a true friend and a generous and noble-hearted Christian gentleman, and will be greatly missed in his home, church, and community. We personally feel the loss very deeply, as we feel that the number of our best true and tried friends is one less than before he went away. He leaves a wife, two sons, two grandchildren, a mother, one sister, eight brothers, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Funeral services were conducted at Shoals church June 21 by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Turner, of the Baptist church, and Rev. G. W. Holmes, of the M. P. church. Several other pastors were present.

The vast audience assembled and the beautiful display of flowers all helped to impress us with the high esteem in which Bro. Hauser was held.

The remains were laid to rest in Shoals cemetery to await the resurrection.

The bereaved have our heart-felt sympathy. A. L. HUNTER.

Brower

Louis M. Brower, aged 46 years, passed to his eternal reward May 12, 1928. Mr. Brower joined the Methodist Protestant church at Hickory Ridge about 13 years ago. Since joining the church he had been a loyal and faithful worker. At the time of his death he was superintendent of Oak Grove M. P. church at Rural Hall, N. C. He was a man much loved and respected by his community and we will surely miss him in our church and Sunday school.

The deceased leaves a wife and five children to mourn the loss of husband and father. He also leaves a large number of relatives and friends over this and other states who will sorrow at his going. The funeral was conducted in Hickory Ridge church by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Buck of the Luthern church and the body was laid to rest in the Hickory Ridge cemetery. R. C. STUBBINS.

Hulin

Jesse Brinkley Hulin, son of the Rev. John W. and Sara Frances Hulin, was born in Montgomery County, N. C., October 8, 1881, and departed this life at his farm about four miles north of Asheboro July 26, 1928. His early life was spent in Montgomery County, but as he approached young manhood the family moved to Central Falls, where they remained for several years. On February 25, 1903, he was united in marriage with Miss Corrinna Neighbors, who survives.

In early life he professed saving faith in Jesus Christ and united with Love Joy Methodist Protestant church, where his membership remained for the rest of his life.

The funeral was held at Neighbors Grove Wesleyan Methodist church on July 27 at 10 o'clock, and was conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. Joel Trogdon, S. M. Penn, of the Congregational church, and C. E. Ridge. He is survived by his parents, by his widow and nine children and by four brothers and two sisters one sister being Mrs. C. W. Hall, of Stallings, N. C., whose husband is pastor of Mecklenburg circuit.

All of these relatives have our deepest sympathy, and the sympathy of a large number of friends. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Shields

On Friday morning of last week the spirit of Wilbur Stuart Shields was called from its earthly abode. Mr. Shields was a business man of the town of Enfield and a member of the local Methodist Protestant Church. He was born August 2, 1878, and died July 13, 1928. He leaves to mourn his passing a wife and daughter, Maxine, of his immediate family. Of his father's family there remains but one brother, Professor Shields, of Enfield, a teacher in the New Bern High School. The funeral service was conducted by the writer, and his body was laid to rest in the town cemetery. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Allen

Our church and community were made sad by the untimely death of Keith Moore Allen, seven-year-old son and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Allen, of Gibsonville.

The illness was so severe that even before the operation (appendicitis) it was evident the chances for recovery were against him.

Keith had a sweet, lovable disposition, was prompt at school, not tardy or absent during the one year in school. He was courteous, obedient, faithful, really enthusiastic, in his Sunday school and special service activities. The large number present at the funeral and the numerous beautiful floral designs attested the sympathy of the church and community for the grief-stricken parents. May the kind Father comfort them in this hour of sorrow.

The pall-bearers were Herman Randolph, Samuel Whitesell, Robert Gilmer Lucas, and Talton Johnson. The flower girls, directed by Miss Georgia Clapp, were Eva Faucette, Maxine Hammer, Ella Mae Sears, Lessie Fausette, Ruby Woodard, Mae Sutton, Addie Campbell, Clara Faucette, Dewey Sutton.

T. M. JOHNSON.

Sharpe

Mrs. Fannie Jennings Sharpe passed from labor to reward July 22, 1928. For nearly a year she had been confined to her home as the result of a paralytic stroke. All of her 52 years of life had been spent in Alamance County.

Funeral services were conducted in Belmont M. P. Church July 23 at 2 o'clock by Revs. A. O. Lindley, D. I. Offman, B. R. Branson, and J. Elwood Carroll. The body was interred in the church cemetery.

The deceased is survived by her husband, Lacey E. Sharpe, Burlington, Route 7; two daughters, Mrs. T. E. Powell, Elon College, and Miss Clara Sharpe, Burlington, Route 7; one son, A. D. Sharpe, Burlington, Route 7; one sister, Mrs. J. M. Holt, Burlington, Route 7; and four brothers, Jerome H. Thompson, Greensboro; Joseph H. Thompson, Snow

Camp, Route 2; Robert C. Thompson, Burlington, Route 7; and Arthur C. Thompson, Graham, Route 1.

Sister Sharpe was united to Lacey E. Sharpe December 24, 1896. In the previous year she had united with Mt. Hermon M. P. Church. During her later years she removed to Belmont Church where she remained a member until death.

Mrs. Sharpe was a very faithful member at all the services until confined to her home through illness. During her latter days she often asked to be carried to the church. She has gone from among us, leaving a very large space of goodness to be filled by some other person. J. ELWOOD CARROLL.

Pickett

Mrs. Laura Wood Pickett, mother of our townsman, W. J. Jennings, died July 17th at the home of her son, D. W. Jennings, near Liberty. Mrs. Pickett was nearly 80 years of age, the last of the family to go. Her first husband was Harris Jennings. Since the death of her second husband, the late Alfred Pickett, she has lived with her son.

Besides the two sons named above there is one daughter, Mrs. Frank Moore; 18 grandchildren, and some great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Pickett was widely known in Guilford, Randolph and Alamance counties. She was of sweet disposition and strong character, so recognized by all who knew her. The Bible was her daily companion. She was fond of reading the Methodist Protestant Herald.

The funeral and interment were at Rocky River Friends church. T. M. JOHNSON.

Riley

Mrs. Emma Riley died July 30, 1928. Funeral services were conducted by the writer July 31 at Chestnut Ridge church.

Sister Riley had been a member of Chestnut Ridge church for a number of years.

A large congregation attended the funeral services and by so doing showed the esteem in which her memory is held.

May God comfort the bereaved ones.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Crater

Chloe Crater, wife of A. J. Crater and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calaway Fletcher, departed this life July 14, 1928, aged 60 years, one month and 16 days. She was united in marriage to A. J. Crater on August 7, 1892.

Sister Crater professed a hope in Christ about thirty years ago in Winthrop Friends Church and united with Union Grove Methodist Protestant Church in September, 1926. She lived a consistent Christian life from the date of her conversion until death and will be missed very much in the home and in the church. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Grady White and the writer.

T. GLENN MADISON.

Sykes

On Saturday morning, July 21, 1928, an angel bore little Mary Elizabeth Sykes, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Sykes, to that heavenly home. She was only one year, six months and 21 days old.

The floral bearers were Misses Grace and Margaret McAdams, Thelma, Lucelle, and Gladys Sykes, and Annie Maie Mace. Pallbearers were Messrs. Everett and David Squires, Fletcher McAdams and Mangum Sykes.

The funeral service was held Sunday afternoon at Chestnut Ridge M. P. Church, conducted by Rev. B. M. Williams. Then the little body was laid to rest in the church cemetery, beneath a mound of flowers. May God keep and comfort the dear father, mother and little brother.

Mary Elizabeth, you have left us,
And your bright face we miss.
But your Father said,
"Of such my kingdom is."

God took her home to heaven
To be with the angel band,
Sometime we hope to meet her;
Then and there we'll understand.

Five Sudden Deaths on Haw River Charge in a Very Short Time

It is very unusual that so many as five sudden and very shocking deaths should occur on any one pastoral charge in so short a time as three months and seven days. But this is the very sad record of Haw River Charge within recent months. On April 15, as the family returned from church, Mrs. Walter Wagoner was found dead. She was as well as usual when the family left home. Mrs. Wagoner was a member of Friendship church. On May 20 Bro. B. W. Delap, of the Midway Church, met death suddenly, not being able to speak a word after he fell in his yard. On June 2 Bro. A. L. Phibbs fell dead in his home. Bro. Phibbs was not a member of any one of the churches but Mrs. Phibbs is a member of Brown Summit church. Because of the overturning of a tractor, which he was driving, Bro. Gilmer Huffines, one of the officials of Mizpah church, was instantly killed on July 20. On the morning of July 22, Bro. J. J. Mitchel was found dead in his bed. Bro. Mitchel was a member of Fair Grove Church. It is to be noticed that each of the five churches on the charge has been visited by one of these shocking deaths.

THE SKY

The sky is not all dark to me,
I know the sun's behind;
Those clouds of sombre-looking hue
Are surely silver-lined.
My fancy penetrates that veil,
Rare pictures come to view;
The sky is not all dark to me,
Beyond is rose and blue.

The sky is not all dark to me,
I trace a rainbow there
Of promised beauty yet to come
And colors wondrous fair.
The grey and black are only masks
Of amethyst and gold;
The sky is not all dark to me,
Its charm I'll see unfold.

A MAN WITH CURIOSITY

He took his seat in a railway train beside a one-armed man whom he had never seen before. At once he opened up conversation.

"I see you have had the misfortune to lose an arm. Did you lose it in the world war?"

"No."

"In an automobile accident?"

"No."

"In threshing wheat?"

"No."

"Ginning cotton?"

"No."

"From blood poison?"

"No."

"From a stroke of lightning?"

"No."

"From falling off of a house?"

"No."

"If you will tell me how you did lose it, I won't ask you any more questions."

"I got it bit off."

"I wish to God you would tell me what bit it off!"

August 26—Burke family association, Bonlee, N. C.

September 4—Eastern Conference Synod, Rocky Mount, N. C.

Many of these addresses have been in course of preparation for months, and quite a number of them will be issued in a series of historical monographs, four numbers of which series have already been issued. In this way quite an extensive collection of historical matter is being gathered, pertaining to early churches, families, local events, and even matters of State and National importance.

The Volstead Act

The eighteenth amendment to the United States Constitution demands prohibition of the supply of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, but leaves it to Congress to define intoxicating liquors. Congress might err in its definition and draw the line between intoxicating and non-intoxicating in the wrong place. This it might do in two ways. It might forbid as intoxicating that which is not intoxicating, and it might permit as non-intoxicating that which is intoxicating. Congress rendered its definition in the passage of the Volstead Act which defines as intoxicating, liquors having an alcoholic content of more than one-half of one percent.

Can this definition be justified? Lovers of liquor say that it cannot be justified. One-half of one percent alcohol is so weak a solution that it does not satisfy the craving of the depraved appetite for stimulants, and the rummies say that the alcoholic content might be increased to two or three percent without producing an intoxicating liquor.

Opponents of intoxicating liquors hold that if the law is wrong at all, it errs on the side of leniency. We might have expected Congress to pass a law forbidding the supply of beverages containing any alcohol at all. The difficulty of removing absolutely all alcohol from some liquors may account for the fact that the Volstead Act allows one-half of one percent. We do not know what other consideration, if any, led to the adoption of the present ratio.

The dispute about this matter, like many disputes, proceeds because the two parties are not careful to define with precision the terms they use. What is meant by "intoxicating"? The dictionary gives as its equivalent "poisonous." Poisons are of course harmful when taken into the human system. If alcohol is a poison to man, as has been abundantly proved, does it not seem reasonable that it does harm, no matter how small the quantity taken? One-half of one percent may not be enough to put a man in the ditch or even to make him stagger; but who will say that it does not have an evil effect on the human body it enters? The fact that drinking weak alcoholic beverages tends to grow into the habit of taking stronger alcoholic beverages shows that the weak have harmful effects, though they may not at first or even for a long time be realized.

The Volstead Act is a friend to health and not a foe to happiness. This law generally observed will raise the level of health and happiness throughout our country. Those who are clamoring for the privilege of poisoning themselves with alcohol know not what they ask. Their request is to be denied because it is known to be unwise and contrary to the interests of those who urge it. The prohibitionists are friends of humanity. They know the terrible nature of the enemy they fight and are unwilling that their ignorant or innocent fellowmen should fall victims to his dreadful power to hurt.

A Conjecture

There is an opinion based on New Testament statements that James, "the Lord's brother," did not believe in Jesus until after His resurrection from the dead when He appeared unto James. If this opinion be correct, then the fact of James' unbelief causes us to wonder. We are accustomed to think of Jesus' living such an exemplary life, so full of sweetness and goodness as to make it impossible for those intimately associated with Him not to believe in Him. How could James fail to be convinced by what he had seen personally of the life and spirit of Jesus? Was not Jesus sinless in the home and in all His associations with His relatives and all other men? Luke tells us that from the age of twelve years He increased in favor with God and man. The writer of the Hebrews intimates most strongly that throughout His life Jesus was "harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." How could one live with Jesus and not be brought to believe in Him?

We should remember that Jesus as He grew up made no claims to divinity and wrought no miracles to prove His divinity. He was obedient to Joseph and Mary and doubtless lived an exemplary human life, but this would fall far short of proving the possession of extraordinary divine powers. Had He asked the members of His family before He began His public career, "Who do you think I am?" they would not have supposed that He was even a prophet, much less the Son of God. He was just one of their family with no promise of an extraordinary career. When it was reported that He had entered upon the role of a prophet, they were surprised and offended. They could only look upon Him as an upstart. And when the claim was made for Him that He was not only a prophet of God, but even the very Son of God, the only begotten Son of God, the thing to them was unthinkable. That was too far from their previous conception of Him. His mother might reach up to it, perhaps, because she had received evidences denied His brothers and sisters, but it was too much to expect that they would accept such a view.

James, in particular, was hard to convince. He was of a very different type of man from Jesus. James was a Nazarite. He drank no wine. He never shaved or had his hair cut. He did not dress in the prevailing style. He spent so much time in prayer that his knees became hard and tough like a camel's. Jesus was very different. He was a good mixer. He ate and drank with people. He was not strict like James to observe the traditions of the elders. To James He did not seem as religious a man as himself. Could such a man be the Son of God? James could not think so. There were temperamental differences that prejudiced the judgment of James. It took a long time to convert James. But Jesus was gracious and appeared to him especially after He rose from the dead. James did not cease to be a strict legalist, but he became a Christian, the most influential man in the Jerusalem church.

JESUS AND FAITH

By Rev. W. A. Ledford

A noted rope walker announced that on a certain day he would attempt to walk a rope stretched over the Niagara River, from Queen Victroia Park on the Canadian side to Prospect Park on the American side, just above the upper cantilever bridge. The day arrived, and so did multitudes of people to witness the hazardous undertaking. The man became nervous, and announced his inability to carry out his proposed undertaking that day; but would try again the next. Early next morning he placed a large, bright, silver star on the Canadian side, and fixing his eyes on the star, and starting from the American side, successfully carried out his daring deed. The dangers were no less and the crowds as numerous as on the previous day, but the man was looking at the star rather than at them. The writer to the Hebrews would have us do something like that, in our race of life, when he exhorted, "Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

There are three words in this text, namely, "faith," "author" and "finisher," which justify believers in focusing their eyes on Jesus. There is no Greek word for "our" in the original, as we read in most English translations. We look at faith without any qualifying term. There is no suggestion of a narrow, sectarian dogma: whether Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian faith. Not even Jewish, Catholic, or Protestant faith is implied. The precious faith, once delivered unto the saints, and which dwelt in Jesus, is what is meant. That vital, living principle, which makes the individual spiritually minded, rather than some cold, theological dogma, was what faith meant to those early disciples. Faith then is that which gives assurance, confidence, certainty to things in the future. By faith Dr. Washington Gladden wrote:

"In hope that sends a shining ray
Far down the future's broadening way."

By faith our fathers and mothers sang:

"When we've been there ten thousand years,
Bright shining as the stars;
We'll have no less days to sing God's praise,
Than when we first began."

Two men faced what the late Secretary Lane called "The Great Adventure"; one without and the other with faith, the difference between them comes out in striking contrast. When the end was near, some one asked the noted infidel, Tom Paine, where he was going, to which he replied, "I am making a launch into the dark." Poor, benighted soul without an eye of faith. When Dwight L. Moody was nearing his end, he exclaimed, "Earth recedes, heaven opens up before me." The writer knew a man whose devoted wife preceded him by over thirty years to the heavenly world. During those years he lived a devout, Christian life, being the first member of his church in both material and spiritual things. Walking with God for about eighty and four years, looking unto Jesus, "the author and finisher" of his faith, until the Lord suddenly called him home. A few days before his exodus, he was discovered reverently standing before the picture of his loved one, and heard to remark, "Dear one, I will soon be with you." His was a living example of a triumphant faith.

The Greek word translated "author" in most English Bibles, Heb. 12:2, and "captain" in Heb. 2:10, and in both places translated "pioneer" by Moffatt, is a rich and suggestive word. The idea expressed is more that of captain, leader, pioneer, than author or originator. Strictly speaking, Jesus is not the author or originator of faith. The notable list of Hebrew heroes of faith all lived before Jesus came into the world. The 11th chapter of Hebrews, however, should be marked "continued," until all believers have worked out their salvation through fear and trembling; by faith subduing kingdoms, working righteousness, obtaining promises, stopping the mouths of lions, quenching the power of fire, escaping the edge of the sword, from weakness being made strong, waxing mighty in war, and turning to flight the army of the aliens.

Sabine Baring-Gould wrote:

"Like a mighty army Moves the church of God."

This mighty army proposes to engage in extensive work, until "the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord," and "the knowledge of the Lord covers the earth, as the waters cover the sea." Also intensively till the whole of human interests are leavened by the Gospel of Christ. Christians are not scattered fanatics, beating the air, as certain enemies would make believe, but an organized army, with King Jesus for Captain. I make no claim of being a prophet, and I know that I am no son of a prophet, but am daring enough to predict that organized Christianity is going to make itself felt morally and spiritually in national affairs more in the future than it ever has in the past. Churches should not enter politics for the purpose of gaining "spoils," but for the aiding in the bringing in "the new heaven and the new earth, where dwelleth righteousness."

Jesus is more than the pioneer or leader of the army of faith; yea, He is the "finisher" or better, "perfecter," of faith. He most certainly brought faith to its highest goal and greatest degree of perfection. We can not imagine an ideal, a consummation, a perfection of faith greater than we find in Jesus Himself. Certain inventions have been discarded; others have been improved; but faith has remained for nearly two thousand years, as we see it in Jesus. In this faith Paul tells us that we are to live, rather than in our own weak, faltering, erroring faith. Blessed are those who know from their own experience that the faith of Jesus is living in them.

—Those who are tendered advice should assume that it is offered with good intent and should express their thanks for it whether it prove to be valuable or worthless. The kindness that prompted the giving of the advice has value even if the suggestions have none.

—It is said to be a dangerous thing to give unsolicited advice, but sometimes it is justified, and indeed imperatively demanded. Parents must give such advice to their children many times. The young people do not know enough about their situation to realize that they need knowledge that their parents could easily give. There is an art in giving advice in such a way that it will be seriously considered. It should not be given in the form of commands as to little children, but in the form of information regarding pertinent facts to be considered.

A WORD OF CAUTION

I hear and read of a great deal being said about the resolution passed by our ministers at their summer conference, regarding the coming presidential campaign. I also note one article has been published in which the preachers resent the politicians telling them what to preach. Now, I am not a politician; neither do I feel capable of telling preachers what to preach. In fact, I am not very strong on giving advice anyway. Most of us spend the first half of our lives refusing to take advice that Dad, or anyone else, gives us, and the other half of our lives we attempt to swell out our chests and give a lot of advice that no one will take; but I truly and sincerely have the very best interest of all of our ministers and our church at heart, and no one would regret more to see them get off their line and make a mistake that would impair the influence of themselves and the church of God than I.

Well do I know that if you take any man out of his line, he does not know much. In fact, any of us are very fortunate if we know our own line of business.

This political issue is quite a large problem and our people are already divided on the important issues in the presidential campaign, and it has been truthfully said that there is enough dynamite in three of the issues to destroy the peace and harmony of any church, and as I look at the matter, in a common sense way, I truly believe that nonpartisanship for the happiness and usefulness of all ministers themselves, and for the sake of our dear Lord, whose servant, I trust, all ministers are, would be wonderful.

It has been truthfully said that bitterness and strife are going to have full sway all over our land during the campaign, and I fear that if a minister becomes a partisan he might lose the affection of nearly all those who oppose, of many of those whose candidate he opposes. I am quite sure that every minister realizes that it is not his pulpit, but that it is the Lord's and that His pulpit is not a political stump from which to make political speeches; and I do hope that none of our ministers, whom we love so well, will allow themselves to be persuaded that the great moral questions involved give them license to do this thing (discuss politics from the pulpit). All political issues have moral questions, and this is no exception. I have always felt that our ministers' power was of grace and not of the law and that if men were saved through their ministry, it must be of grace through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and I have too much faith in our ministers to think for a moment that any one of them would ever throw aside the wisdom of God and the power of God from their pulpits and hold up to the people instead the platform, or candidate, of any political party and expect, by that, to save men from the sin of intemperance, or any other sin or wrong-doing.

The good ministers that I have had the pleasure to listen to in the Methodist Protestant Church during the many years that the church has allowed me to be one of its members have insisted that there was only one name to be given in the pulpit, for the salvation of men, and that was His, Jesus Christ's, name, and from reading I learn that He, Himself, when He was in the body on earth, never made any political speeches in His sermons; nor did any of His disciples, and the minister who considers himself a servant of Jesus Christ, if he is a good, common-sense fellow, I am sure will not consider himself greater or wiser than our Lord.

Now, my friend Dr. McCulloch, what I have had to say in regard to this matter is not going to have much, if any, effect; for I am aware of the fact that the ministers are going to do just about as they please to do in regard to preaching and talking politics. It has often been said that a change of work was the best rest that one could have, and possibly some of the boys feel that they need a rest, and if any one of them should happen to make a mistake, they shall truly have my forgiveness, for I love them all and I am 100 percent for the broad-minded minister who is trying to do his best, even though he fails.

I am frank to say that I am not taking a great deal of interest in politics right at this time owing to the fact that all of my time is consumed in my own line of business and in puting forth every legitimate effort in behalf of the High Point College, a wonderful institution that is doing a great work, and I will be truly thankful to our ministers, that I well know have the best interest of High Point College at heart, if they will possibly spare the time to endeavor to interest every Methodist Protestant in North Carolina in this college which is doing so much for humanity.

Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of our General Conference, J. M. Millikan, Dr. R. M. Andrews and I made a hot, tiresome trip through Eastern North Carolina during the week that the North Carolina Methodist Protestant Summer Conference was being held, in behalf of the High Point College; and Dr. Broomfield made some of the most wonderful talks to the people that we appeared before that I ever had the pleasure of listening to. I feel that he greatly enthused and stimulated the committee which is working in behalf of the High Point College, and all who had the pleasure of hearing him, by coming to our state.

"CODDLING SAINTS"

In a recent sermon Dr. S. Parkes Cadman said: "We want evangelism untainted by commercialism and sensationalism. We want evangelists who do not have to dig down into the gutter or ransack the vaudeville for a vocabulary. Our people in the pews should go out, two by two, as the disciples of old, and ask people individually to give their hearts to Jesus Christ. I believe we have been so busy coddling saints that we have not had time to go out and save sinners. We want men, hot-footed, whose tongues Christ has touched, to go out and proclaim 'the unsearchable riches.' We have been victimized by star preachers and pulpit orators. They get to be liabilities rather than assets." We italicised the line referring to "coddling saints." If pastors did not have to spend so much time "smoothing down ruffled feathers," and healing the almost weekly sores of jealousies and human vanities, they would not only have more time to spend among the unredeemed, but they would gain also new strength and peace of soul. A genuine saint never has to be 'coddled." He has forsaken the milk bottle. On no occasion does he do "the baby act."—United Presbyterian.

BOARD OF MISSIONS

Letter from Mrs. C. G. Soderbom

Linnegatan 104,
Stockholm, Sweden,
July 18, 1928.

Dear Friends at Home:

It does not seem possible that we have been in Sweden a month. Our trip over was a very pleasant but a cold one, and we found Sweden very cold, too. We were told that it was the coldest June in this country in 200 years. Now, however, it is much warmer, although not as warm as it was when we left the States. The days, too, are very long. June 24th is a holiday called Midsummers Day and is the longest day in the year. It is broad daylight with the sun shining before two in the morning and it is hard to tell when the night ends and the day begins. It is nice to be out of doors in the evening and still find it bright enough to read, but it is not quite so nice when you want to sleep. Of course if I were a nurse accustomed to sleep in the day I might not mind it so much.

How shall I begin to tell you about things here. Suppose I start with the day we landed in Gothenberg, with the band playing first the Swedish national anthem and then the "Star Spangled Banner" as the boat drew near the shore. The folks on the boat and those on shore were singing the Swedish anthem, both flags were flying from the docks, every one seemed so happy, many had loved ones to meet them. After we went ashore, we had to sit on our suit cases and wait for the baggage to be put ashore and then we had to search for it as it was not all in one place. After going through the custom, we went to a hotel as our train to Stockholm did not go until the next morning. Then we went out to see what we could of the city in the short time we had to stay there. The first thing that impressed me was the cleanliness; even the streets looked as if they had been scrubbed! The parks were gorgeous, lilacs abounded everywhere, and they were not bushes like we have at home, but actually trees. I had to laugh at the trolley cars for they were so small. There are seats for only 24 people in a car and if the seats are all taken, one must ride outside on the platform. Then, too, if one has a suitcase or large bundle, one must ride on the front platform and pay an extra fare for the suitcase. We went through a small museum and just got a general ideal of the city. Mr. Soderbom tried to get in touch with a friend of his that he had not seen since his school days, but was unsuccessful.

The next morning quite early we left for Stockholm. We were much surprised as our taxi left the hotel to have a man jump on the running board, but he proved to be the friend that we could not get in touch with the day before. He went with us to the station where we all had breakfast together, as it was too early to get any at the hotel. Our friend stayed with us until the train left. How happy the two were to see each other after so many years! When we reached the place where the trains went out, I was surprised to find a beautiful flower bed at the end of each track. It seemed both to welcome and to big you a cheery "good-bye." But perhaps it was to make one forget that one had to pay for the privilege of checking one's baggage, be it even a suitcase.

We traveled third class railroad to Stockholm and found it comfortable, although the seats are not upholstered as at home. At Stockholm we found our son waiting for us and how good it was to see him again. We changed trains there and went on to Sundbyberg.

Sundbyberg is just a half hour ride from Stockholm. There we stayed at the Mission shemmet which means missionary home. This home takes the outgoing missionaries and the incoming ones until they find a place to stay. We stayed at the home about two weeks and then found a place in Stockholm. You will find the address at the top of this letter. It is much more convenient living in Stockholm, as one can get most anywhere from here and with less expense.

After we moved and got settled we then went to see Mr. Soderbom's brothers and sister. One brother and his family live outside of Uppsala, where the most celebrated university in Sweden is located. While we were in Uppsala we visited some friends. We also went through the beautiful cathedral of which he is a member. You know every Swedish citizen must be a member of the State Church whether he is a member of any other church or not. There they keep all the records of the state, records of births, deaths, marriages. Here, too, is where the taxes are paid. They also keep a record of every boy of age, all of whom must take military training. Every man must tell exactly where he can be found. In case of war the whole country could be mobilized in a few hours. The cathedral is very impressive. The pulpit is about the center of the nave, perhaps that is so that the voice will carry both ways. The altar is very beautiful. On both sides of the nave are little rooms fenced off with iron railings. Here are buried in marble caskets some of Sweden's former kings and queens, great men and women, whose figures are carved on the outside of the caskets. It seemed strange to me at first to see these caskets in a church, but the place was so peaceful and quiet that they seemed to belong right there.

We had a happy visit with our brother, his wife and son, and although they could not understand English or I Swedish, we seemed to understand each other. I must tell you about two places on their little farm. The first is a little bower right near the house tucked away among the lilacs so that no one would know that it was there. It was an ideal place to have afternoon coffee which we had out there. The other place was a bit away from the house and after you had walked through or rather into an evergreen grove you came upon a cleared spot, and there was a table, chair and a hammock. It was an ideal place when one wanted to get away for a rest or a quiet time.

Then we left Uppsala and went to Dannemora to visit the other brother and the sister who still live in the old family home where Mr. Soderbom was born. This is away out in the country. Right across from the house is an evergreen woods. We surely did enjoy the country and our visit there. On Sunday we went to the State Church. This church was built in 1500 when the State Church was Catholic (it is now Lutheran). Of course I could not understand anything that was said but I found much of interest in the church. At the time it was built few people could read or write and so pictures were painted on the church walls to tell the Gospel and other Bible stories, so we found these pictures painted on the walls. Their conception of the message in pictures was much different than what we see today. Right beside where we sat was a picture of Christ on the cross with his mother and John looking on. In a side panel were all the things relating to the passion week and crucifixion, the palms, the scourge, yes, and even the dice they threw for His garments. There were many other pictures. In fact, every inch of wall space was covered with them except the bottom of the wall which was painted to represent draperies. The bell still rings in Dannemora as in the olden time for the Angelus every evening at six. In Sweden all church bells ring on Saturday night to remind you that the next day is the Sabbath. It is rather a nice custom, is it not?

After we finished our visit there we came back to Stockholm and have been here ever since. They have the strangest custom in the churches here. No one speaks to any one after church and every one leaves the church so quickly that I told Mr. Soderbom that if it happened in our church at home I was afraid that the surprise would be too much for our pastor.

The sidewalks in Stockholm and all the other cities we have been in are paved with granite blocks like they used to pave the streets with at home. At first it bothered my feet a good bit to walk on them, but I am getting used to it now and do not mind it so much as at first.

The trolley cars have letter boxes on the back of them, so if you want to mail a letter and are near a car stop, you just drop it in while the car stops for passengers. The boxes are taken to the post office after a certain number of trips.

There are a number of things in Stockholm that we want to see while we are here but we just have not gotten to it yet. We will save all those for another letter later.

Mr. Soderbom and I want to use this opportunity to thank you all for your many kindnesses to us while we were at home. May the dear Lord bless you all, every one.

With greetings from us both,

Sincerely yours,

MAUDE L. SODERBOM.

This letter, written by Mrs. Soderbom, is a copy of a letter that she has written to a number of her friends in America. It is so good that I want all the constituency of our church, who read our church papers and the Missionary Record, to enjoy it with those who have received a typewritten or duplicate copy.

SHIPS THAT NEVER COME IN

All young people have their dream ships—and they expect them to come in.

But dream ships have a way fo drifting farther and farther out to sea until they finally disappear. The ship that comes in is the one captained by Common Sense, with Vision for a mate, and a crew made up of Industry, Persistence, Ambition, Determination and Enthusiasm.

A ship thus manned will reach the harbor, but the one with Idle Watching for a Captain, Thoughtlessness for a mate, and a crew made up of Delay, Indecision, Fear and Faint Hope never calls at a port.

Dream all you will, but see to it that your dreams are not merely fanciful pictures. To fix upon a possible and desirable objective and to think of it night and day, to work toward it hour after hour, is not idle dreaming; it is the practical thing that enables men and women to rise above their fellows in the scale of accomplishment.—Southern News Bulletin.

Attractions of the Gospel

We hear much about the attractions of the world. The shows and amusements of the world keep people from the house of God. This, however, does not discount what the church has to offer to men. It only discounts those who prefer what the world has to offer. It shows they are deficient in appreciation of that which is highest and best for them. The time may come when they will become tired of husks and turn back to the Father's House for the fatted calf. At any rate the church must continue to spread the good things of the gospel feast and must continue to invite men to partake to the satisfaction of their souls. The church in having the gospel of Christ has the keys of the Kingdom. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. It lifts human life up to the higher realms. It has a story of love and heroism unequaled in all the world's literature. It has an assurance for the life that now is that the rich man's wealth or the strong man's position cannot give unto him. It has a hope of the future that eclipses all the fondest expectations of the succesful man of the world. The Gospel of Christ—it is balm and health to the soul; it is inspiration and achievement; it is comfort and assurance; it is joy unspeakable and full of glory. Too much enthusiasm cannot be put into the preaching of the Gospel. The man called to preach has a high commission. He should magnify his office and pray daily for grace and power from above to make him sufficient for the great task given him. Men may not at once respond, but let him keep on preaching with a sense of the worth of his message, and his earnestness and enthusiasm will arouse men and draw their attention to the most attractive thing ever offered in this world—the Gospel of Christ.

THE MASTER'S QUESTION

"Have ye looked for the sheep in the desert,
For those who have missed the way?
Have ye been in the wild, waste places,
Where the lost and wandering stray?
Have ye trodden the lonely highway,
The foul and darksome street?
It may be ye'd see the gloaming
The print of my wounded feet!
Have ye folded home to your bosom
The trembling, neglected lamb,
And taught to the lost one straying
The sound of the Shepherd's name?

"Have ye searched for the poor and needy,
With no clothing, no home, no bread?
The Son of Man was among them—
He had nowhere to lay His head.
Have ye wept with the broken-hearted
In their agony of woe?
Ye might hear him whispering beside you,
'Tis the pathway I often go.
My disciples, my brethren, my friends,
Can ye dare to follow me?
Then where'er the Master dwelleth
There shall the servant be."

—Please note that there will be no issue of the HERALD next week, our vacation week. We expect to go away for a little rest, and we hope to be back on the job week after next. All good wishes to our readers.

SLOGAN

for the Closing Quarter

Not a Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

This goal is needful, reasonable, attainable. Enough help and we will realize it. Pastors, please take this up with your leaders and get them committed to this slogan. We expect many entire charges to be on the honor roll, and surely there is no charge that can't have at least one church in this list. Brethren, let's test it out. By an honest and persistent effort, let's see if it can't be done.

Delegates

Our polity provides that every charge may be represented in the Annual Conference by one delegate. These delegates should all have been elected by this time, and the name and address of each forwarded to the Conference Secretary, Rev. C. W. Bates, Greensboro.

For what purpose will these delegates go to conference? Most of them would, perhaps, say, "To get a pastor." Well, that is one reason for sending a delegate to the Annual Conference. It is very necessary that every charge have a pastor, and the delegate goes to represent his charge in this important matter. But that is not the only duty of a delegate, and, perhaps, not the most important one. The conference could supply every charge with a pastor if there were no delegates at all. Delegates go to conference to help do the conference work. They have committee assignments, and through these committees they must help in solving the problems and making the programs of the conference. The delegate has his place, also, in the discussions on the conference floor, and in the voting that determines the policy of the conference on all matters upon which decisions must be made. He is expected, too, to get new information and new inspiration which he can impart to his charge on his return. Through the delegate, each charge is supposed to become better acquainted with the conference and denominational plans of work, and he is counted on to arouse his charge in support of these programs. It is remarkable what interested laymen and laywomen can do in moving the church up along all lines; and of course the delegate to the Annual Conference is expected to be found with this group. When we think a moment, we see what an important matter it is to be a delegate to an Annual Conference.

Election

We are approaching the time, now, when all church and Sunday school officers are to be elected. The law regulating this is found in the Discipline, pages 47, section 3; 50, sections 8-9; 77, section 6.

We urge that the election be conducted according to the church law. By doing this, uniformity, order and consistency will be secured.

And please see to it, pastors, that this election is held in October. All officers for 1929 should be duly elected and installed before the close of this conference year. It is our opinion that all church officers should be inducted into their respective offices by a suitable installation service. This gives becoming dignity and form to church business, and emphasizes the importance of being an officer in the church. We trust that the coming Annual Conference will provide an installation form, and have it printed in the Conference Journal. Until then, we urge pastors to make their own forms and duly install all church and Sunday school officers.

Revising the Register

Our conference law requires that the church register be revised at the close of each conference year. This is important, and pastors will please see that it is properly done. Proper notations should be made on the register of all persons who have died or transferred during the year. The church law provides that no other names shall be dropped from the register except those of persons who "can not be found," and this by a vote of the church on circuits, and by the quarterly conference in stations. See Discipline, page 30, section 3. The last General Conference made some changes in this law, but we can not become acquainted with this change until the revised edition of the Discipline is ready for distribution.

Budgets

One of the serious problems that the conference has to deal with is the raising of our budgets. We are gradually growing in the grace of giving, but we are yet far from the measure of our ability and our obligation. I suppose that because our conference is largely rural, we have fallen into the habit of putting off our collections, both for pastor and budgets, until the last few weeks of the year. About half that we pay on budgets, and a large part that we pay pastors, is paid during the last month of the conference year. The justification for this is that the people in the rural communities do not have surplus money until their crops are marketed. In part, we are sure that this is true, and we must make every necessary allowance for it. On the other hand, I fear that the force of habit plays a big part in it. This has been our way so long that it is difficult to see that we could adopt some other plan, or at least make helpful departures from our present practice. That this can be done is proved by the fact that some of the largest payments on budgets to date have been made by rural charges. And the opinion that habit plays a large part in this matter is further enforced by the fact that many of our churches where the people are on weekly payrolls put off their budget payments until the close of the year. So, after all, we wonder if "putting off" is not more a habit than a necessity.

Another thing that militates against our budget receipts is our failure to get the budget out to the membership. I suspect that I shall not be far afield if I say that 90 per cent of our churches never cover the budget, either by the Every-Member canvass or by membership assessment. And that means, of course, that the budget never gets out to the people, so that the individual member knows what his allotment is. Until we can find some way of doing this, we will continue to be seriously handicapped in our budget receipts. We, of course, can not compel people to pay to the church. That is not the way of democratic Methodism. It would not be right to compel them if we could, for "the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." However, it is our duty to formulate a financial program that gets the budget out to the individual member, and then, by precept and example, by prayer and persuasion, lead the people of God to see that it is their duty and privilege to serve the church with their means, as the "Lord prospers" them.

Bess Chapel

Sunday, Aug. 12.—We were here for three services—10 a. m. (Sunday School), 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. It was pleasing to us to be with Bro. Henderson and his people. The congregations were large and attentive, and this, of course, added to the pleasure of preaching. In addition to teaching a Sunday school class and preaching twice, the conference programs were presented. An offering for college maintenance was taken, which amounted to $19.16 in cash and pledges. The church will take credit for this amount on college maintenance assessment. We earnestly hope that they will raise the balance of this assessment (the total is $50) and that the charge will take its rightful place on the Honor Roll for having raised all assessments for all causes. They are well able to do this. We have a strong church here, of well-to-do people, and they need the joy and stimulus of really discovering their strength. They talk of a new brick church, with ample Sunday school equipment. They should go forward with this. Their children make it necessary; the enlarged usefulness that would come to the church makes it necessary; and their devotion to Him whose they are and whom they serve makes it necessary. We earnestly hope that they will "Rise up and build."

The pastor tells me that more than forty copies of the Herald are going weekly to this church. Congratulations! A reading church always becomes an interested church. The revival meeting began with the services of Friday. Bro. Brittain was to arrive on Monday to assist the pastor. Our prayers are with them for a good meeting.

Bessemer City

We were here Sunday night, and but for a heavy rain we would have been greeted, we were told, by a house full of worshipers. A goodly number were present any way. This church has taken on new life, and gives promise of continued growth. As an evidence, they have paid, this year, balances due on back salaries of three pastors. This is certainly evidence of vigorous life; we heartily congratulate them. Forty or more have been added to the church this year, and others are to be received. Two much needed rooms for Sunday school work have recently been built onto the rear of the church. The Sunday school attendance two weeks ago—Home-Coming Day—was 399. On the day we were there the attendance was over 200. Here, too, a better church building is needed, and some agitation is now going on. We shall not be surprised if this church is on the Honor Roll this year. They have a mind to work and we believe that they are going to produce gratifying results.

Bro. Henderson is full of zeal for the success of his charges, and the people seem to be responding to his leadership. We enjoyed our visit on these fields.

General Conference Journal

It is now ready, and can be had from our publishing house in Baltimore or in Pittsburgh. We trust that our people will supply themselves with this Journal, and thus become acquainted with what was done at the Centennial General Conference. The price is $1.00.

"JUST AS I AM"

It is strange what excuses the devil makes men put up to keep them from coming to the One who is all-loving and all-powerful, and who is waiting to be gracious to them. In some of these cases these excuses are subterfuges, but in many they are just as real as they can be and those who make them are as honest as the day. Here are some of them:

"I am not good enough." "When I can stop doing this or that I will come, for I know that it is what I should do." Well, if such an one waits until they are good enough they will never come, for we have nothing in ourselves to make us good enough; and besides Jesus said, "They that are whole have no need of a physician, but they that are sick. I came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance." Matt. 9:12. Only sick people go to the hospital, and they go because they know they are sick. Those who come to the church and unite with it are those who thereby confess to the world that they know they are sinners and need a Saviour.

"I do not have any feeling." Well, the only one in the Bible who was guided by his feeling was Isaac, and he made the mistake of thinking Jacob was Esau! John 1:11-12 tells us, "As many as received Him, to them gave He the right to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name." It is faith, not feeling, that is needed.

"There are too many hypocrites in the church, and I am afraid I will not hold out. I certainly do not want to be a hypocrite myself, and I do not want to associate with them." Yes, there are too many hypocrites in the church; but there will be none in heaven. It is a question as to whether you will associate with some of them now, or with all of them hereafter. And the Book says, in Rom. 14:12, "So then every man shall give an account of himself to God." What the other fellow does will neither save nor damn you; every tub must stand on its own bottom. And as far as holding out is concerned, you do not have to hold out; that is God's job. And He has promised in John 10:28, "Neither shall any pluck them out of my hand. My Father which gave them me is greater than all, and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand."

"There are so many things I do not understand; I want to be sure before I take any step." Listen to what Jesus said, in John 7:17: "If any man willeth to do My will, he shall know of the doctrine." This is the scientific method; put Him to the test. Believe your beliefs, and doubt your doubts; and work at what you know, and you will know more.

"I intend to do this, but not today." Listen to the Book again: "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation." II Cor. 6:2. Have you any right to dictate to God when He shall save you? When He gives the invitation for today, have you any right to say to Him, No, thank you, I may come tomorrow?—North Avenue News, Atlanta, Ga.

"GOOD HUNTING"

A shiny black-and-yellow taxi whirled up the hill to the Harwood's door, and a tall young woman, trim as a soldier and pretty as a daisy, stepped out, as four young Harwoods, clustered in the front windows of their living room, observed.

"Aunt Ruth!" said Peter approvingly. "Didn't know she was pretty."

In answer to a smart summons of the knocker, Betty, oldest of the family, flew to open the door. "You're our Aunt Ruth Harwood, aren't you?" she asked softly, instant admiration in her eyes for Aunt Ruth's perfect appearance.

"You're not Betty?" Aunt Ruth counterquestioned. "Why, you ought not to come above my shoulder," and to the three timid young Harwoods, shyly emerging into the hall, "Mercy, I thought I was coming to guard a household of children! How dare you all shoot above your aunt in the four short years she hasn't seen you? Ah, all but one. Alicia, you've no idea how grateful I am to you for still looking up to me, instead of down on me, as Peter and Betty and Bob do. But where's your mother? She hasn't gone?"

"No," said Betty, feeling as if all ice were not only broken but completely melted in the three minutes Aunt Ruth had been inside their door. "Father's talking to her now from New York, and Mother told us to watch for you and tell you she's be right down."

"And here she is!" Aunt Ruth ran half-way upstairs to meet Mother, hurrying down.

"Ruth! You really came! Oh, I shouldn't go and leave this household in your hands, at that. Robert has just telephoned me I must start tonight, instead of tomorrow night, because he has word to leave New York a day earlier."

"Not till tonight? Why, that's all day long," said Aunt Ruth, taking in Mother's whiteness and tiredness in one quick look. "There's nothing five of us can't do in a day, is there?" She looked over the banister and smiled at the upturned faces below. "All you have to do is just give orders."

"But there's food to order, and my trunk to get down from the attic, and the laundry to count, and—"

"Betty'll order the food, and Peter'll bring down your trunk, and Alicia will count the laundry, and Bob and I'll stand by for incidental orders." Still looking over the banisters, Aunt Ruth nodded to each young relative in turn; and to their own surprise, the young relatives dispersed nimbly to perform their allotted tasks.

"Bob will show me my room, won't you, Bob?" went on Aunt Ruth, realizing that Mother was at that point of tiredness when others, without giving a sign, must do a little thinking for her.

Bob, fallen under the spell of Aunt Ruth's sweet temper, as had the other young Harwoods, scampered upstairs and opened the door next to his own. "It's all ready, Aunt Ruth," he said, as pleased to do the honors as though he himself had had a hand in making it ready.

"Wait outside a minute," Aunt Ruth smiled at him as she closed the door, and in three minutes came briskly out, transformed into housewifery capability by a plain blue linen dress and flowered smock.

No Bob awaited her. From Mother's room Aunt Ruth heard him demanding insistently:

"Where's my blue sweater, Mums? No, I looked there. No, I looked there, too. I've got to have it while you're gone, and I want to put it on now, for baseball."

Aunt Ruth met them coming out of Mother's room, Bob determined, Mother harassed. Turning Mother around, Aunt Ruth pushed her gently back into her room and shut the door.

"I'll help find the sweater, Bob," she said; and the search began, high and low, till it brought them up, low, in the cellar, before the work bench, where Bob had pulled it off.

"There! Now keep track of it!" advised Aunt Ruth, and sped upstairs to hear both Betty's and Peter's voices arguing in Mother's room.

"I looked there," said Peter. "I looked there first. I did ask Betty to help me find 'em, but all she says is she can't find her fountain pen. No, I didn't borrow it. No, she can't look through my desk. What good would that do, anyhow, when I've looked myself? I did tell her I'd looked there. But I've got to have my running shoes while you're away, Mums, and I wanted 'em this morning."

Again Aunt Ruth was in time to push Mother gently right-about-face to her own task of sorting, mending, and packing.

"My name is Nimrod," she said, a little grimly. "If you have the slightest idea of getting away tonight, leave all searching parties to me."

Closing Mother's door upon her, Aunt Ruth faced Peter and Betty. "Why in this world don't you help each other, if there must be a continuous hunt going on in this house?"

"Mother always seems to know where things are," said Peter weakly.

"You see she's home so much and we're home so little," said Betty, with the air that her reasoning was perfect. "She can't help seeing things around."

"I've heard of card catalogues," said Aunt Ruth cryptically. "But I didn't know they were vacillating."

"What's that mean?" asked Peter affably.

With equal affability, Aunt Ruth waved toward the dictionary. "This Nimrod comes to the aid of less mighty hunters only after they have really tried before they failed," said she. "The maxim applies to all manner of hunts, remember. Hunts in the dictionary, hunts over the house. Nobody is to send out an S. O. S. to Mother again this day." And into her own room disappeared Aunt Ruth, to unpack.

The hunt for running shoes and fountain pen led the searchers, if Aunt Ruth could judge from sounds, to every corner of the house. Cellar and attic were included, as they had been in Bob's sweater hunt.

Two arguing voices rose, sharp and hard.

"I certainly couldn't have taken your running shoes," Betty informed her brother curtly, as their trail led past Aunt Ruth's door. "What on earth would I want of 'em? And you would want my fountain pen."

The front door banged, and in bounced Alicia. Without so much as even looking in the hall closet, "Mums, where's my red beret? And where's—"

Before she could shout another word, Aunt Ruth leaned over the banister. "Look for it, you little tyrant," she commanded. Then, at Alicia's surprised "Where's Mums?" Aunt Ruth declared, "In her room, packing. And not one of you is to disturb her, even if, armed to the teeth, I have to do a sentry-go before her door from now till train time."

Somehow that day passed. Somehow Mother assembled her belongings, packed them, and made her train. After the same yellow taxi that had whirled Aunt Ruth to the door a few hours earlier had whirled Mother away, Aunt Ruth sank exhausted into the nearest chair and summoned her charges.

"We're going to have the best time in the world this next month, while Mother's having a vacation," she began. "And I never in all my days saw any one need one so much. But in spots we're going to reform before we have it."

The four young Harwoods looked blank. Sensing the "atmosphere" unerringly, as all children do, they knew Aunt Ruth liked them—and they all liked her instantly. Why? Perhaps they couldn't have put it in words, yet they instinctively knew pleasantness and fair play when they met them; and what more powerful drawing cards to children than those?

"What spots?" came from Peter.

"The rules of the hunt are to be completely revised," said Aunt Ruth, answering his smile with one to match. "Never have I dreamed of such wild hunting as has gone on in this house all day long. You needed only hunting horns and leather doublets."

"Hunting? Hunting what?" came from Alicia in all innocence.

"Hunting what? Mercy! Are you so accustomed to the wild ways of the pack that you don't even know you've been hunting? Don't you ever keep track of your own things? Any one of you?"

"Awful hard to," said Bob with manly frankness. "Guess Mums does help us hunt a lot."

"She's not going to any more. Not ever. When she comes back, she'll love our revised hunting laws."

"What are they?" asked Betty. "I never knew, either, how we've made Mother hunt."

"Why she hasn't changed her name to Diana years ago, I don't know," said Aunt Ruth. "Do you know what Nimrod means?"

And in answer to four puzzled faces, "It means mighty hunter."

"That's what Mother is," said Betty.

"Was," corrected Aunt Ruth. "As I said before, it's now my title. But there's this difference. No one under any circumstances is to appeal to Nimrod except as a last and desperate resort. Each hunter is to hunt alone, first. Failing, he may ask another young hunter to help, but only if he asks politely in this way: 'Good Hunting, Little Brother!' "

"We know the Jungle Book!" said Bob with enthusiasm.

"Of course," smiled Aunt Ruth. "Then you know how polite hunters should be. If properly asked, but not otherwise, other young hunters may join the chase, and they'd better, because it may soon be their turn to enlist aid."

Peter grinned. "That's fair," said he.

"And," proceeded Aunt Ruth, "all good hunters hunt in stealthy silence. Never in full cry, as this pack has hunted today."

"Won't it be fun!" said Alicia. Bowing low to Bob, she went on. "'Good Hunting, Little Brother!' Will you help me find my 'rithmetic book?"

And Bob, himself bowing low, replied, "Good Hunting, Little Brother!' I will, if you'll help me find my scout knife."

"We'll look for 'em both at once," whispered Alicia, and the two little hunters were about to steal away on tiptoe when Aunt Ruth recalled them to say:

"The final rule of the chase is: If all young hunters fail, after a quiet and honest search, they may then, as a last resort, bow low to Nimrod, who, if politely asked, will aid."

Mother and Father came home in a month, Father cheery and hale as he always was, and Mother looking "brand-new," as Alicia put it. Aunt Ruth stayed a week after their homecoming.

"You've saved my life and reason," Mother told her on the last day of the week. "But how'd you do it?"

"I never had a happier month. I hate to go. I do love my mixed quartet," said Aunt Ruth with real wistfulness.

"The children adore you; but how did you wave a magic wand over their heads and get them to keep track of their own things? That eternal hunting was driving me mad."

"Oh, that?" said Aunt Ruth, laughing. "Well, that's our secret. I promised the quartet not to tell. We invented a game that worked, that's all."—United Presbyterian.

SAVING SOUL AND BODY

It is significant that the Greek word translated "save" is translated in other palces "heal" or "make whole." It is easy to see in many instances that gross indulgences of bodily appetites brings on severe and loathsome disease. Visiting the City Hospital and seeing all sorts of miserable, corrupted bodies, the physician remarked that 98 per cent were made so by pandering to lower appetites. It is not so easy to see, but is often true that unrestrained spirits bring on bodily maladies. One doctor said of a patient whom we visited at the same time, "That woman is so selfish that it has become a disease of the body as well as the mind." It has been noted that some high-strung people have sick headaches or bodily prostration after a rise of temper. It has been asserted that violent anger will poison the body. We know cases of smug, self-centered narrowness of soul causing the body to be weak, unwholesome and withered. Soul and body seem to grow small, dry and impotent together.—Selected.

GOD'S ALPHABET

I suppose that Isaiah thought he was as good as most men, in his day, and perhaps he was a good deal better than most men, but when he saw the Lord, he cried, "Woe is me, for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips." When he saw the Lord, he saw his own deformity, and he fell in the dust before the Lord. And that is the proper place for the sinner. Until men realize their own uncleanness they talk of their own righteousness, but the moment they catch a sight of Him their mouth is stopped. We cannot learn to read until we learn the alphabet. We cannot come into His kingdom until we are humble. That is God's alphabet.—D. L. Moody.

TO THE HOME BEYOND

Bishop W. A. Quayle related the story of a little child who was tripping light-heartedly through a graveyard at dusk. Some one asked her if she was not afraid. "Oh, no, I only cross it to get home," was the answer.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

Aug. 26: Paul in a Roman Prison

Scripture Basis: Acts 16:16-40.

Golden Text: Rejoice in the Lord always; again I will say, rejoice. Phil. 4:4.

A Miracle Performed

It seems that Paul and his little evangelistic band were wont to frequent the place of prayer by the riverside in Philippi during their brief sojourn. Doubtless the little group of women found there at first grew to be a large congregation, for these, like the inhabitants of other towns where Paul had been, had not heard such a gospel before.

One of Paul's hearers was a poor demented slave girl. A number of days she followed him and his associates to the meeting, crying after them, "These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation." (Thus did demons acknowledge God and Jesus when He came into contact with them during His earthly existence. Mark 1:23-26; Luke 4:41). Paul grew weary of being made conspicuous in this manner, and desiring to help the poor maiden, he demanded in the name of Jesus Christ that the evil spirit come out of her, which he did.

A Multitude Perturbed

This time, instead of being taken for the gods as did the Lystrans when the lame man was healed; and instead of being exalted and glorified, these people turned against them. Why? Because this mentally afflicted girl was bringing money into the pockets of a group of men by her soothsaying. She was no good to anyone save to those who would use her as a tool of the devil to profit thereby. "Instead of rejoicing over the inestimable blessing that had come to the girl, these selfish men were enraged because they could no more make money out of her misfortune. Thus does greed harden the hearts of men."

Arousing the indignation and opposition of the crowd, these "stockholders" drew Paul and Silas to the marketplace where sat the rulers of the city, and falsely accused them. Ready to agree with their fellow-countryman (perhaps those who had been largely instrumental in placing them in office), these magistrates ordered the apostles scourged with many stripes and cast into prison. The jailer, being given special charge to keep them safely, cast them into the inner cell and fastened their feet in the stocks.

A Midnight Prayer Meeting

Imagine if you can the condition of these two men. They had faithfully preached the gospel, had no doubt met with success in winning men and women to Jesus, had relieved an enslaved soul from her bondage of sin, and were cast into prison for it. How would you and I have felt? Surely we would not have felt at all like singing and praying! But that is what these two saints of God did. They held a prayer meeting of their own. The prisoners heard it, and the jailer himself. Never had he been placed in charge of such men before. They possessed something which he nor any of the other prisoners possessed.

A Mighty Phenomenon

God was present at that meeting. He was the most interested listener. And after His faithful servants had sung praises to Him and blessed Him in their prayers for His goodness to them, He answered them with a demonstration of His mighty power. An earthquake shook the foundations of the prison, and the doors were opened, and the prisoners were freed of their shackles. Paul and Silas did not know the earthquake was coming, but when they observed that they were loosed, they knew that God's hand was in it.

A Man Pardoned

The jailer, being awakened out of his sleep, went to see if the prisoners were all safe. Finding the doors open and the prisoners free, he would have killed himself had he not been arrested in his suicidal impulse by the noble Paul, who assured him that none had escaped. The keeper preferred to take his own life, rather than be disgraced by being publicly condemned to death for gross negligence. This man was nothing to Paul; why didn't he let him carry out his intent? Ah, that man's soul was precious in his sight, and all he wanted was a chance to tell him of Jesus.

His chance came, for the frightened jailer fell down before the men of God and asked how to obtain salvation. The question may have been an impulsive one from a nervous man, but certainly he must have been thinking about it, after having learned of the change in the slave girl's life and having come in contact with these saintly prisoners. It didn't take them long to answer him in the simplest form of the message of salvation. "In season and out of season, Paul believed in preaching the gospel." The jailer and his household were saved, and Paul and Silas were ministered unto by the man who several hours previously had probably treated them roughly. That's a practical demonstration of a genuine conversion.

Sept. 2: Paul in Thessalonica

Scripture Basis: Acts 17:1-15; Rom. 15: 18-20! I Thes. 5:12-23.

Golden Text: The opening of thy words giveth light. Ps. 119:130.

Thessalonians Taught Truth

At the request of the recent convert, Lydia, Paul, Silas, and the rest of the gospel band remained with her a while, gave encouragement to the other new Christians, and left the town of Philippi. Traveling in a westward course, they passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia and arrived at Thessalonica. Here they found a synagogue, the absence of which in the other two cities may have been the chief reason they did not stop there.

Thessalonica was the capital of Macedonia or northern Greece. It was so named because on the day the father of Alexander the Great, Philip of Macedon, heard of the birth of his sister, he won a victory over Thessaly, the name signifying "Thessalian Victory."

It is noticeable that it was Paul's custom to participate in the services of the synagogue wherever he went. Also, it is seen that during his stay here, which is supposed to have been more than three weeks, he "reasoned with them from the Scriptures." He opened up to them the Old Testament prophecies, and proved that Jesus was the Messiah of whom they spoke. Jews and Greeks believed, the latter in larger numbers than the former. How could they do otherwise? Fair-minded men, whose reason has been appealed to from the early days of Christianity to the present time, have seen the reasonableness of the gospel and have accepted the Christ of God as their personal Savior from sin.

Jews Jeopardize Jason

Doubtless Paul did not expect all to believe, especially of the Jews. He was not surprised when some of the jealous, narrow-minded, prejudiced Jews made an uproar and started persecutions, selecting their accomplices from among the class of inhabitants whose delight is in disturbances.

They made an assault upon the house of one Jason, where the apostles had probably resided while in Thessalonica, but were not there at that time. It may be they were preaching elsewhere in the city. Not finding the ones they sought, they violently seized Jason and other converts who were with him, and hastily brought them before the rulers of the city. The lives of these men were in jeopardy. They knew not the outcome of the rebellion.

The charges of treason and sedition were brought against Paul, Silas, Jason and the rest, which were considered very serious. The accusers unintentionally complimented the Christian religion when they declared, "These have turned the world upside down," for that is truly what the religion of Jesus Christ does. It changes superstition into sound doctrine, ignorance into intelligence, filth into cleanliness, and hate into love. It seems that the accused were treated mildly, for they were dismissed with no greater punishment than to give bond to keep the peace.

Bereans Believe Bible

Listening to the admonition of the Christians in Thessalonica, who knew the situation better than the apostles, Paul and Silas left under the cover of darkness for Berea, a little town to the southwest, 47 miles. They found a synagogue there also, and repeated their practice in this town as elsewhere. Persecution did not phase them. It did not dampen their ardor. They seemed to receive stimulation from it.

Greater satisfaction was found here among the Bereans. They were "more noble" than the Jews of the former city. They listened attentively to Paul and Silas. They possessed open minds to receive the truth. Furthermore, they inquired into the Scriptures daily to learn for themselves whether the things they heard from the mouth of the teachers were so. This was their privilege; this is the privilege of every one. It should be the practice of every devout Sunday school teacher and pupil. "This is preeminently the Sunday school verse of the Bible (17:11b), the motto for the Bible student."

Consequently many believed. The Jews were among these, as well as the Greeks. Not only those of the middle or lower classes socially, but "Greek women of honorable estate, and of men, not a few." This denotes social position. It teaches us that the gospel is for all classes.

WHAT I LIKE ABOUT HIGH POINT LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Perhaps the most interesting features presented at the annual Leadership Training School were the Vesper services. I like these services because they were held at the twilight hour, which marks the close of the dying day. When these services began a peaceful feeling seemed to settle upon every one.

The manner in which the breakfasts, luncheons, and dinners were carried out impressed me very much. We were grouped into clans of four, and novelty stunts and jokes were pulled by members of each clan. This made us feel as if we all belonged to one great family. In fact, we do; are we not descendants from Adam and Eve?

Coming to the serious part of the program, I will write of the different courses which were studied. These comprised junior, intermediate, and senior works. These courses were made very interesting because they were conducted by experienced and able teachers.

Every night after the Vesper services, lectures were made by preachers holding the D. D. degree. I think every one liked them and they also will be a great help to us.

Athletics played a great part in this training school. Various races and games were played by amateurs who were selected from the clans.

The things which I have mentioned are not all of the interesting things connected with the Training School, but they are the most outstanding ones.

MORE IMPRESSIONS OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

(By Talton Whitehead)

The Leadership Training School of the North Carolina Conference met at High Point College on July 14. Saturday afternoon was taken up in making registrations and getting organized for class work.

The first program took place Sunday morning at the First Methodist Protestant Church of High Point. Dr. P. E. Lindley, dean of High Point College, delivered the opening address. He spoke on the subject, "Staggering at the Promises of God." Dr. Lindley also brought the evening message.

Class work began Monday morning at 8 o'clock. The following courses were offered in Young People's training:

"Vocational Guidance," Rev. E. L. Ballard.

"The Life of Jesus," Rev. S. W. Taylor.

"Expert Endeavor," Miss Steele.

"Christian Living" and "Missions," Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

"How to Read the Bible," Rev. J. E. Pritchard.

"The Science of Leadership," Rev. J. C. Auman.

"Stewardship," Rev. N. G. Bethea.

"Denominational History and Program," Rev. A. G. Dixon.

"Recreational Methods," Rev. F. S. Gibbs.

"Christian Citizenship," H. W. Maier.

"Evangelism," Rev. L. W. Gerringer.

The following are courses offered in the standard Leadership Training curriculum:

"A Study of the Pupil" and "Training in Worship and the Devotional Life," Mrs. H. W. Maier.

"The Principle in Teaching," Dr. P. E. Lindley.

"The New Testament," Dr. C. E. Forlines.

"Social and Recreational," Miss Brillingham.

Rev. T. M. Johnson had charge of the morning worship and Rev. A. G. Dixon had charge of the vesper service every evening.

The evening addresses were delivered by Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of N. C. Conference; Dr. J. D. Williams, pastor of West End M. P. Church, Greensboro, and Rev. J. N. Link, pastor Grace Church, Baltimore, Md. These messages were enjoyed by all who heard them. On Friday night Rev. J. N. Link had charge of service when over thirty of the students made the decision to give part or whole time service to the Kingdom. This was a very beautiful sight for those present to behold.

Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assisted by Miss Brittingham, put on a good recreation program. The school was divided into four groups. Each group had its team in volley ball, tennis, etc. These contests added much to the pleasure of all who took part, and all showed very fine sportsmanship.

The school was a very great success, and the president, Rev. F. W. Paschall, is to be very highly praised for its success.

THANKS

In whatever way and to whatever extent the summer conference was a success, those who took part are justly to be thanked. Every man placed on the program readily and promptly responded in a way that indicated that the subject assigned had been well studied and prepared. The topics were so well prepared that in almost every instance the rendering of a given part brought forth discussion on the part of those who had heard. Time was at a premium and on many occasions the only way to end a discussion was to call time for the next number. All this is to be appreciated and the president of the Summer Conference desires to extend his most sincere thanks to all who took part and made the conference the success it was thought to be. Besides the program rendered the occasion was a delightful one. It is certainly to be appreciated that young people and pastors can gather together once each year and spend a time in a way that proves to be helpful to all concerned. Sufficient words are not to be found to express high regards and appreciation for our young people. We pastors cannot do too much for our young people. God bless them! The fine class of young people that attends these summer gatherings helps wonderfully to make the occasion a success. President Paschal and the other leaders are doing a great work. It has been a pleasure to be associated with these leaders of the young.

It is hoped that the gathering for next year will be the best yet. In order to make the next the best the president of the Pastors' Conference invites any suggestion whatever from any source. Ideas from different ones will certinly help. Come on and help us.

Again thanking all who helped in any way and hoping for greater things in the future, I am,

For Christ and the Church,

GEO. L. CURRY.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

ASHEBORO MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

The Woman's Missionary Societies of the Asheboro Methodist Protestant Church met with Mrs. Earl Bulla on Monday afternoon, August 13, for their annual meeting and picnic. We all look forward to this event with great anticipation, because it is such an ideal place for a picnic and Mrs. Bulla is a charming hostess.

Our president, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, presided. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, conducted the devotions.

The meeting was then turned over to the program committee. This committee had arranged a program in the form of a book called the Missionary Review.

This book contains nine pages, as follows: 1st, the cover; 2nd, the membership; 3rd, the corresponding secretary; 4th, the recording secretary; 5th, the treasurer; 6th, the editorial; 7th, the question box; 8th, the program; 9th, back cover. One person would give her page and then another the next until the book was completed. When finished it made a very attractive magazine filled with missionary news.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer made a very interesting talk in which she urged each member to acquaint herself with the new constitution. She also called attention to the special branch meeting to be held at Mebane in October.

The chairmen of the four circles of the united societies have been doing splendid work. A cash prize of $5.00 was offered to the chairman of the circle securing the most new members within this year, and a cash prize of $2.50 to the chairman securing the next most new members.

We were dismissed with prayer by Mrs. S. L. Hayworth, after which all enjoyed the sumptuous picnic supper.

—Rev. Roy Farmer, the new pastor of First Church, High Point, met members of the Conference Faculty on Tuesday P. M. He impressed them most favorable and they heartily welcome him to our Conference. May his ministry among us be both pleasant and fruitful. We have no doubt it will be so.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Friendship, Chase City.—We began our special meeting at this place the fourth Sunday in July. Rev. R. S. Troxler came to us on Monday and did all the preaching until Friday night, when we closed. Bro. Troxler did good preaching and endeared himself to our folks. They enjoyed his preaching and having him in their homes. We had a good meeting; had several conversions and reclamations, with four to join the church.

Our little church at this place is moving on slowly but surely, we hope. They are making some progress. They have painted the church on the outside this year and are now planning to put a new organ in, as their old one is about given out. These people deserve much credit for having a church at Chase City. We find many good people here, and are justly proud of their church.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Mecklenburg.—We have held our third quarterly conference; had good interest. The people of this charge do their work in harmony and love. I have never lived where brotherly love abounds more than it does here.

We have held two of our special meetings. We had a good meeting at Zoar, but only two conversions. No one united with the church. Bro. J. W. Hulin, of Midland, was the help. Bro. Hulin preached some very inspiring sermons. The church was much revived. In time of our meeting at Zoar we conducted a funeral of one of the members of the church, Sister Amanda Stringfellow, aged 72 years. She leaves one son and one daughter. She united with the church at an early age.

Our meeting at Stallings church has just closed. Bro. Hulin helped at Stallings. We had a good old-time revival here; nine conversions; two united with the church during the meeting and we think more will unite later. Bro. Hulin was highly appreciated at both churches.

Our next special meeting begins tomorrow, August 12, at Antioch camp meeting ground. Bro. Baker, from the South Carolina Conference, will help us there. We are hoping for a good meeting. We are expecting the children from High Point there on Monday, the 13th.

W. C. HALL, Pastor.

Kernersville.—A union meeting of the country churches on this charge began on Sunday, July 22nd, and closed on Sunday night, August 5. The meeting was conducted in the warehouse in Kernersville. Rev. N. G. Bethea, pastor of State Street M. P. Church, Lexington, was the pulpit help. Rev. J. L. Trollinger, pastor of Thomasville First M. P. Church, directed the choir. Miss Ruth Voncannon, who has the oversight of the sewing department at the Children's Home, was our pianist.

Pine Grove, Ai and Sandy Ridge form the country churches on this charge. One of the above churches voted against a union meeting, but I am glad that a number of that church attended the meeting. Two of the country churches furnished seats, and we borrowed other benches from a church just across the road. Many people from both town and country attended the meeting, so our seating capacity was often well nigh filled.

Brother Bethea did all the preaching after the first day, and did it well. This made the third time that he has assisted in meetings at this place. Brother Trollinger did his part well, and proved to be the right man to get others to help. Miss Voncannon was quick and ready to make the piano do its full and important part in the great work to be done.

We were favored with special music by people from Lexington, High Point, High Point College, the Children's Home, Thomasville, and Pine Grove church.

One man who was afraid that it would create confusion in his church if it took part in the union meeting said the night the meeting closed that he expected to begin at once to plan another union meeting for next year to include not only the country churches, but the town church, also.

Rev. S. W. Taylor, the president, came over from Greensboro and spoke every encouragingly concerning the plan of union meetings.

Our special help made the parsonage headquarters while here. We were invited out to dine at a number of places where there was plenty and to spare, and in addition to this, many wingless ravens brought us flour, chickens, eggs, butter, milk, and vegetables of many kinds. Many thanks to all, both in and out of town, who assisted or encouraged in this meeting in any way. What could be done with full co-operation is yet to be seen. May God greatly bless every effort that has been made for good in this meeting and keep unto Himself the seven precious souls that claimed the blessing that makes people sons and daughters, heirs and joint hears of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, is the prayer of the pastor,

E. G. LOWDERMILK.

Orange Charge, Union Grave Church.—The revival meeting began here Sunday, August 5, and closed Thursday, August 9. Rev. J. Clyde Auman did all the preaching and did it well.

Visible results: Church revived, nine conversions, three additions to the church; offering for Brother Auman, $34.

Rev. W. F. Kennett will preach at Hebron the fourth Sunday in August at 11 a. m. and at Chestnut Ridge the same day at 3 p. m.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Tobaccoville.—Since writing the last notes the Sunday school at Stony Knoll has remembered me with a cash offering.

I filled my appointment at Union Hill last Sunday, August 12. Hope soon to be at regular work.

C. H. WHITAKER.

Bessemer City.—We are glad to say that the Junior Christian Endeavor has been improving rapidly not only in number, but in faith. Last night, August 12, was the sixth meeting of the society. There were about 25 or 30 present. A wonderful program was given and enjoyed by all. About 10 or 15 new members have been enrolled since the first meeting of the society.

We are more than glad to say that every girl and boys of the junior-intermediate ages is invited to come and attend these meetings every Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock, and we welcome any visitor who wishes to come and be with us at any of our meetings.

Our leader, Mrs. Velta Beam, has been very faithful to the society and we wish to thank her for the interest and co-operation which she is giving us.

OLLIE MAE LUTZ,
Jr. C. E. Reporter.

Porter Church.—Today was our regular preaching day, but our pastor was away helping in a revival at his home church. We missed him and his wife and his sermon very much, but owing to his faithful and untiring service from time to time it was with pleasure we granted his release. However, at the preaching hour Mr. G. H. Thompson made a very helpful and interesting talk on home religion. We all enjoyed his talk and should put into practice the things he said.

Our revival meeting will begin next Sunday, August 19th. Rev. Mr. Hill, brother of our pastor, will assist him in the meeting.

Our third quarterly conference was to have been held last Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock, but owing to a severe rain at the appointed hour a great many of the members were unable to get there, so it was postponed. It will be held some time during the meeting next week.

REPORTER.

Sandy Ridge, Kernersville Charge.—We had Children's Day service last Sunday morning with a fairly large congregation. We noticed, however, that some of our own people had gone to other places instead of attending their own church that they promised at the altar to support with their presence every service possible. Yet they go where they can find a larger crowd, instead of coming to their own church and doing their bit to make their own church more interesting.

The children did their parts well considering the fact that we never did get them all together to practice. After the children were through with their part of the program, Bro. Lowdermilk gave us some very fine remarks. Mr. Ad Linville also gave us some encouraging words, which were very much appreciated.

We now have something over 100 on roll in Sunday school and the attendance is pretty good most every Sunday.

We didn't get to attend the meeting at the warehouse very much. Our church did not join in the meeting; not because we wanted to be contrary and not work with our pastor, but we din't feel that our community could get the good out of a meeting so far away, and our people are most all farmers and it wso such a busy time they didn't feel like they could work hard all day and then drive so far at night. However, we would like to have attended every service had it been so that we could. We are hoping to have a revival some time later.

Our third quarterly conference convened at the warehouse in Kernersville on Saturday before the fifth Sunday in August. Every church was represented. All the charge is somewhat behind with the budgets. There is quite a lot of work to be done if our pastor has a creditable report to take to Conference. Mr. Ad Linville is our delegate.

Best wishes to all. REPORTER.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.—Our special meeting began August 5 and closed the following Thursday night. Rev. Mr. Ridge did most of the preaching and he gave us good sermons. Our pastor, Rev. Joel Trogdon, is not very strong physically, but is strong in the spirit.

There were six conversion. Master Forrester Auman, Miss Louise Gilliam and Mr. J. F. Steed joined the church on profession of faith and Mrs. E. W. Auman from Denton M. P. church, and Mrs. L. A. King, from Star Methodist church. Others will join later. REPORTER.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—We held our Children's Day exercises the fith Sunday in July. The children rendered their parts well; the offering was good.

Our Sunday school is increasing in attendance and interest, we are pleased to say.

Our special meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in September. Rev. R. S. Troxler will assist. Pray for us that much good may be accomplished.

On the fourth Sunday in August at 11 o'clock Rev. R. S. Troxler will speak to us from the pulpit. We are always very proud to have our pastor with us. There will be dinner on the grounds at noon. At 2 o'clock, Superintendent Allman and a number of the children from the Children's Home will render a program. We are sure it will be very entertaining.

To Thy name, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, be all the praise.

(MISS) RUTH PAYNE.

Asheville.—Mrs. Mary Roberts, mother of Mayor Gallatin Roberts, passed away August 10. She was a member of Mt. Zion Methodist Protestant Church since her childhood, having joined 65 years ago. Surviving her are two sons, Mayor Roberts and Gwin W. Roberts, and the following brothers and sisters: the Rev. A. G. Buckner, of Clio, S. C.; Mrs. Rena Eller, of Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. Samuel A. Coe, of Baltimore; Mrs. W. H. White, 378 Haywood Road, West Asheville; Miss Jennie L. Buckner, of Asheville, and M. L. Buckner, of Cincinnati.

Services were held in the West Asheville Presbyterian church Saturday morning—the church of Mayor Roberts.

Mrs. Roberts' sister, Miss Jennie Buckner, is a faithful member of our church here. Another sister, Mrs. Sam Coe, of Maryland, has honored our church by her lifelong membership.

Rev. J. S. Williams assisted Pastor Gresham in the funeral services. There were many beautiful flowers. The church was filled with relatives and friends.

Every department of the city government was represented.

Pastor Paschall is now driving a new car, which will greatly aid him in his new field. His sermons and prayer meeting talks are already bearing fruit.

Two children of Bro. and Mrs. R. R. Ray recently joined our church here.

We are glad to have Miss Annie Lightbody in our services after an absence from the city.

Our Christian Endeavor Society gave a successful ice cream supper two weeks ago.

We are happy to report the continual improvement of Miss Novella McIntyre.

Bro. Walter Hardin and family are much missed since moving back to Julian, N. C. They were a great help to our church while here.

A group of men meet with Bro. Paschall every Saturday night for prayer on behalf of the church, especially for the Sunday services.

We were glad to have Mrs. Eula Miller Elliott and little daughter, of Detroit, in our services Sunday. REPORTER.

High Point.—A large and appreciative audience greeted the new pastor, Rev. Roy Irwin Farmer, on Sunday morning when he delivered his initial sermon at 11 o'clock after the preliminary exercises had been conducted by Rev. E. L. Ballard and following the rendition of an anthem, "The Lord Is My Strength," by the choir, and a beautiful solo, "Morning and Evening," by Clarence Schultheiss. Rev. Mr. Farmer chose as his subject, "The Master's Joy," and spoke from the text, John 15:11: "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." He said that the Bible is a book abounding in joy, beginning as it does with an account of the beautiful Garden of Eden, and closing with a description of the Holy City, the New Testament opening with that most blessed miracle, the birth of a young babe. The happiest and most joyful lives are those that are forgetful of self and devoted to service for others and for God. Serene, untroubled lives are less fruitful than those which are burdened with care, sorrow and hardship. For instance, the blind Fanny J. Crosby has left to the world the immortal hymns, "Rescue the Perishing, "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour," and others. Christians of all people have the greatest right to be happy and joyous, for they are children of a King, and heirs of eternal life. Rev. Mr. Farmer made a very favorable impression on his audience as a forceful speaker, earnest and zealous in the Master's service. He is well equipped for his work, having lately finished post graduate study in the Yale Divinity School at New Haven, Conn., and has served the church at Clinton, Conn., as pastor for two years. He will assume full charge of the pastorate here September 2nd, when a Home-coming day will be observed, and an effort will be made to have as many resident and out-oftown members present as possible, and especially the older people. The First Church has been without a regular senior pastor for nearly two years, and the membership will extend a double welcome to him and his accomplished wife, and bespeak for him our heartiest co-operation and support. We feel that he will measure up to the standard of other ministers of High Point, and compare favorably with the best of them. He will have a great field of usefulness here, and an abundant opportunity for large service awaits him in our city, which Dr. Broomfield calls "The New Hub of Methodist Protestantism."

The C. E. Society will hold its weekly meeting on Monday evening and Mr. Richard H. Shaw will lead the discussion of the topic, "True and False Standards of Success."

The Sabbath School will hold its regular annual picnic and outing at Ritter's Lake, south of Greensboro, on Thursday, August 23. The children and young people are looking forward eagerly to an enjoyable occasion.

We are greatly pleased to announce that Miss Annie Robbins, who underwent an operation for appendicitis two weeks ago at Guilford General Hospital, is improving nicely, and will be able to be moved to her home this week.

Mrs. W. M. Marr and two children, Weaver, Jr., and Peggy, of Jacksonville, Fla., have been guests of friends here for a few days returning to Reidsville last Friday with her brother, Robert A. Brown. She is very pleasantly remembered here as Miss Helen Brown.

Prof. L. R. Johnston, principal of High Point High School, is teaching in the summer school of Duke University, Durham. Prof. J. Hobart Allred of the college faculty is doing some research work in Spanish at the University of North Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Gray are having improvements made on their residence on Lindsay street.

The Ladies' Aid Society is serving lunch to the Civitan Club every Tuesday during the month of August.

Mrs. Nat Alexander and two children, of Charlotte, were guests last week of her sister, Mrs. June A. Gray.

While in the city, Rev. R. I. Farmer was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny, and others. He will leave this (Tuesday) evening for Ohio, where he and family are spending their vacation with his father.

Enfield.—Rev. J. Clyde Auman gave us two good sermons Sunday and he had a very large attendance at each service. The audience was favored with a solo by Mrs. Cecille Matthews at the morning service and one by Mrs. Charles Miller at the evening service.

Our Sunday school is holding up fairly well; attendance fell off some during the hot weather and vacations of some affected the attendance. Our school will hold its annual summer picnic Thursday after the third Sunday in this month.

Mr. Eli Bellamy and the writer of this letter were on a camping trip through the mountains of Virginia and North Carolina recently. On our way back to Enfield we came through Graham and stopped by to see Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Williams for a little while. We were glad to find both so well and happy. They have a host of friends in and around Enfield. I don't think they have forgotten a person, not even a child, during the four or five years they have been away. They enquired about everybody from our pastor on down to boys like Harrison Petty and Tom Porter Powers.

Mrs. R. C. Rives has been sick for a few days; we missed her from church and Sunday school Sunday, and hope she will soon be out again.

The Senior C. E. will be in iharge of Miss Mae Bellamy Wednesday evening. Next Sunday evening Miss Frances Ernest, of Lynchburg, Va., will be the leader for the Intermediate C. E. Miss Ernest is visiting Mrs. Charles Neal. We have enjoyed having her in our C. E.

Best wishes to every reader.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

McPherson

John D. McPherson was born May 18, 1847, and died July 30, 1928. Sixty years ago he was united in marriage to Sarah Jane Dixon, to whom were born the following children: Albert Lacy McPherson, Robert Lee McPherson, Mrs. Mary Jane Foust, Caleb McPherson, Adolphus McPherson, Mrs. Martha Ann Kimry, Samuel McPherson, Miss Lilly McPherson, and William Lawrence McPherson. All survive except Robert Lee McPherson, who died when about 14 years of age. There are 36 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. His wife had preceded him in death.

He had been a very earnest, active man. More than half a century ago he became a pioneer in progressive farming in South Alamance. His fine success attests his energy, good management and wisdom. He was highly esteemed by his neighbors and many friends. In early life he became a member of Bethel church, of which he remained a consistent and useful member till death.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. A. Burgess, in Cane Creek Friends' church, and his body laid to rest beside that of his wife in the church cemetery.

G. W. HOLMES.

Huffines

Gilmer William Huffines died July 20, 1928, and was 26 years, six months and 19 days old. The death of Bro. Huffines was extremely shocking and unusual, being caused by the overturning of a tractor which he was driving on Highway No. 70 between Brown Summit and Reidsville, N. C. He was married to Fannie Mae Howerton January 26, 1924. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Huffines was blessed with two sweet children, who survive their deceased father. Besides his wife and two children there are two surviving sisters and four brothers. The sisters are Mrs. E. N. Loverin, of Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. D. R. Crowder, of near Reidsville, N. C. The brothers are C. W. Huffines, of Guilford College, N. C.; J. H. Huffines, of Richmond, Va.; S. B. and D. H. Huffines, of the Reidsville vicinity. These with many other relatives and a host of friends are sad because of the untimely going of one much loved.

In the industrial life Bro. Huffines was energetic and conducted his affairs with success and wisdom. He was mindful of his home to make it happy and to give every possible comfort to his beloved family. He was a very prosperous and successful farmer.

As a very young man Bro. Huffines accepted Christ as his Savior and joined Mizpah Methodist Protestant church. As a church worker he was very much appreciated by the church of which he was a part. For a number of years he was a member of the official board of his church, serving as steward, treasurer and a member of the board of parsonage trustees. In these capacities of church work he served with efficiency and will be greatly missed by his brethren.

The funeral was conducted in Mizpah Methodist Protestant church on Sunday afternoon, July 22, by Rev. W. D. Reed, Rev. J. D. Williams and the pastor. The attendance was possibly the largest that ever attended Mizpah church on any occasion. After the funeral the body was laid to rest in the church cemetery beside the graves of his parents, who had passed into the beyond a few years before. The grave was covered with a large number of beautiful floral contributions, which were tributes of love and respect of the many friends and loved ones.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Trollinger

Miss Sallie Trollinger, a member of the First Methodist Protestant church of Burlington, died Sunday, August 5th, at her home near Carolina. She is survived by one brother and four sisters. For several months she had been confined to her bed. She was a sweet-spirited, patient, Christian young woman. She had thought for some time that she could not get well, and had made plans for her funeral service, selecting her undertaker, preachers, pallbearers, and flower girls. Surely she met death bravely and calmly as only one with faith and trust could meet death.

The funeral service was conducted Monday afternoon at the Providence Presbyterian church in Graham. The pastor was assisted by President S. W. Taylor as per her request. The many beautiful floral designs and the large audience present were evidences of the high esteem in which she was held by those who knew her.

The brother, the sisters, and other relatives and friends are saddened by the passing this loved one and yet they have great comfort in the fact that she died in the faith and that all is well with her now. May the Lord graciously look upon the bereaved ones and grant them His grace for this time of extreme need.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Mitchel

In the midst of life we are in death. Joseph John Mitchel had not been in the best of health for some time, but on the evening of July 21 he retired feeling as well as usual, but the next morning he was found cold in death. He was born April 11, 1852, and was 76 years, three months and 11 days old when he died. In 1887 he was married to Miss Jennie Bevil. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchel were the parents of eight children, two of which died in early childhood, while six, four daughters and two sons, survive. The daughters are Miss Annie and Miss Nannie and Mrs. T. J. Rumley, of the Brown Summit vicinity, and Mrs. R. B. Tysinger, of Greensboro, N. C. The sons are Joseph Mitchel, of Hamlet, N. C., and Spencer Mitchel, of near Brown Summit. The surviving wife and children are joined by a large number of other relatives and a host of friends who are mourning because of the loss of one much beloved.

For a number of years Bro. Mitchel was engaged in the mercantile business in Brown Summit, but since this business engagement he has lived on his farm in the nearby vicinity.

About 20 years ago Bro. Mitchel became a Christian and joined Fair Grove Methodist Protestant church, where he remained a member until his death. Because of declining health in recent years he was not permitted to be as attentive to his church duties as he could otherwise have been. His last attendance at church was during the Fair Grove revival. While for some time he had been in declining health, no one expected the end to come so soon or so suddenly. While Bro. Mitchel was called suddenly, death did not overtake him unawares. He was expecting it to come and he had expressed himself as being ready.

The funeral was conducted in Fair Grove church on July 23 by Rev. W. F. Ashburn and the pastor, in the presence of a large audience of friends and loved ones. After the funeral the body was laid to rest in the church cemetery, the newly-made grave being covered with the many beautiful floral contributions of those who loved the deceased.

"I would not live always; I would not ask to stay
Where storm after storm rises dork o'er the way;
The few lurid mornings that dawn on us here
Are enough of life's woes, full enough for its cheer."

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor

Jobe

Hazel Brooks Jobe, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Jobe, of Burlington, died August 10, 1928. She had been ill only a few days, having been carried to the Rainey Hospital for an operation some 10 days or so before her death.

Hazel was a sweet, lovable little girl, having endeared herself not only to her father and mother and little brothers, but to all who knew her.

The funeral service was conducted in the Mebane Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon by Mr. Jobe's pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, assisted by Dr. Buck, pastor of Burlington First Baptist church, and Rev. Mr. Ronck, pastor of the Piedmont Presbyterian church of Burlington. The little body was laid to rest in the Oakland cemetery at Mebane. A great throng of people, more than the church would hold, was present to pay their tribute of respect and to sympathize with the broken hearted parents.

The prayers and sympathies of many go out to Bro. and Sister Jobe in this trying time. Two more of their children, a boy of 12 and one of seven years, have been operated upon, one in the Rainey Hospital and the other in a hospital in Durham. Both were improving when last heard from.

May God richly bless and comfort the family in this time of sore affliction. We are so glad that His grace is sufficient, even for a time like this.

L. W. GERRINGER.

—Recently a lawyer unused to the practices of the United States Supreme Court addressed the dignified judges as "gentlemen," instead of saying "your honors." He immediately apologized. "Don't apologize for calling us gentlemen," chuckled Chief Justice Taft. "That's what we try to be."—Capper's Weekly.

—Mrs. Rev. C. W. Bates went to Love's Grove, near Concord, last Sunday and delivered an address. Rev. J. W. Hulin is the pastor.

Our financial report had to go over last week owing to our absence from home. We are giving in this report the receipts for two weeks. Two outstanding items appear in the report. They are the payments from Concord and Asheville. The former sends in $98.60 on G. C. B., and the latter $45 in full for college assessment. We are glad to list Asheville with the "Paid in Full." The next largest amount is that of Guilford charge—$24.15 on G. C. B. Only three charges—Orange, Granville and Union Grove —remit on the A. C. B., totaling $35.50. The receipts on this budget are falling far short of running expenses, explained, probably, by the fact that this is vacation period, during which time all church activities run low. But please, brethren, do not let this period be too long protracted.

We, of course, have been concerned about these budgets all the year, but of necessity our attention has been divided between them and other financial programs. Now they must have right of way. Just two and one-half months, and we are at conference. What we do must be done quickly. And brethren, I plead with you that these budgets be not permitted to suffer. This will happen if we put off too long our efforts to collect them. From now until the close of this conference year let us all work and pray with unflagging zeal that the financial needs of the church may be met with every possible dollar.

And please, brethren, do not hold back your collections, but let them come in promptly. This will make them available for immediate use, and will also keep us informed on what is being raised.

With assurances of grateful appreciation for all of your faithfulness along every line of conference work, and with earnest prayers for the rich blessings of God upon every pastor and every charge, I am,

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

DEY'S A LI'L SIX FEET OF GROUN'

(From "High Adventure: Life of Lucy Rider Meyer," by Isabelle Horton, published by The Methodist Book Concern.)

Dey's a li'l six feet of groun' somewhere,
A li'l six feet of groun',
An' dey 'xpects to bury me dere some day,
Wid de mou'ners mou'nin' 'roun'.
But dey can't bury me in de groun', my Lord,
Dey can't bury me.
I'll be up among de stars wid de angels flyin' 'roun',
An' dey can't cotch me to bury me!

Dey's a li'l ole bell dey'll toll, some day—
Don't ye hear dat doleful soun'?—
W'en dey tries to bury me deep, dat day,
Wid de mou'ners mou'nin' 'roun'.
But dey can't bury me in de groun', my Lord,
Dey can't bury me,
For de heab'm bells'll ring, an' de angels'll sing,
An' dey can't cotch me to bury me!

Dey's some ole black clo'es dey'll wear dat day,
Some ole black clo'es dey foun',
An' dey'll wail an' weep, an' de watch dey'll keep,
Wid de mou'ners mou'nin' 'roun'.
But dey can't bury me in de groun', my Lord,
Dey can't bury me,
Got de golden shoes an' de big white wings,
An' dey can't cotch me to bury me!

We have also received 70 bushels of peaches this week, 35 bushels donated by Mr. George R. Ross, of West End, N. C., and 35 bushels by the Kiwanis Club of Aberdeen, N. C.

We are sincerely grateful for all this help.

DISILLUSIONMENT

(Poem for Recitation)

The wind sounds strangely weird today,
It titillates my ears,
And brings to recollection clear
Scenes of bygone years.

It whispers, wines and whistles shrill,
And comes and goes in moans;
I stop to listen to its voice
Of multifarious tones.

The pictures it recalls to mind
Are sombre, dull and gray,
Suggestive of tempestuous night
And shivering winter day;

Of swaying trees and storm-tossed craft,
And birds in headlong flight;
Of trembling witches in Macbeth,
And windy tombs at night.

It dies away, stops, starts again,
Nearer and nearer comes;
The noise grows even louder still,
Like a thousand beating drums.

But now my dream is quite dispelled,
As sense of sound grows keener;
'Tis not the weird and wizard wind,
It's Mary's vacuum cleaner!

—Brother Abraham Pressley Brower, aged eighty, died at his home near Liberty last Sunday. The funeral was on Tuesday, conducted by Dr. A. G. Dixon, assisted by Bros. Millaway, Ashburn, and A. O. Lindley. A large number of relatives and friends were in attendance. Brother Brower was a valuable member of our church, and his going will make an appreciable difference.

—We have received a circular letter charging that a committee of the United States Congress has refused to give a hearing to complainants against the practice of vivisection. It charges that many dogs are cut to pieces alive in the professed interest of science, and asserts that no good has yet come to medical science from this practice. The matter will again be brought to the attention of Congress in the hope of preventing needless suffering on the part of helpless animals.

—The southwest has harvested a tremendous wheat crop—and at less cost than ever before. This season more than 19,000 harvester—thresher "combines"—have been used in one state, Kansas, and it is estimated that 60 per cent of the entire crop will be handled that way. Given good weather conditions, the "combine" will harvest and thresh for as little as three cents a bushel whereas the use of the old binders and threshing machines ran as high as 25 cents. The reduction in labor costs is, therefore, an important factor.

—Despite depredations by bean beetles, the ordinary farm garden is still the best paying piece of land on the place.

—The Archbishop of York, Rev. Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, will succeed Rev. Dr. Randall Thomas Davidson as archbishop of Canterbury and primate of all England.

—The condition of Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell, who was brutally assaulted by thieves a few weeks ago, and has since been a patient in Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, shows some improvement, although ultimate recovery is not assured. At latest reports the broken bones were knitting and he was resting fairly comfortably.

Emotional Aspects of God

Emotional people are a distinguishable class. They serve to bring out into relief the emotional side of man's nature. Man is not a constant factor as gravity and some other forces seem to be, but he acts on impulse, and his impulses come from his emotions, which vary from time to time. If a man's emotions are easily excited and respond to excitement with great strength, we say he is of an emotional temperament.

Is there anything in the Divine Nature that corresponds to the emotional nature in man? Are we in respect to our emotions made in the image of God?

The question may be too deep for our theology, but it may be an interesting subject of speculation.

The play of emotions in us seems to be the result of interaction with our environment. Our environment is ever changing and consequently there is corresponding change or tendency to change in us. We find in ourselves the power to respond in different ways to the incitements of environment. We can say yes and we can say no. Our emotions do not act with the invariability of gravitation. In other words, there is a power in us higher than our emotions, a power that can restrain and direct our emotions. Our emotions are a reservoir of power ready for action when action is appropriate. In the well regulated life they are kept subject to reason. But they act with certainty and vigor when occasion comes.

There is this great and essential difference between God and men. Men are taken by surprise, they are suddenly confronted by an unexpected situation demanding immediate action. God is never surprised, He knows what to expect, and He is always prepared for what takes place. Human emotion is like the lightning flash or the thunderbolt. God's feeling manifests itself more after the fashion of the evershining sun. It must be true that God feels as well as thinks and wills. He feels the noblest emotions. John said of him, He is love. What higher emotion can there be than love? God is moved with compassion. He feels pity. He also feels indignation toward sin. According to scriptural representation, God has emotions corresponding to our own. He that formed the eye, shall He not see? He that formed the heart, shall He not feel? The great difference between us and God is that our emotions are prone to error but God's never. His emotional responses are both sure and fitting.

What Is Success?

Success is a personal achievement. No one can inherit success. No one can come upon success by accident. Success means going through with, implying, purpose, method, and effort adapted to reach the end in view. A man may aim to become a scholar, and may study persistently and wisely until he has become a scholar. If so, he has succeeded. A man may aim to be rich and may scheme and toil and save for years until he has become rich. He has succeeded. A rich man may aim to give away all his wealth before he dies, as Andrew Carnegie is said to have done. If he dies poor, he has succeeded.

The quality and degree of a man's success depends upon the quality of his aim and the wisdom and persistence of his efforts. There are therefore various kinds and degrees of success. What one man esteems a great and worthy success another man would consider not worth while. No successes are cheap in expenditure of effort, but many successes are not worth what they cost. What a disappointment does a man experience when he devotes his life to gaining some species of success and then wakes up to the realization that what he has gained is not only not worth the effort, but—sadder still—it has taken away his time and opportunity to achieve some worthy success.

A success that fails to achieve the main purpose of life is evidently an unworthy one. What is the main purpose of life? Here we are liable to make a fatal mistake. Some would say that the main purpose in life is a man's strongest purpose, the purpose that appeals to him most powerfully and dictates to him his course of procedure. This would make a man's purpose justify itself by its strength. It would relieve a man from choosing his own purpose and leave him free to apply all his energies to working out the means to gratify the strongest impulse of his being, his master passion. But this cannot be accepted as a true definition of the main purpose of life. Man has a social setting, he has a necessary relation to other men, and above this, a relation to God, his Maker. Man is not free to ignore God and his fellowmen in choosing his course in life. No course can be considered high and worthy that dishonors God and works injury to fellowmen. Evidently the highest and most worthy course is that which most honors God and most helps fellowmen. How can one find this course? How can one be sure that he has found it? That is a great and vital question. Anxiety about the matter may become great enough to drive one distracted. How are we to find the way in the maze of this complex life? We couldn't find it and be sure that we had found it but by the guidance of the Holy Spirit of God promised by Christ. The highest success, the only true success, is achieved by following the divine leading, doing the things given to us from above. The soul that does this has peace and joy and assurance, a constant reward.

AN APPEAL TO FRIENDS OF OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Article Nine of the Fourth Section of the Constitution of the state of New York reads as follows: "Neither the state nor any subdivision thereof shall use its property or credit or any public money, or authorize or permit to be used, directly or indirectly, in aid or maintenance, other than for examination or inspection, of any school or institution of learning wholly or in part under the control or direction of any religious denomination, or in which any denominational tenet or doctrine is taught."

In the New York Constitutional Convention, June, 1915, Gov. Smith (then a member of N. Y. Assembly) introduced a resolution for the abolition of the above article, which would have opened the door for the division of public school funds among different religious denominations, which in the end would have destroyed the American public school system in that state. Such a division has long been advocated by Catholic ecclesiastics. When I was chaplain of the state senate of Montana (1893), Senator Powers (at the request of the bishop) introduced a bill to that effect. Gov. Smith, in presenting the above resolution, as the history of the convention clearly shows, was acting as the representative and agent of the archbishop of New York City.

The Catholic Hierarchy in America, bitterly and continuously, oppose and denounce our public schools. The following (from the Catholic World, November, 1886), is one of their mildest statements: "The infidelity, communism, and socialism of the age; lack of reverence for all that has been considered sacred; the immorality of society that might shame a Sodom and Gomorrah—these are the fruits of secular education"—as given in the public schools.

This is not an extreme or exceptional statement. Bishops are constantly issuing pastoral letters to their flocks in which terms are used far more virulent than the above language. If one wishes fully to understand the situation, he may consult the standard work on this subject—Jenkins' Christian vs. Godless Schools—authorized by Cardinal Gibbons, then the head of the Catholic Hierarchy in America.

Some Protestants and all Catholics charge that all persons who oppose Gov. Smith for president, because a Catholic, are supreme bigots. They indignantly exclaim: "Just as unreasonable and un-American as to refuse to vote for a man for president because he is a Baptist, a Lutheran or a Quaker."

But the cases are radically unlike. Those who make this statement are so color blind on the subject of tolerance that they cannot see a distinction as great as that between day and night. Many persons oppose Gov. Smith, not on account of his Catholic religion, but on account of what stands behind him: his ecclesiastical entanglements. And their fears are warranted by the history of the Papal policies in all ages and in all lands where the Roman Church has had or now possesses adequate power to enforce its authority.

I oppose Gov. Smith for president, not because I am an enemy of the Catholic Church, but because the rulers of his church are enemies of our public schools; and he has never lifted his voice in condemnation of these bitter and baseless attacks. My opposition is not intolerance. It is my patriotic duty as a friend of our schools. This is not a religious question but a problem in loyalty to a fundamental American institution. The language of the great Jefferson on toleration has no application here, as Senator Robinson recently contended at the Houston convention. If living, he would be the first to resent this abuse of our secular schools as immoral and irreligious.

In his reply to Mr. Charles C. Marshall (Atlantic Monthly, May, 1927), Gov. Smith affirmed his loyalty to the public schools as "one of the corner stones of American liberty." But under the circumstances, this statement is inadequate. It does not touch the point at issue. How a "corner stone," if "un-Christian and godless" as his religious leaders assert? If a true friend, why so long silent in the face of priestly abuse? We have the right to demand: When your church authorities condemn our educational system as the cause of vice and crime, do you approve or do you not? Silence in the presence of such persistent and wholesale denunciation by your ecclesiastical superiors is not consistent with loyalty to this essential institution of our American civilization.

I oppose Gov. Smith, not because I fear that, if elected, he would materially injure our American system of education, but because he does not repudiate the slanders heaped upon it by the priests and bishops of his church.

If the Board of Bishops of the Episcopal Church indulged in similar language, I should vote against an Episcopal candidate for the presidency, unless he publicly condemned such statements. My motive in doing so would not be intolerance but patriotism. And let me earnestly ask here: Is it just or manly for friends of the public schools to remain silent in face of this abuse of institutions which they support by their taxes and which they cherish as helpers of their children? To remain silent in the presence of wrong-doing is to do wrong. We do our schools wrong when we ignore the abuse unjustly heaped upon them. The quickest way for Catholics to lessen what they call Protestant intolerance is for them to cease their attacks on our public schools.

If the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church denounced our schools as the chief cause of the vice and crime in our land, what a storm of protest would break upon their heads! And nobody would call that protest intolerance. Have we not a right as American citizens—nay, is it not our solemn duty—to demand of a candidate for the highest office in our nation what his attitude is toward these false and bitter attacks made by his ecclesiastical superiors, whom he is under obligation as a Catholic to obey?

The personal qualities of Gov. Smith do not count in this contest any more than the personality of Senator Douglas in the election of 1860. What stood behind Douglas was the negro. American citizens had then to decide by their ballots the momentous question: Is the negro a human being or a mere animal?

What stands behind Gov. Smith in the present contest is the public school and behind it the Catholic Hierarchy with an uplifted hand ready to smite it, as their words in numberless pastoral letters have bitterly smitten it for generations. This charge is not a Protestant falsehood, and it is not born of religious intolerance. It is made, not in anger, but in sorrow. He who runs may read the warrant for it in thousands of pages of literature authorized by Catholic prelates.

Therefore, I shall not vote for Gov. Smith, because I must put into my ballot, not only my loyalty to our public schools, but also my condemnation of their enemies. While he himself has not uttered these slanders, they are broadcast by his ecclesiastical superiors, and until he repudiates them he is particeps criminis. But my opposition does not mean hatred of the Roman Church, nor does it express bigotry toward Catholics. All this talk of Protestant intolerance in this connection is absurd. My action is simply loyalty to our American system of education which is an essential element in all true citizenship. My vote must be a counterthrust against every one who condemns this system as un-Christian and godless; and also, against candidates who let such charges go unrebuked.

It is asserted: "A Catholic shall not be kept out of office because he is a Catholic." An excellent statement so far as it goes. But it does not apply to the situation before us. We do not seek to keep a man out of office simply because of his Catholic faith. What lies outside his religious belief creates our opposition. When he leaves the realm of religion, and, entering the field of civic affairs, condemns and abuses our schools, then we enter our protest. Our criticism is not intolerance, but patriotism, being directed, not against his religion but his citizenship. Abuse of our schools is not an inherent element of Catholic faith, and when we resent such abuse, we do not thereby interfere with any man's religion. We only condemn his defective patriotism.

If a Jewish rabbi used similar language about our schools and his leading layman made no protest, should they oppose him when seeking election to the school board? This opposition wuold not be bigotry toward Judaism. It would simply mean that they considered this Jew deficient in loyalty to things American. And so it is with our opposition to Gov. Smith.

The priest may charge me with disgraceful bigotry. In reply, but without bitterness, I charge him with inadequate patriotism—at least in his attitude toward our public schools. American patriotism implies loyalty to them. They are the only schools that our secular state can provide. Therefore, all persons unfriendly to them lack an essential element of true Americanism.

In these strange days, when the opponents of Gov. Smith are accused of trying to rekindle the fires of the Inquisition (who put those fires out?), it is well to remember that there is a civic intolerance as hateful and as destructive of human welfare as any bigotry that ever cursed the realm of religion. Prejudice against a neighbor simply because he is a Catholic is, indeed, hateful.

But hatred of our public schools, condemnation of them as un-Christian and godless, and misrepresentation of them as productive of vice and crime—all this is a form of political intolerance, which limits patriotism and seriously injures the American commonwealth.

To insist that members of any church, who enjoy American citizenship, have no right to take such an attitude is the duty of every loyal American. To demand that any candidate for the presidency whose church officials use such language be called upon to repudiate these criticisms, that represent a form of hostile intolerance toward things essentially American, is also the duty of all loyal Americans.

Supreme loyalty to our nation means devotion to the basic institutions of our civilization. Opposition to all those who condemn any of these fundamental institutions, or by silence condone such attacks, especially if a candidate for high office, is not intolerance but patriotism. The worst form of bigotry is chargeable to those who are intolerant toward the essential principles of the American state.—J. H. Crooker.

A VOICE FROM THE PHILIPPINES

Since the establishment of this country the prevailing sentiment, or at least the majority view, has been that religious or fraternal organizations should not attempt to sway their adherents in matters of the state. That individuals should form their own opinions in governmental affairs, choose their own leaders in administrative affairs of the state without undue persuasion on the part of any one, has been one of the landmarks of a country settled largely by those who sought its shores to find such freedom.

When cretain whispered rumors have been heard of a church that was seeking to put its members in strategic positions that it might attain power in civil affairs by its dominance over them; of a religion that taught union of the Church and State through its servants and was ever seeking to increase its power in the United States, the whisperers have been laughed at, called fanatical, over suspicious and narrow.

Yet certain actions on the part of this church have been hard to overlook, even though the thought of the religious question being raised in politics is abhorrent and against the fundamentals of Americanism. Even though there is an inherent desire to shrink from and avoid facing such an issue, it is no doubt better to stamp it out in its infancy.

An occurrence, happening recently in the Philippine Islands, brings the issue close to home. Despite the Roman Catholic Church's many and vociferous denials that it makes any attempt to interfere with politics, it seems that such an attempt has been brought to light in one of the territories under the jurisdiction of the United States. The Manila Tribune carried the following article recently:

"All the parochial churches, Catholic organizations and prominent Catholic politicians in the Philippines have received circulars from the Archbishop of Manila instructing them to work for the victory of all pro-Catholic candidates, it was learned yesterday from one of the high government officials.

"Those who have reecived the circulars would not divulge their full contents, but it is believed that they contain the lists of the candidates that are to be supported and a litany of accusations against other religious sects and anti-Catholic associations."

The editor of the Manila Times comments as follows:

"For the Catholics to deny that their church, as an organization, does not favor and cannot support the candidacy of any one in the coming elections, only opposes the truth to the evident machinations of certain elements to bring the power of the church into play in affairs of the exclusive jurisdiction of the state.

"The Filipinos will rue the day they tolerate any church or sect, as an institution, actively to engage in politics, so that in temporal matters the spiritual forces in the land will have, if not a decisive influence, at least a voice. They cannot envision a future of these islands free from that which leads to deeper antagonism, idle recriminations, if religious bodies are permitted to take on political color and to win ascendency in the government of the country."

The editor said further that the fact that under American rule the Filipinos had learned to eschew religious intervention in politics was one of the greatest gifts from this country.

Will the time come when America is no longer able to set this example, but struggles itself in the net of which it has taught others to beware?—Scottish Rite News Bureau.

HOW SHALL WE VOTE IN 1928

Everybody except a few politicians agrees that the outstanding issue of the present presidential campaign is prohibition. The issue has been forced upon us by those who bitterly oppose and have opposed it. The vote cast this year will have tremendous bearing upon what we can do henceforward to make and keep this nation sober. If this is not a moral issue, and recognized by Christian people as such, then we have lost the ability to recognize a moral issue when we see it.

Both the leading political parties have yielded to the universal demands of the people, and have inserted a plank in their platforms pledging themselves to a faithful and vigorous enforcement of the law as it now stands. And if this were all, we might be content and go on with our usual political alignment, assured that whoever was elected the law would be enforced.

But this is not all, for the candidates on the platform differ widely, and have expressed themselves unambiguously. One of them avows his sympathy with the law, declaring it "a noble experiment." The other says, "It is well known that I believe that there should be fundamental changes in the present provisions."

What sort of "fundamental changes" this candidate desires is also well known by what he has done while governor of a great state. Although he had sworn to support and defend the Constitution of the United States, he signed a bill to repeal the act supporting and enforcing one of the provisions of that Constitution in his state. If elected president there is no reason to think that his oath to support and defend the Constitution in that office would prevent him from doing the same thing if he gets the chance. If his counsels should fail to induce Congress to pass such a bill for him to sign, we know, for he has said so, that he will bring all possible pressure to bear to so change the law as to permit the sale of light wines and beer, which he calls "sane and sensible."

Now the question for us to answer is this: Why should those who believe in prohibition elect a man as president who does not believe in it? Why should we who do not want the law fundamentally changed elect a man who "is well known" to want it changed? And why should we choose a man to enforce the law whose principal interest in it is not to get it enforced, but to get it changed?

A prominent politician who has hitherto been reckoned in favor of prohibition advises us to elect this candidate and then fight him in Congress. But what sort of tomfool strategy is this which would first admit an enemy into our besieged city and then fight him after we let hi min? No. We refuse to stultify ourselves at the demand of an unintelligent and hidebound partisanship. Let all our conferences and our ministers and editors, who have again and again declared in solemn resolutions that we stand by the Constitution we helped to make, and that the law enforcing this provision of it must be enforced, say it again, and say it with ballot, so that no political party will ever again dare to assume that we only believe in prohibition when our political party nominates a candidate who believes in it.—Rev. T. H. Lewis, D.D.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITY

By Rev. James C. Baker, D.D.

(Reviewed by Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, Litt.D.)

For twenty-one years Dr. Baker has been the leader of the Wesley Foundation at the University of Illinois, and minister of Trinity Methodist Church in Urbana, a city of ten thousand students. His anniversary was recently celebrated with appropriate exercises, evoking tributes from religious leaders all over the nation. No man in America has had richer or more varied contacts with student life, and the sermon here reviewed, preached on the occasion of the installation of the Student Council, gives the results of his ripe experience.

"In the last thirty-five years," Dr. Baker tells us, "the actual registration in our colleges and universities has increased six times as rapidly as our population, and the curve still moves upward. At the same time there is a growing conviction among educators that the results in the life of the student—the goal of the whole process of modern education—are decidedly unsatisfactory, because the vital spiritual element is lacking. Unless our wealth of knowledge takes on spiritual meaning, and finds a spiritual use, it will not only defeat itself, but may become a menace."

"Three things are needed," as Dr. Baker sees the situation, "and the first is a competent intellectual interpretation of religion. This does not mean that the student asks the church for philosophy, science, or sociology, but he does want his religion related to other human interests. He wants his religious teacher to be adequately trained in the thought of our day and able to speak of eternal things in the terms of our time, not in any outworn vocabulary of the past. The finest minds of the church are needed in the universities."

"The second great demand," Dr. Baker continues, "is for a convincing Christian ethic, required by the devastating confusion in the minds of the present generation concerning the meaning, art and conduct of life. Today, as of old, the church is faced by a pagan theory of life, which leaves mankind to wallow in the formless, unchannelled bog of instinct and passion. The older generation cannot hand over ready-made its standards, customs and beliefs. These may be offered as a suggestion, but they will not be repeated by rote. A new morality is needed, or at least an ancient moral life must be interpreted anew, illuminated, not by authority, but by insight."

"The third requirement," Dr. Baker does not forget, "is for an interpretation of the social meanings of religion. What does religion mean in practical life? Does it make a vital difference in the relations of men to one another? Or is our religion a make-believe? Shall society be based upon service or profit? Do we intend to end war? Do we really believe in the brotherhood of men and races? These are the questions youth is asking, getting to the root of our discontents."

"They err," Dr. Baker tells us plainly, "who regard the questionings of youth as mere juvenile squeaks, and the firing-squad type of mind, which would suppress free thought, is hopeless. It betrays its own past and darkens the sunrise in the soul of youth. Education is intended to teach youth how to think, not what to think. The church must claim and keep its freedom, if it expects to have leadership among students. To me the most hopeful fact is that thoughtful students, to a greater degree than ever in my knowledge, are seeking the vital experience of religion; and that is the path of light."—McCall's Magazine.

THE JAPAN MISSION READY FOR HEARTY CO-OPERATION

The following report was submitted by the Executive Committee of the Japan Mission and unanimously adopted at its meeting on July 3, 1928:

We, the Executive Committee of the Japan Mission, have received word of the recent actions of the General Conference, and at this our first meeting since that time wish to assure you that you may count on your Japan Mission to co-operate to the fullest possible extent to bring about a true union. For the past four years under the administration of the Union Board of Foreign Missions we believe that the Japan Mission has really functioned as a union mission. We are eagerly awaiting the board's official letter, and hope that it will give us definite instructions as to how the union affects the work of our mission. We infer that there is to be only one budget, but are awaiting definite instructions.

We are praying that the Holy Spirit may mould us into one body—a true union—that we may more effectively do our part in ministering to the spiritual needs of Japan and the world.

Paul F. Warner,
Evelyn M. Wolfe,
Committee.

On motion the action of the last executive committee meeting concerning designated funds and their relation to the local church budget was reconsidered and the following policy was adopted:

1. All money raised by women for work under the direction and control of the Board of Missions shall be credited on the local church assessments for General Conference benevolences.

2. All designated funds shall be used as directed by the original donors.

3. Special funds raised by the women for misisonary purposes, and special gifts for enterprises which are not a part of the regular work of the Board of Missions nor under its direction, such as enterprises of local branches over which the Board of Missions has no control, cannot be used as a credit on the local church assessments for General Conference benevolences.

The meeting adjourned to meet in Baltimore September 20, 1928.

"THE JOB IS TOO LITTLE"

A committee representing the Standard Oil Company had an all-night session. The main task was to secure a manager for a new division of operation which the company hoped to open in China. The chairman insisted that the manager must have four qualifications: he must be under thirty years old; he must be thoroughly trained; he must have proved generalship; he must be able to speak the Chinese language. Many good men had been considered; but each was found to be lacking.

It appeared that the meeting would fail of its object. But finally a young man arose, addressed the chairman, and declared that he knew one man who could meet all the requirements. He added that the man was at that time in China, living in the very city where the company was planning to establish headquarters. He was twenty-eight years old; had degrees from three colleges, had three years' study and practice in the Chinese language; and had the full confidence of the Chinese people, among whom he was widely known. Moreover he had been valedictorian of his class in college and was a natural leader.

Someone asked how much salary this young man was getting, and his friend startled the committee by answering, "Six hundred dollars a year."

The chairman said, "There is something wrong."

The young man's friend replied: "I know there is. But the wrong is not with my friend; it is with the system that employs him. He works for a mission board."

After thorough questioning regarding the missionary, the chairman said to the committeeman, "You go to China and offer him the place." The committeeman was to offer ten thousand dollars a year. If that failed to secure him, he was to offer twelve thousand or even fifteen thousand.

The young agent crossed the ocean and half of China, found his friend, and offered him the situation at ten thousand a year. The young misisonary declined. The offer was raised to twelve thousand, then to fifteen, but was rejected.

Finally the agent asked, "What will you take?"

The missionary replied: "It is not a question of salary. The salary is magnificent. The trouble is not with the salary; it is with the job. The job is too little. You offer me a big salary but a small job. I get a small salary, but I have a big job; and I would rather have a big job with a small salary than a small job with a big salary. I thank you for the confidence expressed in your offer; but I feel that I should be a fool to quit winning souls to sell oil."—W. B. Phipps in "Wings."

New Peace Pact

Beginning with a proposal of Briand, French statesman, Secretary Kellogg of the United States has succeeded in securing the signatures of fifteen nations to an agreement to renounce war as an instrument of national progress. It is hoped that all civilized nations will come into the agreement, and that thus war will be rendered far less probable. Each nation that signs the agreement is of course bound in honor to keep it, in addition to the constant obligation all nations are under to treat others with fairness.

Only time can tell how much this treaty is worth. Already differences have arisen as to the meaning and application of the treaty. Europeans, it is said, understood that by the pact the United States has bound itself to go to war against any nation breaking the agreement, while Mr. Kellogg asserts that such is not the case.

THE BOOK THAT TELLS THE TRUTH

One of the distinctive characteristics of the Bible is that it never appeals to man's pride. Most other books do. They glorify man and his achievements. Histories tell what this or that great character has done, or what a nation has done through the leadership of capable men. Biographies make out a convincing case for notable personages. When we come to the Bible, full of biography and history, the case is different. Its greatest human characters, as a rule, are men of such glaring weakness or incapacity that God had to do the supernatural in order to use them for His great works. The worthy things done by His peculiar nation, Israel, came to pass only because God patiently bore with its failures and faithlessness toward Him, and used it in spite of itself.

It is wholesome to read the Bible, because it tells the truth about ourselves. This does not mean it is ever a discouraged or a discouraging Book; there is no literature in all the world so radiant and quickening with courage, confidence and optimism. But it sees the source of hopefulness not in man but in God. It discloses the true character of sin, its deadly weakening and destructiveness. Inasmuch as all men are sinners by nature, and left to themselves are hopelessly in the bondage of sin, the Bible prevents us from living in a fool's paradise with any notion that we can, of ourselves, make life worthy or worth while. One of its great messages is that "with men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible." The grace of God, not the greatness of men, is the theme of the Bible.—Toronto Globe.

MY PRAYER

Father, my prayer to Thee is not for fame,
Is not for honor or to win a game
Of distinction, or some prepossessing place,
Father, I seek the sunshine of Thy face,
My prayer, that I might pass Thy blessing to another soul,
That I might brighten the path of some one growing old,
That I may have an understanding heart, a hand to lend,
That I might be to some disparaged heart, a needed friend.
A cooling hand to some one's fevered brow;
A love and tenderness like unto the heart of Thou,
That I might be a blessing to one soul now sad,
That I might bring the happiness to make a child's heart glad.

SLOGAN

for the Closing Quarter

No Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

We do not know how much our people are hearing about this slogan, aside from what we are saying, but a great deal, we trust. We suggest that pastors announce from the pulpit the exact amount apportioned for each cause, the amount already paid, and what is yet to be raised. With this definite information before the people, they will see exactly what is to be done, and if they find it impossible to raise the total of all causes, they will certainly see that they can raise it for some, and we believe they will set about to do it. We most earnestly urge that pastors and stewards press this matter with all possible wisdom and zeal for these remaining two months, that the church may not suffer a shortage in budget receipts. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," and we must not withhold from Him that that is His own.

College

The fall semester will soon be opening, and the student prospect is gratifying. The chief need just now is financial support. Practically every new educational institution has to pass through its financial throes, and so far, no way has been found to make High Point College an exception. But our people are well able to put the institution on a secure financial footing, and we trust that at no distant date this will be done. But let us not shift the responsibility. Many of us may not be able to meet a large share of the need. But we can meet our part. And above all we must not forget the source of unfailing relief. God, through the prayers of His people, can make help available, both where help is expected, and where it is least expected. And please, Bro. Pastor and delegate, do not think of going to conference until you have done your utmost to raise the full assessment for college maintenance.

Assigned

August 18. Upon the unanimous recommendation of those members of the conference faculty present at the duly called meeting, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, of the Ohio Conference, was on the above date duly assigned to the pastorate of First Church, High Point, his pastorate to begin September 1. We trust that this may prove a happy relationship, both for pastor and people, and that the church may have an era of increasing growth and influence under Bro. Farmer's leadership.

Spencer

August 18. We were with our people here on this date in their third quarterly conference. They have their hearts set on a new church building. Their lot is paid for, and the location seems well chosen. Bro. Dan McLauren was present and promised to meet them again on the following Thursday to give them more definite information as to details and cost of their proposed building. We hope that they may be able to go forward, and that the close of the conference year may find them worshiping in their own building. Any financial help that any church, church organization, or individual may give to them will be gratefully received. Their pastor, Bro. Madison, will leave them about the middle of September to enter Westminster Theological Seminary. We are glad that he is to become a student there, though he will be greatly missed by the Spencer people. Arrangements will be made to fill out his unexpired term as pastor.

Halifax

August 25-26. Through the kindness of Bro. B. M. Williams we were privileged to be his traveling companion in his car to this charge on Saturday, the 25th. Bro. Williams went down to assist Bro. Spencer in a meeting at Hollister. Saturday night we preached at Bethesda, and on Sunday the appointments were at Harmony, Hollister, Ringwood and Eden, in the order named. Except at Hollister, where the special meeting was in progress the attendance was not large, though the interest and the spirit of the people was encouraging. The conference program was presented and stressed at each point, and an exact financial statement given to each church. We were pleased with the reaction to this, and our faith is that every church on the charge will have a good budget showing. Halifax is one of our oldest and best charges, and numbers among its membership some of our most loyal people. It is also Methodist Protestant historic ground.

Rev. W. H. Wills, D.D., a champion of "mutual rights" in the pioneer days, resided within the present bounds of this charge. It will also be recalled that Bethesda, on this charge, is the home church of Rev. N. M. Harrison. Bro. Spencer's popularity is attested by the fact that he is closing his fourth year here. His record of four years is one of zealous and faithful service, and we trust that this year may be the best of the four. It has been a pleasure to us to be on this field and to meet old friends again, and to make new ones. Some that we esteemed in other days we have missed. For the kindness of the pastor and his family and the people for their efforts to help us in our work, and to minister to our comfort, we give assurances of our grateful thanks, and likewise of our deep concern for the spiritual and material development of the charge.

Special Number Herald

Please get us the picture of your new or improved church or parsonage for this special number. A good kodak picture will do. And let us have a brief word about the building—what has been done, the cost, amount paid, location, and other things that can be briefly told and that will be of general interest. We want to run this number about the first of October. We will thank you to let us have this picture and the note as early as possible.

Is It Being Done?

Just two months more and the work of this conference year will be history. During these two months much is to be done to bring the year to a satisfactory closing. And surely we do not want any closing that isn't satisfactory from the standpoint of achievement, of effort, or of both. Revival meetings are on now and others ought to be held. Four-fifths of all the money we receive on budgets is yet to be raised; nearly one-half of pastors' salaries is yet to be paid—all this yet to be done, and in addition, the various things that can't be detailed here that constitute a part of a charge's program and a conference year's work. Is it being done? Surely these two months must be months of interest and persistent work, attended with much prayer. A conference year of successful endeavor will give us gladness for the annual session, and hope of heart and strength of hand for the new year that lies ahead.

CO-OPERATION

Select a magnet steel
Of any given length,
Then double it, and joy you'll feel
In quadrupling its strength.
Two times two—not four—but eight
Whenever we co-operate.

Our mighty God can take just one
And make a thousand flee;
But give Him two, and then He'll run
Ten thousand to the sea.
Things increase at a ten-fold rate
When we co-operate.

Sure, I can take a hook and line
And catch a single fish,
But if you'll help me hold the seine
We'll take in all we wish.
A bigger catch and greater weight
Whenever we co-operate.

Since this great truth is written large
In products of the mine;
Exhibited in battle charge;
Rewards the fisher's time;
'Tis true indeed, without debate,
God wants us to co-operate.

We'll do this in His glorious work
Through all the days to come.
And not a single member shirk
Until the task is done.
We'll win the world a rapid rate
Whenever we co-operate.

—By Dr. Schell.

—Nothing puts an end to co-operation sooner than the jealousy and strife which Paul deprecated. If we admit them into our society, it ceases to be a society, and becomes merely a collection of individuals warring with one another.

THERE ARE SUCH

There are some people who always make a great time on great occasions when great men are present, even if they are compelled to act the hypocrite. They are clouds without water, trees without fruit, shadows without substance. A man of this sort once went several miles to hear Whitefield preach. During the sermon he was thrilled, delighted, captivated, and so powerfully wrought upon that he was exhausted and overcome, and fell to the earth. When the sermon was over, and he had recovered from its powerful effects, he said to a gentleman standing by, "What a great sermon Whitefield preached today!" To which the gentleman replied, "We were disappointed today; Mr. Whitefield failed to come, and another reverend gentleman has just preached in his place." The man looked exceedingly disappointed, and exclaimed, "That wasn't Mr. Whitefield! Then," said he, as he brushed off the dirt occasioned by his falling to the ground, "I have dirtied my new coat for nothing."—From "Anecdotes of Whitefield."

"CAN'T DO IT"

The story is told of a minister, a temperance man, visiting a friend. At dinner the friend wished him to take a glass of wine.

"Can't do it," said the minister. "Wine is a mocker."

"Take a glass of brandy, then."

"Can't do it, brother. Strong drink is raging."

By this time the host became excited and remarked:

"You will pass the decanter to the gentleman next."

"No, my friend. I cannot do that. Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him."

"Well, then," said the host in desperation, "pass it over to me."

"Can't touch it," said the minister, "for the good Book says, 'Touch not, taste not, handle not.'"—The Wesleyan Methodist.

HEARING SERMONS

An African preacher, speaking from the words, "What is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" mentioned, among other things, that many lost their souls by being too charitable! Seeing the congregation astonished beyond measure at his saying this, he very emphatically repeated it, and then proceeded to explain his meaning. "Many people," said he, "attend meeting, and hear the sermon; and when it is over they proceed to divide it out among the congregtaion; this part was for that man, that part for that woman; these precepts were for such persons, these warnings for such sinners—and so," continued the shrewd African, "they give away the whole sermon, and keep none for themselves."—Commonwealth.

SEPARATED FROM THE WORLD

The telegraph wire must be completely insulated before it can convey the electric communication. So we must be separated from the world before God's message to sinners can have free course through us. When Saladin looked at the sword of Richard Cœur de Lion, he wondered that a blade so ordinary should have wrought such mighty deeds. The English king bared his arm and said: "It was not the sword that did these things; it was the arm of Richard." We should be instruments that the Lord can use, and when He has used us, the glory should all be His.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

"FOR HIS SAKE"

There never was a sweeter or more thoughtful girl than Marjorie Elwood, the doctor's daughter. Perhaps it was because she was his daughter, for he was an unusually tender-hearted man. He had never hardened to the profession and never would, for by nature he was always sympathetic and shared the pains of his patients.

It was the Sunday previous to Children's Day. He was returning from the Children's Hospital looking weary and sad.

"What's the matter, father?" asked Marjorie.

"Oh, I was thinking of Emily Monroe, poor child!"

"Who is she?"

"She is a young girl in the hospital. She had to have an operation a few days ago. She was so brave, but she is dropping now and I am very much afraid she will not pull through. I'm sure she is homesick. It is too bad—too bad!" and Dr. Elwood sighed.

"Why doesn't her mother go to see her?" asked Marjorie, eagerly.

"Her mother is dead."

"Where is her father?"

"On a long business trip in the Far West."

"Has she any sisters?"

"Yes, several, but they are little children and are in a distant city, too far away to come to visit Emily. If the poor girl could see her little sisters I am sure there would be a change for the better. I'm sure of it. What she needs is cheer."

It was Sunday morning. Emily lay quite still on her back, her knees fastened together, for she was not allowed to move her limbs for several weeks. Her face was pitifully pale and sad. Her eyes were closed, but slow tears forced themselves between her lids and rolled down her cheeks.

She was homesick—so homesick!

Presently the nurse came in softly, and, resting a hand on the aching head, said, "Would you like to see a dear girl who is waiting in the hall?"

The tearful lids opened, revealing an eager look in the brown eyes.

"Waiting?" she asked.

"Yes, she came to see you."

"I do not know any girl in this town. Who is she?"

"She is Marjorie Elwood, the doctor's daughter."

"Oh, I love Dr. Elwood! Please bring his daughter in."

Presently Marjorie stood by Emily's bedside. Her face was radiant.

"I know you're Emily," she said gently. "Papa told me about you. I'm Marjorie Elwood. I've brought these; aren't they sweet?" and she held out a bouquet of sweet June roses.

A smile broke out over the wan face as the frail hand clasped the roses and kissed them.

"Oh, I thank you! I thank you so!" she cried out. "How did you happen to think of bringing these to me?"

"Why, it's Children's Day at the church and I wanted you to have a share."

The burden of the sick girl's face was not so heavy now, the nurse observed, so, pushing forward a chair, she said kindly, "Sit down, Miss Marjorie, and tell Emily what you are doing over at the church for Children's Day."

She left the young people alone for fifteen golden minutes, during which time Marjorie did most of the talking. She told Emily of the songs that were to be sung that night, of the flowers and the birds, and the recitation that little Tom Clark was to give. "I'll coax him to come over with me some day and recite it for you," she said.

Marjorie told other cheering things—how her brother, Roland, had a wonderful dog that could play many tricks and dance, and that when she came again she would bring some more interesting things.

"Time is up," said the nurse, coming in quietly.

"All right," was Marjorie's cheerful response. Then, bending over Emily, she touched her forehead softly with her rosy lips, and laid down on the coverlet a small box with a pictured cover.

Marjorie was just ready to start for the "children's service" that Sunday night when her father came in. She looked charming in her dainty white dress. Her father regarded her with loving eyes.

"My dear," he said, "Emily is much better. She has improved wonderfully since morning."

"Oh, I am so glad!" said Marjorie.

"She was asleep when I went in," he continued, "and there was a smile on her face. Upon a little stand beside her bed was a beautiful bowl of June roses. In her frail hand there were clasped some sweet rosebuds. A small box lay on the side of the bed. Its contents were scattered over the spread. There were pictures and booklets that would interest her. I took her temperature and felt her pulse, and then looked at the nurse. She said, 'It's Children's Day, you know.' 'Children's Day,' I repeated. 'Yes,' she answered, it was Miss Marjorie who brought these flowers and pictures and made it so cheerful for Emily.' It was a heaven-born thought that took you there, my dear. I verily believe she was pining for home or the sight of some of her people. You did a good deed, Marjorie, and Emily is likely to get well."

Marjorie's face was beaming as she heard these words. Do you wonder that she felt happy as she kissed her father and hurried away to the service? That Children's Day meant a lot to Marjorie. It was a happy, happy day.—Youth's Banner.

THE BROKEN INSTRUMENT

There is a beautiful legend of a broken instrument. Its strings were gone; its parts were out of alignment; its exterior and interior were dust covered. It was thrown into a rubbish heap, till one day a musician came to the castle. He saw the neglected instrument and repaired it, for he was its builder. Then he played on it the most exquisite music. He drew from it harmony that pleased the most cultivated because he understood its laws. This is a parable of life. You and I are so unstrung and dissonant that no culture can attune us, no age-spirit can restore the lost chord. But the great Musician, the loving Maker of us all, can repair the ruin wrought by evil, can change the worldling and sinner into a saint, can restore the divine image and set us back among the approved of the Father. Oh, for the harmony that enables the soul to hold unbroken communion with the Lord!—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Sept. 9—Paul in Athens and Corinth

Scripture basis—Acts 17:16-18:17; I Cor. 2:1-16; I Tim. 2:3-7.

The Apostle Argues at Athens

a. Athenians Admonished. Leaving Berea, the Apostle Paul journeyed by sea to Athens in the province of Achaia, 250 Roman miles south of Beraea by land. Silas and Timothy were left at the latter place, perhaps to further strengthen the new converts, and were bidden to hasten to meet Paul at Athens.

Here in this wonderful city, where learning and art abounded, he found the absence of the worship of the true God and His Son, Jesus Christ. Right away he began to argue in the synagogue with the Jews and in the market place with the devout and those who would listen to him.

He had not been discoursing very long before he encountered the two extreme schools of philosophy in evidence there, Stoicism and Epicureanism. The former believed that the Supreme Being cared only for the universe, that human beings were subjects of fate, that they must show indifference toward their fate, whether joyous or sorrowful. The latter, too, believed that the gods only cared for the material world, but differed from the other school in that they held that pleasure was the chief good in the world.

That they might hear him more fully, they escorted Paul to Mars' Hill (Areopagus), a rocky platform to the northwest of the hill called the Acropolis, where were gathered an assembly of men, who were always ready to listen to a new doctrine.

In his opening remarks, he courteously addressed them as "Ye men of Athens" and tactfully observed that they were very religious, for, it is held, "they had on show no fewer than 3,000 public statues, most of them representing gods or goddesses." Among these was one with the inscription, "To the Unknown God," which seems to signify that with all their deities there was a reaching out of the human soul for that which none of these others could supply. Paul, using this as the basis of his argument, declared unto them Jesus.

b. Athenians Accept. Not all accepted, by any means, for when Paul discussed the resurrection of Jesus, it was beyond their grasp, and the assembly was dismissed without much serious consideration. However, the word of the Lord goes not from the mouth of faithful witnesses without effect (Isa. 5:11), so a number of converts were made, several of whose names are recorded in this chapter (17:34).

The Corinthians Called to Christ

a. Corinthian Characteristics. Lying fifty miles west of Athens, Corinth enjoyed a most favorable situation for trade. The cargoes of ships plying through the Aegean and Adriatic Seas were transferred here, and trade was conducted through it between the north and south.

"At one time the city is said to have had 300,000 inhabitants, with more than a half million slaves at work in its fleet and its colonies. It was a city of pleasure and of unbridled license, where the idle rich of all lands went to satisfy beastly desires."

Here the apostle met Aquila and Priscilla, fellow-craftsmen in tent-making, and he abode with them while in Corinth. Silas and Timothy joined him here. He remained in the city 18 months, "teaching the word of God among them."

b. Corinthians Contentious. In the synagogue, Paul taught the Jews and Greeks concerning the Christ of God. He testified, he persuaded, he admonished, but the Jews became bitter against him. This led him to denounce them for their hard-heartedness and to declare his intention to turn to the Gentiles, which he did.

Leaving the synagogue, he went next door where dwelt a Roman convert to Judaism, Titus Justus, which was a convenient place in which to hold services. Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, became converted together with his household and many other Corinthians, and all were baptized.

In this city of licentiousness, where the Jews turned against him, and perhaps being fatigued mentally and physically, Paul became despondent. But God was with him, and manifested His presence in a vision. "Be not afraid; I am with thee; no man shall hurt thee;" thus came the message of assurance. No wonder he remained there 18 months, and even tried to enlist the support of the proconsul, Gallio, against him. But Gallio was a just, merciful ruler, whose "popularity and bright, lovable character are indicated by the accectionate nickname given him, 'Sweet Gallio'." He dismissed the accusers, and the Greek sympathizers with Paul took advantage of the occasion to give the Jewish spokesman, Sosthenes, a good thrashing.

THE EDITOR'S VACATION

We were gone ten days and spent six of them in rapid automobile travel. The riding we consider a helpful exercise to people grown sluggish by too little physical activity. The end of the first day found us in Washington, D. C. While we were stopping at a traffic signal a young man came near and offered to conduct us to an inn within a block of the White House where we could procure lodging for the night for one dollar each. We knew that President Coolidge was not at home, but we decided to go and see this inn. We found things tolerable but of course not luxurious.

The next day brought us to Pittsburgh, Pa., where the editor's older son lives. We had with us the other son, his wife, and his sister, so that we had a family reunion.

We spent Sunday in Pittsburgh. I attended church at the Second Church and heard an inspiring sermon by Dr. A. J. Allen, now president of the Pittsburgh Conference, succeeding Rev. J. C. Broomfield who was in May promoted to the presidency of the General Conference. The pastor of this church has given notice that he will not be available for next year, and the congregation held a meeting to call a successor. Of course the arrangement they make is subject to the approval of the Annual Conference. But they know this and are careful to take only such steps as they have reason to believe the Annual Conference will approve. This combination of congregational and connectional practice seems to work without much friction in the Pittsburgh Conference.

Our third day's travel took us through Cleveland, Ohio, where we stopped to see a brother-in-law and two sisters-in-law. A son of this brother-in-law had just returned from Haiti where he has spent months in building some government buildings. This is a family of contractors, the father and two sons all being builders. The father, Mr. J. W. Deitrick, has built a number of large buildings in different parts of the country. The younger son was graduated from the University of Michigan in June of last year, but is already a busy builder. By night we reached Adrian, Mich., the seat of Adrian College. Here we visited another brother-in-law, Mr. James Barrow, and his family. He has two sons and one daughter, all married and living nearby, so that we were permitted to see them all. One of the sons is a building contractor and the other is game warden for that part of the state. We had a very pleasant visit with these relatives. The next day we showed our two sons the houses in which they were born and which they left in early childhood. We also hurried past Adrian College where the editor and his younger son both attended school (but not at the same time). Another day's drive and we were back in Pittsburgh. While there we were permitted to visit the office of the Methodist Recorder and see Editor Davis, Publishing Agent Darling, Editor Johnson of the Sunday school publications, Secretary Stephenson of the Board of Education, and several ministers, including our own Dr. S. K. Spahr, who with Mrs. Spahr is spending the summer months in their old home. We were glad to hear them say that they expect to return to Greensboro about October first to spend the winter. Time failed us to call on several acquaintances and friends of former years whom we would have been delighted to see. Pittsburgh is a big city and its winding streets present a problem to a stranger trying to go here and there. We concluded that very few Pittsburgh people really know Pittsburgh.

We saw a most notable man in Pittsburgh. He has a face remarkable for its breadth and this is greatly enlarged by a growth of jet black whiskers, hanging low and spreading wide. We never saw such a man anywhere else. We were told that he is a Jewish rabbi. While his appearance in some respects would invite remark, in other respects it would intimidate those who might be disposed to ridicule. He looked as though he might fell an ox with one blow of his fist.

Pastor Leland of the Fourth Church showed us through his church. It is built of stone and presents a good appearance outside and inside. It has a seating capacity of five hundred with quite a number of classrooms for Sunday school. It is growing year by year and is gradually paying itself out of debt. It has a duplex parsonage next to the church. The rent from half this is helping financially.

We left Pittsburgh with pleasant recollections of many kindnesses received from several friends there. One of the most interesting places visited was the Westinghouse Laboratory where our older son is employed in research work. Many experimenters work here in separate rooms set apart and equipped for their use. We cannot describe all the wonders we saw. We will mention one: Mr. Knowles, an experimenter in electricity, who has received a thousand-dollar prize for a discovery of his, was working with some apparatus so delicate that a wave of the hand through the air would turn on and turn off an electric light.

We were especially impressed with the kindness of Mr. Kellogg, a Connecticut Yankee, who conducted us from room to room, explaining operations. He is manager of one of the sections of the laboratory. One of the experimenters we talked with was a Russian who speaks English very brokenly.

Coming home across the mountains of Pennsylvania, our car was halted by an officer in uniform. He did not mistake us for bootleggers, but he thought we might have some green corn in our car. He was trying to prevent the spread of the European cornborer. We had no green corn and he did not detain us.

Our last night from home was spent in New Market, Va., where three of our party visited the Endless Caverns and saw charming wonders under the earth.

We were glad to reach home at the end of the tenth day and find our usual place again. We take up the fight where we left off, and hope to have a little more strength for the day.

SURPRISED!

Having been away on vacation, have not kept up with what was in our church papers. But today am looking them over and am surprised to find an editorial under this caption: "Diotrephes at the General Conference," in which the editor seems to think that he was not at ours. How he could be in both places at the same time I do not know, but am sure that if he was not at ours he had a substitute that filled his place to perfection.

This one at Baltimore seemed to know how to get in on most any subject twice or more perhaps; he worried some of us so much that we felt more like leaving than listening.

Our editor is such a fine-spirited fellow that he perhaps was not as critical as the writer, for this man had so much to say that he seemed to think that no subject introduced was complete until he had put the finishing touches on by his arguments in some direction—for often it seemed that just so he got to speak he was satisfied. In fact, he talked so much that some of us "dubbed" him "The ——— Dirigible," and when I say that some of the readers of this who were there will remember at once to whom the writer has reference.

I never feel like taking issue with the editor, for he is always on the right side, but thought perhaps as he has a fine sense of humor he would enjoy this "correction."

N. G. BETHEA.

(The editor thanks Bro. Bethea for the correction.—Ed.)

—Pittsburgh has several tunnels under the mountains for automobile travel, also for foot passengers. An accident in one of them, tying up traffic, resulted seriously from the poison gas. They are better ventilated now, fans keeping the air in circulation.

R. M. Cox	1,000.00
M. J. Wrenn	500.00
W. L. Ward	500.00
C. C. Robbins	500.00

Endowment Insurance Fund

Amount previously reported	$9,406.71
Melvin Garner	2.50
B. L. Heavner	5.00
	$9,514.21

These payments have been made on additional pledges toward the indebtedness of the college.

The energetic chairman of our Finance Committee, Mr. George T. Penny, is very much interested in providing the means for meeting the acute financial situation of the college, and deserves the utmost co-operation of all the members of the church.

In this connection, may I call the attention of those who made pledges for the endowment insurance fund to the fact that the premiums are now falling due, and that it is of the utmost importance that those who have made pledges remit payments due as early as possible. Statements will be sent out soon, but it is hoped that all who can possibly do so will not wait for the statement, but will forward check to the treasurer.

J. NORMAN WILLS, Treas.

—Rev. J. D. Williams is preaching at Moriah church this week. Meetings are held at 3 p. m. and at night. The attendance is good, but few unconverted people are present. But converted people need to hear preaching, and meetings have their purpose where there are no unconverted. Perhaps we make too strong the distinction between those who profess conversion and those who do not profess it. We never become so good that we cannot be made better by gospel truth.

—Bro. Jesse C. Causey, Guilford county's "master farmer," was recently honored by a visit from the county agricultural board. They were most favorably impressed. They found evidence that farming may be made a pleasure. They saw pigs drinking milk, not out of silver spoons, but out of metal pipes. Other farmers might receive inspiration by a visit to Bro. Causey's farm in the southeastern part of Guilford county.

—Shelby is shocked with a disaster. Three buildings suddenly collapsed as a result of excavation under one of them, killing six people and hurting about a dozen others. This occurred last Tuesday morning.

—Two High Point people were involved in New York's subway disaster. See the report from First Church, High Point.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

West Forsyth Circuit.—Baltimore had a home-coming day yesterday. Effort was made to bring all the old members and friends who used to live near to come back for worship and renewal of friendship. Many more than could be seated were there. Bro. J. Norman Wills, of Greensboro, was the chief speaker. In the morning he talked of the homes of the family; in the afternoon he addressed himself particularly to children and young people. Bro. D. A. Neese, of High Point, also made a good talk on the duty of the church to help save the world. The people appreciated the addresses of these business men, and hope for their presence again.

C. H. WHITAKER.

Mt. Hermon Church, Creswell Circuit.—We have just closed our revival meeting. Our pastor, Rev. R. L. Hethcox, began the meeting on the first Sunday, and Mr. Trollinger from Thomasville came on Monday and did the preaching throughout the week.

We had a very good meeting, with four additions. We, the people of Mt. Hermon church, wish to express our appreciation to Mr. Trollinger and also our pastor for the great help we received through the services. We learned to love Mr. Trollinger in the few days he was with us.

Mr. Trollinger had many experiences while he was with us, but the one I think he enjoyed most was the fiishing trip on Lake Phelps. Although it was raining and the wind was blowing, he threw his hook and line overboard and said, "Hethcox, I think we will have a shower in a minute." Suddenly one of the party began to get cold from being drenched, and jumped overboard to warm up. But I think the part Mr. Hethcox enjoyed most was Mr. Trollinger's ride to the shore.

The Sunday school of this church is doing fine. We are planning a picnic for the children.

Our Ladies' Aid is doing a very good work. In fact, I don't see how we ever got along without our Ladies' Aid.

Best wishes to the Herald and it many readers.

CALLIE BARNES DAVENPORT,
Reporter.

Orange Charge, Hebron Church.—The special meeting began here Sunday, August 12th. Rev. H. L. Isley did all the preaching. He gave us a splendid series of sermons.

Rain and other things interfered with the meeting. The results were not what we had hoped for; however, the church was revived, four reclaimed, one conversion.

The offering for Bro. Isley amounted to $20. This would have been larger had the services not been practically rained out the last day.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Porter Church.—Last Friday morning closed one of the greatest revivals in the history of our church. Many souls were made to rejoice. The attendance was fine at both morning and night services, the best seen for many years.

There were 14 conversions and 15 new members added to the church. We are very proud of these new members and overjoyed to see our little church coming to the front.

Rev. W. E. Hill, brother of our pastor, was pulpit help, and did some real good preaching. We learned to love Bro. Hill during his stay with us, and we regret that his health does not permit his going forward in the ministry. We feel he would be a wonderful power in the upbuilding of God's kingdom. Our love and best wishes go with him and we extend him a hearty welcome back into our midst. May God richly bless him, is our prayer.

Our Sunday school is growing. We had 70 present yesterday and we hope it will continue to grow. Some of our faithful ones who have stood by the church in its dark hours when it seemed to be on a standstill, are being rewarded for their faithfulness. God never forgets his faithful ones.

Our third quarterly conference was held Thursday evening of last week. Miss Ruby Thompson was elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. W. T. BRASWELL, Reporter.

Laurel Hill.—We are proud to say that we have a large and much-concerned Sunday school. Every teacher seems very much interested in his own class. We have a superintendent that we are proud of, and every church that owns such a man should be. He is a man of God. He doesn't forget to encourage the Sunday school each Sunday morning. He always has something good in store for us each Sunday morning when he gives us his little lecture.

Our revival meeting began the second Sunday in August and closed the following Sunday night. Rev. Harris Hill, of Friendship church in Stanley County, came on Sunday morning to help our pastor and remained through Friday night. The more the people learned of Brother Hill the more they became endeared to him. He visited in several homes, which was highly appreciated. We had large congregations at almost every meeting and each sermon delivered was instructive and inspiring. There was enough gospel preached to save the world. The church was much revived. There were something like 20 professions and four accessions. As the meeting is over we should not stop praying, but now is the time to begin praying. Pray that our church will stay revived and that we all will be drawn closer to the Lord each day. It seems that sometimes we become unconcerned and forget to pray. I want to be found in the service of God always. So may we all begin praying now for the revival at Laurel Hill next year.

LOIS WILLIS, Reporter.

Tabernacle Charge.—Our annual revival meeting began at Tabernacle church the first Sunday in this month. Rev. E. A. Bingham, the pulpit help, was present on Sunday and preached every sermon during the meeting. The people were highly pleased with his splendid gospel messages. There were 25 conversions and reclamations and eight accessions. A number of visitors from Greensboro attended part of the services, among them, Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Kennett, Rev. C. W. Bates and Rev. T. F. McCulloch. We were very glad to have these visitors.

Two Christian Endeavor societies have recently been organized on this work, a Junior society at Julian and a Senior society at Tabernacle. We trust that these societies will accomplish much good.

A large marker was placed on the highway the week previous to the meeting, which reads: "Tabernacle Methodist Protestant Church." Mr. D. A. Neese, of High Point, donated this beautiful marker to Tabernacle. Pastor and people are grateful to Mr. Neese for this gift. The pulpit furniture at Tabernacle has also been re-varnished and new upholstering put in the chairs, making all the furniture look new.

The good people of this charge continue to remember the pastor with gifts from time to time. The following people have our thanks: Mr. Dan Smith, Mr. Arthur Coble, Mr. H. L. Whitley, Mr. C. R. Fields—melons; Mr. G. A. Garrett, Mr. Purvis Neese, Miss Anna Hardin—peaches and apples.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, and Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Reynolds were among the recent visitors at the pastor's home. We thank Mr. and Mrs. Hanner for leaving several jars of fruit.

H. L. ISLEY.

Burlington, First Church.—Attendance in Sunday school today was 280, showing an increase of 37 over the previous Sunday, and the offering was $19.42. The Baraca class had charge of the Sunday school and W. E. Smith, the class president, acted as superintendent. The music was excellent, with splendid numbers by the orchestra and a song entitled, "Dear Old Daddy," by five members of the school.

The Baraca boys are well pleased with our new teacher, Rev. C. C. Lindley, as he brings such interesting messages each Sunday. The class is to go out to Spoon's pond for a watermelon feast and social outing Thursday evening of this week, and we hope every member will be out. The Philathea class has an invitation to go with us.

Rev. W. P. McCorkle, a superannuated minister of the Presbyterian church and a resident of this city, brought us a splendid and practical sermon at the morning hour, as Bro. Gerringer is away on his vacation.

Delores, the little 15-month-old baby of Bro. and Sister LeRoy Wheely, died early last Tuesday and the funeral was held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday with Brother Gerringer conducting the funeral. The grief-stricken ones have our sympathy and prayers during this time of great sorrow.

Prof. Wilbur Stout is spending his vacation with his parents in this city. Bro. Stout is one of the instructors in the Concord University in West Virginia and is making good. We are always glad to have him back home.

We will have our usual services next Sunday, as our pastor will be back from his vacation.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Roberta Charge.—Our church and community had the very great pleasure of a visit of Dr. and Mrs. Allman, with the class from our Children's Home the second Sunday in August. Our people were very pleasingly affected by the splendid program which they rendered at the 11 o'clock hour. After the program, the congregation was given a chance to register their appreciation with an offering, which amounted to $50. There were several individual gifts to the children apart from the offering in church. There are some fine features connected with these visits. First, it is a real living picture of what it means to give these little unfortunates a chance. Then, we are enabled to actually see the rewards of our offerings to the home. And, again, there is the lasting effect which the visitors inspire us with, which will surely tell in more unstinted loyalty to this noble institution in the future. We are more and more proud of our Children's Home and its fine leadership.

The program by the children from the Home marked the beginning of our special meeting. I am sure we could not have had a better beginning service. Brother Suits came to us on Monday night and remained until Friday night. The meeting started off with great promise, but on account of the rain and stormy weather, and perhaps other causes over which we had no control, our greatest hopes were not realized. But we can say with the poet:

"How often here in this vain world,
Our fondest hopes before us fall:
But when we reach that home above,
O, then, we'll understand it all."

Better preaching I could ask no one to do. God wonderfully used Bro. Suits in bringing us the old-time Gospel in the old-fashioned way. Saint and sinner were delighted with his pulpit manners and methods, and the fair, consistent and logical appeals. Not a word of abuse issued from his lips, while he stripped Satan of his garb and uncovered sin without fear or favor. He had the reward of seeing eight souls reclaimed and converted. But this gospel was the kind that cannot fail to "accomplish the end to which it was sent." The pastor, with the church, feels we are better prepared for the responsibilities before us. Bro. Suits, we will not forget your labors of love, and we are sure the Lord will not.

We are glad to report that our dear sister, Mrs. Z. D. Cochran, who went to a Charlotte hospital for an operation a week ago, is recovering nicely. We are soon to have her smiling pdesence with us again, if nothing sets up anew.

Two days before the meeting began, the pastor and family were very kindly and generously remembered with a pounding, which is still holding our wants in check. This is one of several this year that have aided in keeping our wants away. Space will not allow me to insert names, but the eyes of Him who beholds the evil and the good have the names and will remember in love and not forget. ROBERT SHORT, Pastor.

Davidson Charge.—We are now engaged in evangelistic meetings on this charge. On the fifth Sunday in July we began our first meeting at Pine Hill church. Bro. C. H. Hill, of Friendship, was with us and did good preaching throughout the meeting, which closed on Thursday night. The church was revived, three professed faith in Christ. Our congregations were large at night and good interest manifested throughout the meeting. Rev. and Mrs. Hill made many friends here who will be glad to have them come this way again.

On the second Sunday in August we began our meeting at Alleghany church. Rev. W. M. Loy was the engaged help. On account of the sickness of Mrs. Loy, Bro. Loy did not come. On Tuesday of the meeting I secured the service of Bro. Newton, an aged M. P. preacher, who lives with his son near Albemarle. He brought us good messages and the interest was good. Large crowds came to the meeting but we failed to reach the masses of the young people who were not Christians. There were three professions during this meeting, which closed on Friday night. The church was revived and we feel sure that much good was accomplished in the meeting.

On the third Sunday in August we began our meeting at Liberty church. At this church the people asked me to hold my own meeting. However, Bro. Charlie Cranford, a member of the local church, did some of the preaching. His son, Farrel Cranford, and family of Greensville, were present a part of the time and rendered helpful service. They are all-time workers in the Salvation Army. Here we had an old-time revival. Visible results: 18 professions; church greatly revived; seven united with the church, and more will join before Conference.

This meeting closed on Friday night.

I pray God's richest blessings upon all the brethren in their revival work.

C. E. RIDGE.

Friendship Station.—Our protracted meeting closed Friday night with a wonderful sermon, "The Final Judgment." We added five members to our church. We feel proud to have them. Rev. J. M. Morgan did some of the best preaching this community has ever been blessed with—pure gospel sermons, backed up by a Christian man, a man whose daily walk can safely be followed. One of the most appealing sermons of the meeting was "The Devil Fishing," preached on Thursday evening. Following this sermon 38 persons professed faith in God. This was a touching scene, when some of the seekers went and sought their children and friends to come to the altar. On Friday morning Brother Morgan delivered a beautiful sermon on "Heaven." How much we enjoyed this sermon! We feel sure the community will be very much benefited by this meeting. Sermons such as we listened to all during the meeting will cause people to stop and think.

We enjoyed more than words can tell the short and helpful talk with Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Reed. We hope they will come to see us right often.

MRS. D. W. SIDES.

Reidsville. — Our pastor, Dr. Brown, preached a splendid sermon yesterday on "Pressing Toward the Mark."

Children's Day exercises, under the direction of Misses Blanche Weatherly and Lola McCollum, were held the first Sunday evening in August. The collection was very good.

The churches of the town united for the evening services during the month of July. This month we are having no evening services.

Our Sunday school attendance is not so good as present, as our people have been taking their vacations. The S. S. picnic was held at Buffalo Beach.

Roland Armacost, who has been spending some time with his grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Brown, left for his home in Maryland last week.

Mrs. W. M. Marr and children have been spending some time with Dr. and Mrs. Brown. They also left to visit her sister, Mrs. Armacost, in Maryland.

The condition of Mrs. S. J. Kernodle remains about the same. She has been shut in for some time.

The funeral of Mrs. E. Carroll, mother of Miss Alva Carroll, was conducted by Dr. J. D. Williams and Dr. Brown on last Monday afternoon.

A coat of paint has recently been put on the parsonage roof.

We will not have any services next Sunday as our pastor will be away helping in a revival. REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—Attendance in our Sunday school was not as large today as that of last Sunday. Total number present last Sunday was 371 and today, 243, showing a decrease of 128. Offering today amounted to $15.89.

The Philathea class had charge this morning; the Baracas are to have charge next Sunday morning. Bro. Lindley, our Baraca teacher, brought us a splendid message in the classroom this morning, and, as a matter of fact, he brings helpful and inspiring messages all the time.

Rev. J. T. Whitehead, a ministerial student of High Point College, preached for us in the absence of our pastor at the 11 o'clock service and his sermon was helpful and uplifting and we hope he will come again.

Bro. Monroe Bennett, one of our boys of the first church and ministerial student of High Point College, was recently given license to preach by the third quarterly conference of our church. Bro. Bennett is a young man of the best character, an earnest worker in our local church, and we wish for him all success in his calling.

Our pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, is in Atlanta, Ga., engaged in religious work in that city. This is the regular time for the pastor's vacation and he is spending a part of the time as above mentioned.

Miss Maxine Taylor, our full time worker, is leaving us after today, as she is to teach, we understand, this coming school term. Miss Taylor has rendered a helpful and uplifting service for us and we can recommend her very highly for this work and regret that she is leaving us.

Best wishes to all.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

August 19, 1928.

Why Not Circuit.—We started our first special meeting at New Hope. Bro. C. E. Ridge did the preaching and did it well, and everybody enjoyed hearing him. Nine professed faith in Christ and five joined the church.

The second protracted meeting was at Fair Grove. Bro. Ridge did the preaching at this place and the meeting was a great success. Five joined the church and others will unite at my next appointment. Last week we held our meeting at Macedonia. Bro. G. A. Laughlin did the preaching, this being 16 years he has heplel there in succession; but he did not fail to get results. Seven professed Christ and five joined the church. I have received 18 members during this quarter.

On the 18th of this month the third quarterly conference met at New Hope church. The business was transacted in a spirit of love with only four of the churches represented. Bro. L. A. King was declared elected delegate to the next Annual Conference from Fair Grove Church.

Bro. Russell Williams favored us with a bushel of fine peaches recently; Mr. and Mrs. Pierce with four bushels of apples, all of New Hope church. Much more could be said, but I will stop for this time. All who read this, please pray for us. JOEL B. TROGDON.

South Lexington Charge—Our revival meeting began at Mount Carmel church August 12 and closed Wednesday night. The writer did most of the preaching. Bro. Way preached twice for us, which was highly appreciated. Visible results: Church revived; one conversion.

Our meeting is to begin at South Lexington church the third Sunday in September. Brother Bethea will be the pulpit help.

The work seems to be moving very slowly on this charge.

Brethren, pray for us that we may have a good meeting at South Lexington church.

A. RIDGE.

Henderson.—A good congregation was present at the 11 o'clock services Sunday, August 19th, and our pastor gave us a very helpful sermon on "Faith and Obedience." He said that few people were willing to condemn the world, as Noah did, and by faith, believe and obey the voice of God. As Christians he urged us to be courageous and stand for the truths of Jesus' teachings, and thus in the end be "heirs of the righteousness which is by faith." There were a number of visitors in our services and we were very glad to have them. Miss Keyser, of Burlington, gave us a beautiful solo, which was greatly appreciated.

One of the most interesting features in our church activities this summer was the "Vacation Daily Bible School," held during the weeks of July 30th to August 10th. Miss Mary Wills McCulloch, of Greensboro, came to help us, and through her efforts and the splendid help of our Sunday school teachers, the work was carried on with good results.

On Friday night, August 10th, the children gave a commencement exercise which was much enjoyed by a good audience. This was used as our Children's Day exercise also, and the collection taken was for foreign missions. Numbers of children received diplomas for perfect attendance and good work, and the parents and friends were shown at the close of the exercises the exhibit of articles made.

The Young Ladies' League met Thursday night, August 16th, with Mrs. Clyde L. Finch, with Miss Lucy Taylor, assistant hostess. There was a goodly attendance and the president, Mrs. H. A. Jordan, presided. Rev. R. A. Hunter conducted the devotionals. Reports from the various committees were given and other business of the society was transacted. It was voted to have a "coupon musical" at the Sunday school rooms, August 30. Miss Elizabeth Fox and Miss Gertha Trogden were put in charge of the program for this event. Miss Fox, who was program leader for the evening, used question from the Bible characters as a contest. At the close of the meeting the hostesses served orange ice and cakes, assisted by Misses Lettie Finch and Virginia Hicks.

Our revival services will begin the 9th of September, with Rev. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, the preacher. We are hoping and, I trust, praying, for great results. There will be two services daily. REPORTER.

Rehobeth, Creswell Circuit.—The revival meeting started Sunday night, August 12, and closed Friday night, August 17. Preacher Chester, of Roper, had charge of the meeting and preached to a large crowd every night. We had three additions, Ala Chesson, Laddie Swain, and Woodrow Curles.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Rehoboth church August 20.

The union picnic was held last Thursday, August 16. Quite a large crowd was present.

We are glad to say we have started our regular prayer meeting at Rehoboth church and are expecting great things in the future. We have also organized the Christian Endeavor again at Rehoboth church and are sure our officers will not fail us.

Had quite an unusual crowd out at Rehoboth Sunday school Sunday.

We are mighty glad to have with us again our organist, Miss Alice White, who attended summer school at Wake Forest College.

Miss Callie Tarkington, of Cherry, who is visiting Miss Ruth and Seattle Swain, attended Rehoboth Sunday school.

Mr. C. V. White, an old member of Rehoboth church, was taken ill at his home last Wednesday, but now is slowly improving.

Mrs. G. L. Davenport, an old member of Rehoboth church, is now able to be out. We are very glad to have her back to church.

We are sorry to hear of the death of an old member of Rehobeth church, Carroll Blount, who was killed in Africa. His parents have the sympathy of the members of Rehoboth church.

We will soon have Miss Esther Tarkington, a student of High Point College, with us as a teacher in this vicinity.

REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Charge.—We are glad to report our work coming on well. We are proud of our new pastor, Rev. N. M. Harrison. He is such a willing worker in the church. We feel that he is one of the best.

The mid-week prayer meetings will begin Wednesday night. M. J. Morris will held this service.

The young people of our church have recently organized a Christian Endeavor society. They are taking much interest and are looking forward to the regular monthly business and social meetings.

The ice cream supper that was given in the church grove on Friday night, August 17th, was an enjoyable event.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Glasgow and children, of Winston-Salem, are visiting friends and relatives in this community. Mrs. Glasgow used to be one of our best church workers.

Our revival meeting begins the first Sunday in September and we greatly desire the fervent prayers of every Christian that much and lasting good may be accomplished.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

August 20, 1928.

Winston-Salem.—The Philathea class held a watermelon feast Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. W. C. Tise, Country Club Road. The class was well represented and each member had their family as guests. The occasion was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Bess' Chapel.—Our church work is still progressing nicely. We were glad to have such a large crowd on our home-coming day, which was also the beginning of our special meeting. We were honored to have with us for the day Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the Annual Conference. He brought us two splendid messages, which every one should have been benefited by. Rev. N. Brittain, from Greensboro, came Monday to help in the meeting; every sermon was "a real sermon." The meeting closed Friday night. The rain and storms bothered the meeting some, though it was considered good, despite the bad weather. In appreciation to Rev. N. Brittain the congregation gave him $31.50.

Rev. M. C. Henderson, our pastor, brought us a fine sermon the following Sunday, and in the afternoon we were indeed glad to have the children from the Children's Home. They rendered a splendid program, which every one enjoyed and seemingly the hearts of all the people were touched, for the offering amounted to $55.70.

We thank the dear Jesus for our many blessings. N. E. B., Reporter.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—The revival meeting began here last second Sunday and closed Friday night. Rev. Mr. Cassidy, of Alabama, was pulpit help and gave us some very earnest sermons. On account of having to catch on early train, he was forced to begin service Friday night about 7:15—a very early hour for this place, but the congregation was pretty good. Mr. Cassidy is a good man and a great friend of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer. In the absence of our pianist, Miss Ellington, of Hollister church, kindly helped with the music. Collections taken each night resulted in a sum of $57, $5 of which was presented to Miss Ellington, and the remainder went to Mr. Cassidy.

Mrs. E. R. Nelson, of Henderson (Kate Harrison), who is a splendid pianist, was with us the last two days of the meeting and her music was much appreciated.

Mr. Spencer gave us a good sermon the first Sunday night, our regular night appointment here.

Rev. N. M. Harrison, of this place, has taken over the Littleton circuit for the rest of the Conference year and is now in the midst of a five weeks' round of revival services at the several churches. His wife and little boy, N. M., III, recently spent some time with the Harrison family here. Just at present they are making their home with her widowed mother, Mrs. J. S. Lewis, at Asheboro.

We are looking forward with much pleasure to having President Taylor with us on Saturday, the 25th. REPORTER.

August 21, '28.

Caroleen and Shelby.—The work is going fairly well. The Caroleen Sunday School has been off a little for the past month or two.

Last Sunday's report was 111; our collections also have been short, but are picking up now.

Our finances are badly behind, especially Conference claims. We are trying to relieve this situation by taking subscriptions; hope we will better these conditions soon. One cause for this, the mills have been running on short time, but we hope to do our best.

The good people stormed the parsonage last Saturday and left $7 in money and $7 in groceries. It is not possible to give the names of the givers, but the Lord knows all of them and we pray His blessings upon each of them.

We had a very peculiar experience last night. The Christian Endeavor Society gave a watermelon slicing, and after all had partaken of the luscious fruit, the writer was called into the room where 20 or 30 fine young folks were seated in a circle. We were led to the center of the circle by Mr. Bill Word and Miss Gertrude Murray. Miss Nellie Word handed us a Bible. Calls came from all over the room: "Read from the Book." We read from the 14th chapter of John. Bro. Adams led in a short prayer. Miss Word came forward, took the Bible and opened it at the Scripture where it is more blessed to give than to receive and place it into my hands, and they began to come forward and when they were through they had left $12.75 on the face of the Bible. We do not have words to express our thanks for their thoughtfulness. We could only lift our heart and pray God's blessings upon them. There is a great future for the young people of Caroleen.

Bro. Taylor, our president, gave us a visit at Shelby and delivered a fine sermon on "Giving." He was unable to get to Caroleen on account of a funeral.

Brethren, pray for us.

Sincerely yours in Christ,
L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

High Point.—The First Church is making plans to observe Homecoming Day next Sunday, September 2, and a large attendance is expected. All former members of this church and all those who ever attended services here are most cordially invited to return and join us in worship, as well as all interested friends from Greensboro, Thomasville, Lexington, Asheboro, Winston-Salem, our sister churches in High Point, Welch Memorial, Mechanicsville, and West End, and all churches of the surrounding communities. Especially all the older people are urged to attend, and renew friendship of former days. Special plans are being made for the success of this occasion, and Mr. H. A. Moffitt has prepared letters and is mailing them to all heads of families of the congregation. The new pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, of Uhricksville, Ohio, will be present and occupy the pulpit, and Mr. Ernest B. Stimpson, the new head of musical department in High Point College, will have charge of the music program for this service. It is earnestly hoped that there will be a large audience, and that this homecoming will be a very happy occasion.

The Sabbath school enjoyed a delightful picnic and outing at Ritter's Lake last Thursday, August 23. There was an abundance of good "eats" as well as boating and swimming, and the children and grown-ups had a pleasant outing. The Christian Endeavor Society went to Tar Heel Inn near Greensboro Monday evening and enjoyed a watermelon feast.

The Elks of Greensboro will give the 75 members of the Children's Home family a rare treat tomorrow. Cars will come and take them to Greensboro to a "movie" at the Carolina theatre, followed by an entertainment at the Elks' Club building when delightful refreshments will be served to the children, after which they will be brought back to the Home. This will be a most pleasant outing, and the members of the Elks Club are to be complimented for this generous treat and thoughtfulness of these children.

Garland McPherson and James Moffitt returned Sunday from New York, and told of a harrowing experience in the metropolis when the subway train on which they were passengers was wrecked and 17 persons were killed besides 99 who were injured. They were within 10 feet of the car which was wrecked, and were forced to remain in total darkness for almost an hour. Mayor Walker went to the scene of the disaster and personally supervised arrangements for the removal of the ill-fated passengers.

Many friends of R. Lynn Trout and his mother, Mrs. P. T. Crawford, will be pleased to learn that they have returned and will make High Point their home permanently.

Miss Vera Idol returned Saturday from a delightful trip to Europe. She spent six weeks in study at Oxford University, England, besides touring France, Italy, England, and Scotland.

Mr. H. A. Moffitt spent last week on a business trip to New York, returning home Sunday night.

Mrs. L. J. Diffee joined one of Mr. Edgerton's tours, and is enjoying a delightful trip of two weeks to Niagara Falls, Montreal, Quebec, and New York.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard left the city Monday, August 20, and drove to Niagara Falls. They will stop in Baltimore en route home and visit Mr. Ballard's parents and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben T. Moore have returned from a trip to Endless Caverns and the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Our revival meeting began the second Sunday in August. We had a large attendance at Sunday school that morning, there being 95 present. At 11 o'clock Mrs. A. G. Dixon brought us the message of the morning service.

The afternoon was given over to a homecoming day service, so at 2 o'clock Mr. L. L. Wrenn, of Siler City, gave the history of Hope church from its organization in 1873 until the present time. Of the 11 charter members only one, J. J. Andrew, now survives.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of Asheboro, then gave a few appropriate remarks on some experiences he has had at this church. We are always delighted to have Rev. and Mrs. Pritchard with us. We were also glad to have a number of other visiting friends and former members who live away from this community meet with us on this occasion.

Dr. A. G. Dixon came to us on Monday and preached at the evening service. Dr. and Mrs. Dixon certainly did bring us some good gospel messages. We feel that the church was greatly strengthened spiritually. There were 12 accessions to the church. We feel that each one of these will be a great help to our church. We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Moore, from Staley M. E. Church, and Mr. and Mrs. Murrow, from Pleasant Garden M. E. Church, unite with us by letter.

We are greatly indebted to Mr. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, choir director, and Miss Ava Lee Andrews, of Bonlee, pianist, for their faithful service.

We are indeed proud of our Sunday school rooms. They have added greatly to the convenience of our Sunday school. We are also pleased with our new piano which the Ladies' Auxiliary has placed in the church.

Success to the Herald and its readers.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The revival meeting began at Mt. Hermon the third Sunday in August and ran till Friday evening. The pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, preached twice on Sunday to large congregations. Monday afternoon Rev. Geo. L. Curry came and did the preaching from then on. His sermons were very good and were heard by large crowds, especially in the evening.

Friday afternoon his sermon was to the children; they enjoyed it very much. Several souls were borne into the kingdom, and I trust the church revived.

The third Sunday evening the C. E. Society under the leadership of Truth Isley held a prayer service appropriate for the beginning of a revival. Misses Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson, of Mebane, sang a duet. Mrs. Nicholson made a short but encouraging talk on the work of the C. E.

Miss Margaret Curry spent several days visiting Truth Isley.

The doors of the church will be opened the first Sunday afternoon. The church will vote on whether to enlarge the Sunday school rooms.

The fourth Sunday evening the C. E. Society went to Cross Roads church and gave a program. Miss Effie Keck had charge. We trust both societies were benefited by the meetings. The Mt. Hermon people enjoyed the evening very much. REPORTER.

Lexington, State Street Church.—Bro. Bethea was back with us Sunday after an absence of four weeks and preached two fine sermons for us and also met his regular appointment at Yadkin College in the afternoon.

Attendance at all the services has been good all summer, and now that vacation time is about over we are hoping for still better.

The special revival service begins at West Lexington Sunday and Bro. Ridge has invited us to worship with them. We all appreciate this invitation and intend to accept it.

Our Sunday school will go on a picnic tomorrow (Wednesday) afternoon. We are planning to meet at the church at 3 o'clock and go to the Country Club, which is about 10 miles out on the Salisbury road. All the children, and grown-ups as well, are expecting a great time. Supper will be spread at 5 o'clock. REPORTER.

PINE RIDGE NEWS LETTER

We have had a very satisfactory summer. At our County Sunday School Convention in July we had the largest delegation and the Superintendent of Alvan Drew was elected president for the tenth year.

I have had a good number of interesting preaching engagements, also enjoyed the privilege of speaking to two 4-H Club camps, made up of young people in three counties.

I was delighted recently with the response to a suggestion that we organize a County Chamber of Commerce, in Campton, our county-seat. I believe it will come into existence and prove to be a valuable help in the development of our county.

Our high school opens August 20, and Grade School begins September 3. Practically all of our rooms are already engaged by prospective students and that means we will have to turn many away on the opening day.

We feel greatly encouraged in the work because of the growing popularity of our school and our entire program in Wolfe and adjoining counties; also because of the fine staff of workers planning to be here for the coming year and, finally, because of the increasing number of friends who are supporting us with prayers and gifts, and thus making it possible for us to carry on.

Mrs. Woodford and I are very appreciative of the many kind expressions of sympathy we received during our son's illness. It was so comforting to know so many earnest prayers were being offered in his behalf. The silver plates that were fastened around the broken bone are to be removed this week and we are hoping that in about two weeks more he will be able to leave the hospital. We are very thankful that he has gotten along so well.

If some Sunday school or other organization should have 75 or 100 song books of the same title for which they have no further use, we would be glad to have them. Please send by parcel post direct to Pine Ridge.

We are planning to have Rev. F. J. Baylis of our Illinois Conference with us for a brief series of evangelistic meetings about the middle of September. Join us in prayer for God's leading and blessing.

Sincerely,
T. R. WOODFORD, Supt.

—For 1928-29, our full-time teachers in high school will be Miss Minnie Byrd, Rev. G. W. Andrew, who completed his college work at High Point, N. C., in June, and two young ladies who recently graduated from Western Maryland College, Miss Eva Logue and Miss Mary Hull. Miss Mildred Walker will have the class in bookkeeping, Mrs. Woodford will continue in charge of expression, and the superintendent, Bible.—Pine Ridge Booster.

Cutting It Short

The Squire: "What's your name?"

Nervous Applicant: "P-P-P-Perkins, sir."

The Squire: "Ah! Then I'll call you Perkins!"—Humorist (London).

Colored Laborer: "Boss, will you please, sir, 'vance me twentyfive cents on my time? Our deacon is gwine away, and we wants to give him a little momentum."

Suitor—I love your daughter and would suffer if I caused her a moment's sorrow.

Father—You'd suffer, all right. I know her. —Pathfinder.

—Mrs. Otis Campbell, a highly esteemed member of Calvary Church, underwent a serious surgical operation last Saturday morning. Her present condition gives hope of her recovery, for which the church is praying.

SUMMER, SEASON OF CALAMITIES

Most of the world's great calamities happen in the summer, says Dr. E. E. Free. A Swiss scientist has listed all the important disasters mentioned in the newspapers of the world between September, 1924, and August, 1927. The tabulation is part of the "materials for the study of calamities" collected by Raoul Montandon for the Geographical Society of Geneva. It shows the curious fact that the average number of calamities in July is 35, while in February it is only 19. For the three summer months of June, July and August the average monthly number of disasters is 33; in the three winter months of December, January and February it averages 23. September and October are also relatively free from calamities, averaging below December, but not so low as February.

Calamities recorded in Montandon's tabulation include earthquakes, floods, landslides and avalanches, cyclones, drouths and famines, volcanic eruptions, fires, tidal waves and plagues of insects. Just why disasters so widely varied should show a relation to the months of the year is not apparent. Montandon has long urged that the collection and study of statistics of catastrophes of all kinds will yield useful information, not only for relief agencies like the Red Cross but also for the social and biologic sciences. But it will be necessary, he believes, to continue collecting statistics for some years before dependable conclusions can be reached about the relationship of calamities to the seasons.—The Pathfinder.

VOLUME XXXIV | GREENSBORO, N. C., SEPTEMBER 6, 1928 | NUMBER 43

Our Law Regarding Transfer of Church Property

Our fathers meant to provide that no church property should be bought or sold recklessly. Authorization for the transfer must be given by at least two-thirds of the qualified members. And these members must be gathered together in a meeting. It would not do to get their consent on the street or in their places of business; it must be done in a meeting with their brethren where there was opportunity for discussion and the presentation of reasons against the transfer. And public notice of this meeting must have been given four weeks in advance, that there might be time to think about the matter.

This law was found unworkable in many churches because of the difficulty of getting two-thirds of the members present at one time. The law thus proved to be a brake on the wheels of church progress. A few years ago the law was changed so that a bare majority of the qualified members could authorize the transfer of property, but these members must vote in a meeting called for the purpose. The difference between a majority and a two-thirds majority made it possible to proceed in some cases, perhaps, but the law was found to be still unworkable in other cases because a majority of the qualified members could not be gotten together.

An effort was made at the last General Conference to give the majority of those present at a duly called meeting the power to authorize the transfer of property. This was objected to and failed of passage.

T. A. Murray, an attorney of Baltimore, explained that the present law would be found workable by the device known to lawyers of stretching a meeting out into a series of meetings by the process of adjournment to a fixed day. Those voting for the measure can be marked on the roll and this can be done at each succeeding meeting until the requisite majority is reached. This has actually been done in some cases, but all do not know this device of the lawyers, and sometimes there is great embarrassment in trying to proceed according to the law, and delay results, with the danger of having to abandon the effort. Experience with the present law convinces many pastors that some change is imperative. When it seemed that no proposed change could be made because of the strenuous opposition, it was agreed to add Mr. Murray's suggested plan of procedure to the Constitution, in order that all might know how to proceed. This is making explicit what is already implicitly in the Constitution. But now comes Dr. T. H. Lewis, late president of the General Conference, with the objection that the proposed plan might give opportunity to a treacherous pastor to accomplish his wicked device.

We have high respect for the Doctor's view of the matter. Treacherous pastors do not often occur, fortunately, but they are among the dread possibilities and must be provided against. But failure to get a majority out for action on property transfer does occur very frequently and we think we should be more careful to provide against this more probable contingency. The way proposed is simple and easy, it respects the right of the individual church member to have a voice in the transfer of church property, and it also recognizes the right of the majority to rule in the matter. As to continuing the process indefinitely, the majority can put a stop to it any time by simply declining to adjourn to a fixed day. We see no danger there.

As to the rarely-occurring treacherous pastor, there is scarcely any way to frame laws to hold him in check. He is to be thwarted by eternal vigilance.

Unbearable Truths

We have the best of authority for saying there are unbearable truths. After two or three years with them, Jesus tells His disciples that He has yet many things to say unto them, "but ye cannot bear them now." Men can receive but little of the truth at a time. Prejudice precludes new truth. Men must somehow be brought to let go of the old and the false before they can lay hold of the new and true. To get rid of all our prejudices at one stroke would be too severe a surgical operation for us to bear. The patient Christ and the patient God proceed with great gentleness. They see how the roots and the rootlets of error run through all the contents of our minds, roots that have been years in growing, and they know what an ordeal it would be for us to have all these extracted at once. We could scarcely stand the operation. God does not give us up, but He postpones part of the treatment until we may be able to bear it. "The Holy Spirit when He comes will lead you into all the truth."

It is partly natural and partly the fault of men that they cannot bear the truth. Men may hug delusions to their bosoms and refuse to give them up. Self-interest or what is conceived to be self-interest may make the truth unacceptable and even unbearable. Probably each of us has some cherished prejudices that make some truths unbearable.

"New Century Service"

There is vision in this new slogan proposed by Dr. Straughan to designate our denominational enterprise. We have closed one century of service, and this new slogan is a prophecy that we will be permitted to round out another hundred years. There is in this slogan also a reminder that the church exists for service. Our denomination has a work to do that no other church can do for us. If we do our work, we justify our existence. If we fail to do it, we become mere cumberers of the ground. Let us catch the spirit of Brother Straughan's slogan and enter at once upon the service to which this new century calls us. Let us so enthusiastically do our part that those who come after us will be moved by our example to carry on till their day is done.

IS PROHIBITION WORTH ENFORCING?

Thirty Thousand Babies

Dr. Isaac Rawlings, health director of the state of Illinois, says: "Since the Volstead Law went into effect five thousand fewer babies have died in the state of Illinois each year. Where once the beer bottle reigned supreme, the milkman now makes his daily rounds, leaving a bottle of the most perfect food known to man—milk."

In New York state 12,000 fewer babies have died each year since prohibition.—U. S. Census.

"Drunken Sailor" No Longer True Saying

"We can no longer use the old saying, 'like a drunken sailor.' When the United States fleet visited New York the other day, there were 20,000 sailors on shore leave daily, and not one was taken into any court, and there were only thirty cases of intoxication taken into naval custody."—Allan G. Olson, Lieut.-Com. U. S. Navy.

$110,000,000 in Labor Banks

At the close of business June 30, 1926, deposits in 30 labor banks were $110,375,791. Not a labor bank was in existence before prohibition.—Union Labor Advocate, Jan., 1927.

Like Another World

Here around Hull House we used to watch whiskey and beer being left at saloons by the drayload. The poverty and suffering from drink were appalling. There is such a difference now that it seems like another world.

Drinking has decreased, and so has our work of rehabilitating families wrecked through intemperance. We have hardly any more squalid homes and neglected families to deal with. The stuff folks get now makes them uglier, but its evils are offset by the difficulties of getting it. I would not see the old system again for anything.—Jane Addams, founder and superintendent of Hull House, Chicago.

Aren't You Glad?

Cases of cruelty to children are less by 60 per cent in New York and 70 per cent in Boston as compared with the average years immediately before prohibition, according to reports of the Societies for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children of those cities.

Are Americans Growing Healthier?

The census says we are! There were 60,000 fewer deaths from tuberculosis in 1926 than 1920, a reduction of 35 per cent in seven years. There were 30,000 fewer deaths from pneumonia, which is 30 per cent less. Typhoid deaths aer less by 50 per cent; Bright's Disease less by 11,000, 12 per cent; deaths from alcoholism are less by an average of 1,900, this is 30 per cent less; deaths from cirrhosis of the liver less by 6,600, a reduction of 40 per cent.

Perhaps the best of all is that deaths of children under five years are 43 per cent less than seven years ago, while the total death rate is less by an average of 300,000 a year.

A Pleasant Surprise

We have heard so much about deaths from poison alcohol that it is a very pleasant surprise to learn that the total number of deaths reported from wood and denatured alcohol are only about 240 a year. While this is 240 too many and is much to be regretted, it is only one-half the number reported to have died from this cause every year in the six years before prohibition.—U. S. Census and Met. Life Ins. Co.

Drug Addicts Are Less

"Contrary to the general belief, prohibition has not caused an increase in the drug traffic. There are fewer addicts today than ever before. Eighty-five per cent of the present addicts acquired their habit before prohibition. The percentage of new addicts is very small."—U. S. Narcotic Division, Wash.

Churches Gain in Membership

Churches of the United States had a gain of 573,723 in membership in 1927. This is 100,000 more than the gain made in the prevoius year.—Official Statistics, Council of Churches.

A Nation on Wheels

The whole United States could take a joy-ride at one time, according to the Bureau of Public Roads. Twenty-three million motors are registered, of which 3,000,000 are trucks and tractors. There is now one motor for every five persons in the country.

Money for New Homes

Our associations assisted in purchasing or building over 550,000 homes in 1926.—Nat. Building and Loan Association.

Come On! Let's Go!

Americans are traveling and demand good hotels. In 1926 840 hotels were erected in the United States, representing an investment of $400,000,000. Many hotel men were afraid that without a "bar" they would have to go out of business.—Hotel Association Report, 1927.

Arrests for Drunkenness in Boston Drop

Arrests for drunkenness in the city of Boston were less last year by 54,000, as compared with the last years before prohibition. In 1917 there were 73,000 arrests; last year they numbered 18,000.—Municipal Court Record, Boston, 1927.

Instead of Almshouses

More than half of our population (sixty million persons) now hold life insurance, thereby protecting their own future and that of their families.—N. Y. State Supt. of Insurance.

Fewer Kids in Court

Only one-half as many children are brought to the Children's Court in New York City as in the years before prohibition; less than half in Boston.

This improvement is found in varying degrees all through the country. This means 8,000 fewer children in the courts of New York City alone.—Children's Bureau at Washington.

School Children Save

During the last school year about four million children deposited $23,000,000 in school thrift banks, bringing the total deposits up to $39,000,000.—U. S. Dept. of Education.

An Honorable Record

Since the month of May 5,200 young men and women between 16 and 18 years of age have received licenses in Connecticut to drive automobiles. The superintendent of state police says that not a single one of these young people has been arrested for intoxication.

The motor vehicle department declares that not one of this class of drivers has been involved in a fatal, or even serious, accident.—November, 1927.

KEEP THE CHURCH OUT OF IT

It is a curious fact that most of those who are so concerned and are tearing their hair lest the church get into politics are, as a general rule, those who are most conspicuous in their local communities for non-attendance at all kinds of church services and who, if they should drop into a weekly prayer meeting would create such a sensation that it would be the talk of the community for days afterwards, and the people would wonder whether the man hadn't lost a lot of money, broken down in health, or got scared about something.

Ever now and then there comes out a communication from some Methodist brother and says that he was a member of the Methodist Church the last time he heard from it, but wants to tell the people of the state that he is no longer willing to stay in the Methodist Church, whose chief pastors are against liquor, and if anybody can find out where his membership is, he wants them to take his name off the roll because he won't stay in any church that has religion enough not to scare at politics, and will not bow before the juggernaut of Tammany Hall and say, Come on, Tammany, and rule over us.

Some have thought these men were inconsistent—I don't think so. Let's see: They say that the church as an institution should confine its work to prayer meeting, Sunday school, preaching twice on Sunday and a protracted meeting once a year, visit the sick and bury the dead. Now that is the idea of what constitutes the duty of a Christian church by most of these gentlemen who are writing for the papers these days. Well, I claim they are consistent at least. They want to bottle up the church inside of four walls and not let it come out for fear it may interfere with them; they want to be permitted to do whatever they please without any criticism on the part of the church.

They know full well that if the church is controlled by the Spirit of God, that as soon as it makes up its mind as to what constitutes its duty, that nothing can stop it from trying to correct error and to reprove wrong and that is just what they don't want done.

There are many men who are writing these days about bigotry, clericalism and sectarianism. I doubt if any of them have read five lines of church history or church polity in years or know anything about the doctrine of the church in which they are nominal members, or the doctrines of any other church, yet they undertake to tell people what they should do in order to gain their approval as circumspect church members.

Why you can't have clericalism in a Protestant Church; there is no such thing; there isn't a Protestant Church in the world that would permit it for five minutes; however high he might stand in the esteem of that denomination, if a man were to undertake to tell them what they should do—he would be fired in a minute. But no church body has any respect for a leader who, if he sees a danger threatening the integrity of his flock and doesn't cry aloud and warn his people of what he thinks of that danger, that would not have a contempt for such a man.

Now there are churches in which the clerical can tell a man what they want him to do and he has to do it, willy-nilly, he has got to do it, but that doesn't apply to any Protestant Church in the world.

And yet some of these fellows are burning their shirts for fear we are going to have a chairman, a bishop, a president, or presiding officer who will advise people what they think about a matter that concerns the very foundation of the church. When the time comes that the Church of God hasn't strength enough in its spiritual life to fight the forces of evil, even though it may be entrenched behind political walls, then we have reached a sad day, and knowing the ministry and the officials of practically every Protestant Church in this country, I make bold to say that all of the howling on the part of politicians will not keep them from expressing their piety in a patriotism that will prevent bad men from being elected to office, and no political threat will deter them in the least. So you had just as well stop howling about the church in politics, for as long as politicians politic the churches of this land are going to have a say as to what constitutes proper politics and no abuse or threats or anything else will have the slightest effect in checking their ardor for carrying out what they feel is their God-given duty.

Therefore, save your paper, brethren; save your paper.

CONFESSIONAL OR CHRIST

"If Christ were sitting in one confessional box and a priest in another, the priest could blot out sin just as effectively as could Christ. The priest in confessional gives back strength and health not to a paralyzed body, but to a paralyzed soul, and that, too, is a miracle. The mere presence of a priest causes sin to be blotted out."

These are the words of a Catholic priest, Rev. John F. Hurley, S. J., in the Church of St. Francis Xavier, New York City, in the course of a sermon on "The Power of the Catholic Priesthood," on Sunday, July 1st, and as reported in the New York Times of the next day.

The priest, of course, only voices the recognized position of Catholicism down through the ages, and his affirmation but shows that the papacy has not changed a whit since medieval times.

Now, we consider that this priest has given us the most damaging and devastating argument that is to be found against a belief in Roman Catholicism. We have long contended in this journal that the papacy erects a barrier between man and God in the system of a priesthood, and that the priests usurp a function that Christ alone can perform for the sinner.

Here are a few well-known statements of Scripture which make it most clear that Christ only is our priest and mediator:

"There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 2:5).

"If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous" (1 John 2:1).

"He (Christ) came and preached peace to you that were afar off, and peace to them that were nigh: for through Him we both have our access in one Spirit unto the Father" (Eph. 2:17, 18).

These texts clearly enunciate the fundamental truth that in pure Christianity there is but one way to God the Father, and that is through His Son and our Saviour, Jesus Christ. He is the "one mediator"; He is our advocate; through Him we have our access to the Father.

Catholicism, on the other hand, says that we must go to a priest to confess our sins, and that we cannot pray to heaven direct for forgiveness, but must transact all our business with God and Christ through a priest of the church. We consider this the most grievous error of the papacy, and one that makes it absolutely impossible to place any faith whatever in Catholicism as a way of God. It is a direct blow at the very heart of the Christian religion—the mediation and priesthood of Jesus Christ. It would make Christ unnecessary and a superfluity. It tears Christ down from His throne, and would place man in His stead.

Bible prophets long ago predicted that the Roman Catholic Church would attempt such a course. Paul, who lived in the day when the foundations of the Catholic Church were being laid, said: "It (the second coming of Christ) will not be, except the falling away come first, and the man of sin be reevaled, the son of perdition, he that opposeth and exalteth himself against all that is called God or that is worshiped; so that he sitteth in the temple of God, setting himself forth as God" (2 Thess. 2:3, 4).

Paul here is speaking of the great apostasy which was then beginning and which finally culminated in the papal system. Compare with Paul's prediction the words of one of the greatest of modern popes: "We hold upon this earth the place of God Almighty." ("The Great Encyclical Letters of Pope Leo XIII," page 304. Benziger Bros., New York.)

Here is a similar statement made at the Fifth Lateran Council: "Thou (the pope) art the shepherd, thou art the physician, thou art the director, thou art the husbandman; finally, thou art another God on earth." ("History of the Councils," Labbe and Cassart, vol. XIV, col. 109.)

From the Catholic conception of the pope grows the idea that he is supreme not only in the realm of religion but that he also should be supreme in things temporal and civil upon the earth. If, indeed, the pope were "another God on earth," then he would, of course, rank above kings and princes and presidents, and should rule the state as well as the church. This is a fundamental Catholic belief; but for political purposes, in countries where the church has not yet the prestige and power, her apologists, such as Father Duffy and Al Smith, try to soften the truth so as not to embarrass their cause.—Signs of the Times.

Unbearable Truths

Ministers would like to present certain truths to their congregations, but are kept from doing so by the knowledge that their people are as yet unable to bear them. Yet they do not give up the task, but postpone what cannot now be done, and proceed gently in the direction of the truth they would present. Some day the man that would now become furious and almost be ready to tear you to pieces will be able to hear the truth and thank you for it.

The truth must not be neglected and abandoned because men will not receive it. Some day they will receive it and will rejoice in the freedom it brings to them. The mind that today cannot bear the light will some day feel the scales drop off and will be able to see clearly. This work of bringing blind men to see is a great work. It was Christ's work: He was the light of the world. But He said to His disciples, "Ye are the light of the world." He has placed the torch of truth in our hands that we may as rapidly as possible but ever patiently lead men out into the truth. The dawn must precede the full light of day. Minds that are now dark and too densely filled with error may some day shine with the glory of the noonday sun. But the light must break gently upon them. They cannot now bear all the truth.

THE FINE ART OF PRAYING

In a certain conference of ministers for the deepening of the spiritual life, the chairman put this test question:

"Will every one who spends half an hour a day alone with God in connection with his work, hold up a hand?"

One person responded.

"All who thus devote fifteen minutes a day hold up a hand."

A few more hands were shown.

The leader was visibly moved. "Prayer is the working power of the church of Christ," he said solemnly, "and half of the workers make hardly any use of it!"

Every person is a bundle of potentialities. These potentialities, according to S. D. Gordon, have five outlets—the life, or what one is; the lips, or what one says; service, or what one does; money, or what one gives of his substance; and prayer, or one's privilege of wielding the power of God. Unquestionably the greatest of these is prayer. And yet "half of the workers make hardly any use of it!"

Andrew Murray phrased a simple but significant sentence which has been haunting me. It is this: "Jesus never taught His disciples how to preach, only how to pray." Until a man knows how to pray he knows little or nothing about preaching —in the Biblical use of that word.

If Burke was right in saying that "man is a religious animal" and Brierley correct in defining man as "a praying animal," then Dr. E. Griffith-Jones' assertion is apropos— "No religion, no prayer; no prayer, no religion. . . . If you have given up praying in any effective sense, you have given up religion."

Roger W. Babson, prophet and genius of the business world, has an institute at Wellesley, Mass., where young men are trained to be business executives. Men pay a goodly sum for the privilege of associating with this commercial genius and of learning of him. Is it not a priceless privilege to have fellowship with the great Genius of the universe and to learn of God Almighty? Herein lies the value of prayer.

Tennyson said that to him prayer was the opening of the sluice-gates between his soul and the waters of eternal life. Prayer is the medium of the great moral and spiritual dynamic of God. Through its use men have slain lions of passion, men have climbed to lofty heights of purity, men have trodden the "steep and thorny paths" of sacrificed service.

To dwell in an atmosphere of God's thoughts, to wield the scepter of God's power, to learn the way of God's will —wondrous privileges all—these are some of the things that make prayer a most valuable asset in any life.

The church today has opportunities so golden that the very angels of heaven might fain exchange places with it for the chance of serving in this generation. But as we look about us, what do we find? George Hamilton Combs was not far wrong when he wrote: "The church is fiddling while a world is in flames!" A few rare, noble spirits feel the burden of the world task, and some are toiling almost beyond endurance, but the rank and file of the church are indifferent to the loud, long, insistent calls of a world in distress.

Manacled with the chains of indifference, of worldliness, of division, the church is impotent, and it is unable to perform the task assigned it by its immortal founder. Only a free, united spiritual church can conquer a grossly materialistic world.—Howard W. King.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

NEW CENTURY SERVICE

An Outline of Promotional Activity Suggested to Annual Conferences

To the N. C. Annual Conference.
Dear Brethren:

The last session of the General Conference set up a new department by combining the office of treasurer with that of an executive secretary in charge of the promotional work of the church. That means of course an effort to stimulate the benevolent and missionary work of the denomination through financial plans and the extension of stewardship.

All of us have felt that the church is capable of a larger service than we have been rendering and while the secretary for this new field of endeavor has been chosen and is at work we feel the task is that of the whole church, the business of us all.

Without question the big business of the church is to win people for Christ Jesus. The second great endeavor is to keep people saved after they have made the great confession. The field of service is large, many kinds of things to be done, and ample room for all. But the major expression of that service is through the stewardship of property when once the stewardship of life is acknowledged; that through it the lives of Christians reach out in far places, and provide a God-blessed opportunity for the church to keep faith with Christ. The General Conference budget is the principal medium for the combined or group activity of our people. The needs of the church's undertakings require our fullest measure of support.

To this end we have been laying our plans and ask of the church its completest co-operation.

1. Our new slogan for the $500,000 budget is, "New Century Service."

2. The office at 516 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md., is prepared to assist pastors and churches in making their plans, furnishing posters, literature, speakers, and the like.

3. We want the annual conference to raise up a "New Century Service Commission" of three or five members which shall have charge of the promotional activities within the conference and to co-operate with the general office. We shall through this commission work along these lines:

a. Ask each church to establish a "New Century Service Commission" with three departments, or committees, the pastor of the church being the chairman; Educational Committee, Stewardship Committee, Finance Committee. This Commission to be appointed by the quarterly conference and to work under its supervision.

b. The creation of a Woman's Auxiliary in every church which shall put itself behind the entire "New Century Service" program of the church.

c. A survey of the conference which shall reveal the actual financial conditions and responses of the churches, and that through charts each church's record may be made clear.

d. The holding of a series of group or district meetings over the conference as soon as possible in order to bring actively and in detail further provisions and implications of this program.

Admittedly, this program is not final. It is, however, a very definite step towards a fuller realization of our task and has in it a certain promise. To this end the conference is asked to adopt this procedure that we may make it uniform throughout the church. And further, this office pledges itself to the most loyal service.

Submitted at the direction of the Executive Committee.

JAMES H. STRAUGHN, Executive Sec.-Treas.

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD

To love abundantly is to live abundantly, and to love forever is to live forever. Hence eternal life is inextricably bound up with love. We want to live forever for the same reason that we want to live tomorrow. Why do you want to live tomorrow? It is because there is some one who loves you, and whom you want to see tomorrow, and to be with, and to love back. There is no other reason why we should live on than that we love and are beloved. It is when a man has no one to love him that he commits suicide. So long as he has friends, those who love him and whom he loves, he will live, because to live is to love. Be it but the love of a dog, it will keep him in life; but let that go and he has no contact with life, no reason to live. He dies by his own hand.

Eternal life is also to know God, and God is love. This is Christ's own definition. "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent." Love must be eternal. It is what God is. On the last analysis, then love is life. Love never faileth, and life never faileth so long as there is love. That is the philosophy of what Paul is showing us; the reason why, in the nature of things, love should be the supreme thing—because it is going to last; because in the nature of things it is an eternal life. It is a thing that we are living now, not what we get when we die; that we shall have a poor chance of getting when we die unless we are living now.

No worse fate can befall a man in this world than to live and grow old alone, unloving and unloved. To be lost is to live in an unregenerate condition, loveless and unloved; and to be saved is to love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth already in God. For God is love.—Henry Drummond.

THE UNFAILING FRIEND

O Lord, I would delight in Thee,
And on Thy care depend;
To Thee in every trouble flee,
My best, my faithful Friend.

When all created streams are dried,
Thy fulness is the same;
May I with this be satisfied,
And glory in Thy name.

O that I had a stronger faith
To look within the veil;
To rest on what my Savior saith,
Whose Word can never fail!

O Lord, I cast my care on Thee.
I triumph and adore;
Henceforth my great concern shall be
To love and please Thee more.

LOVE THE LIBERATOR

Love is the great liberator. The coming of love is the opening of the prison. If the men and women whose memory we most cherish had lived and labored with any other motive, then would they have been less than we now know them to be. They would not and could not have transformed, as they did, the disappointments and disillusions which sometimes appeared to be their only reward. Their large fine spirit is perfectly expressed in the words of the Apostle Paul: "I will very gladly spend and be spent for you, though the more abundantly I love you the less I be loved."

Could the whole spirit of Jesus be more fitly or more fully interpreted? And the fruit of that spirit? It is "the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

Love is the great liberator. It is as when the warm sunshine of spring speaks the word of release, and a new spirit breathes in the air and shines in the light; a tender green begins to clothe the brown clods, the orchard and woodland awake to wondrous loveliness, and there is music everywhere as when the morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy.

"Now the Lord is that spirit: and where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

Browning is right!

> Now would I face the world with my new life,
> With my new crown.
> How soon a smile of God can change the world!
> How we are made for happiness—how work
> Grows play; adversity a winning fight!

The coming of Christ, which is the coming of love, is life's superb awakening. Everywhere prison doors fly open. Faith that was bound, hope that was bound—see them now. They arnge the open spaces free to all the light and the sweet air. A new gleam in the eyes, a new lilt in the heart, a new vigor in the stride. With every uplifting of the heart to Him fresh powers unfold, and the voice of the taskmaster is heard no more.

* * * * *

Here and there on the road of life we encounter a wayfarer who has known the truth, whom the truth has made free, and in him we have seen destroyed "the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations." He has given us a glimpse of a life, here and now, in which "death is swallowed up in victory, and the Lord God wipes away tears, and the rebuke of His people takes He away from off all the earth."

Should he speak to us, this wayfarer, of the liberating truth that is in Him, that makes His mere presence a shining surprise, what would he say? Would he not say in that day: "Lo, this is my God. I have waited for Him, and He is saving men: This is the Lord; I have waited for Him; I will be glad and rejoice in His salvation."

He has seen his life at last in the light of a love which is a ministering power and a plentiful peace, and because of him the dreariest road comes to be the way home.—Baptist Times.

FALSEHOOD

Falsehood is never so successful as when she baits her hook with truth; and no opinions so fatally mislead us as those that are not wholly wrong, as no watches so effectually deceive the wearer as those that are sometimes right.—Colton.

SUFFOCATED CHRISTIANS

Breath is one of the signs of life. After God had created Adam's body from the dust of the ground, He "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). When the physical breath leaves the body, death is only a matter of minutes unless some drastic first aid measures are taken, and these are not always certain in their results. In a very real sense prayer is the breath of the spiritual life of the Christian, and he begins to "breathe" the moment he is born again. A missionary, writing to a friend who had asked the secret of her prayer life, says: "I do not know how to write about my praying. There is nothing to say. So far as I know it is just being with the Lord, turning to Him instinctively, knowing He cares. It has no name, this life with Him. It is too simple for definition. Sometimes, when a big battle is on, there has to be a closing down of everything, and a shutting up of oneself to prayer. But far oftener that is impossible. I think it is just living with Him; and prayer is the breath of that life. I think we have within us a quiet cell into which, as it were, we can retire any time, anywhere."

But in the rush and bustle of daily life are not Christians in danger of voluntary spiritual suffocation? Yet, just as we stand before an open window and drink in great draughts of fresh air the first thing in the morning, sending the life-blood tingling through the body, so, in His presence, we may drink in great spiritual draughts at the beginning of each day and be conscious of our Lord's life flooding our being with new vigor and strength. And shall we not look to Him to teach us also how to "breathe" normally, moment by moment, throughout each day, in fulfillment of His command to "pray without ceasing?"—Exchange.

HOW SHALL I GIVE THIS YEAR TO THE LORD'S WORK?

If I refuse to give anything to the Lord's cause this year I cast a ballot in favor of the cessation of all Christian work.

If I give less than heretofore, I favor a reduction in the work, proportionate to my reduced contribution.

If I give the same as formerly, I disregard any forward movement.

If I advance my offering I favor an advance in the conquest for Christ. Shall I join this class?

Resolved: I believe in increasing the work of Christ; therefore I will increase my offering to His cause.—Exchange.

WHAT DR. JOWETT LEARNED

In reviewing his first pastorate, which was at Newcastle, England, the late Dr. J. H. Jowett said: "I have learned this lesson, that sin is mighty, but God is mightier; I have learned that man is impotent himself! I have learned that no man need be regarded as beyond redemption; I have learned that for the ruined life there is restoration, a power, a peace, and a joy unspeakable; I have learned that the care and the misery of this church are in the homes where Christ is absent; I have learned that the happiest and most beautiful homes connected with this congregation are the homes of the redeemed. These are the lessons of my ministry. Upon the experience of these severe years of labor I declare with a glad and confident heart that Jesus has power and willingness to redeem everybody."—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

DOROTHY'S CHAIRS

"I'll take the spider-legs chairs," said Anna, the oldest, who had posted herself on the value of antiques.

"Mine's the bookcase," followed Philomena briefly.

"My choice is the set of haircloth furniture."

"I'll have the tall clock."

"I'll take the funny little spider-legged desk."

And so on to, "Well, I may as well choose the sideboard."

Anna frowned a little at that. The sideboard was cracked and discolored, so she had hoped that none of them would give it a second glance. On her trip for information among the antique stores she had seen a sideboard just like that, marked with three figures, of which the first was not a "1." It was just as bruised, just as disreputable. "Er—I'll take the blue willow pattern set of dishes," she sniffed.

"But Dorothy hasn't picked yet," spoke up one of the cousins perfunctorily.

"Oh, never mind me," smiled Dorothy a little wanly from one of the mended chairs. "Just leave me out a few things to remember him by."

Grandfather had been dead only three days. He had made no will, for apparently there wasn't much except the old furniture. He had once said for them to divide it to suit themselves, for they knew what they liked better than he could guess. So they were dividing it now. The others were thinking of making as good choices pecuniarily as possible. Dorothy was thinking of the old man whom she had loved. The "choosing" method of division had been suggested by Anna, who was posted on antiques, and the others usually followed Anna's lead.

"Suppose we call the kitchen chairs one of Dorothy's 'picks,'" said one of the cousins amusedly. "She wants things to remind her of him, and there isn't a thing in the house so well fitted for it as the old chair set. He was forever whittling in one of the straight backs or smoking in the old rocker. If being a reminder has value, then the old chair set is the best thing in the house for Dorothy."

"Except maybe the big stick cane," laughed another. "Grandfather clumped 'round with that six days in the week, and only took the gold-headed cane for church on Sunday."

"I speak for the gold-headed cane," called a cousin. "Dorothy can have the stick if she wants it."

"Out of your turn, Matildy," warned another, "though Dorothy can have the stick if she likes. She's three behind, anyhow."

"No, she isn't, for I picked out her turns as they came 'round," reminded Anna. "She said for me to leave out reminders for her, you know. She can have the stick for the last turn. She can't see that without thinking of the old codger."

Dorothy flushed a little at the disrespectful word, but said nothing. She didn't care to "mix in" the wrangle of division, though she perfectly understood what was going on. She liked to think of grandfather as being near, with his tender old eyes and loving smile. That was worth more than any difference of value in articles. And she was glad to have the old stick and chairs that were so intimately associated with her grandfather.

The chairs were of heavy wood and so old and worn that if any paint or varnish had ever been on them it was worn entirely off, and the middle of the bottoms was half worn through. But what hurt their looks most and wholly condemned them in the eyes of the other cousins was a clumsy strip of wood screwed securely to the chair behind the rounds of each back. With use and strain their rounds probably had been broken off near or even with the seat, and the strips were to hold them in place.

At length the division was ended to the satisfaction of all, even Dorothy. Philomena was exulting at having secured the best-looking articles. Though Anna's selections were more rubbed and chipped or unstable than some of the others, a subdued gleam of satisfaction showed in her eyes. And for various reasons of their own, the rest, too, were satisfied.

"It seems a shame that Dorothy picked out such poor stuff," commented a more conscientious cousin as they trooped back to the kitchen. "And she is going to get married next month, too. What will Jack Ellis think of those straight-backs and the rocker, and of the big stick, and the rest of the mess?"

"Dorothy has the best reminders of grandfather of us all," said Anna sweetly. "Just dollars and cents aren't everything in the world."

"Piffle!" scorned one of the girls. "Let that come from any one but you."

Dorothy hastened to bridge the breach. "I'm delighted with what I've got," she declared sincerely. "And I know Jack loves me enough to feel so, too."

A month later they were married and went to live in a little tenement near where Jack worked as an assistant bookkeeper. The old chairs were put in the kitchen, and the few other things that had been assigned to Dorothy were placed in various parts of the house. They couldn't buy much on Jack's small salary.

Jack was ingenious with tools, however, and most of his evenings were devoted to tinkering in the kitchen. One evening, during a little leisure, Jack eyed the chairs speculatively, "Would it—er—hurt your feelings any if I should paint and varnish 'em up a little?" he asked doubtfully.

"No, indeed, Jack. They're dear old chairs, but I'd love to fix them."

So Jack went to work energetically, and in a few minutes a strip was unscrewed from the bottom and from the rounds of one. Then the chair back was lifted, disclosing four middle medium-sized holes and two outside large ones covered with glue.

"Looks like the rounds were broken off or sawed off, leaving the ends in the holes, and these covered with glue," Jack said. "Funny. I'll have to gouge them out."

This he proceeded to do, presently uttering a surprised exclamation.

"What's the matter?" asked Dorothy.

Jack did not answer, but worked on feverishly, going from one hole to another. Presently he turned the chair over, rapping it smartly. A shower of glittering coins clinked on the floor. He whirled back the chair without appearing to notice Dorothy's cry, gouged a few moments, then turned and rapped again. More coins glittered out. "That's all," he announced after another scrutiny. "Now count up."

They did so, placing them in little piles.

"Eight of the twenty-dollar gold pieces in each of the big holes," he wondered, "and ten-dollar ones in the smaller. How much does that make, little girl?"

"Seven hundred and twenty," answered Dorothy, after a little counting on her fingers.

"Correct. Now we'll investigate the other chairs. Wonder if they'll have anything?"

They did, just the same amount, except that in one of the rocking-chair holes was a folded paper. Jack passed it to Dorothy without examination. She opened and read aloud: "To the one who takes my old chairs through love of the old man, I give the money they're taking care of. I don't want it to be divided. And I don't mind adding that I hope and expect it will be the dear daisy-chain maker.

"GRANDFATHER."

"I used to weave daisy chains and put them on his head when we were out in the fields together," she said in a choking voice.—Presbyterian Advance.

THE WOMAN AND THE BOY

"I must tell you, decidedly, Mrs. Patterson, that I cannot teach Clarence Ray another Sunday," and Mr. Blackford looked as if he meant every word, as he squared his shoulders and threw back his head. "The other boys do fairly well," he continued, "but Clarence is restless and inattentive, noisy and obstinate enough to set the whole class going!"

Mrs. Patterson looked up with a little frown of perplexity on her pleasant face. She had been intermediate superintendent only a few short weeks and yet this was the third teacher who had failed with the class, largely on Clarence Ray's account. He was not a bad boy, she was sure of it; he was a nervous, restless, motor type who had never learned self-control.

"You will have to take Clarence out of the class or get a new teacher before next Sunday," said Mr. Blackford, after a moment's pause.

"I will make some provision for Clarence for next Sunday, Mr. Blackford," said Mrs. Patterson at last, "and then I will let you know my decision."

What should she do with Clarence next Sunday, she asked herself on the way home from church. What should she do with Clarence? The question rang in her thoughts throughout the day and several days following. Next Sunday was Easter and the topic for Clarence's class was "The Risen Lord," with kindred topics in all the other classes of the department. Was there some way in which Clarence could help her to make this topic real to the boys and girls? She telephoned Clarence on Saturday and asked him to meet her early at the church on Sunday morning; and when he came up the stairs full fifteen minutes before the hour, he found her waiting at a small table strewn with various objects.

"Clarence," she said in a tone of friendly confidence, "I wonder if you would make a poster for me this morning that I could use in the closing exercise of our department to help the boys and girls to realize what Easter really is. There is no greater day in all the Christian's year than Easter and sometimes I think that a picture helps us to understand its meaning. This sheet of drawing paper will make the poster," she continued, holding it up, "and this picture of Jesus and Mary on the resurrection morning will form the center. With this stencil as a guide, you are to draw a tall, stately Easter lily on either side of the picture. Then I want you to print across the top in letters as beautiful as you can make them, 'Christ Is Risen,' and across the bottom, 'Are You Risen With Him?' These water colors and this bit of gilding can be used for the letters. I am sure that this poster would help me very much in the little talk I want to give the boys and girls. Are you willing to try to make it? And do you think that you can?"

The active boy, whose religion thus far had largely found expression in terms of the eager hand, had listened with ever increasing interest. "Of course I can do it!" he said stoutly, and seated himself at the table without delay.

Everybody who passed through the department room that morning looked with surprise at Clarence, the "problem" of the school, working quietly and industriously at the little table in the corner. At first he had a proud, self-conscious air, handling his materials like a skilled workman, proud of his task. But gradually the sweet, compelling influence of the work that he was doing, of the things that he was handling, left its impress on his keen, sensitive face. The beautiful picture for the center told the Easter story better than words to a lad of his type; the stately lilies he was drawing on either side and the simple Easter messages he was lettering with such care, gave to the picture an added meaning. And by and by, as he worked, there stole across his round, freckled face a look of reverent interest.

When Mrs. Patterson held up the finished poster during the closing exercises of the intermediate department and gave its message in a few deeply earnest words, no one in the room listened with more eager attention than Clarence. And when, at the close, she told who had made it and praised his careful work, Clarence flushed to the roots of his auburn hair.

"Clarence," said Mrs. Patterson as the pupils were leaving, "how would you like to be my secretary and help me a few minutes every week?"

"Sure I'd like it!" said Clarence, shifting awkwardly from one foot to the other.

"But you'd have to miss a part of the lesson, so you would have to give extra good attention the rest of the hour. I couldn't ask any of you to be my secretary if it sacrificed your whole class hour. Would you promise to do your best in your class if I take you for my helper?"

Mrs. Patterson's outstretched hand was caught in a strong boyish clasp that made her fingers tingle, and she knew that the promise was made.

Mrs. Parker had thought the matter over very earnestly all the week long. It seemed presumptuous that she should attempt to teach that class of unruly junior boys with whom so many others—both men and women—had failed. What was the matter with that class of boys anyway, she wondered. Was it really all their fault that they had come to be the school problem? Had every honest effort really been made to appreciate them and understand their point of view? Or had people come to approach them in an offensive, suspicious attitude that immeidately awakened a spirit of rebellion?

"O God, help me to love and understand them!" she prayed. "Help me to meet them where they are, not expecting them to come to me!" And as she prayed, she worked and studied and planned.

When she entered the classroom on Sunday morning she found eight or ten boys with chairs tilted carelessly back against the wall. It was a pleasant, spacious classroom, with one large stained glass window, substantial oak chairs, and a heavy Brussels carpet in green and tan. But there was not a picture upon the walls, no table, no blackboard, nothing to teach the eye or call out the expressional life.

The boys were already beginning to pull each others' coats, towsle one another's hair, and rock their chairs noisily to and fro when the new teacher entered.

"Good morning, boys," she said brightly, "I'm going to ask you to set all the chairs out in the hall this morning. Do it very quietly, please, and place them in order along the wall where they will not be in the way."

The boys looked up in surprise at this novel request and were so filled with curiosity about what was going to happen that they actually removed the chairs with very little noise and confusion.

"We are going to do some work this morning, you see," explained the new teacher, "and as we have no table or blackboard, we will have to work on the floor. But if a stout old lady like myself can sit on the floor, I am sure you boys won't mind it."

She laughed brightly as she spoke, and the boys laughed with her; and when she kneeled on the floor and spread out a large piece of drawing paper, the boys all crowded about her to see what was going to happen next.

"You have been studying about how God's people conquered the land of Canaan," she began, "and I thought you might like to see just where they all settled down. There were twelve tribes or families of them, you remember, though one tribe was kept to help the priests and another was so large that it was divided into two tribes, so there were twelve tribes to find homes."

While she was speaking, she was drawing the outline of the Mediterranean sea and the Jordan river with the little sea of Galilee toward the north and the great salt (Dead) sea at its mouth.

"Now you will remember that the tribes of Reuben and Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh found a home on the east side of the Jordan," she went on, drawing the outlines of these tribes as she talked, "but weren't they brave to go right over and help the others fight their battles and to stay right with them until hey had all found their homes too? It took all the west side of the Jordan, way north of one sea and south of the other, to supply the rest of them."

On went the busy crayon, marking the homes of the other ten tribes, from Naphtali and Asher in the north to Simeon in the south; and as the teacher worked and the boys looked on, the stories to which they had only half listened on former Sundays were lived out in vividness before them. The fall of Jericho, the defeat and victory at Ai, the tricky plot of the Gibeonites, and the final conquest over the five kings, all took on a new reality as the teacher recalled them with vivid interest and marked the places where these things had actually taken place.

"And now I am going to ask you to cut out the homes of all these tribes," she said, producing several pairs of scissors from her handbag. "Several of you can work at once, only be very careful to keep the lines that I have drawn."

Every boy reached for a pair of scissors, and in an incredibly short time those who were fortunate enough to get a pair had dismembered the home of the Israelites into thirteen irregular sections.

"Now who will volunteer to put them together?" asked the teacher quickly.

"I will," said a chubby, freckled faced boy, with little twinkling blue eyes, the leader in the mischief of other days.

"All right, Arthur, try it," said the teacher; and all the other boys eagerly leaned forward to see what progress Arthur might make. He really did remarkably well, and with several abrupt suggestions from the other boys and only a few low voiced remarks from the teacher, he had the map put together again. Then another boy tried it and another, till at last the teacher thought that she never could forget where a single one of the tribes belonged.

"Those people worked very hard for a home," said the teacher at last, as they all sat looking at the map together, "but don't you suppose they were glad they did when they were really settled among the lovely hills and valleys of the holy land?

"God has given us this church for our home," she added, gently, "and what a beautiful place it is, where we may come to meet Him face to face! Don't you think it is worth while to work very hard to make this a place where God would really like to be?"

A moment's reverent silence was broken by the tinkling of a bell.

"Well, what do you know about that? There's the last bell!" said Arthur in surprise.—The Continent.

HOW WARS BEGIN

Tommy was reading the war news. When he finished he came over to his mother and said:

"Mamma, how do wars begin?"

"Well, suppose the English hauled down the American flag, and that the Americans—"

Here Tommy's father intervened.

"My dear," he said, "the English would not—"

Mother: "Excuse me, they would—"

"No, dear, who ever heard of such a thing?"

"Pray do not interrupt!"

"But you are giving Tommy a wrong idea!"

"I'm not, sir!"

"You are, madam!"

"Don't call me madam! I won't allow you!"

"I'll call you what I choose!"

"I'm sorry I ever saw you! You are so—"

Tommy (going out): "It's all right; I think I know how wars begin."—Selected.

THE POOR MAN'S BURDEN

A poor man traveling on a hot day, carrying a heavy load upon his back. A rich man passing by in his chariot, took pity on him, and invited him to take a seat in his chariot behind. Shortly after, on turning round, the rich man saw the pilgrim still oppressed with the load upon his back, and asked why he did not lay it on the chariot. The poor man said that it was enough that he had been allowed to be himself carried in the chariot, and he could not presume to ask for more.

"O foolish man!" was the reply, "If I am willing and able to carry you, am I not able to carry your burden?"

Oppressed and anxious Christian, do you not see in this man your own unbelief and folly? He who has accepted your person, and is your reconciled Father in Christ Jesus, expects you to cast upon Him all your burden of cares, too; and He is able to sustain it.—Evan. Mess.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

September 16—Paul Writes to His Friends at Corinth

Scripture Basis—I Corinthians, Chapters 1 to 4.

Golden Text—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! Psalm 133:1.

Salutation

The Apostle's first letter to the Corinthians was written about A. D. 56 in Ephesus, where he had been for three years, after having heard of the differences that had arisen among them by those who would cause dissension.

In all of his letters, Paul begins with a gracious and brotherly salutation. We observe this in the opening verses of this epistle. The late Dr. C. I. Schofield gives as the title of the first nine verses, "The believer's position in grace." He rejoices in what the grace of God has done for them; having been enriched by the indwelling Christ in utterance and knowledge; possessing spiritual gifts equal to any other Christian's; and endowed with hope and anticipation of the coming of the Lord. His praise and encouragement were unstinted.

Separations

The Corinthian Chritsians had not become separated or divided, but as slight abrasions of the skin often lead to serious infections if not given the proper attention, so might the contentions of the Corinthians lead to schisms which would be disastrous to them as well as to the cause of Christ.

The contention was over their leaders. Some claimed to be followers of Apollos (see Acts 18:24-28), others of Paul, others of Cephas (Peter: see John 1:42), and still others of Christ. Paul declares that this cannot be. Christ cannot be divided. No one save Him was crucified for their sins, neither indeed could be. Baptism was in Christ's name only. Thus Paul reasoned with them.

Substantiation

In the last half of the chapter, the writer establishes the fact that worldly wisdom in itself is of no effect—yea, is a hindrance—in the things of God. He brings in the testimony of Isaiah (29:14) to bear him out in this truth. Men as well as God disrovered that the wisdom of the world sould not save men, so God set His faithful apostles to "the foolishness of prearhing." Many of the world today lonsider it foolishness, "but unto us which are saved, it is the power of God."

God's ways are extremely different from worldly man's ways. The world looks to the wise and strong to accomplish its purposes, but God chooses the foolish and weak to confound the mighty. How often this is demonstrated! He operates His righteous will in this manner so that "no flesh should glory in His presence." If many would glory, he should glory in the Lord.

Resignation

By his own methods and conduct, Paul showed that he used no excellency of speech or worldly wisdom in preaching the gospel. He was not concerned about his manner of preaching but about the Messiah he was presenting. Such must be the attitude of every true preacher of the gospel of the pulpit as well as the pew. Still, there is great wisdom with God, and Paul states in this second chapter that there is mystery connected with it. Dr. Schofield describes mystery in the Scripture as "a previously hidden truth, now divinely revealed, but in which a supernatural element still remains despite the revelation."

Revelation

Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. Worldly-minded people cannot expect to know the mysteries of the kingdom. This privilege is accorded the disciples of Christ (Matt. 13:11). Paul again quotes the prophet Isaiah (64:4) to bear up his argument. When we were received into the family of God by the blood of Christ, we entered into a revelation of the mysteries of God. Yet, there are spiritual truths still unlearned by us and spiritual ecstacies still unobtained. Only as our spiritual lives are fed and nourished do we reach the heights yet unattained.

Carnality

In the beginning of the third chapter, the Apostle shows the Corinthians that they have not yet gotten away from carnal-mindedness. They were as babes in Christ, because of their contentions. Who are Paul and Apollos and any others of their calling but servants of the Lord Jesus? Whether one started the church or another helped to build it up made little difference, for only God could cause it to grow. Those who labored faithfully will receive their reward, but to God belongs the glory.

"We are laborers together with God"—what a privilege! We are not laborers of God or laborers for God, but laborers with Him! That makes our responsibility the greater as well as the easier. It is greater because God's work is perfect and as workers with Him we must strive to make ours more nearly perfect. It is easier because God shoulders much of the burden, and thus takes it off of us.

Construction

All of us are builders. The kind of building we are erecting depends largely upon the foundation. Jesus Christ is the only firm foundation. But some are building upon earthly possessions and ambitions. These will not stand the test; they will crumble and fall when tried. It behooves us to start aright.

One thing about which the Corinthians and other Gentile Christians were careless was the care of their temples, which were their own bodies. Christians today are equally as guilty. Paul in no uncertain language calls attention to this. There is a need for reverence of these bodies of ours, for the writer tells us that the Spirit of God dwells therein. Should we not keep them strong and clean and "meet for the Master's use?"

JAPANESE SUNDAY SCHOOL DELEGATES ON TOUR IN U. S. A.

Of the 167 delegates from Japan who traveled on the "Tenyo Maru" to the Tenth Convention of the World's Sunday School Association, 110 toured in the U. S. A. before returning to Yokohama. This entire party went to the Yosemite in a special train at the end of the convention. Thence they went to Sacramento where unusual courtesies were shown to them both by city officials and their fellow countrymen.

Forty-nine proceeded northward to Portland, Tacoma and Seattle, whence they sailed for Japan. The others followed an itinerary which took them as far eastward as Boston. At many places en route they were formally received by city officials and representative organizations. In Denver, Governor Sweet of Colorado participated in the reception. When in Pittsburgh these Japanese went to the grave of the late H. J. Heinz, who had been a helpful friend in advancing Sunday school work in Japan, and placed a floral wreath with an appropriate service.

"THY KINGDOM COME"

The motto of the World's Sunday School Tenth Convention, which was held in Los Angeles, July 11-18, was "Thy Kingdom Come." This is also the title of the report of that convention—a book of at least 400 pages containing an account of the meeting which was attended by over 7,600 delegates from many countries. John T. Faris, D.D., is the editor. There will be a general account of the convention, many addresses will be printed and the findings of the various conferences are given in full. Requests for "Thy Kingdom Come" can be sent to the World's Sunday School Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City, and notification will be given when the volume is ready for mailing. The cost will be $1.50 postpaid.

CELEBRATION AT ABBOTT'S CREEK CHURCH

On Sunday, September 9, the Raper Family Association will hold an all-day celebration at Abbott's Creek Church, six miles out on hard surface state highway No. 77 from High Point, N. C. Abbott's Creek Church was founded in 1758, and three years before this (1755) William Raper, the founder of the Raper family in this part of the state, settled in this community. Recently a new church, costing nearly $50,000, was dedicated; about 50 of William Raper's descendants are now connected with this church.

At 11 a. m. the historical address will be delivered by Dr. W. T. Whitsett, of Whitsett, N. C., who is well known as a speaker on historical subjects; he has given much research into the history of Abbott's Creek and the Raper family, and has gathered much valuable information.

At 2 p. m. O. A. Kirkman, Jr., of High Point, N. C., a recent graduate of Oxford University, England, will speak.

Special music, short talks, and other exercises will make it a day filled with interest. Dinner will be served on the grounds at noon. The public generally is cordially invited to attend these exercises.

—More than half of Florida's people came from outside the state.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Sunday was a great day for us, it being the day our revival began. Rev. B. M. Williams was with us for the first service and will be with us for the remainder of the week. Bro. Williams brought to us two splendid messages at the morning and evening services Sunday. We are liking Bro. Williams fine. Will give a full report of our revival later on. We were glad to have with us Sunday afternoon President Taylor. He preached to us in the afternoon service. He used for a text that beautiful passage of Scripture, "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain." This was indeed a helpful sermon. There was lots of compliments on his sermon. President Taylor talked to us a short while about the conference program.

Our Sunday school is doing fine. We were glad to have with us Sunday in our Sunday school Mr. Yarborough, of Richmond, Va. He gave us a splendid talk on the Sunday school lesson for Sunday. We were also glad to have with us Mrs. J. C. Edwards, of Portsmouth, Va., who used to be one of our faithful members before moving away. We are always glad to have her visit us.

Our Missionary Society is doing good work. Our net meeting will be held with Mrs. Edd Wood. We hope to have all the members present at this meeting.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Democrat Charge, Pleasant Gap.—Our revival, which began at Pleasant Gap the first Sunday in August, ended the following Sunday. The attendance was good, especially at night. We hope that the revival has been a great help to the community. Mr. James Corn assisted Rev. H. W. Bell in this revival.

Our Sunday school is still in progress.

Best wishes. REPORTER.

Enfield.—Although it rained last Sunday throughout the day, yet there was a fair congregation at all the appointments—Whitakers Chapel, Roseneath and Whitakers.

Next Sunday will be the beginning of the special revival services at Whitakers Chapel. We hope the members living at a distance from the church will see fit to make next week kind of a homecoming week. This is the time which the membership, unitedly, needs to help rally the cause for which their church stands.

The pastor and his people are very pleased to have Rev. and Mrs. D. R. Williams visiting in their midst this week.

At this writing Mr. B. R. Kimball, Sr., is seriously ill.

Mrs. James Lewis, of the Whitakers Chapel church, has been ill for two weeks. She was taken ill while on a visit to Norfolk. She is improving, however.

Miss Lady Bustin has not been well for several weeks. We wish for them all a speedy recovery.

The fourth Sunday the Enfield church gave the writer a vacation from his pulpit which he appreciated. The time was spent largely among relatives. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Liberty, Davison Charge.—I feel that some good has been accomplished since our last report.

Our pastor has just closed the revival meeting at this place; it began on the past third Sunday and closed the following Friday night. Our pastor, assisted by Rev. C. H. Cranford and son, Farland Cranford, certainly did some fine preaching. I feel quite certain that all enjoyed hearing them. Our former pastor, Rev. Robert Short, was with us on Friday afternoon. We were very glad to have him with us. There were 18 conversions and renewals and the church was greatly revived. There are yet a good number around Liberty unsaved, but may our prayers not be in vain, but may they yet be answered in some way. Seven joined the church at the close of the meeting. We hope to receive more by the close of the year's work.

The third Sunday in September is the appointed time for the camp meeting at Chapel Hill. We pray and trust that it will be one of the best meetings that have ever been held at Chapel Hill.

I close with love and best wishes to all.

ANNIE HILL.

Mecklenburg Circuit.—At the close of our revival services at Zoar Church, the good faithful members and some visiting friends loaded our car with good things to eat. There were some fine large watermelons which our family surely did enjoy, also other articles of need and money. We appreciate all these nice things and the spirit that prevails among the churches of Mecklenburg Circuit to help the pastor by giving, and I hope to be able to induce them to come up with a large amount of the conference budget.

Hoping for further co-operation until we reach the top, I remain your faithful pastor with many thanks and lots of love,

W. C. HALL.

Greensville Circuit, Hobbs Chapel.—Our revival meeting began the fourth Sunday in August and closed Wednesday p.m. Brother Glen Madison was the help and did the preaching. His sermons were good all through the meeting. The Holy Spirit was with us. The church was revived and sinners were convicted, still they were not converted. Several left church under conviction rather than surrender their lives to Christ. Some were mothers and fathers, too.

Rev. Mr. Madison is one of the first graduates from High Point College and we see a great future ahead for him in the ministry. He is planning to enter Westminster Seminary this fall. This shows that he is not satisfied with self and wants to prepare to give God the best. Results must follow a person who gives time, talent and service.

The junior choir enjoyed singing hymns and choruses from the new hymn books.

On Wednesday afternoon Rev. Mr. Madison held a service for the little folks. Seven children went forward expressing the desire to become Christians and united with the church. Pray that God may keep them from sin and direct them by the Holy Spirit to be soldiers for Him.

The annual conference is drawing near, and pastor's salary and other claims must be met. This shows we must get busy. While paying to other causes a good brother has suggested that each church should remember our delegate and hand him a "little purse" to help bear his expenses. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

We read with pleasure the report of the wonderful meeting held at Friendship Station with Rev. J. M. Morgan as help. We have heard him preach some powerful sermons.

REPORTER.

Winston-Salem.—The Philathea Class of the First Methodist Protestant Church held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening at the home of Miss Leota Loggins, Mrs. D. E. Wellons associate hostess.

Mrs. W. C. Tise presided over the meeting. Various business matters were discussed and the class voted to have a weiner roast.

During the social hour those having a birthday in this month were delightfully showered. A delicious ice course was served by the hostesses.

Asheville.—Pastor Paschall is carrying on with zeal and earnest endeavor. His messages are from the heart and are intended to reach the hearts of his hearrs.

We deeply feel for Mrs. F. R. McIntyre in the passing of her sister, Mrs. Cheek, at Weaverville, one week ago; and for Mrs. Sue Carter for the going of her father, Brother Andy Roberts, at Weaverville, on the same date.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer and family, of Asheboro, N. C., were guests at Kenilworth Inn the past week. We welcome to our city and church Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Ellington, of Henderson, N. C. Mr. Ellington is with the Dupont Paint Company. Mrs. Ellington was Miss Lucile Renn of our church in Henderson. They are living in the Bellmont Apartments on North Liberty street.

We are planning a revival campaign for November. Decision Day will be observed in the latter part of October.

Sunday was rainy, yet the morning service was well attended. The evening service was rained out.

Brother Paschall is giving us a series of messages Sunday evenings — Crusade with Christ for Evangelism, for World Peace, for Christian Citizenship, and "What Shall I Do with My Life?"

Misses Lois and Alma Walker sang a duet in our Sunday school Sunday. They came all the way from Black Mountain to do this service.

In our services recently were Mr. and Mrs. Pratt, of Chester, Pa. They were visiting their son, Brother E. H. Pratt, and his family.

Brother H. L. Hanner and family have entertained Brother Hanner's sister, Mrs. Dorcas Caravan, with her son, Clarence Caravan, and his wife and young son. These were from Pantego, N. C. Other guests of Brother and Mrs. Hanner were Prother J. C. Reynolds, Mrs. Hanner's father; also Brother and Mrs. Ross Bowman and young son. These were from Greensboro. Mrs. Bowman is Mrs. Hanner's sister. Miss Louise Hanner, who has been visiting in Greensboro, will return home in a few days.

Monday morning Brother Paschall will leave for Whitakers, N. C. On Wednesday night, the 12th, he will be married to Miss Spencer Cutchin. He carries the congratulations and good wishes of our church here. We are awaiting with happiness the coming of his bride. REPORTER.

Liberty Hill Church, Anderson Ct.—The revival began at this place the second Sunday in August and continued through the following Sunday. Rev. G. H. Hendry of Concord did the preaching through Friday night and the pastor did the rest oif the preaching. Brother Hendry's messages were very inspiring and helpful; he will be long remembered by this people. The church was greatly revived.

The C. E. Society held its monthly social for August at the home of Misses Annie and Ruth Pearson. A good time was enjoyed by all present.

Our pastor filled his appointment here the fourth Sunday morning; he preached an especially good sermon, using as his subject Love. There was no service at night.

Mr. Ferree and family left Sunday afternoon to attend the revival meeting at their home church.

ROMAINE POOLE, Reporter.

Concord.—The regular services are being held now, as our pastor's vacation is over. Mr. Hendry has spent the entire four weeks in meetings, and is leaving today for Weaverville to help in a meeting there.

The Lord's Supper was observed at the morning hour Sunday, and a large number communed.

The Sunday school attendance was not as good as usual owing to a steady downpour of rain at the Sunday school hour, but there were 170 present and an offering of $25.00 for the Children's Home.

On Sunday, August 12, our church enjoyed a program by the children from the Home.

The Sunday school held its annual picnic at Ritchie's Lake last Thursday and all seemed to enjoy themselves.

Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk, of Kernersville, spent a short while in our city last week with friends. Mr. Lowdermilk is one of our former pastors, and we are always glad to have him come back.

Miss Ethel Blackwelder had as her guests over the week-end, Misses Laura and Annabel Thompson of West End Church, Greensboro. Miss Laura will teach home economics at the Winecoff High School here this year.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Herrin, who have been living in Charlotte during the summer, have returned to the city to live. Mrs. Herrin is one of the city school teachers.

Mrs. Lottie Brown is leaving today for North Wilkesboro to make her home in the futtre. Mrs. Brown is one of our faithful members and we regret to give her up.

Mrs. Luther Davis and baby, who have been seriously ill at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Newton, are improving, we are glad to report.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Belvin a son on Thursday, August 30, 1928.

On next Saturday night our young people are giving a social in the dining hall of the Sunday school building for the outgoing college students and teachers, and the incoming teachers. MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Mocksville Charge.—Our reports have been few and far between, but nevertheless we have been moving a little. Since our last report we have held four revival meetings, in one of which the pastor did his own preaching because of sickness in the family of the one who was to help. The meetings were fair and we hope did much good, but not as much as we would like to have done because we realize the need of a great work in the evangelistic field.

We are repairing our parsonage and trying to put it in good shape for use. It has been in bad shape on the inside and we have removed the plastering from three rooms and the hall and are ceiling them instead. We hope to soon have it in good shape and all debts paid off.

Last Sunday we raised a part of our college assessment for two of the churches. One of them has, since that time, paid its assessment in full and we hope that the other will do likewise in the near future. Since it was so rainy today and our congregations were small we did not try to raise the assessments for the other churches, but hope to do so at the next preaching service at those churches.

The two Christian Endeavor societies which have been organized this summer are doing fine. They have already found them to be a great help to the churches, especially to the young people. I attended C. E. at Dulin's tonight and in spite of the rain and mud there were about 25 present. We hope for these societies a successful year.

Gibsonville Church.—It has been some time since a report has been sent to the Herald from our Gibsonville church. We are doing a few things down here, but not turning the world over. Our Sunday school attendance has been off some during the vacation weeks and last Sunday the inclement weather kept a number at home. Our Children's Day service was held in June. President Taylor visited our church in July. We have three C. E. Societies and all are active. Our pastor, Dr. Johnson, is bringing us splendid messages every Sunday. Our special meeting begins the third Sunday in September, with Rev. L. W. Gerringer assisting. We have a very active Ladies' Aid Society and Home Missionary Society, and a Young People's F. M. Society. Five young men united with our church here a few Sundays ago. All were members of our Sunday school; two of these young men are married. Born to Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Davidson, August 15, a daughter, Eleanor.

REPORTER.

Mebane Charge.—After a two-week vacation the writer was back on the job last Sunday and was met by a splendid congregation, considering the weather. We were treated to quite a surprise. During our absence the good ladies of our church had the interior of the church treated to a coat of paint. The men caught inspiration from the ladies and put new light fixtures in. All of this was a pleasant surprise to the pastor. And it has added much to the appearance of the church on the inside. The outside of the building was painted last year.

We are planning with the other churches of the town for a union revival which will begin the 14th of October. Will all the readers of this pray that the efforts may result in a great ingathering of precious souls.

Some of our young people are planning to leave soon for High Point College. We will miss them very much in our services but will look forward to the time for them to return. The prayers and best wishes of the entire church will go with these splendid young people.

We are still receiving tokens of kindness. Since our last report we have received many articles of value. Each giver has our sincere thanks for his kindness.

EDW. SUITS.

Lexington, State Street Church.—Good crowds attended all the services Sunday considering the downpour of rain, which kept up practically all day and until late Sunday night. The revival meeting at West Lexington was postponed until next Sunday.

Bro. Bethea gave us a fine sermon on "The Gospel of Christ" Sunday night, which was the one-thousandth sermon he has composed.

Miss Blanche Hardie and her sister, Mrs. Reeves, of Enfield, visited at the parsonage Sunday and were in the services. Mr. and Rrs. Bethea accompanied them to Enfield Monday morning to spend a few days with their daughter, Mrs. Wilcox.

The picnic last Wednesday afternoon was a most enjoyable outing for all who attended. Almost all of our folks were there and some from other denominations. Games were enjoyed during the afternoon, and at 5:30 o'clock a delicious supper was spread.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Koonts have both been sick with tonsilitis for the past few days. Both are improving now, we are glad to state.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will meet at the church Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. REPORTER.

High Point.—In spite of inclement weather the members and friends of the First Church assembled in large numbers at the Sunday school hour and at the 11 o'clock service to greet the new pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, who delivered the initial sermon of his pastorate last Sunday morning. A program of charming music was rendered by Prof. Ernest B. Stimpson, the new director of the music department in High Point College, who played the pipe organ with unusual ease and masterly skill. The prelude, "Vision," was exceptionally beautiful. The choir rendered "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand" in an inspiring manner, and Mrs. J. H. Allen sang "God Be Merciful to Me" in her usual lovely voice. In a short and timely address, Mr. L. R. Johnston, principal of city high school, introduced the speaker, comparing this church to the Allied armies during the late World War. For nearly two years we have had no regular pastor, and have been in a period of watchful waiting and test of spiritual strength just as the Allied armies lay in the trenches for months waiting to strike the blow which broke through the Hindenburg line and defeated the German Kaiser's forces. With the new leader who brings new energy and blood we are now ready to go forward and combat the forces of sin and the enemies of spiritual life around us. In his introductory remarks Rev. Mr.

Farmer said that he felt that he and his family were enjoying a homecoming as well as the congregation, since they have received so many courtesies here by many who already have made them feel very much at home. He said that he comes not with any words of special wisdom, but to proclaim Jesus crucified to save a lost world. We are not responsible for results, but we are accountable for our work and its manner of performance. He chose as the subject of his discourse, "The More Excellent Way," and said that the popular way of life is alluring; it is the "way that seemeth right to a man, but leadeth to death."

Artemus Ward once said, "It is not knowledge that gives us trouble, but knowing so many things that are not so." When the church stops letting God drag it along, then it will come into its full power. This metaphor of the "Way of Life" runs all through the Bible, and is aptly expressed in the lines of John Oxenham:

"To every man there openeth
A Way, and Ways, and a Way;
And the High Soul climbs the High Way,
And the Low Soul gropes the Low;
And in between on the misty flats
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
A High Way and a Low,
And every man decideth
The Way his soul shall go."

At the close of this strong and forceful sermon, which impressed his hearers in a very favorable manner, bringing great joy and courage in the hope of the future work and usefulness of this church, we were especially delighted when the associate pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, announced that the following strong members are uniting with us: Mrs. John S. Pickett, who comes from the Baptist church; Mrs. Mattie Staley, who transfers from Liberty Grove, near Liberty; Mr. and Mrs. John Whitesell, from the Christian church; Prof. C. R. Hinshaw, of the college faculty, who was formerly a Friend; Mrs. R. R. Blackburn, nee Miss Mary Ogburn, who is a member of a well-known Methodist Protestant family, and Dr. and Mrs. P. E. Lindley, who come from the Friends' church. We extend to these splendid members an unusually warm and cordial welcome to our fellowship.

There was a splendid attendance at the evening service, and Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered another able sermon on "What the Church Has Done for Me." Many people thought it surpassed the one of the morning service. The music of the evening brought forth many compliments, and we can but feel that we are highly favored in Mr. Stimpson, the new director of music, as well as the new pastor.

The Junior Mission Circle met Monday morning at 9 o'clock in the assembly room with Mrs. R. M. Andrews, superintendent.

The circles of the Woman's Missionary Societies met at the following places Monday afternoon: Circle No. 1, Mrs. L. J. Diffee, chairman, with Mrs. Ernest L. Auman; Circle No. 2, Mrs. John Walker, chairman, with Mrs. J. G. Snipes; Circle No. 3, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, chairman, with Mrs. W. A. Davis.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening Miss Lois Snipes was leader on the topic, "Will the Golden Rule Work in Business and Industry?"

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard are entertaining the members of the Sunday School Workers' Council this (Tuesday) evening at the parsonage.

Prof. C. R. Hinshaw has taken the place of Dr. P. E. Lindley as leader of the Teacher Training Class, and will continue the class on Wednesday evening after prayer meeting.

Supper will be served to the Men's Brotherhood on Thursday evening at 6:45 o'clock in the church dining room by Mrs. A. M. Rankin's group.

A reception will be given in honor of the pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, and his family at the elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny on Greensboro road next Friday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock, and refreshments will be served by members of the Ladies' Aid Society. A cordial invitation is extended to all members of the church and their friends to come and meet the new pastor and family and become acquainted with them. They are moving into the house at 607 Farriss Avenue, and will be at home there temporarily. Mrs. Farmer is an accomplished musician and a charming woman, and they have a young daughter and son. We count ourselves happy in having this lovely family in our midst and are looking forward with eager delight to companionship with them.

High Point College will open for its fifth annual session on Wednesday, September 12, and a large number of new students has been enrolled.

Mrs. Edwards, of Middletown, Ohio, who is pleasantly remembered by many friends as Miss Jewel Pickett, is the guest of Mrs. J. W. Harriss and other relatives for a few weeks.

Miss Claire Douglas has returned from Chapel Hill, where she has been taking some special work in the summer school. She will be a senior in the college this year.

Mrs. C. R. Strouse, of Hagerstown, Md., who is very pleasantly remembered by many friends in High Point and the college as Miss Eugenia Williams, was here for a short visit Monday. She is a guest of her father, Mr. R. F. Williams, and Mrs. Williams in Greensboro.

Miss Ruth Moffitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, left last week for Philadelphia to take training as a nurse in one of the large hospitals there.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Johnston and little daughter, Rebecca Holt, are at home from Elon College. Mr. Johnston taught in Duke summer school, Durham, while Mrs. Johnston and Rebecca spent the summer with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Wicker.

Miss Lucille Pickens returned Friday from New York where she studied Library Science in Columbia University for two months, and has resumed her work in High Point Public Library. En route home she visited Mrs. May Mason Dixon in Baltimore for a few days.

Halifax Charge.—We began our revival services at Eden Church on the first Sunday in August. Rev. J. E. Pritchard preached for us on Sunday at 11 a. m. and the writer did the rest of the preaching until Rev. T. C. Casaday, pastor of the First Methodist Protestant Church, Montgomery, Ala., reached us on Tuesday. We continued this meeting until the following Sunday night. Bro. Casaday did some good gospel preaching, which was appreciated by all who heard him; the church was greatly revived, three conversions and two accessions to the church.

We began the meeting at Bethesda church on the second Sunday in August. Brother Casaday assisted us here until Friday night. He did some good preaching here, and the church was revived. Each service grew better and we were sorry that Bro. Casaday had to leave us so soon. Mr. Casaday is one of the best pastors in the Alabama conference, as well as an evangelist.

We began our meeting at Union on the third Sunday in August. Rev. J. B. O'Briant came to us on Sunday morning and did all of the preaching. Bro. O'Briant was at his best and did some good preaching. The church was revived and all were impressed with the messages.

On the fourth Sunday in August we began our revival at Hollister. Rev. B. M. Williams, of Efland, came to us for the 11 o'clock services on Sunday. Our president, Bro. Taylor, was also on the work and preached at four churches and presented the conference claims on Sunday. He brought us a deep, stirring message at Hollister in the afternoon Sunday. All were highly pleased with his message. Bro. Williams continued to bring us his stirring messages until Friday night. The church here was greatly revived. Four or five conversions and some reclaimed. There were three accessions to the church. All were well pleased with Bro. Williams' messages and would be glad to have him come again.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Shiloh.—On the third Sunday of August began one of the most "reviving" revivals Shiloh has known in many years. Like Pentecost, the real revival began in a prayer meeting. On Thursday and Friday nights a little band of earnest souls gathered at the church and prayed for a baptism of God's Holy Spirit. Like the psalmist of old, the burden of our prayer was, "Revive us again that thy people may rejoice in thee." When God's professing children rejoice, the unsaved begin to seek that joy. On Friday night the Spirit came and we received the assurance of "showers of blessings." We, like Elijah on Carmel, saw the small cloud on the horizon and looked forward to the refreshing showers.

On Sunday we had the usual large crowd but there seemed to be a holy awe over the congregation. God's Spirit hovered over the church and we were conscious of something more than pleasant friendships and happy greetings. Our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, preached at 11 a. m. from the text, "Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and not live." Again he preached at 3 p. m. on "The Utter Insufficiency of Human Energy."

Each afternoon from 2 to 2:45 we had prayer meeting. At 3 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. our pastor, at the request of the church, did the preaching. He gave us some wonderful messages from the following texts:

"The paralytic brought by four and let down through the roof."

"When it was noised abroad that Jesus was there."

"Come unto me, all ye who labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

"Curse ye Meroz—because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

"Ye did run well, who hath hindered you?"

"The Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost."

"Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city."

"He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be cut off, and that without remedy."

"Pentecost."

"Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"

God's Spirit was upon the preacher, and the messages were sealed by the Holy Ghost upon both saved and unsaved. Men were not afraid to say "amen" nor ashamed to shout his praises, and they did both.

The sweetest service of all (to the writer) was on Friday afternoon when Bro. Troxler opened by an experience meeting and many testified of their love for the Lord and His goodness to them. Then we had a sermon on "Pentecost," followed by a memorial service of a peculiar kind. Each Christian was asked to kneel by the one who led him or her to Christ; or if that person should be absent or gone on to Glory, come to the altar in memory of such an one. The feeling was too deep for expression, not much could be heard but sobs from overflowing hearts. O, it was good to be there, and to know the fellowship of our Christ and His redeemed children! I would that we could carry the rejoicing of the hope until the next revival and on to the end. Could we be just as earnest in prayer and soul-saving throughout the year, what a harvest there would be.

There were about 30 conversions and reclamations. Twenty-nine were added to the church, some by profession and some by letter, with at least two more to come soon. We were sorry for the meeting to close and leave some in whom we were vitally interested outside, the fold, but we shall continue to pray for them. O, Shiloh, be faithful to your sacred trust. Nourish the little ones, bear one another's burdens, and above all let brotherly love continue.

Yours in His service,

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Randolph.—Our special meeting at Shiloh began on the second Sunday in August. Bro. Millaway came to us on Sunday, and did some fine preaching for us. The weather was unfavorable. We had a few professions and reclamations, and three accessions.

We began our meeting at Bethel on the third Sunday in August. Bro. H. C. Carmichael came to us on Monday. His work, too, was highly appreciated. We had a number of professions and several reclaimed. Nine joined the church at Bethel, and two gave their names for membership at Gray's Chapel.

We were to start on our special meeting at Bethany September 2, but because of rain the meeting is to start September 9. Bro. B. M. Williams is to be our pulpit help. We hope for a good meeting. A. O. LINDLEY.

Prof. Howard Munch, of Chapel Hill, was driving last week with his family near Staunton, Va. In attempting to pass a truck his car skidded and overturned and his left arm was so injured that it was amputated. Prof. Munch was graduated from Adrian College, Mich., in 1904. Mrs. Munch is a sister of Missionary Obee of Japan.

Hats off to State Street! They take second place this week in the list of charges paying all claims in full. That ————? is moved down to third place. Now that we have it started down where it belongs, let's keep it going. Come on, some other charge, right quickly, and give it another push. We should get lots of inspiration during these next two months watching that blank go down.

We are away from home and do not know, therefore, what is in the report this week. We hope, however, that it may show well, both in the number of charges remitting, and in amounts.

Counting on all pastors and all church leaders for zeal and persistence in bringing the year to a happy closing, and with assurances of prayers for heaven's help, I am,

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Foust

Delinda F. Foust, nee Smith, was born March 22, 1846. At the age of 13 she accepted Christ as her Savior and joined the church. On February 25, 1866, she was married to Newton Jasper Foust. This union was blessed with five children, all of whom survive; viz., Mrs. Emma C. Neece, Samuel W. Foust, Reu ben P. Foust, Mrs. Mary J. Pugh, and Jasper Foust. She leaves 28 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

After several months of suffering, her spirit was called home on July 28, 1928. And thus at the age of 82 years, four months and six days one of our best members at Gray's Chapel passed on to her reward.

Her influence lives on in her children, who are followers of Jesus.

Her husband preceded her to the Spirit world 33 years. Her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Gray's Chapel beside those of her husband after the funeral services conducted by her pastor.

May the influence of this Christian mother live in the minds and hearts of all her loved ones. And may they meet her in glory.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Payne

Augusta Lula Payne, wife of B. E. Payne, was born October 14, 1867, and died in a High Point hospital August 4, 1928. Mrs. Payne had been sick under a physician's care for more than a year, but had been confined to her bed only for a few weeks. Nearly three weeks ago she was carried to the hospital where her condition grew worse until the end quietly and triumphantly came Saturday evening at 6:10.

Mrs. Payne was born in Davidson County near High Point, and spent her entire life near the place of her birth. She was a daughter of the late Zebulon and Clara Mendenhall Hilton. In 1889 she was married to B. E. Payne. To this union 10 children were born, eight boys and two girls. The second child, a boy, died in infancy. Nine children survive: Percy, Lee, Gorrell, Hubert, Clyde, William, and Stuart; two girls, Mrs. W. B. Turner, of High Point, and Mrs. Lee Freedle, of Winston-Salem; and a sister, Mrs. A. S. Morris, of Davidson County.

She professed religion and joined Pleasant Grove church 33 years ago this fall. During these years she has shown herself to be a consecrated Christian worker. Mrs. Payne had the best interests of her church at heart; and not only this, but she took the lead in her community and acted as an angel of mercy in times of sickness, sorrow and death. At times she has taken her life into her own hands by going into homes where the folks were suffering with contagious diseases. She looked not at the danger, but at the needed help she could render.

The deceased was a charter member of our Ladies' Aid and was treasurer at the time of her death. It was an inspiration to mingle with her in any department of church work. The ladies have recently appointed a committee who will draft proper resolutions which will be published.

While the church and community will greatly miss our deceased sister, she will be missed most in the home. Bro. Payne has lost a good companion, and the children a devoted mother. While this loss brings sorrow, yet all should be happy in the thought that soon we can go to meet her where there will be no more sad partings. Children, your mother was not afraid to die. Jesus, whom she served so long, met her in the dark valley of death and carried her safely home.

On Monday, August 6, her body was laid in the family burying plot in the cemetery at Pleasant Grove. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, assisted by two former pastors, Rev. J. H. Moton and Rev. Edward Suits. The congregation that attended the funeral was unusually large.

We bow in submission to His divine will and pray the richest benedictions of heaven upon the entire family.

G. L. REYNOLDS, Pastor.

Brower

Abraham Pressley Brower, son of Washington and Nellie Brower, was born in Randolph County, N. C., on March 4, 1848. He passed to his eternal home on August 12, 1928. He was married to Miss Nancy Margaret McMasters on March 2, 1870. She was his faithful, loving and helpful companion for a little over 58 years, and no one will feel the separation nearly so keenly as will she.

To this union were born ten children, seven sons and three daughters, all of whom survive, and with their mother mourn the passing of their noble husband and father. The children are Oscar P., James W., David S., Hallie D., Mrs. V. G. Pickett, Otis P., Armstead J., Mrs. S. C. Frazier, Mrs. Currie King and Harvey P. Brower. There are 33 grandchildren in the family and 13 great-grandchildren. Six of the grandsons acted as pallbearers.

Bro. Brower also leaves one brother and three sisters. These are Mr. H. L. Brower, of Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Emma B. Siler, Siler City, N. C.; Mrs. Lidia Kirkman, Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Swanna Hadley, Mt. Airy, N. C. Besides these there are a number of nephews and nieces and other relatives, and a host of friends who will feel very keenly the loss of this strong, sturdy character among them. He leaves a family of at least 90 or 100 members, and if he were permitted to speak today he would probably say, "They are all mine and I haven't a reason to be ashamed of one of them." This family has in the life of Bro. Bower a noble heritage.

Bro. Bower professed faith in Jesus Christ early in life and joined Liberty Grove Methodist Protestant Church more than 63 years ago. Something like 15 years ago he with his wife moved their membership to the Liberty Methodist Protestant Church, and was a faithful member until his Lord said, "It is enough, come up higher." His faith in Jesus Christ was simple and strong. He had no doubts about the divinity of Jesus, nor about the saving power of the blessed Son of God. To him Jesus was a real personal Savior, and was "an anchor to the soul, which is both sure and steadfast." He was a man of strong convictions, and always stood for what he believed to be right. For these reasons he was a faithful and trusted church member and church worker, and was wise in his counsels as a churchman. When the Liberty Methodist Protestant Church was remodeled, and the Sunday school rooms were built, and the entire plant brick veneered, I am told that he was one of the leading spirits in it, and that he aided very materially with his counsel and with his money. He loved to contribute of his money to religious causes. Perhaps the very last gift he made to his church was a thank-offering of $5.00 upon the 100th anniversary of the denomination.

For nearly two years Bro. Brower was a shut-in, being unable to walk, and during the last nine months of his life I had the privilege of visiting him several times. I found him patient and long-suffering. He delighted to talk about the church and its work, and also about his love for and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. And toward the end I think we may say that he began to long to go home. So today we feel to congratulate him. It will be sad and lonely without him, especially for his companion of so many years and for his children; but surely none of us would call him back. But rather we feel to say of him today, as was once said of another: "Grand old soldier of the cross, battle-scarred and travel-worn, but home at last." Surely he could say with Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love His appearing."

Bro. Brower was a good man, he was a good neighbor, he was a good husband, and he was a good father. Therefore, he was a good Christian, and a great man. In his younger days doubtless he had his imperfections, as all human beings do; but as I have seen him during the last nine months, his last months on earth, he seemed to me to be a perfect Christian.

We sympathize with all his loved ones, and pray God's richest blessings upon each of them, that God will help them to be faithful servants of the Master here, so that they may one day be a reunited family in the heavenly home.

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

"O happy, happy soul!
In ecstasies of praise,
Long as eternal ages roll,
Thou seest thy Savior's face."

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. G. F. Millaway, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, and Rev. A. O. Lindley. The floral offerings were beautiful and the attendance of sympathizing friends was large.

Faithfully,
A. G. DIXON, Pastor.

Andy Roberts

He was born May 27, 1848. He was translated August 24, 1928, at his home in Weaverville, N. C. Everybody loved him as "Uncle Andy." Said a neighbor, "I have lost my best friend." Said his youngest daughter, Miss Hattie, "The best and dearest father to me has gone, and I miss him so much. Yet I know our loss is his gain."

His body was gently laid away in the Clark's Chapel churchyard Sunday afternoon, August 26. Loving friends crowded the church and grounds. His pastor, Rev. J. D. Cranford, Rev. Fred W. Paschall, and the writer conducted the services. Three surviving daughters were present, Mrs. Sue Carter, Mrs. Itaska Kirk, and Miss Hattie Roberts. His only son, Ellis, is in the west. Not many months ago his brother, Doak Roberts, passed away. There were also present the families of his other two deceased brothers, Joshua and Jasper. These four Roberts brothers were loyal and honored Methodist Protestants and were good citizens. Mrs. Andy Roberts, "Aunt Betty," went home before him several years ago. Their home was a welcome place for preachers. They had a room set apart for the minister, like the little chamber on the wall with its bed and table and chair, dedicated to the prophet by the Shunaminte woman and her husband. Many a weary minister rested in that room, and was refreshed with the best food to be found anywhere, prepared by Mrs. Roberts and her children.

Brother Roberts had a gentle spirit. His words were always gracious. Even his voice was soft. He loved his family and his friends. He was jovial and sometimes boyishly playful. He always did his best for his church. He would enquire about its progress, after his health forbade him going to church. He was a good neighbor. He was a great comfort to me for the 24 years of our friendship. J. S. WILLIAMS.

Daniel

Robert D. Daniel, of Enfield, Route 3, departed this life Tuesday, August 21, 1928. Mr. Daniel was one of our oldest members, being 82 years old. He was a member of Eden Methodist Protestant Church, where he had been a member ever since he was a young man. In the passing of Mr. Daniel, Eden church has lost another good and faithful member and the community a good faithful neighbor, and the children a devoted father.

The deceased will be greatly missed by his church, community and children, but we should not grieve as one that hath no hope, for he left the testimony that he was prepared for the mansion above where his wife had preceded him a few years ago. He leaves to mourn their loss the following children: Jeff D. Daniel, Nashville, N. C.; M. F. Daniel, Enfield; Mrs. Mattie Hasty, Richmond, Va.; Mrs. J. O. Staton, Rocky Mount; E. M. Daniel, Rocky Mount; Mrs. S. G. Bullock, Rocky Mount; Miss Dixie Daniel, Enfield; R. T. Daniel, Rocky Mount; Miss Geneva Daniel, Weldon, N. C.

The funeral services were conducted in the home by the writer in the presence of a large crowd, after which the body was laid to rest in the family cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers to await the resurrection morning.

May the benedictions of heaven rest upon the family and the community.

The members of the Senior C. E. Society here were very pleasantly entertained by the C. E. Society of First Church, High Point, Monday night, at the Tar Heel Inn. After short devotionals, games were enjoyed and an abundance of watermelon served.

Wednesday afternoon our entire family were guests of the Elks Club of Greensboro. Cars came and conducted us to the Carolina Theatre. Then, after enjoying the Vitaphone, we had a jolly time at the Elks Club and were very generously treated to ice cream and cake. Before returning home we had a nice drive through Greensboro, which was another delightful surprise to all, especially the children.

For these good times, we heartily thank our good friends, and assure them that their kindness is much appreciated by our whole family.

"No Mud-Slinging"

In the warm political campaign now on in our country, it is good to hear that there is to be no "mud-slinging;" that is, if we can believe it. Rotten eggs, mud, and such like do not form the material for convincing arguments. Rather, they lead to a conclusion just the opposite of that intended. They convince men that those who use such arguments have not only a very weak cause but also very weak advocates of that cause. It is bad policy to throw mud as well as bad manners and bad morals.

We may be tempted to throw mud at opposing voters as well as at candidates we do not approve. We may charge them with bad motives or with being actuated by motives different from those they profess. A man's motives cannot be seen, though they may sometimes be inferred from facts that can be seen. Not a man's motives, but the natural effect of his conduct should be the ground of our judgment. A man's motives may be good and his conduct bad if his judgment is poor.

An effort to set forth pertinent facts regarding candidates should not be regarded as mud-slinging if these facts are fairly set forth. People are entitled to such knowledge. We should not jump to the conclusion that every man who sets forth an ugly fact has an ugly motive. If so, we are stultifying ourselves.

No one can afford to speak unfairly or act unfairly in this campaign. The stake is not great enough to justify it. Even the high office of President of the United States is not high enough to justify any candidate for it in speaking a single unfair word. Surely those of us who expect no personal advantage whatever from the issue of the election cannot afford to soil our hands or pollute our lips to change the result in any way. Above all, let us be honest and fair.

Vacillating Views of the Scientists

Those who attend to the public utterances of the scientists given to the world from time to time through books and periodicals are impressed with the fact that these men frequently change their views. Evidently they "know" a great deal that is "not so."

A year ago we were told that science reaches only a negative result in regard to the question of man's immortality. This year we are told that nature adds confirmation to man's belief in a future state of life.

However much authority scientists may assume to themselves, it is coming to be pretty evident to the rest of us that we would better take their most positive utterances with a grain of allowance and leave to ourselves the liberty of thinking otherwise. The ipse dixit of the scientist is no longer sufficient. It must be proved by more incontrovertible evidence than his own word before it is safe to walk out upon it.

Knowledge is a very valuable possession, but "professed knowledge" is not worth near so much per bushel.

A Great Privilege and a High Attainment

Paul in one of his epistles exhorts his readers to pray for all men, and declares that this is good and acceptable in the sight of God.

This implies that we have the privilege of praying for all men. This is amazing when we come to realize all that is involved in it. It does not surprise us that Jesus has the privilege of interceding for all men, for He was the Creator and also the Redeemer of all men. He has such a right and interest in men as qualifies Him to speak for all men. But the case is far different with us. Who are we that we should presume to appear before High Heaven as suppliants for men we do not know and in whom we have no special interest? Wouldn't our prayer be regarded as a mockery and would it not win for us condemnation and banishment from the presence of God? Surely it would unless we put our hearts into the prayer. But can we put our hearts into a petition for an unseen and unknown man? By our own natural power we cannot, but by divine grace we can. It is one of the achievements of Christianity in us that it qualifies us to pray for all men. Christianity when it has its way with us unites us with the whole family of mankind. All become God's possible children and our possible brothers. When we find ourselves praying for all, we have made a great attainment in grace and are enjoying a high privilege.

Airplanes in the Book of Revelation

A Frenchman has elaborated a theory explaining St. John's prediction of swarms of locusts or grasshoppers by the swarms of airplanes that are beginning to darken the air. Others have found railroad trains and automobiles referred to in the Bible.

We regard all such interpretations as fanciful. The Bible was not written to forecast the course of mechanical developments. It has to do with the moral and spiritual history of mankind. What wonders of future invention Jesus could have described for us had He chosen. But He uttered not a word of this kind. Neither did any of the prophets or apostles, in our judgment.

WHEN HE SUCCEEDED MOST

In referring to Dr. Henry Ward Beecher, The Presbyterian of Philadelphia, among other things, says:

"This much is distinctly definite in the chronology of his years, while he was preaching his rich gospel message of the love of God in Christ for the saving of men, souls like doves to their windows flocked about the Plymouth altars and found there the rest they sought. When the great truths which range themselves about evangelical religion began to be spoken of with less assurance and the Bible was no longer the ultimate and final court of appeal, then the days of wonders at Plymouth ceased and the years of sunshine were followed by the sad, tragic years of shadows."—Selected.

THE BUDGET BULLETIN

The Budget Bulletin is edited by the Budget Council, created by the Annual Conference, and composed of the President, Secretary, and Treasurer. The purpose of the Bulletin is to give our people information regarding our budgets, and to stimulate them in a more liberal response to the financial needs of the church. How long the Bulletin will live, and how often it will be issued depends upon the space it can be allowed in the Herald, and the good that it seems to be accomplishing.

With this first number, and all the numbers that may follow, goes an earnest prayer for the blessings of God upon this effort to acquaint our people with our budgets, and to arouse them to larger liberality.

The Budget

Since the Annual Conference of 1914, held in Greensboro, N. C., we have been talking about our conference and denominational finances, as the "budget." This idea originated with this conference and, not withstanding the budget has been in vogue with us for fourteen years, our people have not yet become well acquainted with it, and with its workings, and for two reasons. First, the budget is more or less complicated; and second, we probably have not taken the pains to understand it. Let us see where we will get by a brief study of it here. And perhaps we shall do best by studying it through the question and answer method.

1. What is the budget? Ans. The budget is the sum of money that the church asks the people to contribute for the purpose of establishing and extending Christ's Kingdom.

2. How many budgets do we have? Ans. We have two budgets, the Annual Conference budget and the General Conference budget. The former is designated by the initial letters, A. C. B., and the latter G. C. B.

3. Who determines the amounts of these budgets? Ans. The General Conference determines the G. C. B., and the Annual Conference the A. C. B.

4. What is the annual amount of the G. C. B.? Ans. $500,000.

5. Is this apportioned to the different Annual Conferences —26 in all? Ans. It is.

6. Who makes the apportionment? Ans. The Executive Committee of the General Conference.

7. What is the annual amount allotted to the North Carolina Conference? Ans. $55,000.

8. How is it distributed? Ans. It is apportioned by the Annual Conference to our 92 charges, and by the charges to the individual church, and by the individual church to the individual member.

9. What money raised by the local church may be applied on this budget? Ans. Money raised by membership assessment, and money raised by women for work under the direction and control of the Board of Missions, and the offerings of all the special days, as provided by the General Conference.

10. For what purpose is the money raised on the G. C. B. used? Ans. All of our missionary work—home and foreign —is supported by this money. It is used in helping weak congregations to build and establish Methodist Protestant churches. It helps to support our colleges and our Theological Seminary. It is used in providing a ministerial relief fund for our aged and disabled ministers. An appropriation is made out of this fund for the maintenance of the Methodist Protestant Home for the Aged at West Lafayette, Ohio, and for the Children's Home at High Point. The American Bible Society likewise shares in this fund. All salaries of general church officers and other necessary expenses of the church come out of the budget. The apportionment is as follows: Board of Missions, 73 per cent; Board of Christian Education, 19 per cent; Contingent Fund (all salaries and other necessary expenses are paid out of this), 1 per cent; Children's Home, 1 per cent; Superannuates, 4 per cent; Old People's Home, 1 per cent; American Bible Society, 1 per cent.

11. Do we raise the $55,000 allotted to us? Ans. No. Last year we raised $20,876.11.

12. This conference year is five-sixths gone; how much have we raised to date? Ans. Up to August 2, when the last full report was published, we had raised $9,877.66. But a great deal more will be raised during these two closing months. About one-third of all we receive will not be in hand until the conference meets.

13. To whom shall money be sent that is raised for the G. C. B.? Ans. Mr. V. W. Idol, Treasurer, High Point, N. C.

Next week the Bulletin will deal with the A. C. B.

The Budget Council.

RALLY DAY ORDERS BEING FILLED

From the headquarters in Pittsburgh and Baltimore orders for the Rally Day program prepared by the Board of Christian Education are now being filled as rapidly as they are received. Some delay was experienced due to our inability to secure material but we are assured this has been corrected and we need have no further anxiety.

Local committees are frequently embarrassed in making their plans for Rally Day because some one has failed to order the supplies. Pastors can help to prevent delays by promptly filling out and forwarding the order cards which accompanied the samples. The material furnished by the Board of Christian Education is free for the asking. Whatever is needed will be furnished gladly.

Many kind things have been said about the Rally Day material prepared by the board in former years, but none equal the enthusiastic praise being given this year's publication. A former executive secretary says it is the best ever put out by the board or any of its predecessors, while a New Jersey friend declares it to be the finest piece of work of the kind he has ever seen put out by our church. If you have not seen a sample, send for it. Better still, send in your order and we know you will be well pleased.

CHRIST'S PRACTICE OF PRAYER

1. Prayer to our Lord was more important than teaching and healing, for "great multitudes came together to hear and be healed," but he withdrew himself into the desert and prayed.—Luke 5:15, 16.

2. Prayer to our Lord was more important than rest, for "in the morning a great while before day he rose up and went out and departed into a desert place and there prayed."—Mark 1:35.

3. Prayer to our Lord was more important than sleep, for "He went out into the mountain to pray and he continued all night in prayer to God."—Luke 6:12.

4. Prayer to our Lord was more important than the working of miracles, for instead of working a miracle to deliver Peter, He said, "I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not."—Luke 22:32.

5. Prayer to our Lord was more important in securing workers than either money or machinery, for He said, "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he send forth laborers into his harvest."—Matthew 9:38.

6. Prayer to our Lord was more important to be taught than preached, for He taught men to pray, but we have no record that He ever taught them to preach.—Matthew 6:5-15.

7. Prayer to our Lord is more important than all other ministries, for "he ever liveth to make intercession for us." —Hebrews 7:25.

The earthly ministry of our Lord was begun in prayer (Luke 3:21), continued in prayer and ended in prayer (Luke 22:34).

The heavenly ministry of our Lord was begun in prayer (John 14:16), and is now continued in prayer (Heb. 7:25).

"Lord, teach us to be praying" (Luke 11:1).—F. W. Troy.

THE WHY OF PRAYER

"Behold the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save, neither His ear heavy that it cannot hear; but your iniquities have separated between you and your God." Spoken by the Prophet Isaiah to recreant, sinning, idolatrous Israel in his effort to bring them back to God. Their sins had come up like a thick cloud between God and His people, and they could not see Him nor hear His voice. God had not changed, but His people had through sin lost contact with Him.

With equal force this message of Isaiah could be applied to our own times and our own nation. God is the same, just as able and willing to help, but like Israel of old, we as a nation have lost contact with Him. The source of power is still there, but the transmission line has been severed. And what is that line? Prayer. Prayer is the lifting up of one's soul unto God. And when prayer stops, sin begins.

There was a time when we, as a nation, prayed. During the World War men and women prayed who had never looked to God in prayer before. It was a time of dire distress and anxiety, and we looked to the source of all power for help. Our prayers were answered, and in the excitement and rejoicing over the victory we, as a nation, stopped praying. The tension was relaxed and we plunged into pleasure seeking. And then sin reared its ugly head. Not the kind of sin that we used to pray about—that hid in alley-ways and did its deeds under cover of darkness. No. Brazen, wanton, unashamed sin is stalking abroad in our land today and we all know that this is so. The kind of sin that when cornered gives you back an impudent look and says, "Well, whatcher goin' to do about it?" Crimes are committed with a hardened indifference to all moral laws. We see no sense of sorrow for sin, nor regret at crimes committed. Just a desire to escape punishment. As in the individual life the spiritual and the physical are so entertained that what hurts one affects the other, so in our national life.

When spiritual forces decline, then mental, moral and physical decay begins. Conditions are such in our land today that I am firmly convinced it is beyond the power of any human agency to bring about a remedy. What then? "Not by might." Of no avail is it to pass laws, and more laws, and yet more laws, and let them lie like dead letters on the statute books. No, not that. "Nor by power." If sin is to be crushed out by putting to death all the sinners, a small portion of our nation would be executioners and the rest victims. That will not do, either. "But by my spirit, said the Lord." In that expression, "Whatcher goin' to do about it?" there is a challenge that all Christian men and women should meet. And the thing to do is, "Take it to the Lord in prayer." This is a time when all who love the Lord Jesus should be in earnest, beseeching, supplicating prayer to God for an outpouring of His Spirit upon our nation to the end that there may be a return to righteousness and to God. Not forgetting the confession of our own sins and shortcomings and the putting away of those things that come between us and God. Not that our nation may be great and rich and powerful, but that we might be "a people whose God is the Lord."

And why should we do this? The answer is in the words of the wise man, "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

And that is the way of prayer.—Jno. F. Todd, Lexington, Kentucky.

THE TREASURER SAYS

Forget the slander you have heard,
Forget the hasty, unkind word,
Forget the quarrel and the cause,
Forget the whole affair, because
Forgetting is the only way.
Forget the storms of yesterday,
Forget the chap whose sour face
Forgets to smile in any place.
Forget the trials you have had,
Forget the weather, if it's bad,
Forget the knocker, he's a freak,
Forget him seven days a week.
Forget you're not a millionaire,
Forget the gray streaks in your hair;
Forget the coffee when it's cold,
Forget the kicks, forget to scold.
Forget to ever get the blues,
But don't forget to pay your dues.

BOOST

"Give a little, live a little, try a little mirth;
Sing a little, bring a little happiness to earth.
Pray a little, play a little, be a little glad;
Rest a little, jest a little, if the heart is sad.
Spend a little, send a little to another's door;
Give a little, live a little, love a little more."

SLOGAN

for the Closing Quarter

No Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

It is highly gratifying to find interest in the budgets growing, as we approach the closing of the conference year. Our opinion is that a great many churches will be on one or more of the conference honor rolls when the counts are all in. We urge pastors and stewards to press this matter, and to put before the people the defintie amounts to be raised to realize this slogan. For instance: If the college assessment is $10 for a certain church, tell the people that, and let them know that they will put their church on the honor roll for college assessment by raising that amount. And likewise for all the budget interests. Such definite information will enable the people to see just what they are asked to do, and it will go far in securing the assessments.

All together, now, for a big budget showing, and big honor rolls! It can be done.

Take Credit

Take credit on the G. C. B. of the local church for the full amount of money raised by the missionary societies for all work under the direction and control of the Board of Missions. Special offerings for purposes not under the control of the Board of Missions can not be counted on the budget of the local church.

Help It

Bro. Reiner is putting on a campaign in our conference for subscriptions to The Methodist Protestant. His goal is 100 new subscriptions and 185 renewals. We trust that it may be fully realized. This is the oldest Methodist paper in America, and our people will do well to have it in their homes. Help the campaign along.

Spring Church

August 29-30. These two days were given to this charge, to which we were conveyed by Bro. J. B. O'Briant, after we had shared the comfort and the hospitality of his home Tuesday night. We found a good meeting in progress at Spring Church, in which the pastor was assisted by Rev. George R. Brown, D.D. The meeting closed Thursday; and at the request of the pastor, we had the pleasure of baptizing and receiving the candidates into the church—seven in all. We were conveyed by the pastor to Lebanon church, but could hold no service there, owing to the fact that the church is being remodeled. We were glad to see this improvement, and we expect to run a cut of this church in our special number of the HERALD, at which time details of the building will be given. The churches on this charge date back to the early beginnings of the denomination. It is gratifying to find their strength unabated, and their zeal for democratic Methodism still warm. The people speak commendingly of their pastor, Bro. Shelton, and under his leadership the charge is progressing. This is one of our few charges that pay the pastor, in large part, monthly, and it will be recalled that two of the churches on the charge paid their allotment of the A. C. B. ($137) early in the year. It was not our good fortune to visit the Pleasant Hill church at this time, though we have been there on other occasions, and enjoyed our fellowship with them. We are very hopeful of a successful closing of the year's work on this charge, along all lines, and we shall not be at all surprised if we have to make room for them on the Honor Roll. Watch Spring Church charge! Bro. Powell attended the meeting at Spring Church Thursday. We were glad to see him.

Through the courtesy of Doctor and Mrs. Brown, we had the pleasure of returning to Greensboro in their new Ford sedan. We left the Spring Church community Thursday at 5:30 p. m. and arrived at Reidsville, via Enfield, Rocky Mount, Raleigh, Burlington, at 1:30 a. m. Friday. Dr. Brown proved a capable driver, and the car "the traveler's delight." After resting at the parsonage for the remainder of the night, we continued our journey to Greensboro in this same good car with this same good driver at the wheel. We are very grateful to these friends for this kindness.

Midland

September 2, Sunday. We visited all the churches on this charge, preaching at Pine Bluff 11 a. m., Mill Grove 3 p. m., and Love's Grove 8 p. m. There was much rain during the day, but despite this the congregations were surprisingly good, especially at the first two points. The interest of the people and their response to our efforts were highly pleasing. We were pleased, also, with the location of these churches, and the service that they seem to be rendering to their respective communities. We found the Sunday school in progress at Pine Bluff, and for a rainy morning the attendance seemed unusually large. A new church building is in progress at Love's Grove, and the plan has been to have it ready for use by the late fall. The building is to be brick veneered, 35x60, with Sunday school rooms on the back sides, 12x20. The old church has been torn down, and services are being held in the arbor. We most heartily congratulate this church upon this undertaking, and we trust that they may go forward according to their plans to an early completion. The people of Mill Grove need to build, and their hope is to replace their present church with a modern brick structure. At each point the conference programs were stressed, and it was cheering to find the people with open minds and warm hearts. We believe that each church on this charge will have an honor roll place. There are several readers of the HERALD on the work, and we were pleased to hear favorable comments on the paper. Bro. Hulin is serving his third year here, and is rendering good service. He has the confidence and co-operation of his people. Unless all signs fail, Midland will send a pleasing report to the coming conference.

For courtesies and comfort received from the pastors and people on these charges, we are gratefully appreciative, and we give further assurances of our deep concern and earnest prayers for continued and enlarging growth on these fields.

Commission on Evangelism

This commission, created by the last General Conference, will hold its initial meeting in Baltimore September 4. Rev. George R. Brown, D.D., will take our place in this meeting, as we could not attend because of important previous engagements. There is no matter that concerns the church that is so important as that with which this commission is charged. We shall await the ouctome of this meeting and Dr. Brown's report with prayerful interest.

Optimism

We set that word before our face at the beginning of this conference year, and our eyes have been kept steadily upon it. Now, in the closing weeks, let us magnify it. Take it with you, brethren, into your pulpits; dwell on that side of the gospel in your sermons; let the people feel it when you visit them in their homes. Optimism is to life what the morning sun is to the flower that closes up with the shades of night. The sun opens the flower and unfolds its beauty; so optimism opens life, and brings forth strength and beauty hidden there. There will be difficulties, of course, but optimism is the surest way around them; there will always be hard work, but optimism is the easiest way of getting it done; loads will have to be lifted, but optimism is the lever that makes them light. The minister and the church that live and work in the spirit of optimism will get results that can not be secured otherwise. Let this spirit run high these closing weeks.

"The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge."

FLETCHER'S RULES FOR SELF-EXAMINATION

Among the early Methodists there was not a more saintly man than John Fletcher, of Madeley. Of him John Wesley said, "So unblameable a man, in every respect, I have not found either in Europe or in America, nor do I expect to find another such this side of eternity." The following rules show the standard by which he tested his heart day by day. It is not surprising that, facing these, he walked with God:

1. Did I awake spiritual, and was I watchful in keeping my mind from wandering this morning when I was rising?
2. Have I this day got nearer to God in times of prayer or have I given way to a lazy, idle spirit?
3. Has my faith been weakened by unwatchfulness or quickened by diligence today?
4. Have I this day walked by faith and eyed God in all things?
5. Have I denied myself in all unkind words and thoughts? Have I been delighted in seeing others preferred before me?
6. Have I made the most of my precious time so far as I had light, strength and opportunity?
7. Have I kept the issues of my heart in the means of grace so as to profit by them?
8. What have I done this day for the souls and bodies of the saints?
9. Have I laid out anything to please myself, when I might have saved the money for the cause of God?
10. Have I governed well my tongue this day, remembering that in a multitude of words there wanteth not sin?
11. In how many instances have I denied myself this day?
12. Do my life and conversation adorn the gospel of Jesus Christ?—The Wesleyan Methodist.

JACOB'S TITHE

Gen. 28:10-22; 31:13-42; 32:28; Deut. 8:18)

Not every young man leaving home for the first time, going into the world for himself, has success. Nay, let us say not many! Yet wherever we find one who lays the foundation that Jacob laid, there may we look for success and, perchance, find it. Jacob made a splendid beginning. It was perhaps natural that he should dream of his father's God; a homeless boy, forlorn and lonely, exiled and homesick and guilty of conscience, his thoughts, awake or asleep, would be remorseful and full of longing.

It was borne in upon him that Jehovah cared; that there was one from whom he need not separate; and as he realized this, in the spontaneous rush of joy and consolation that came to his heart, he vowed a vow to Jehovah. The elements of this vow are not self-imposed; it was God's own proposition. And Jacob, quite overcome with awe and gratitude, replied earnestly, "If God will indeed be with me—and will keep me —and will give me bread—and raiment—so that I come again—I will surely—." Then indeed was he ready to honor Jehovah in the ways with which he was familiar: personal devotion, worship and payment of the tithe.

God kept His part of the agreement; He always does. Jacob, during twenty years, forgot his promises, even while the very success God had assured him followed him in his new life. It came so rapidly and in such remarkable measure that his mind failed to realize that Jehovah was behind it all. If he had only kept his early promise and paid God's tithe with love and worship in his heart, he would, we believe, have been spared the hours of suffering which God used to bring him back to Himself and the remembrance of his vow.—Mrs. F. W. Withoft, Georgia.

BE WITH ME

Through every minute of this day,
Be with me, Lord!
Through every day of all this week,
Be with me, Lord!
Through every week of all this year,
Be with me, Lord!
Through all the years of all this life,
Be with me, Lord!
So shall the days and weeks and years
Be threaded on a golden cord.
And all draw on with sweet accord
Unto Thy fullness, Lord.
That so, when time is past,
By grace, I may at last
Be with Thee, Lord!

—John Oxenahm.

OUR NEEDLESS WORRY

My wife tells me that I ought to be ashamed of myself," remarked a farmer, as he pointed to a beautiful field of wheat rippling and swaying in the July breeze. "All through the winter and early summer I worried about that field. I was late planting it last fall because of heavy rains. I was sure it would be frozen out by the extreme cold, and, in addition, the hail laid it low just a few weeks ago. But now just look at it! I never saw a nicer field. Why can't we Christians get the habit of leaving things in God's hands after we have done the best we can? He seems to do pretty well, I notice, in spite of all our worrying."—Forward.

WHEN THE REAPING TIME COMES

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand." That is, "Use any and every opportunity which the Lord is pleased to give thee; seek to redeem the time, for thou hast but one life here on earth, and that brief—very brief—as compared with eternity; therefore make good use of it." Oh, the blessing that results from attending to this! On every occasion, under all circumstances, after we have sought the Lord's blessing and are in a proper state of heart, let us drop a word for Christ here and there and everywhere, and after we have spoken it, bring it before God again, and again, and again in prayer.

When the reaping time comes, and we find ourselves in glory, that child for whom we prayed will be found there! That aged cripple whom we met incidentally on the road, and to whom we spoke, will be in heaven. That person in consumption whom we visited every day for a long time, and who gave little or no heed at all to what we had to say, will be found in glory, having at last laid to heart what we spoke so many times to him, and though we had no information about it, God blessed our word. Oh, the multitude of instances we shall find at last when our work, labor, or service has, contrary to natural expectation, been blessed!

I was once standing here about 62 years ago, preaching the Word of Life, and after I was through I was cast down because my words seemed to me so cold, so dull, so lifeless. Not till three months after did I hear that through that very address abundant blessing had been brought to 19 different persons.

But let us carefully see to it that when the reaping time comes there will be something to reap because we have been laboring. If there be no labor, if there be a careless, thoughtless walk, without prayer and crying to God mightily, then let us not be surprised if when the harvest time comes there is no reaping as far as we are concerned. But as assuredly as there has been the crying mightily to God, as there has been the sowing, most assuredly we shall reap.

"For thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that." We know not what God is about to do, because He does not tell us if it is at this or that particular time He will own our labor and service.

"Or whether they both shall be alike good." God may bless, not merely at one time, but both times. In the morning the work may be commenced, in the evening the Holy Ghost may deepen it, and God may bring double blessing out of our poor, feeble service.

In view of the above, let us not grow weary in well doing, or slack in our supplication, but let us be more earnest in endeavor, more faithful in prayer, and because we shall reap if we faint not, let us continue to pray for revival!—George Muller, given at Bristol in his 92nd year.

TOO MUCH EASE IN ZION

Let us step forth, for it is high time, from our inconsistent Christianity. So little has it of heroism or grandeur that it is scarcely strong enough to excite either hatred on the one hand, or sympathetic admiration on the other. The men of our generation pass before us, and never pause, for they see nothing extraordinary in us. They would pause before holiness, perhaps to revile it, but possibly to admire. O pale, colorless, petty piety; we are weary of thee, and to thy God thou art a weariness. Oh, that He would give us again the solemn earnestness, the ideal grandeur of the early days of the Church and of the Reformation!

The stake does not burn in our cities, the sword of the law is not drawn against us; and yet, without the sacrifice of the life there is no witness-bearing to the truth.—Selected.

THE CHURCH'S BUSINESS

When Jesus Christ sent His disciples out by twos to do this work of evangelism, He gave the most scientific method as well as the most devout, spiritual method of doing evangelism that has ever been tried. Two are more than twice one in any contest.

In the first century the Holy Spirit directed them to go conferring together, praying together, catechizing the children, catechizing the servants, catechizing the members of the household, breaking bread together, praying, and literally evangelizing the people of those households. He extended Christ's plan, and made it the permanent plan of the church. Personal evangelism is the plan of the Holy Ghost. He commands the individual Christian to hand-pick the lost souls.

If the Church were doing her duty and if every member of the Church were finding his man, praying with him, talking to him, explaining the Scriptures to him, and leading him to Christ, America could be evangelized in thirty days. . . . To name but one denomination, if the elders of the Presbyterian Church would hand-pick one man each week and lead him to Christ they could bring to Christ and into the Church 2,160,000 souls every year. But the average elder is so lazy that he will not even attend prayer meeting. He imagines he occupies a seat of authority when he isn't even fit to occupy any such position; in fact, if he were a real Presbyterian he would know that his only duty on the session is the duty of leading men to Christ. There is no position in the Presbyterian Church for an elder unless he is imbued with the spirit of evangelism. We do not need governors; we haven't anything to govern. We need workers, not shirkers; we need prayers, not players; we need personal workers, not egotistical peacocks.

A great deal of what has been said applies to the ministers. If they were to do personal work and make an evangelistic appeal at the end of each evangelistic sermon, more people would be saved and brought to Christ and into the church. The average preacher is an evangelistic deadhead. . . . The Holy Ghost plan is to preach the Gospel, draw the net; yet there are preachers all over the country who receive members on communion days only. The devil never created a more diabolical scheme to destroy the evangelistic spirit than that scheme. There is but one God-decreed kind of evangelism, namely, personal evangelism, in season and out of season, without recess, never permitting a lapse, always at the business of finding a lost soul and bringing him to Christ.

If the Church, if the individual Christian, if the Church officer—elder, deacon, deaconess, Sunday school teacher, and worker in any and every department—can be made to see that his supreme business in life is finding a lost soul and leading him to Christ, then God will add to the Church daily those He is saving.—Rev. Mark A. Matthews, of Seattle.

—If a country were truly Christian, all other nations of earth would go to it and study its ways and seek to be like it.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE FORGOTTEN TUNNEL

We were dog-trotting up the path to the top of the hill, wondering whether we would get there before it was too late, when a man who was leaning against a tree put out his hand and stopped us.

"You can't pass by here, boys," he said. "We are blasting stone along this path, and you are liable to get hurt."

"But, mister, we've got to get to the top of the mountain before the storm comes!" panted Kit.

"What storm?"

"Maybe you don't know," Kit explained, still puffing. "But we're from the boys' camp down there in the valley. Mr. Walters just got a telephone call from the city saying that there was a terriffic thunderstorm coming this way, and he sent us to tell the fellows who were going to stay all night on Mount Hope to come back."

"I can't help it," replied the man. "I've got orders to keep everybody off this part of the hill, and I've got to obey them. Why don't you fellows take the cave route?"

"The cave route?"

"It isn't a cave, exactly, but an old tunnel that goes in this side of the hill and comes out on the other side. When I was a boy there was some talk of starting a mine and the tunnel was built as a short cut for the donkey trains. Everybody has forgotten it by now, I suppose."

"And can we reach the top of the hill by this tunnel?" asked Kit. "It doesn't run up hill, does it?"

"No," was the laughing answer. "It doesn't, but on the other side of the tunnel there is a steps-and-stairs footpath that goes directly to the summit."

While talking, the man was pointing to where a ledge of rock showed bare among the bushes and trees.

"The opening is just about that ledge," he said—then, startled, he cried, "What's that?"

We heard a noise like the rumbling of a thousand barrels down a long tin roof.

"It's thunder," cried Kit. "Come on, Tim. We've got to hurry."

We made our own path through the thick woods, and although the sky was getting blacker as we went along, we soon found ourselves over the rocky ledge that had been pointed out to us from below.

"No tunnel here," I said to Kit.

"Doesn't seem to be. I wonder if the opening has been covered up?"

"A rock might have rolled against it."

"Well, we can't waste any time looking for it. What do you say if we keep on through the woods. It's pretty bad going, but we've got to reach the overnight hikers before it is too late."

We looked anxiously at the approaching storm. There were great black billows of cloud rolling up from the West, and already the wind had increased so that the trees were swaying like the mast of a ship in the trough of a sea.

"Cheer up," Kit said. "Mount Hope is only a thousand feet high. Half an hour from now all of us will be back safe in the log cabin."

When we finally reached the clearing at the top of the mountain, there was nobody there!

We looked everywhere. We shouted at the top of our voices. But we got no reply.

"Perhaps they have started back," I suggested. "Anybody can see that a storm is coming."

"Maybe they have," agreed Kit. "If we climb to the top of this rock, we ought to be able to see them."

It was easy to trace the path from the peak of King Phillip's rock. We could see it wind down the hillside, disappear for a while beneath some trees, and finally straighten out along the level stretch where we had met the man.

"There they are!" Kit cried, pointing to where the figures of eight fellows were hurrying down the hillside. "And Tim! They're going right for the path that's being blasted!"

A blinding flash of lightning cut everything from our sight. A clap and roar of thunder prevented me from hearing what else it was that Kit said, but he was pounding me on the chest with both hands and almost frantic in despair and excitement.

"How can we stop them?"

"We can't!" I yelled back at him.

"We've got to," he cried. "Come on, Tim. Let's run back to the man who stopped us. Perhaps we can get there in time to stop him from blasting."

But just as he spoke, we heard an explosion. Far below us in the waving and wind-swept forest we saw a part of the earth heave into the sky as though upturned by the shovel of a giant. Rocks and trees flew high into the air, fell crashing again to the ground.

The wind was shrieking through the trees by this time. They weren't swaying any more, they were snapping like whips. But we went through them—half crying, I guess, with the fear that another explosion would take our campmates along with the rocks and trees.

Boom! Boom! Boom!

Three distinct explosions! And so close that my ears ached with the terrific sound.

Kit fell back against ledge where vines had covered the bare granite.

I flattened myself against the vines, and when my weight was added to Kit's, to our great surprise both of us fell through into a yawning hole in the side of the rock.

"The cave!"

"You're not going in, are you?" I gasped. "It's too dark!"

"It's our only hope,' shouted Kit, above the roar of the wind, and without waiting for an answer, he ran into the mouth of the tunnel.

I followed him.

It was deathly quiet and spooky in that tunnel, and as dark as the bottom of the ocean. But the walls had been cut quite even, so feeling our way was easier than I had expected. We were in there hours, it seemed to me, but actually only five or six minutes passed before we saw gray light ahead of us.

There were shadowy figures crouched in the opening—figures we knew—our fellows!

"Oh, Pete," called Kit softly.

Pete and the others looked up quickly and gazed out of what they thought was solid mountain.

"It's us—Tim and Kit. This cave is really a tunnel and it leads back to the other side of the hill where the log cabin is. Mr. Walters wants you all to come back."

"But the mountain is being blown up!" objected Pete, scared. "It's liable to fall in on us!"

"No, it won't," explained Kit. The explosions you heard were along the path. Some men are blasting there."

"If that's the case, we'd better start back at once," agreed Pete.

So one by one we filed through the new tunnel, and after we came out we made a dash for the cabin across fields, stone walls and through woods. Just as we got within one hundred yards of the door the storm broke—and maybe it wasn't one of the worst storms that had ever hit Mount Hope!

Anyway Kit and I have never forgotten it! It was the most exciting thing that happened to us while we were at camp, even though we did have lots of fun afterwards playing pirates or bandits in the tunnel that everybody had forgotten. —Selected.

HOW TRIXIE EARNED HER LUNCH BONES

Trixie was a lovely white silky-haired dog with the cutest little black spot on each ear, and the tip of her ever-friendly wagging tail, and she was the beloved pet of a little girl named Priscilla. Now Trixie often went to the store when Priscilla accompanied her mother and it happened one day when Trixie went along the kind-hearted butcher man, seeing the friendly little dog looking longingly at the meat, yet never offering to touch anything, threw her the end of a soup bone.

To the butcher man's surprise, Trixie gave a delightful little bark, which said "Thank you" as plainly as any dog could say it.

"That's quite a smart little dog you've got there," the butcher man said to Priscilla. "What's her name?"

"Her name's Trixie," Priscilla answered, "and she's tricky too."

"I can well believe that," the butcher man laughed.

"Would you like to see her do some stunts?" asked Priscilla.

"Come around tomorrow about noon," the butcher man answered. "I won't be quite so busy then."

So the next day Priscilla took Trixie along with her to the butcher man's place, and when the dog had performed a number of cute little tricks the butcher man gave her a nice, rich, juicy bone.

That was how it happened that every day about noon a little white dog with a black spot on each ear and the tip of her tail would enter a meat market, and standing on her hind feet with paws propped against the counter, would give a little bark to attract the butcher man's attention, and beg with her gentle brown eyes while she waited for the bone which she never failed to receive.

"You're about the nicest little dog there is," the butcher man declared, as he gave Trixie the end of a juicy bone, and Trixie never forgot her "thank you" bark as she picked up the bone and trotted proudly in the direction of home.

When Priscilla saw Trixie coming home the first time all by herself with a fresh bone in her mouth, the little girl ran laughing to her mother.

"Mamma," she said, "Trixie has learned how to go after her own lunch bones."

"I'm afraid Trixie is becoming a nuisance at the meat shop," Mrs. Deveny replied. "I'll have to speak to the butcher man about it."

So the next day when Priscilla and her mother went to the meat market they decided to keep the dog at home, but Trixie slyly slipped out the back door and beat them to the shop, and to their surprise they found Trixie at her accustomed place by the counter, waiting patiently for the bone, which she always received.

"I'm afraid that dog's making you a lot of trouble," Mrs. Deveny said to the butcher man.

"Not at all, ma'am," he assured her. "She's a dog in a thousand, for I can go out and leave her alone and she never touches a thing—she really earns her bones by her nice, polite ways."—The Lutheran.

THE BLUE ROOM

"How many rooms have you in your new house, Grace?" asked Natalie of her chum.

"Seven," Grace replied, "kitchen, dining room, sitting room, three sleeping rooms and the Blue Room."

"The Blue Room?" repeated Natalie, "what's that?"

"Oh, that's the room that we have set apart to have the blues in. I'll tell you about it. It was mother's idea first. She said that we ought to have certain rooms for certain things, and not clutter up other rooms with things that didn't belong there. We would never think of cooking in the parlor, she said, or of sleeping in the dining room or eating in the bedroom.

"So as we have regular rooms for these things, why not have a regular room to be blue in when we had to be and not spoil other folks' fun by wearing our gloom in public.

"We decided to try the plan and it works first rate. If I come from school feeling cross or gloomy about something and mother catches sight of my face, she will say:

"'The Blue Room.' Then I have to go into the Blue Room, lock the door any stay there until I have thrown off the blues and am ready to go out again.

"It's the same way with the rest of us. No matter what the trouble is or who is afflicted, according to the rule none of us can mingle with the family until we are able to smile again and be good natured.

"You'd be surprised to see how short a time we have to stay there, too. We have decorated the walls of the room with mottoes like this—

"'Count your blessings,' 'Tell God about it,' 'If you must go down, go down smiling.' Once we begin to count our blessings we find that things are not as bad as they might be after all and we are able to leave the room cheered and comforted. Then by having the Blue Room to go into, the rest of the family is spared the discomfort of sharing our blues with us."

"That's a great idea, isn't it, Grace?" declared Natalie enthusiastically. "I'm afraid I've been spoiling a lot of evenings lately for my family. I'm going right home and fit out a Blue Room of my own."—Albert A. Rand, in Kind Words.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

September 23—The Christian Basis of Total Abstinence

Scripture Basis—I Corinthians 8:1-13.

Golden Text—Let no man seek his own, but each his neighbor's good. I Cor. 10:24.

The Text Taught

1. Learning vs. Love. (Vs. 1-3.) Many problems faced the early Christians, because of the mixture of Jews and Gentiles among them, which have long since been solved, but the principle of the one we find in this lesson is applicable today.

The question here raised is whether or not it was proper for a Christian to eat meat offered in sacrifice to idols. Here in Corinth as elsewhere the followers of Christ were closely associated with the heathen, who were idol worshippers. They were once idol worshippers themselves. Some of their friends were still of this class. When they had their feasts in connection with their ceremonies, they would invite their Christian friends to eat of the meat offered to their idol gods. Was it right in the sight of God for them to participate? We shall try to discover the answer as we proceed.

Knowledge is a great possession, but sometimes it causes its possessor to be puffed up. This is usually the case with those who have little knowledge and boast about it. It is very evident that the greater the learning the humbler the scholar, for the more one learns the more he realizes how much is yet unlearned. Paraphrasing the axiom, "Let him that thinketh he knows take heed lest his knowledge be vain."

Love is the motive that should be behind all impulses and expression. Knowledge is great but love is greater. Love makes the world go 'round. Love tempers knowledge so that it will not act vainly. "Knowledge puffeth up, but love edifieth."

2. Gods vs. God. (Vs. 4-6.) How numerous were the gods of the heathen! Paul discovered this as he made his missionary journeys, especially, for example, at Athens. Some worshipped the sun, moon and stars, of the heavens; others worshipped things of wood, stone and brass, creatures of man's hands; still others fell down before trees, rivers, and animals, of the earth.

Food, especially various kinds of meat, was offered to these things as sacrifices. As far as the meat was concerned, it was not affected. It was not poisoned or in any other way made unfit for a child of God to eat, for, as Paul states, "an idol is nothing in the world." Then, why should not a Christian eat of such meat? Let us see.

There may be gods but there is only one God. Three of the great religions of the world agree upon this, the Jewish, the Mohammedan, and the Christian. As far apart as they are on the divinity of Christ and other doctrines, they agree that there is one God. It is He who should be worshipped, and not the gods of men's conception and creation.

3. Liberty vs. License. (Vs. 7-13.) It was difficult for some of those who had been idolators for so long to get away from the practice. "They know that idol meat is no different from other meat, but they cannot get over the feeling that it is different"—"and their conscience being weak is defiled." The food itself will not make one better or worse. So, if merely the eating of the idol meat was all there was involved, nothing detrimental or offensive would result. But something else is involved.

One may have the liberty and take the liberty to eat and drink as he pleases. It may not affect him, but it will affect some one else. There's the fellow with the weak conscience who sees the other at the heathen table, and immediately he finds just cause to satisfy his desires for the sacrificial idol meat. He is thereby offended; and thus is sin committed against the Christ who died for both, and all. Paul told the Romans, "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself." (Rom. 14:7.)

It is absolutely false that a man can do as he pleases and he only is affected by his conduct. We cannot live unto ourselves, whether we believe it or not. It is a law of God. Man may have the liberty to do as he pleases, but he has no right to use this liberty as license. When an attitude of so-called independence, which is no more than don't-care-ism, is assumed, then a man has turned liberty into license.

Memorize this last verse; print it on a card and hang it near your bed; place a copy in your office or shop; write it indelibly on your heart: "Wherefore, if meat causeth my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh for evermore, that I cause not my brother to stumble."

Tee-Totalism Tested

Now, apply this lesson to tee-totalism, or total abstinence. Surely it is not necessary to discuss this in detail with Christian readers. We may summarize, however, by stating that it has and will effect—

1. Bigger Bodies. No man who becomes a habitual drinker of intoxicants can maintain a healthy body. Organic diseases often develop. At least, when serious sickness comes, his chances for recovery are much less than those who are tee-totalers.

2. Broader Brains. Intoxicants cause dull and bemuddled brains. The alert and broad minds are found in those who do not imbibe strong drink, all other things being equal.

3. Better Business. Since prohibition has been in effect in our beloved country, business is better. The country is prosperous. Men are investing their money in the savings accounts of the banks instead of in the losing accounts of the saloon.

4. Brighter Boys. One of the greatest blessings of a saloonless nation is the blessing that comes to the home. The mother is not worn and haggard, and the boys, as well as the girls, are brighter and happier. Many of them do not know how a drunken man looks.

5. Benevolent Brotherhood. Instead of hatred being engendered in the hearts of men, because of quarrels, crimes, etc., committed by those under the influence of the accursed intoxicants, men who are total abstainers learn to love each other. That spirit is being emphasized today, not only in our own country, but among the civilized countries of the world. God help us to keep strong drink out of our country, out of our homes, and out of these bodies of ours, which are the temples of the Spirit of God. To this end be sure to cast your vote aright in November!

OLD YADKIN

Yadkin College as an institution of learning will perhaps never be what it once was, but it has been a great school in its day and many feel greatly indebted to it because of many fond recollections and because of valuable training received there. High Point College has properly and well taken its place among us as our school and certainly it should receive the full heritage of the former institution. So much as it should meet with the approval of the management of the High Point College some who yet have great love for old Yadkin would greatly appreciate having, so far as is possible, the history and memory of the former institution woven into the institution that is serving us so well at the present and which will train and mould our people for time to come. The one thing in this direction that presents itself just now is the need of the installation of the old historic bell that for so many years called the Yadkin College students to duty and which has been placed at High Point and is now doing service in that institution. At present it is not properly and permanently mounted and President Andrews has expressed a desire to have it installed with electric equipment so that the hours for classes, etc., of High Point College would be called in a very convenient and effective manner by the same tones that called many of us in former days, in the institution of our youth. To christen the bell "Old Yadkin" and let it become a familiar name among the student body, the term "Old Yadkin" would become perpetuated among the High Point students and those of today as well as those that are to follow in the years to come would, many times a day, be reminded of the school that served our people of another day. This is one of the ways the memories of Yadkin College could be woven into the life of High Point College and thus perpetuated. The amount necessary to install and equip the bell as above described is about $100.00 and the undersigned is hoping to raise this amount from former Yadkin students and other friends of both institutions. While this appeal is made to anyone it is hoped that Yadkin students and other friends of the institution will be especially interested. Come on, Yadkinites. Let's once more raise our colors and show our spirits and do something to commemorate the dear old school that has done so much for us.

Send contributions and pledges to the undersigned and acknowledgement will be made through the columns of the Herald.

Only five charges report this week. Two make payments on A. C. B.; one on college; one on superannuate assessment; and one on college and G. C. B. We are grateful for all of these remittances. It will be noted that Hickory Ridge, Forsyth charge, goes in the list of churches paying superannuate assessment in full. We know of two other charges, and two churches on another charge, that have paid the college assessment in full. We trust that their reports may reach Treasurer Idol in time for us to list them in their proper places next week.

To date four charges and four churches on other charges have paid the A. C. B. in full; 22 charges and 14 churches on other charges have paid the college assessment in full; two charges and two churches on other charges have paid the superannuate assessment; one charge—Calvary—has paid the G. C. B., and two charges—Porter and State Street—have paid all assessments.

Business men tell us that they are having great difficulty in making collections, and of course it is not surprising that this should be true of the church. However, in our visitations of the various fields, we are meeting with encouraging responses to the various appeals. It is our opinion that our already large conference honor roll will not be diminished when the reports are all in. Where we have had an opportunity to point out to the people what small amounts would make this possible for their churches, they have said, "Well, certainly we can do that."

We suggest again that pastors give to each church itemized statements of all budget assessments, and that this be announced from the pulpit, with stress put upon each item. This will enable the people to see at a glance what these assessments are, and how easily much of this total amount is within their reach. Where this is done, we are confident of the results.

And please, pastors and church treasurers, send in your collections promptly. Your payments will be an inspiration to your charges, and to other charges, and, besides, the money will be available for immediate use where it is needed.

Again we give assurances that our deep solicitude and earnest prayers are with every pastor and every charge in these days of special effort to bring the year to a happy and successful closing.

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

The generous contributions made recently have been applied on the interest on mortgage. By paying the premiums we shall materially increase the cash value of the life insurance, which is being accumulated with which to meet the mortgage at maturity.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mebane.—The Missionary Societies and Ladies' Aid have been having their meetings regularly with good attendance and collections. The September meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Jobe with 25 members and one visitor present. Collection for the afternoon was $19.60.

During the social hour Mrs. Jobe, assisted by Mrs. Earl Brady and Mrs. Highfill Jobe, served ice cream and cake.

The Ever-Ready Circle, composed of the members of the girls' Philathea class, was recently organized. Mrs. Earl Brady is the president. This circle is doing mission work and also interested in the Ladies' Aid. The Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society has been very active this summer. They have been holding their meetings in the homes during the summer months, but will go back to the church for meetings during the winter.

The Williams Nicholson Mission Band is doing nicely. This band meets each month in the home of some member or at the church and usually have a splendid attendance.

The following young people of our church will leave soon for school: Misses Grace Barnette, Alta Allen, Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson, High Point College; Miss Ruby Jones, N. C. C. W., Greensboro; Grover Sykes, Duke University, and Miss Margaret Nicholson, Wesley Long Hospital, Greensboro, to enter training. REPORTER.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Bro. Ridge preached a great sermon last Sunday. The church needs to watch, work and pray to keep Satan out of the church. After preaching he administered the Lord's Supper.

Bro. Bunch Lanier has a very sick little child in the hospital at High Point which keeps them from church. Our prayers go out for them.

There will be preaching again the second Sunday in October, which will be the last time before conference. All come out; at this time the officers are to be elected for the net year. Pray for us.

ABIGAIL COGGIN, Reporter.

Asheboro.—Even though we do not often have a report in the Herald we have not been idle. Yesterday was a splendid day with us. The Goto-Church campaign inaugurated by all the churches of the town seems to have worked well. The congregations at our church morning and evening were better than usual. At the morning hour yesterday we took pledges to the remaining indebtedness of our church. Brother J. S. Lewis left the church one thousand dollars in his will to help pay off the remaining indebtedness on condition that the church raise the remainder, which was about four hundred dollars. The amount now pledged is about three hundred and twenty, and we are hoping to get the rest pledged right away. The definite date for the dedication of the church will be set right away. We are looking forward to this event with a great deal of pleasure. Two years ago new pews and carpet were put in the auditorium and just recently new windows have been put in. Within a little more than a year three new pianos have been put in the various departments, making five pianos in the building, so we are in good condition for work now. When the church is dedicated we trust it will give inspiration for even better things.

Brother R. R. Ross, who was somewhat hurt in a fall a couple of weeks ago, was at church again yesterday. Brother J. S. Ridge, who has been in failing health for the past few years, is now critically ill and very little hope is held out for his recovery.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

P. S.—I might have said that along with the material improvements we are looking out for new members, 19 having been received so far this conference year. J. E. P.

First Church, Concord.—Our reporter has been reporting so often and so well that it has been unnecessary for me to write, but now that vacation is over it may be well for me to say a word about my activities during vacation. The church was kind in giving us a four weeks' vacation which we have spent assisting in revival meetings.

The fifth Sunday in July I joined Brother G. B. Ferree in a meeting at Fairview Church on Anderson charge. The meeting resulted in some 25 conversions and a number of reconsecrations. The first Sunday evening found me with Rev. J. D. Morris at Kistler's church on Cleveland charge. The meeting ran through Thursday night. The second Sunday morning I joined with Brother Ferree again, this time at Liberty Hill church. The meeting closed the following Sunday. I was compelled to leave the meeting Friday night. The third Sunday night I went to Brother Braxton at Bethel church on Mocksville charge and continued with him through Thursday night. Then came a week of rest. Monday after the first Sunday in September I joined Brother J. D. Cranford in the Weaverville church at Weaverville and continued with him through the following Friday night. At this point we were almost completely rained out during the entire week. At all points I feel that great good was accomplished. However, I feel that each of these meetings ought to have gone another full week. We had only time to do a sort of foundation work and little more, but the combined efforts resulted in 65 conversions with about 50 accessions to the various churches.

I greatly enjoyed the fellowship of the pastors and each of them rendered fine service during the meetings. Three of the five meetings were among the churches located on the border of our conference territory and while each of them has those problems which are common and even peculiar to churches thus located, they are going forward. Blessings on them all.

Next Sunday is home-coming day with our church here. Several of the former pastors and a host of former members are expected to be present. There will be three services—eleven, three and seven-thirty.

The Christian Endeavor Society held a sort of farewell service for several members who go away this week to college. It was a camp-fire service and was both interesting and helpful. Miss Dessie Lee Little and Miss Beatrice Waddell leave this week for High Point College and Miss Ethel Blackwelder goes to Kernersville to teach. Miss Bettie Brittingham, who has been rendering fine service during the past year, also goes this week to Western Maryland College for her senior year. We will greatly miss all these workers.

The remaining weeks of the conference year will find us busily engaged in finishing up the year's program. We are greatly behind on our General and Annual Conference budgets, but expect to pay out as usual by conference.

G. H. HENDRY, Pastor.

Haw River Tidings.—Three of the five churches have had revivals during the summer. The Friendship meeting began the first Sunday in July. The people were very busy but the attendance was good through the entire meeting. The pastor had not been able to secure pulpit help until on Tuesday when Bro. Ashburn and Bro. Hutton, two of the beloved former pastors, came and remained until Thursday night. To the delight of us all these brethren brought fine soul-stirring messages. To have these two brethren take their turns preaching reminded us of the old days when perhaps a number of preachers would gather at our churches and preach during the revival seasons without much formality but with power. Because of the set plans of these churches the meeting at Friendship had to close on Friday night that the work might begin at Fair Grove on the following Sunday. Bro. Ashburn did the preaching throughout the meeting and his sermons were very much appreciated by both pastor and people. There were not many unconverted people in attendance at this meeting but when the meeting had to close on Friday night the evidences were favorable to a good meeting if we could have continued longer. It is indeed unfortunate that so many of our people contend that meetings be held at times when the work must be cut short because of the lack of time and the results are not satisfactory to the people and surely not what is needful for church and community. At Mizpah the revival began on the night of the fifth Sunday of July. Here again Bro. Ashburn came to us on Monday and continued through the meeting which continued for ten days. We were here again pleased and edified by the good sermons by the much beloved former pastor. Bro. Ashburn has served this charge more years than any other living man and the people love him greatly. While the Mizpah meeting was not all we would have had it to be, it was a good meeting. Souls rejoiced, sinners were converted and backsliders were reclaimed. One joined the church. May God bless the good brethren who did the good preaching and the good people for their co-operation. May great good come out of the efforts put forth not only now but in time to come.

Bro. Reed, who for four years served this work as pastor, was an attendant at Fair Grove on every service and at the other revivals a part of the time. We thank him for his co operation.

On next Sunday a ten days' revival begins at Midway. Dr. and Mrs. Dixon are to be with us to do the evangelistic work. This is to be the first revival conducted in the new church at this place. Dr. Dixon was reared in this community and the people are pleased to have him back in their midst. We are hoping for and expecting a great revival. Brethren, please remember us in your prayers that this revival might be a great success. This request is especially made of former pastors.

Many pounds of good things have come to the parsonage from many homes on the charge but on two recent occasions these favors came in real "pounding" style. One night during the revival at Fair Grove, when we went to the car we found room was at a premium, for we found that our faithful old vehicle had been converted into a groceteria. Even in the dark it did not take us long to learn that somebody had been imposing on our car but it did not take us long to conclude that the imposition on the car was no imposition to us. We were quite ready and glad to say, "Do it again." Again on Sunday, September 2, when we were preparing to take our leave from Mizpah we were greatly surprised to find the Chevrolet again converted into a groceteria. The people must have found that she worked well in this capacity. People seem to find great pleasure in surprising pastors in this way but this pastor is glad to be surprised at any time in just such fashion. God bless the people at both these churches for the good things and the kind deeds. We do not know the names of all these good people who took part in these splendid donations and the articles were too numerous to mention, so we leave it all to the good Lord and through Him we thank all for all that was included. We greatly appreciate all the gifts for their value but we appreciate more the good thought of the good people that prompted the giving. God bless you one and all.

As we approach the close of the year we find finances considerably behind but feel sure it will greatly improve before the year ends. Nominating committees have been appointed at all the churches and with the exception of one church the committees have done their work and the nominees are before their respective churches to be voted upon at congregational meetings appointed for the near future.

In His name, GEO. L. CURRY.

Burlington, First Church.—Attendance of the Sunday school today numbered 326 with offering amounting to $20.32. An increase of 151 over the previous Sunday was noted, as last Sunday was a very rainy day.

The Baraca class attendance was large and our teacher, Bro. C. C. Lindley, brought us a helpful and inspiring message on the regular lesson. The hot weather is most over now and we are hoping that we will have a very large class of men within a few Sundays. One of our Baraca boys, Mr. L. L. Wilson, is still a patient in the government hospital at Oteen, N. C., and last reports we had from him were encouraging. We truly hope that he will soon be restored to normal health.

Preaching services at both the morning and evening hour were well attended, with splendid sermons by Bro. Gerringer.

Rev. F. L. Gibbs, associate secretary of the board of young people's work, of our church, was present at the Sunday school service, and gave us a splendid talk on the work of the board. Bro. Gibbs is one of the boys going from the First Church and we are always glad to have him come back home. Bro. Gibbs preached a great sermon on "Living a Life" at the Fountain Place church at the evening service today, and in his discourse he made a strong appeal to the young people to find their calling and to live for Christ.

The hour for the evening services has been changed from 8 o'clock to 7:30 o'clock beginning with today, upon action of the local Ministerial Association.

We don't know of very much, if any, illness among our members at this time, but if there is any, kindly inform the pastor of this fact. Bro. Scott Braxton, who was very sick last week, is almost well again, it seems.

Best wishes to all.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—We had the pleasure of having our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, with us last Sunday. It was his first visit to us and the large audience was delighted with the good message he brought.

At the close of the service Maurine Voss was taken into the church.

Sunday school work was not so well attended as we would like to have had, but we are hoping for better attendance from now on. We have set "100 present" as our goal. KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

High Point.—To a large congregation which comfortably filled the auditorium of the First Church, the new pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, delivered at the 11 o'colck service a comforting and inspiring message, which he called "The Glory of the Commonplace," from the text found in Matthew 13:54-55: "Whence hath this man this wisdom and these mighty works? Is not this the carpenter's son?" Seneca said that every man loves his own home, not because it is beautiful, but because it is his own. When he came to Nazareth, it must have been a poignant grief to him that the people did not receive him, but rebuked him with scorn, saying, "Is not this the son of a carpenter?" "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country" and "He did not many mighty works because of their unbelief." In life there are two estates for all of us: first, long years of humility, the commonplace, and humdrum drudgery. Charles Kingsley said, "Thank God every morning that we have something to do when we get up and some work that we must get up for." Before the glorious years of His ministry, Jesus spent thirty years in humdrum work, in obedience to His parents, leading the life of any normal boy, learning His trade. When we step aboard the elegant Pullman car that carries us from New York to New Orleans or across the continent, in luxurious style and comfort, how many of us think of the engineer and fireman, who guide the destiny of that train of cars or remember to pray for them that their eyes may be strong and their hands steady? Back of everything glorious and every life worth while are long years of training and preparation. Without these years of humility and drudgery in the field of law, medicine, the ministry, the teaching profession or even the mother rearing her family, you cannot expect success. A most comforting thought is that many who do not attain the position in life that they desire are often the inspiration to others who accomplish more than they.

"The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight;
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night!"

The music at this morning service was very beautiful. Mr. Ernest B. Stimson presided at the organ in a charming manner, and Mr. William Mason, of Greensboro, sang "Spirit of God" with fine effect. At the Sunday evening service Mrs. Walter Kester played a lovely violin solo, "Cavatina," by Raff, and Mr. Stimson played as a prelude the "Moonlight Sonata," by Beethoven. Rev. Mr. Farmer chose for the subject of his discourse, "Who Is Greatest?"

An elegant reception was tendered to Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer at the handsome new home of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny at Jamestown last Friday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock. The mansion was beautiful in its decorations and arrangements, an ideal setting for an elaborate social affair. Tea was served in the dining room and frozen punch in the sun parlor. Lovely music was rendered throughout the evening by Mrs. J. H. Allred, Mrs. John C. Whitesell, Prof. Ernest B. Stimson and Clarence Schultheiss. This reception was an unusually brilliant social affair, and more than 200 guests called to meet the new pastor and his wife.

The regular September meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society was held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. S. Coe in Emerywood, with Mrs. C. C. Robbins associate hostess. There was a large attendance and enthusiasm ran high when the treasurer, Mrs. C. L. Gray, reported that the note of $2,600 for the Carpet Fund has been paid in full. A coffee urn has been bought for the church kitchen at a cost of $58, and there is still a balance of $159 in the bank. A motion was carried to buy a number of kitchen utensils from this balance in the treasury. At the conclusion of the business session, delightful refreshments were served by the hostesses, and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed. We were much pleased to have Rev. and Mrs. Farmer present, also Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard and Mrs. O. O. Young, of Henderson, who will live at the college this winter with her daughter, Miss Mary E. Young.

The address of the new pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, is 607 W. Farriss Ave., phone number 5298.

The members of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies are looking forward to an interesting meeting next Monday afternoon when Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, will come and give a concise summary of the Home Mission Study Book.

We learn with great pleasure that 400 students have enrolled at High Point College and class work will begin next Thursday, September 13. Today is Orientation Day for freshmen. President Andrews and the officials are expecting a very successful year.

Wyatt A. Pickens arrived Friday evening from Baton Rouge, La., for a visit of a week to his mother, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, and other relatives. He is assistant professor of romance languages in Louisiana State University.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The congregation was very large at both Sunday school and the evening service Sunday. We had several new members in our Sunday school.

Rev. Willie Wood filled our appointment Sunday evening, as our pastor was away assisting Bro. Powell in a meeting. This was the first time our people had had an opportunity to hear Mr. Wood preach. They were well pleased with his preaching. We are proud of him, as he is one of our Sunday school boys and we hope that he will do a great work in our Master's vineyard.

We enjoyed having Bro. Williams with us in our revival and hearing him preach. He brought us some soul-stirring messages.

One of our faithful members, Mr. W. A. Ellington, is at the point of death at this writing.

REPORTER.

Kernersville.—The fourth quarterly conference of this charge will convene at Pine Grove church at 2 p. m. Saturday, October 13.

Winding up this year's work in an acceptable way, in view of making some plans for another year, is very important. Therefore, a full count of all the official members of the entire charge is very necessary.

Remember, brethren, that the Annual Conference meets in Winston October 31.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our pastor, Bro. Curry, has filled all his appointments since our last report, and he always brings us something good. We have learned to love him and his family very much since they have been with us. Last Sunday we had a township Sunday school convention at this place which was enjoyed very much; had some good speakers on the various parts of Sunday school work. Our Sunday school is doing good work under the leadership of R. P. Butler. The Christian Endeavor Society is also moving along nicely, Miss Sallie Dobbs being president.

Our revival starts next Sunday, September 16, with preaching at 11 o'clock and at 8, and will run on through the fourth Sunday. We are looking forward to having Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon with us during this meeting. Will ask the prayers of all who read this, that we may have a great revival.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Pine Hill, Davidson Charge.—Bro. Ridge preached a soul-stirring sermon on the second Sunday at 3 o'clock. It filled our hearts with joy, the gracious words he spoke. Our conference year will soon be closed. We truly hope we will get Bro. Ridge again. We have all learned to love him and his family so well. He has been so faithful to us this year, it would pain our hearts for him to have to leave us. We feel like he has strengthened our church by his good preaching and good singing and playing the organ. We feel like he has done his whole duty in our church. May God bless him and keep him ever true. There has not been the interest taken in our church this year that ought to have been. We are hoping to start our prayer meeting and Sabbath school as soon as the revival meeting is over. Our camp meeting at Chapel Hill is to begin the third Sunday in September. We pray that there will be many precious souls saved. The harvest is great and the laborers are few. There is a great work that ought to be done.

F. L. SMITH.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Sunday school is doing very well; attendance has been well over a hundred.

On the second Sunday in August Bro. W. E. Jones and family gave the entire school a real watermelon feast on the church grounds immediately after Sunday school. On that same date the Women's Board and Ladies' Aid held a joint meeting with a good attendance.

Seems that the stork has been pretty busy among our membership the past few weeks: Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Mickey, a son; Mr. and Mrs. Edd Jones, a son; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Allen, a son.

Bro. Hunter filled his appointment on the third Sunday in August with a full house. We were very glad to note that an unusually large number partook of the sacrament after the sermon.

Bro. Hunter opened the doors of the church for new members; there were two who came forward, William Hutchins and his sister, and were duly received into the church.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Enfield.—Since the reporter wrote last our Sunday school has given a very enjoyable picnic to its members and a number of visitors out at Bellamy's Lake. About one hundred enjoyed the brunswick stew, barbecue, cakes, pickles, etc.

Rev. J. B. O'Briant preached a good sermon for us Sunday morning. We enjoyed a very helpful sermon from our pastor Sunday night.

I will give a brief account of the meeting of the Ladies' Aid. Wednesday afternoon, August 29, at 4 o'clock, the Ladies' Aid of the M. P. church met with Mrs. Mary Barnhill and Mrs. Egbert Barnhill. The assisting hostesses were Mrs. Walter Moore, Mrs. Bustin and Mrs. Jack Rigsby.

The president was absent, so the vice-president, Mrs. H. M. Whitaker, presided very efficiently at this meeting. The devotional exercise was conducted by Mrs. Rigsby. The routine of business passed off very smoothly.

Among the sick mentioned was Mrs. Bustin; we hope she will soon be better and can be at our next meeting. We were very glad to have Mrs. Frank Harris join our society; we are always pleased to have new members and also visitors.

Refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served.

Spring Church.—Our revival meeting began the fourth Sunday in August and closed on the following Thursday. Dr. Geo. R. Brown did all the preaching and we feel that our church and community were greatly blessed by the wonderful sermons Dr. Brown brought us. There were eight to unite with our church.

We were delighted to have with us Wednesday and Thursday of our meeting President Taylor. On Thursday afternoon at the closing of the meeting he talked to us about the conference program.

Since our last report one of our oldest and faithful members, Mrs. Betty Cox, has passed into the beyond.

Mr. Clifton Cook will represent Spring Church Charge in our next Annual Conference.

Our pastor, Rev. A. D. Shelton, preached a very inspiring sermon Sunday.

WHAT ONE CIRCUIT STEWARD IS DOING

The inclosed letter was sent out by one circuit steward to the various stewards on his charge, and we are giving it to the Herald, by permission, with the hope that it may be a suggestion to other charges. We are putting blanks in the place of names for obvious reasons.

This steward is interested in the success of his charge; his charge is old and influential, and his pastor has an honorable and long-standing record in the conference.

S. W. TAYLOR.

(Inclosure)

July 18, 1928.

Dear Brother Steward:

I am wondering if we are doing by our pastor and church as we would have others do by us could we but exchange places. If not, let's do a better part than we are doing.

Despite the fact that the conference year is more than two-thirds gone, we have paid our pastor only about $341.50, distributed as follows: —— $57; —— $77; —— $37.50; —— $170. This is considerably less than one-third of his salary. Are we treating our pastor as we should? Bro. —— does not complain, but he is human and I'm sure he finds himself in embarrassing positions at times for the simple reason that we have not met our obligation to him. This ought not so to be. I believe it would be easier and we would feel much better over it if we would pay our pastor as we go along. If all can't pay now, collect from those who can pay now and let the others pay later. Most of our people can and do buy gasoline. Much depends on how anxious we are to do a thing. Many could pay their full assessment and get along without embarrassment could they but awake to the importance of the matter. If you, as a steward, have done your very best, I commend you and have no more to say; but if you have not done your best, won't you begin right now? I believe that we stewards can better the situation.

And along with the pastor's salary, let us not forget the other interests of our church. On these the spread of the Kingdom through the means of our church largely depends. Let's do our best to help carry on the work elsewhere in our own country and in the foreign lands by raising all we possibly can on the budgets.

If I can be of any service at any time, do not hesitate to call on me at any time or place.

With best wishes, I am,

Fraternally,

CIRCUIT STEWARD.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Our church mourns the death of the beloved wife of B. E. Payne, Augusta Lula.

Mrs. Payne was a perfect type of a true Christian companion and ideal motherhood. Her life was, with all its powers, given to the building of a home that has been controlled by love, and the advancement of the material and spiritual interests of her church, Sunday school and Ladies' Aid. She was a consistent and loyal member of Pleasant Grove Methodist Protestant church.

In Proverbs, 31st chapter, the wise man asks: "Who can find a virtuous woman?" And then describes the qualities she should possess. We believe Mrs. Payne possessed every one and filled every requirement.

Those who knew her best loved her most, and those who knew her least loved her much. Her soul has gone out where the darkness disappears and the shadows flee away.

We cannot withhold from her the unbidden homage, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

"She is not dead, she only sleeps the sleep
Of one who, wearied with her toil, gives o'er
And walks into a slumber sweet and deep,
To awaken on a bright, eternal shore.
She is not dead—God would not have it so;
The busy hands close-folded on her breast,
The feet that were so swift to come and go
Had grown earth-weary, and God gave them rest."

Resolved, first, that we, the members of Pleasant Grove Ladies' Aid take this means of expressing our sincere appreciation of her faithful life and labors.

Resolved, second, that we extend to her husband, children and grandchildren our highest regards for her memory and our deepest sympathy in their great loss, and pray that the God of all comfort may sustain and keep them.

Resolved, third, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of Ladies' Aid, a copy be sent to the bereaved family and one to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

By order of Ladies' Aid Pleasant Grove church.

WINONA BIBLE CONFERENCE CLOSES

The 34th Annual Bible Conference at Winona Lake, Ind., closed Sunday, August 26, with 12 services.

One cannot begin to tell of the many good things. The sermons, Bible teaching, the music under the direction of Homer Rodeheaver, the "Rescue Mission Boys," the Hillside services, the meeting held each morning for women, when Dr. J. C. Massee spoke.

The inspiration received from the many home and foreign missionaries who told of their work each afternoon and evening. Almost 100 from many lands were in attendance.

Thirty-three states were represented at the Conference. The Conference closes with all expenses paid and with a neat balance of one thousand dollars, which has been turned over to Winona institutions.

"Home-Coming Day" was a great success. The largest crowd ever assembled on a mid-week occasion was here. The marvelous prohibition talk given by Rev. W. A. Sunday was enthusiastically received. Much information was given as to the character of Gov. Al Smith and his purposes.

THE NO-TOBACCO LEAGUE

At its recent annual convention at Winona Lake, the No-Tobacco League of America elected officers.

The reports of the officers showed that the league had the best year in its history and the outlook for the future was most encouraging. Plans were matured for specializing the work in various departments. The general superintendent is to take over the major part of the work formerly carried by the general secretary, who will confine his attention to college organization, church conventions, publicity and literature. There is need for a multitude of field workers and others capable of carrying on other lines of special activities. Those wishing to engage in such work should address the general superintendent, F. W. Lough. Those interested in literature pertaining to the tobacco problem should write to the general secretary, Charles M. Fillmore. The headquarters of the league remains at 820 Occidental Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

CONCERNING THE PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL CIVIC LEAGUE

Rev. O. R. Miller, of Albany, N. Y., is not only president of the National Civic League, whose headquarters are at 206 Pennsylvania Ave., S. E., Washington, D. C., but he is also state superintendent of the New York Civic League, and for nearly twenty years has lived at Albany. He spends as much time as possible at Washington when Congress is in session, working for good legislation and opposing bad legislation affecting moral questions.

He has traveled widely and studied moral reform questions in every part of the country, having lectured in every state in the Union. For 35 years he has been a clergyman, "in good and regular standing" in his denomination. He was a pastor ten years before he was drafted into reform work and for the last 25 years has devoted his whole time to fighting moral reform battles—in helping secure both the enactment and enforcement of state and national laws against bootlegging, gambling, vice, Sabbath desecration, etc.

Any one wishing to make inquiry concerning his character and standing are referred to any bank in Albany, N. Y., or to any Protestant pastor in that city, and to hundreds of other Protestant pastors in all parts of New York state; also to any of the following persons, all of whom know Mr. Miller personally, some for many years:

Bishop John W. Hamilton, Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Hon. Seymour Lowman, Washington, D. C.; Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, Canon Wm. Sheafe Chase, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Dr. C. F. Reisner, New York City; Dr. William Bancroft Hill, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; U. S. District Judge Frank Cooper, Albany, N. Y.; Clinton N. Howard, Rochester, N. Y.; Bishop A. W. Leonard, Buffalo, N. Y.; Bishop E. H. Hughes, Chicago, Ill.; Bishop C. E. Locke, Saint Paul, Minn.; Congressmen F. M. Davenport, T. C. Sweet, G. H. Stalker, all of New York State; former Congressman William D. Upshaw, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. Frank M. Larkin, Los Angeles, Calif., and many others whose names might be given.

ANCIENT HISTORY

The various religious denominations should make haste to put the true history before their people. A man of consideration said that "ignorance is the greatest evil in the world."

We must gain our knowledge by being taught, and we should cherish a willingness to be taught. A generation ago, after an able traveler and lecturer had made a second trip to the "old countries," he said that one needs to know a good deal about his travels in advance so as to learn much after he gets there.

In the late Herald, August 30, page 4, you have something of the reading for "1928." "Intelligence is the life of liberty," and now is the time for those who should lead and influence to stir up. There are old books, safe histories, laid back. Hunt them out and lend to your neighbors. The way for your quiet neighbors to have the "sober" reading that they just now need is to look it up and put it into their hands. Leaflets are now needed. Select sketches from ancient histories, and from sermons, and send in to the editors of (safe) pepers, and have the needed history published.

We can only be safe by being ruled by men who have due respect for our Christian institutions. OBSERVER.

DR. COMPHER GIVEN NEW AUTOMOBILE

Rev. C. M. Compher and family will leave Monday morning for Lynchburg, Va., to attend the Maryland M. P. Conference, to which Mr. Compher will return this year. They will go in a handsome new sedan car, gift from a friend with whom warm friendship has developed during Mr. Compher's ministry in Winston-Salem. The friend approached Mr. Compher a few days ago and suggested that he trade his old car for a new one before he left the city for Maryland conference. Upon the assertion that he was not in a position to acquire a new car at this time, the friend insisted that he have his car checked over at a garage that was designated. This was done and when the old car was driven into the place he was instructed to drive the new car away and leave the old one—a gift from the friend that had previously approached him.

Mr. Compher is a former pastor of the church at which the conference will be held at Lynchburg, and is looking forward to the sessions with interest. They expect to return to the city about September 18 to arrange for removal to some appointment in the Maryland conference.—Winston-Salem Sentinel.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

BETHEL MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The W. F. M. S. of Bethel, Alamance, is very active under the leadership of our efficient president, Mrs. Lon McPherson. The monthly meetings have been well attended and good programs rendered. Much credit is due our program committee for planning these meetings.

Our September meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. A. Foust on last Friday afternoon. The subject was, "Developing Our Talents for Leadership." The devotional service consisted of songs, responsive reading of the Parable of the Talents, and prayer. After the reading of the minutes and the roll call a question box was conducted. Lesson from study book was given by Mrs. R. W. Lindley.

A plan was adopted for the circulation of missionary books and magazines in our church.

Then came an item of business that was looked forward to with keenest interest by every member—that of hearing the reports of the leaders of a contest that came to a close at this time. This contest was for the purpose of raising our apportionment. The plan used was "A Trip to India," letting each cent collected represent five miles. The membership was divided, and the winning side was to be entertained by the losers. Neither side permitted the other to know how far on the journey it was. What a moment of suspended silence when the president called for the reports and the two captains arose and handed in their written reports and the secretary read the results! What surprise and rejoicing to discover that each side had more than reached India and back home again!

Thus the contest was a success in a financial way. Other results were revealed by the next item of business when 19 names were presented for membership. Truly it was a time of great joy as these were voted into the society. It was a most impressive scene as the music of "Blest Be the Tie" was softly rendered on the piano while the new members were given the right hand of fellowship, then all joined hands and sang the song.

The president made a very touching speech as she welcomed these new members into the society. This welcome was further extended by Mrs. R. W. Lindley and Miss Bessie Holmes, followed by a special prayer in behalf of the new members offered by Mrs. A. L. Foust. Next Miss Marcia Foust gave a brief talk on "The Purpose of the Missionary Society." After a few brief remarks by members, new and old, and the closing song, we were dismissed by prayer by Miss Holmes. Refreshments were then served by the hostess and her daughter, Miss Lizabel Foust.

On Tuesday afternoon the losing side in the contest entertained the winners at the home of the president, Mrs. Lon McPherson. This represented a tea given in India. Two young ladies impersonated the women of India and carried out the program in the fashion of that country. Although their customs seemed strange to us Americans, we enjoyed the whole program of songs, games, contests, and refreshments. One article on display was a fan sent from India by one who formerly lived in this community, Mrs. Cordia Thompson Murdock, whose mother was the first president of our society. We feel that our interest in India has been deepened, and especially for the child whom our society is supporting there.

We trust that we may be more faithful in the service of the Master.

MARCIA FOUST, Cor. Sec.

HOME-COMING DAY AT GILES CHAPEL

Sunday, September 16, we will have a reunion of the Sunday school organized in 1875 by Jesse L. Giles, superintendent. We hope to see our old comrades in Christ on that day. Come and enjoy the day with us once more at the old home church. Our protracted meeting will commence on that day.

Our Sunday school is not as large as it used to be, but we have the same interest and the same hope and the same faith, and lift up the same Christ before the rising generation that the world may be the better because we are living in it.

J. C. ALLRED, Supt.

—Rev. W. F. Ashburn is to assist in New Salem meeting which begins next Sunday. Bro. Ashburn will begin Monday.

FROM NORTH CAROLINA STATE BOARD OF HEALTH

A life a day, and more, is the toll being taken by automobiles in North Carolina as shown by the death certificates filed with the State Board of Health. To August 1, a total of 270 deaths had been reported as resulting from automobile accidents. Deaths from this cause are exceeding month by month those resulting from typhoid fever and diphtheria. And month by month the number grows.

"For the next two months we may expect a heavy increase in automobile accidents, and resulting deaths," Dr. Chas. O'H. Laughinghouse, State Health Officer, said today in discussing this terrific loss of life and property. "Some, of course, are unavoidable, but the most are due to carelessness or gross negligence.

"Right now one of the greatest hazards of the road is the unlighted cart and wagon. All over Eastern North Carolina tobacco growers are hauling their crops to market, and a great number of them travel at night in order to have their tobacco ready to go on the warehouse floor in the early morning. Hardly one in a thousand of the horse-drawn vehicles on the roads carries a light. The result will be an increase of collision accidents through all the autumn months.

"The warehousemen of the State could render a valuable service to the State and to their patrons by urging upon each of their customers the necessity of carrying a light on their carts and wagons for their own protection, and to save their product from being ruined in a wreck.

"The last session of the General Assembly enacted legislation requiring that any vehicle operated on the public roads between a half hour after sunset and a half hour before sunrise must display a light on the left side of the vehicle visible to those approaching either from the front or the rear. A penalty of fine not to exceed $50 was provided. The law has been in effect for more than a year but I have never heard of any person being prosecuted because of its violation. I do know from personal experience that practically no horse-drawn vehicle has any light upon it.

"Entirely from the standpoint of conserving the lives of our people I urge that this gross carelessness and negligence be stopped. The man on the road at night with an unlighted vehicle endangers not only his own life, but that of all others traveling the same road. By carrying lights the awful toll of death from automobile accidents can be reduced."

Guardian Spirit

Little Alice, aged three, after she had been tucked into bed was afraid of the dark.

"There's Someone who always takes care of little children, dear," her mother assured her. But Alice looked puzzled and her mother continued: "Don't you remember? . . . Someone up in the sky?"

Alice smiled back. "Oh, yes, 'course I do now—Lindbergh."—Aero Digest.

—Mrs. Bates has organized a battalion of one-cent-a-day money-givers to pay off Calvary's floating debt contracted in building. This bids fair to aggregate very appreciably in quickening the process of emerging from debt. If absolutely all our members will join in, the results will bring an agreeable little help made the cushions. The church needed glass for an ornamental window in the gable. She raised the money and had glass put in. She proceeds so quietly with her good deeds that it is sometimes quite a while before we learn what she is about, but we are always gratified when we learn. We highly appreciate such a member. May she find a feast of joy in her consecration to the church. She is doing what she can.

—Richard E. Byrd, of Virginia, is now on his perilous expedition to the Antarctic regions. His party of 72 persons are in three ships, carrying supplies. Mr. Byrd hopes to make important discoveries. He takes an airship in which he hopes to fly over the south pole. He will not be the first to do this feat. It is doubtful whether the results of the expedition will justify the suffering and loss of life involved. The expedition now is chiefly notable as an exhibition of courage. One boy scout, aged 19, is in the party, one of 88 scouts that competed for the privilege.

—Calvary church has a notable member—notable for her good achievements under unfavorable conditions. We say unfavorable conditions because she is infirm in health, unable to attend church many times. But she thinks of the church and for the church when she is at home. The church needed a bell. She raised the money and bought it. The church needed cushions for the communion altar. She traded and made the money for the materials and then with a surprise. In order to encourage those who can pay only a cent a day, those who can and do pay more might fittingly enter the company.

—Maine had its state election last Monday. The vote was light, and went for the Republican ticket about two to one for the Democratic.

What Would It Take to Make You Happy?

An ancient heathen author discussed the question of human happiness, trying to discover the condition under which the highest happiness would be realized. At length he drew a picture illustrating his conception of the most happy state of life. He pictured a ship at sea in a great storm. All on board were in terrible distress, fearing instant or early death. There is no happiness, of course, in such a scene as that. But that is only part of the picture. The happy situation was that of the author, in a secure place on the land, in sight of the endangered and distressed ship. His thought was that his own happiness would be greatly enhanced by contrast with the feeling of the terrified people in the ship. Since that man was a heathen, we are perhaps not much surprised at his heathenish view of the conditions of happiness. You would say that your happiness would be greatly diminished, yes, would be made impossible, by the sight of that ship in distress. You could not be happy as long as one of those imperiled people was in danger.

The difference between you and the heathen writer is that you have sympathy for others and he had none.

There are people living today in Christian lands who seem to enjoy wealth more because others have it not; health more because others are sick; every advantage more because it is not universal. They are like the heathen author. It needs the contrast of want or woe to enable them to realize how well off they are.

But you will say it is quite heathenism to draw happiness from the misfortunes of your fellowmen. It would take far more to meet your notions of the conditions of happiness. You could enjoy wealth if everybody had it. You could enjoy health if everybody were well. You could rejoice in learning if everybody were learned. You could take pleasure in your home if every one had a home as good. You have some sympathy for your fellowmen. So far you are a Christian and not a heathen. With him happiness was an individual affair. With you it is a community, a national, an international affair. It would take a great deal to make you happy. As long as there is one in danger and distress, you are agitated, you feel moved to try to rescue.

Church Dedication

The Asheboro people have come to the point of dedicating their splendid house of worship and have set September 30 as the time for the dedicatory service. Pres. R. M. Andrews, of High Point College, will preach the sermon at 11 o'clock. This day is also to be home-coming day for all former members of the church and congregation. All former pastors and all friends of the church are also invited to be present. We hope this will be a red letter day for our Asheboro people. Pastor Pritchard joins with his people in extending these invitations.

Speak the Truth in Love

It becomes necessary sometimes to speak some very plain truths, yes, some very ugly truths, frightfully ugly truths. If the truth were not known, great mistakes might be made and much harm might ensue. People must be enlightened regarding matters about which they must act. Both men and measures must be set forth in their true colors. Righteousness is dependent on truth.

This is particularly true in our political affairs. We need to know the men who are candidates for high office over us. Shall we vote for them or shall we vote against them? To answer this question we must know the men, we must know the truth about them so far as this truth is pertinent to a just estimate of their efficiency as office-holders. We want to know how the man will conduct himself in office. If we vote for him, we make him our agent and we become responsible for what he does. Under these circumstances we wish to know the truth, we are entitled to know the truth.

It is a delicate matter, however, to discuss the personal qualifications of candidates. Men shrink from doing it. But it must be done by those in a position to know. If they hold their peace and allow the people in their ignorance to make a great mistake in the choice of public servants, they become guilty of a great sin of omission. They cannot hold their peace, they must speak out. But they must speak not in hate but in love. If candidates are grossly unfit, those who know it must declare it, but they must do it, not in hatred toward the aspiring candidates, but out of the best of motives: love for the people as a whole and love for even the very men they are bound to oppose.

Our political campaigns would not be the painful things they are if the truth that must be told were told always in love. Even the candidates would feel less resentment and would be shamed into repentance if they realized that opposition to them sprang from a regard for the good of all.

The rule holds in all our testimonies. We are bound to speak only the truth. Sometimes we are bound to speak when we would prefer to be silent. But if we always speak the truth in love, much of the pain is taken away, and we may hope that more of good than of evil will result from our speaking.

—Rev. C. C. Day, of the Maryland Conference, a classmate of Rev. C. W. Bates, preached an excellent sermon in Calvary church last Sunday morning. He went in the afternoon to see High Point College and then returned to Lynchburg, Va., where the Maryland Conference was in session. Brother Day is pastor of St. Luke's M. P. Church in Philadelphia.

THE PASTOR AND THE CHURCH REGISTER

(An abridgment of an address delivered at the Pastors' Conference, July 19, by Rev. J. E. Pritchard, and published by request of the conference)

In discussing the subject allotted me I will say that I am not expecting any shouting. In fact, the subject may be considered dry. Recently some one said to me, "How can any man talk forty minutes on such a subject as you have?" Fortunately for you and me, I do not have to talk forty minutes, as only thirty-five minutes have been allotted to me and in the second place I have some decided convictions on the subject which ought to make it easy for me to speak.

Even though it might seem to be difficult to find a passage of Scripture bearing on my theme, yet without any intention of doing violence to Scripture, I take a text. It is found in 1 Timothy 6:20: "O, Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust." Now this may have meant, Keep the doctrines committed to thy trust, but I believe it also means, Keep everything that is committed to thy trust. And surely a thing as precious as a church roll is a sacred trust.

Now I am going to be honest and admit that once I did not see this thing as I see it now. When I first entered the ministry I felt that every church roll ought to be rewritten often and all of the names which had been dropped or the names of deceased persons left off, and I did this in two or three places, much to my sorrow now, and I am afraid the precious old record is lost. But I learned better, and I received the suggestion from your chairman, Brother Curry. When I succeeded him at Burlington in 1920 he was in the parsonage when I arrived. He took me into the pastor's study and showed me the church register and showed me how he kept it. And in showing it to me he said, "Now I am of the opinion that a church register ought never to be rewritten, as there is too much valuable information lost." My eyes began to open and as the years have gone by they have opened wider, until now it seems to me to be a tragedy to destroy the precious old record that contains so much information concerning the saints of old. And let me say that every record grows in value as it grows older. A new record is not very valuable because usually there are a great many people who can remember what you want to know. But as the years come and go and those who once remembered pass on to the great beyond, then an old record is of priceless value. How many times have I wanted the original roll of a church so as to know who the charter members were! How many times in getting ready to conduct a funeral or in writing an obituary did I search in vain to find out from the church register when the deceased united with the church and whether by letter or profession of faith, and many times the information could not be had because some consecrated and well meaning pastor had rewritten the church roll and the original roll had been lost. What, then, shall we do about it? Shall we go on with the old roll and search for hours for the names of those who are members? Not at all. I once did that, but I have found a more excellent way. Now I make an alphabetical roll for my own use and leave the original roll just as I find it except that of course I add to it as members join the church. How, then, shall we make the alphabetical roll with any degree of accuracy? Now let us open the official church register for our observation. The middle column on the right hand page is where notations are to be made of deaths or removals. If the space in that column is blank, then the name on the left hand margin of the left hand page represents a person in good standing. Let the pastor get some one to assist him, lay a ruler across both pages, slip it down from time to time over the blank space on right hand page and the left hand of the ruler will point to a name on the left hand page. As these names are observed, write them down, the A's in one place and the B's in another, until the entire roll is completed. In making the alphabetical roll leave considerable space between the letters in which to write any new names of people who join the church later. On the extreme left hand margin of the left hand page is the place for the serial number of the members. In making the alphabeticall roll give the same number to the person as is given on the old roll. Suppose I want to find the name of John Doe on the church register. I take my alphabetical roll and under the D's I turn to it immediately. Suppose his number is 632. Then I turn to number 632 on the old church register and I find it in about thirty seconds instead of searching ten minutes as I once did. In case the names on the church register were not numbered as they were received, any pastor can yet number them in a few minutes. This method of handling the church register saves a great deal of time and promotes greater accuracy. As new members are added to the church they are added to both rolls and at the end of the year when the members are to be counted for the report to the Annual Conference, count the alphabetical roll instead of wading through the several hundred names on the old register, remembering that when any members die or move their membership the corrections are to be made on both rolls. This will leave the old roll with its priceless information and the coming generations will come along and have the same advantages that you had.

There is another great advantage in this alphabetical roll; it helps the new pastor. The alphabetical roll is not so sacred as the old register, so you do not hesitate to mark it by giving the street address of the people if they live in town and the name of the town of the people who have moved away but still keep their membership at the old home church. Before the pastor leaves the charge he can sit down and in a few minutes enter the name of the street and the number if he has it opposite each name on the alphabetical roll and the new pastor comes in, takes up this roll, studies it a short while and finds his members without enquiring of the entire community where certain people live, and possibly not finding some of them for a year.

It is a firm conviction of mine that we pastors ought to make it just as easy for our successor as possible, remembering that it is all the work of the kingdom. I do not believe a pastor ever loses anything by making it easy for his successor and I am sure the church in general does not lose.

Now while my subject has not been of such a nature as to call for any demonstration, let us remember that some of these little things that may seem unimportant are of tremendous importance, and the care of the church register which enables us to tell whom we have and what we have is of no small consequence. "Let no man despise the day of small things." Let us so keep the things committed to our trust that others will know that we have kept them.

—It is easy to drift away from God. Israel did this very thing. All through Jewish history God was constantly calling His people back to their true life.—C. E. World.

BUDGET BULLETIN

Last week the Bulletin dealt with the General Conference Budget—G. C. B. If anything we said then is not clear in the mind of any one, we shall be glad to make it so. We want these budgets understood, and we shall be glad to receive inquiry on any matter that is not clear.

We are devoting the space this week to the Annual Conference Budget—A. C. B. In doing so, we shall continue the question and answer method of last week.

1. Who determines the amount of the A. C. B.? Ans. The Annual Conference.

2. What is the amount of the A. C. B. for this year? Ans. $16,295.

3. For what purpose is this money used? Ans. President's salary; debt on the district parsonage, and upkeep of parsonage superannuates; church extension; office expense of the Board of Young People's Work; platform expense of pastors' summer conference; expenses of conference secretary, treasurer, reporter, statistical secretary, and incidental expenses, as postage, printing, long distance phoning, telegraphing, etc., etc.

4. Do we raise the full amount—$16,295? Ans. No. Last year we raised $11,010.51.

5. How much has been raised this year? Ans. Up to August 2, when our full report was published, we had raised $2.606.77.

6. That is far short of the total; will more be raised? Ans. Yes, a great deal more. The most of our budget receipts come in during the last quarter, and a large part will not be in before the meeting of conference.

7. How is the $16,295 distributed? Ans. It is apportioned by the Annual Conferences to the 92 charges of the conference, by the charges to the individual churches, and by the individual churches to the individual member.

8. Is this apportionment actually done? Ans. No, not as to the individual member.

9. What part of this budget gets to the individual member by the Every-Member canvass, assessment, or other plan of distributing it? Ans. Perhaps 25 per cent.

10. What are some essentials for raising the budget? Ans. (1) Information. People will not give liberally to anything about which they do not have proper information. (2) Allotment to the individual member. There is no hope of raising this budget until it gets out to the people. (3) A persisting pastor and a working board of stewards. (4) A deepened spirituality in the church. The closer the church is to Christ, the looser the purse strings will be.

Watch for the Bulletin next week.

Liquor Control in Canada

Mr. Ben H. Spence, of Canada, has published a pamphlet showing how government control of the liquor traffic works in his country. He writes sanely and sensibly as a man who is careful to tell the exact truth. He gives much interesting information, and concludes with this statement:

"'Liquor control' in the Provinces of Canada is a huge success from the standpoint of those who make and wish to derive a profit from the sale of liquor; and those who buy and wish to derive sensations of intoxication from the consumption of liquor; but from the standpoint of those who seek to remedy the evils of alcoholism, it is a tragic, ghastly failure.

"Writ large in the experience of these Canadian Provinces is the truth, which ought to be self-evident, that the ravages of a plague cannot be remedied by arranging for the dissemination of disease germs nor can the evils of alcoholism be prevented by providing facilities by which people may obtain alcoholic beverages."

HOW TO MAKE A SUCCESS OF YOUR CHRISTIAN LIFE

After we become Christians, our growth in grace depends upon ourselves. It is not possible for us to be very useful Christians unless we are willing to do the things essential to spiritual growth. The following suggestions have been found by many Christians to be of vital importance:

1. Study the Bible. Set aside at least 15 minutes for study of the Word of God. Let God talk to us through His Word. The word of the Bible is food for the soul. Commit to memory great verses of Scripture. Join a class for study, and unite with others in studying the Bible.

2. Pray much. Praying is talking with God. We need to talk with Him about everything—our perplexities and our joys, our sorrows and our mistakes, our plans and associates.

3. Win some one to Christ. The only work Christ ever gave Christians to do is to win others for His Kingdom. The only way His Kingdom can be advanced is by the personal work of those who believe in Him.

4. Avoid evil comradeship. Our evil companions may be either bad people, bad books, or bad thoughts. We make our friends, and if these are the wrong sort of people they unmake us in character. Shun evil companionship.

5. Be active in the church. This implies faithful attendance at all the services in the house of God. Co-operate with the leaders in every department of the work and strive to advance the plans made by those in charge of the congregation.—Selected.

WENT HOME ON A PROMISE

It is related of the saintly Frances Ridley Havergal that on the last day of her life she asked a friend to read to her the forty-second chapter of Isaiah.

When the friend read the sixth verse, "I, the Lord, have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee," Miss Havergal stopped her.

"Called—held—kept—used," she whispered. "Well, I'll just go home on that."

And she did "go home on that," as on a celestial chariot, and the home-going was a triumph, with an abundant entrance into the city of God. What word of God have you to go home on?—Selected.

SLOGAN

No Charge Without an Honor Roll Church

"According to your faith be it unto you" has a marked application here. The pastor and the church that believe that this thing can be done are the ones that will do it. And we must not forget that the only vital faith is the faith that does something; the faith that is active. Brethren, please have that kind of faith towards this goal. Do your best to make it real, and you will have at least two compensations: you will experience the inner satisfaction that always comes from faithful effort, and you will have results. This goal will be realized on your charge.

"Somebody said that 'it couldn't be done,'
But he, with a chuckle, replied,
That 'maybe it couldn't,' but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he tried."

That is good logic, and good religion, too. Try it, brethren! Try it!

Mecklenburg

Sept. 4-6. We were booked for this charge for this date, but could not carry out our full program here because of heavy rains. On Tuesday night we had a very satisfactory service at Stallings church, but were not able to have services at any of the other churches on the charge because of weather conditions. We had hoped to get back to the charge later, but a pressure of work from now until conference may make this impossible. Pastor Hall is zealous, and is working faithfully for the success of his charge. Pastor and people seem to be in harmony with each other—a very vital condition for successful work. We are expecting the year to end well on this charge.

Chatham

Sept. 9, Sunday. On this date we visited three churches on this charge in the following order: Bonlee, 11 a. m.; Flint Ridge, 2:30 p. m.; Hickory Grove, 7:30 p. m. At the first and last points the congregations were good. At the Flint Ridge the attendance was not so large, owing to a revival meeting at a nearby church. We were given a pleasing hearing at each church, and the response to our efforts, both in preaching and in presenting the conference programs, was highly gratifying. The church at Bonlee has taken on new life in a marked measure under the pastorate of Bro. Isley. The growing Sunday school has demanded increased facilities for work in this department, and during this year an addition has been made to the church which provides three good reasons for classes. The school is only two years old, and the enrollment is now 125. The attendance goal for the Sunday following our visit was set at 100. Nearly 50 members, we believe, have been added to this church during the past two years. We had the pleasure of receiving one member on the day we were there. While the other churches that we visited did not evidence this marked growth, yet the work is going on steadily, and apparently without friction. The families of two of our ministers, Bros. Pike and Lindley, have their memberships at one of these churches—Hickory Grove. It was our good pleasure to be entertained in the home of each one of these brethren on the occasion of our visit to their church. We are pleased with what we saw of Chatham charge, and with their response to the conference programs. We believe that they are going to help do the things that we are trying to do; and it will be no surprise to us if this charge helps to realize the goal that stands at the head of this page. In fact, we shall not be surprised if more than one of these churches are on several conference honor rolls. We heard a number of commendatory things said of the pastor, and we hope that this year is to be the best yet of his ministry.

Trustee Meeting

Sept. 12. We attended a meeting of the trustees of the college on this date. Plans are being made for meeting the financial needs of the institution, and through the wise and persistent efforts of the finance committee we are sure that this will be done. However, the burden must not be left upon a few. All must help to bear it, and as we do, the load will be lifted, and the work go forward. Rev. G. I. Humphreys, D. D., President of the Board of Christian Education, and Rev. F. W. Stephenson, D.D., Executive Secretary of the Board, were present, and gave encouragement, by their presence and by their remarks, to the work. Students were enrolling the day we were there, though we do not have information as to the number. We trust that this may be a good year in every way for the college.

Union Grove and Lincolnton

Sept. 16, Sunday. This date was given to these two points. We were at Union Grove at 11 o'clock and Lincolnton at 7:30 p. m. The distance between these two points is about 70 miles. Good roads and automobiles have eliminated distance. However, they have not eliminated bodily fatigue. We would not want to preach twice every Sunday at points this far apart. We enjoyed being with each of these churches. The people were kind to us, and attentive to all that we tried to do. The Union Grove church is an old one, the present building being the third one to be erected on that site. The first building was a log house; the second building, a frame one, was struck by lightning and burned just a few years ago. The present house, a frame structure, 40x60, was immediately built, and every dollar of the cost was paid when the building was completed, and I believe they said that they had a surplus of $300 in the bank. Good church financing, I call it! A standard high school has just been established hard by the church, and this should mean a larger and more vigorous life to the church in the years that are ahead. The church also owns a good parsonage. The main drawback to the church is in the fact that it is isolated from our other churches, and this makes the matter of pastoral supply a little difficult. However, we trust that this difficulty may be overcome, and that a future of increasing progress may await this church. We missed the pastor, Bro. Madison. He was at Spencer Sunday, and was to leave on Monday the 17th for study at Westminster Theological Seminary. Union Grove is honored in this spiritual son, and we are sure that they fully appreciate him.

For the night service we were at Lincolnton. We were there in a meeting two or three years ago and consequently we were not without some first-hand knowledge of this church. We noted at once that considerable improvement had been made on the building since we were there, particularly in the matter of painting. This has been done both inside and out, with pleasing effect. New rubber tracking has also been laid in the aisles and around the altar. With the Sunday school rooms which they have had for several years, and these recent improvements, the church presents an attractive and serviceable appearance, and one that no doubt commends it to the community. We were glad to worship with this congregation again, and we appreciate their kindly reception of our message. We are hoping that Lincolnton may be on several of the conference honor rolls. Pastor Carson is serving his third year here, and has done a good work. We bespeak for him the help of his people in bringing this year to a happy and successful closing.

For entertainment and other kindnesses shown us while visiting all of these charges, we are grateful.

Herald Subscriptions

Many HERALD subscriptions expire about the close of the conference year. We trust that pastors will look after this, and have these subscriptions renewed. One of the very best assistants that a pastor can have is the church paper. Where the people read the church papers it is much easier to secure their full co-operation in the church programs. And along with the HERALD, let us boost the Methodist Protestant. Every church family will do well to have these two church papers come regularly to the home.

Rally Day Program

The Board of Christian Education has ready now the Rally Day program, "Training for Service," which will be sent to any church just for the asking, postpaid. Considerable time and money has been spent in preparing this program, and we urge our churches to use it. It will be found complete, and just what is needed for a good church rally. And when you give this program, please do not fail to take an offering for the Board of Christian Education. Take credit for the amount on the G. C. B. of the local church. Order from the Board of Christian Education, Pittsburgh, Pa., 613 West Diamond St., N. S.

Just Think!

Only 43 days more, and we will be meeting in Annual Conference. How short the year has been! How much yet remains to be done in closing the work of this conference year. Let us fill these days with much prayer and intense labor. They will be gone quickly, and unless we "seize the day," this time will slip away and leave us with much undone that we ought to do. Please let every "man stand in his place" and do his very best these closing days.

HE CHOSE YOU

"He chose you not to bitter tears,
Though dark your life may seem;
He chose you not to foolish fears,
And not to sit and dream;
He chose you in His loving grace,
To action, patience, trust,
To show upon a smiling face
What God can do with dust.

"He chose you for His service here,
To witness of His love;
He chose you—oh, the call is clear,
It comes from heaven above—
He chose you, is not this enough
To man you for the fight?
What if the way be lone and rough,
Be true to God and right.

"He chose you for His faithful vine,
Peculiarly His own,
To magnify His life divine,
To live for Him alone.
He chose you for that home above,
Where endless praises ring;
He chose you—oh, the matchless love—
A priest of God, a king.

THE TEST OF TRUTH

Dean Stanley used hopefulness as a test of all systems of truth. Surely this is true of our religion. God is the God of hope and good cheer. The falsity of Mediævalism appears in this that it robbed men of joy and gladness. God dwelt in darkness. His throne was iron. His heart was marble. His laws were huge implements of destruction. His penalties were red hot cannon balls crashing along the sinner's pathway. "Repentance toward God," says N. D. Hillis, in the Investment of Influence, "was moving towards the arctics and away from the tropics. Philosophers destroyed God's winsomeness. The Reformers came in to lead man away from Mediævalism back to God Himself. To say, 'There is no hope for me in God,' is a slander on God and is blasphemy against His love." Without God life is a graveyard; with Him it is a garden.—Selected.

CHERRY BLOSSOMS

She had been christened Carolyn May Bransby, but her father and mother and relatives shortened her everyday name to Callie.

The little girl had a fine home and everything was done to make her happy, but often she wished that she had a brother or sister of her very own. But Callie was not the sort of a child to whine or tease. She was naturally sunshiny and happy and anxious to be kind to those around her.

Quite often she called on old Auntie Hayes, who lived in a little, wood-colored house around the corner. She was not Callie's really, truly Auntie, but the little girl always called her that affectionately, and often carried her some pretty flowers or a little treat of something nice to eat. Callie liked to hear Auntie Hayes tell stories of when she was a little girl, and the two of them often had nice times together.

Sometimes Susan, whose special duty it was to look after Callie, would take the child to the Children's Hospital, and always there was a basket to go along, with little gifts in it for the children there.

Callie often spent her own rainy days pasting picture books on pink or blue cambric leaves. It took quite a while to make a book, as the pictures had to be cut from magazines, and then the paste got on one's fingers and had to be wiped off, and the leaves stitched together up and down the back after the paste was dry. The children were always delighted with these books. Often there were flowers for them, or perhaps little bags of candy. It always made Callie feel warm and happy inside to see how the children's eyes would brighten up at the sight of her, and how many of them would be laughing and joyful when she came away.

One day a box came to Callie's house, and in it was a doll which was quite different from any she had ever owned before. It looked so much like a little Japanese child that Callie, at her mother's suggestion, named the new doll Miss Cherry Blossom, for of course you know how fond the Japanese people are of the beautiful cherry trees when they are in bloom. And they have a festival or holiday so that every one can enjoy them, and they paint pictures and embroider cherry blossoms so that they may see them the year around.

Miss Cherry Blossom had black hair—fine and silky—and eyes which tipped upward just a little at the outer corners. She was jointed in quite a remarkable way, so that she could kneel and brace herself with her hands, or move her arms and legs as her little girl-mother might wish.

Then right down near the band of Cherry Blossom's rompers, in the back, was a tiny key, and when you wound the spring with which the key connected, this doll would say, "Mamma love baby. I'm a good girl." And "I want a drink."

Callie loved Cherry Blossom very much, and she was so careful of her that she rarely took her out-of-doors. Cherry Blossom had a cute little black and gold Windsor chair all her own, and a little white crib and a doll carriage.

Callie took nice care of her toys because it always made her feel badly to see them broken or out of order. When her little friends came to play with her, Callie liked to share the enjoyment of her treasures with them, but it disturbed her if they handled any of her things at all roughly.

Georgie Harter liked to tease and sometimes he made Callie quite unhappy by telling what he was going to do to some of her dolls or other things she prized. So when Georgie was coming over, Callie put Cherry Blossom in the little black and gold chair in a corner of the sun parlor.

But she reckoned without taking Trixy into consideration. Trixy was the new puppy which her father had brought home on her birthday, and if the truth must be told, Trixy was very mischievous.

So when Georgie Harter's visit was over and Callie went to comfort her neglected and darling Cherry Blossom, she found the poor child on her knees on the floor. Her little rompers were torn, and the joint in one leg seemed to be out of order, and although Callie wound the key carefully, Cherry wouldn't say a single word, but just eyed her little girl-mother sadly.

Poor Callie began to cry. When Callie cried and cried so people could hear her, there was sure to be something serious the matter. And her daddy, who was coming into the hall, wondered right away what was wrong.

"Oh, Daddy," wailed Callie, "please take Cherry Blossom and me right up to the hospital. She's hurted terribly—and there's a boy there who fixes the broken things for the little boys and girls, and he can even mend the nurses' watches when they don't keep right time. Let's go now, Daddy."

"I'm afraid I can't go right away, little daughter," her father replied. "But I'll take you up in the car in the morning, and perhaps you can get some one to mend Cherry Blossom's clothes. Trixy did a good deal of mischief, I see."

Callie thought right away of Auntie Hayes, and it comforted her very much to have this kind-hearted, little old lady sympathize with her so earnestly. And when she got through with repairing Cherry Blossom's rompers, you could hardly find the place where the damage had been done.

The next morning Mr. Bransby was true to his word, and Callie carried her injured child to the children's ward of the big, clean, many-windowed hospital.

Callie knew right where to go, and David Gregg, who was propped up with pillows in a wheel chair, made quite a thorough examination of the injured doll baby.

"Better feel of her pulse," grinned Mr. Bransby, "and take her blood pressure."

But David continued to look solemn.

"I think," he said, "you'll have to leave her. I'll do my best, and I hope she'll be all well by tomorrow."

When Callie and her father went down to the office, Mr. Bransby had quite a chat with the superintendent, and Callie knew from what she heard that they were talking of David. When they went back next day, Cherry Blossom was her own cheerful and talkative self and Callie's joy knew no bounds.

A week later Callie was having a romp with Trixy on the lawn. She was careful nowadays to put Cherry Blossom out of his reach. Her father called her and Callie went at once, because she didn't like to be kept waiting herself.

"We have a surprise for you, my dear," smiled her mother. "Daddy will tell you about it."

"I've been wondering," smiled her father, "how my little daughter would like a brother—a fine young lad like David. You see, dear, he has no one to take care of him now, and they tell me at the hospital that with proper care and treatment for a year or so, he will get entirely well. And David tells me that he would like to grow up and be a doctor himself some day, so as to make really and truly people well. If it hadn't been for you, dear, I shouldn't have known about him."

"Me and Trixy," interrupted Callie, her eyes shining. "Oh, Daddy, when can David come to live with us?"

"Ask your mother," smiled Mr. Bransby.

Callie turned eagerly around.

"Come, girlie," said her mother, in a voice that had a little quaver in it.

With her father on one side and her mother on the other, Callie was led into the sun parlor where a happy, 12-year-old boy in a wheel chair was waiting for them.—Selected.

CARRYING THINGS TO CARRIE

Belle Norton rushed into the house like a brisk west wind, ran upstairs to her room, and soon came stumbling down again, counting over some pieces. "Oh, mother!" she exclaimed, "isn't it lovely? I can do it just as well as not. Here is seventy-five cents, all from my own 'reserve.' "

Mrs. Norton, being used to Belle's sudden enthusiasm, kept knitting while she asked, "What is it that you can do, Belle?"

"Carry something to Carrie Stanley. You know she has been dreadfully sick, and now she is beginning to get better, and the girls are all thinking up things to take to her. And I have thought of something just perfectly beautiful. My, but wouldn't I like it myself! Carnations are high, but seventy-five cents will buy half a dozen, and I have decided to get two dark-red, two white, and two of the lovely daybreaks. I shall arrange them for her myself. And then, mamma, I thought I would take a large tumblerful of currant jelly that you taught me how to make last summer. It came out so well, you know, and I want to tell Carrie that I made it myself. Don't you think that's a nice plan, Mrs. Knitley?"

Mrs. Norton hesitated a moment before she answered. "I don't know, Belle. Perhaps it is; but if I were in your place I would go over to Mrs. Stanley's and inquire what will be the best for Carrie."

"Oh dear! I wanted it to be a sort of surprise. I just love surprises."

"You wouldn't want it to be a disappointnig surprise, would you?"

"No-o," said Belle reluctantly.

"You see," Mrs. Norton went on, "they don't have any too much money to use at Mrs. Stanley's. I'm afraid they depend a good deal on old Mr. Norcross' pension. Of course, there has been a good deal of extra expense while Carrie has been ill; it may be that she needs some things that they don't feel able to buy."

"All right, mother." Belle's high spirits had all come back again. "I'll run right over to Crarie's, and perhaps I shall be the one to get a surprise."

And she certainly did get a surprise—several surprises. When Mrs. Stanley came to the door there was a worried look on her face, and she seemed sort of relieved when she saw Belle standing there with nothing in her hands.

"We heard that Carrie was beginning to get better," Belle began quickly, "and I thought perhaps there might be something I could bring her."

"Y-yes," Mrs. Stanley spoke nervously, "the girls are very thoughtful—very kind; some of them have brought in things to Carrie already."

"Oh, have they? What have they brought?"

Mrs. Stanley hesitated a moment. Then, as if it was an effort to speak each word, she said, "Step in and see."

Wondering what the mystery could mean, Belle followed Mrs. Stanley into the house. "Don't speak very loud," she said; "Carrie is not strong enough to see much company yet, and she would surely want to see you if she knew you were here. Right in this way."

"Oh!" cried Belle, "what beautiful lilies! And the room is full of their sweet perfume. Doesn't Carrie just love them? Who brought them?"

"Sh-h!" warned Mrs. Stanley, closing the door. "Lily Pembroke brought them. 'They will speak my name to Carrie,' she said, with her sweet smile, and they must have cost ever so much. But do you know"—Mrs. Stanley lowered her voice as if she was afraid someone was listening—"Carrie is so weak and sensitive that she can't bear to have the lilies in her room. The perfume makes her faint."

"Dear me," said Belle, "I never knew sickness could affect anybody like that."

Of course, Lily didn't understand it. And it was the same way with the girls that have brought these things for Carrie to eat. Here are three tumblers of nice jelly. But Carrie can't eat anything so acid as that yet. Nor these salads, nor this rich spiced cake; and oh, dear me, here is a thick mince pie that fairly makes your mouth water. That—well, I guess I won't mention any names. Father and I eat these good things, of course; but father says that every mouthful chokes him when he thinks of what Carrie ought to have, and his pension isn't due for two weeks, and—"

"What are the things that Carrie ought to have, Mrs. Stanley?" asked Belle quickly.

"Fresh eggs, the doctor says, and nourishing beef broth. And he did speak of lamb chop broiled; but, of course, everything is so high."

"If you will excuse me—I have an errand down the street—I will be back later, and just say 'Hello!' to Carrie." Belle started down the steps and then ran back. "Mrs. Stanley, what—what would you ask for if you were going to get a piece of beef to make broth?"

"What they call a shin piece, just where they stop cutting the steak." Mrs. Stanley answered so quickly that it was evident she was thinking of that very piece of meat. "But, Belle, you mustn't."

But Belle was flying down the street and never stopped until she ran up the steps into Ryland's New Market. "Mr. Ryland," she began between her quick breaths, "how much are fresh eggs?"

"Maplewood Farm eggs are 72 cents a dozen."

Belle did a bit of mental arithmetic. "I'll take three."

"Three dozen?" stared Mr. Ryland.

"No; three eggs. They are for a girl that is just getting over a sickness, and she needs nourishing food. And now"—Belle was remembering carefully—"a shin piece, just where you stop cutting the steak—how much would that be a pound?"

"Twenty cents."

Belle opened her hand and considered her money. "I'll take two pounds."

"Who is this girl?" asked the market man as he laid the meat on the cutting block.

"Carrie Stanley. She's been sick. She and her mother live with Carrie's grandfather, old Sergeant Norcross."

"H'm." Mr. Ryland moved the knife along on the meat before he cut into it. He didn't put it on the scales, either, but he lifted it in his hand. "I guess there's two pounds," he said.

"My! it's a good, big piece and will make a lot of nice broth. And"—Belle looked at her money again—"could I get a lamb chop for 12 cents?"

"Two lamb chops go for 12 cents for this sale only," declared Mr. Ryland promptly.

"Oh, goody! That leaves five cents for an orange; perhaps Carrie could take a little of the juice. Oh, yes, Mr. Ryland, I can carry the bundle all right. Good-bye."

Belle ran up the street faster than ever. "Here they are," she cried; "just the things you spoke of, Mrs. Stanley. Hello!" she called gently to Carrie as Mrs. Stanley opened the door of her room. "Just a wave and a word. I'll come again when you are stronger."

Carrie's thin, pale face brightened into a faint smile as she "waved" to Belle, and as Belle started homeward she said to herself, "And to think that I was going to carry Carrie some carnations! My, my! but isn't my mother a sensible woman!"—Girls' World.

BRIGHTENING THE WAY

School was over and a group of girls had gathered on Marion's porch to discuss vacation days. "I'm going to catch up on all my back reading," said one. "I'm so far behind now it will take me almost the whole summer."

"Mother wants me to work up my math," said Alice Brown, "so I can pass on my winter condition."

"I think we're going to Maine for August," said May.

"Oh, girls," said Bella. "I always feel so utterly useless when I think of vacation days and how little we really do in them."

"What would you like to do to make them useful?" asked Marion.

"That's just it," said Bella, "I don't know."

"Well," laughed Alice, "you might work off excess energy helping our laundress."

"That isn't as funny as it sounds," said Grace, "there are more ways of helping than by doing the actual washing."

"It's something like that I mean," exclaimed Bella, "but what could we do?"

"Let's all think this over," said May. "For I know I for one would be glad to enter into a plan to do something worth while. We might sort of brighten the way for others during our spare time."

"Oh, that's a fine idea," said Betty. "I can think right now of ever so many ways of brightening the way for others."

"Let's hear!" cried the girls, and so the idea was born.

That summer was the happiest that the girls had ever known. It was, too, for Mrs. Jones, whose failing sight had made her old age a burden to her, for two afternoons a week some bright young girl sat by her chair and read her the news or a popular book and brought the world to her door. It was, too, for the children in the L— Street tenement, for two afternoons each week they were gathered up in a roomy automobile and whisked away to the lawns of a suburban house, where under the trees stories were told, quiet games were played and lemonade or ice cream was served. It was, too, for countless others, sick or aged, whose rooms were brightened by bright flowers and fresh young voices. Indeed, it was all too quickly that the summer passed and school once more opened its doors. But the way that had been brightened was never to be dark again, for sunshine had grown in the souls of those girls and they were destined to shed it upon their way all the rest of their lives.
